Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if her Department will issue guidance on the age at which children can be expected to use public transport unaccompanied to travel to school. [45855]

John Healey: It would not be appropriate for the Secretary of State to issue guidance on the age at which children can be expected to use public transport to travel unaccompanied to school. This is a decision which parents are best placed to make, taking into consideration local circumstances.

Sixth Forms

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her policy is on balancing arrangements for the new structure for sixth-form funding proposed by county councils; and which authorities have made similar proposals. [45856]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Many LEAs are still finalising their arrangements for funding in 2002–03. We require all LEAs to ensure that school sixth forms that stand to gain from the LSC's funding formula receive at least one third of the difference between their real terms guarantee figure and their actual LSC allocation.

Surrey county council has received approval for an "additional arrangement" which follows these requirements but also includes transitional arrangements to provide a cash guarantee related to the funding which would have been payable under Surrey's own funding formula.

Truancy

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children were found to be truant each year since 1997; if she will make a statement on truancy and measures planned and introduced to combat it; and what is done with children that are consistently truant from school despite action taken. [46169]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The table gives the number of children who had one or more sessions (half-days) of unauthorised absence in each year since 1997. Unauthorised absence includes all absences that the school has decided not to approve.

Thousand

Academic year[1]	Number of pupils with at least one session of unauthorised absence	Total number of compulsory school age pupils
1998–99	1,114.4	7,071.6
1999–2000	1,124.7	7,102.3
2000–01	1,171.2	7,176.2

[1] Information is collected from schools for the period from September to May

We have put into place a package of measures that help schools to set a tough clear policy on truancy including all of the measures recommended in the Social Exclusion Unit's report 'Truancy and School Exclusion' in 1998. We are providing more support than ever before to schools and local education authorities to tackle attendance and behaviour problems; over three years we have provided in excess of £500 million to support local projects.

Improving school attendance is a key aim for the new Connexions Service; personal advisers provide support to young people disengaged from education, helping to reduce barriers to attending school regularly. Learning Mentors in Excellence in Cities areas have an important role in securing good relations between school and home, fostering a positive attitude to learning on the part of families and helping them to support their children.

Policy Making

Phil Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how the results of the consultation of young people will be taken into cross-departmental policy making processes. [46327]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We have involved young people in many of the Department's initiatives including consulting pupils on the Education White Paper and engaging young people in the development of the Connexions Service. We are currently consulting them on our 14–19 proposals. Involving children and young people is an important part of the Department's commitment to understanding its customers and supporting better delivery of its policies and services. We will launch an action plan at the end of May, reflecting that commitment and the core principles on participation published by the Children and Young People's Unit in "Learning to Listen". We are putting in place a central point of advice as a focus for raising awareness, sharing practice and promoting the benefits of participation across the whole Department.

Youth Work

Phil Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he will be announcing the next stages of implementing 'Transforming Youth Work'. [46324]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Implementation of the Transforming Youth Work agenda is already under way. A series of measures were outlined at the Association of Principal Youth and Community Officer's Annual Conference in October 2001. This announcement followed the Government's 'Transforming Youth Work' consultation on the future of the youth service.

Ministers will make a full and published response to the 'Transforming Youth Work' consultation in July 2002.

Phil Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessments she has made of the role youth work plays in the personal and social development of young people identified by Ofsted as missing from the school system. [46329]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Government's long-term strategy for the Youth Service is described in the March 2001 publication 'Transforming Youth Work'. This set out the Government's view of the Youth Service in England and outlined a programme of modernisation.

Both the statutory and voluntary youth sectors will play a key role in providing support and personal development for young people. They will continue to work with the education system to provide suitable development opportunities for school pupils.

The personal and social development provided by the youth services will be particularly important for those who are at risk or who have lost contact with formal education.

Citizenship

Phil Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the Department is considering ways of extending the requirements for citizenship in the national curriculum to include the Youth Service curriculum. [46330]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Youth Service does not have a specific curriculum. In its consultation document, "14–19: extending opportunities, raising standards", the Government have proposed that all young people should participate in active citizenship, wider interests and work-related learning. As part of their agenda for youth services in England, "Transforming Youth Work—Developing Youth Work for Young People", the Government aim to develop innovative youth work projects designed to enhance the engagement of young people in local democratic processes.

School Governance

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance she has given to schools as to the role of pupils in school governance. [46373]

Mr. Timms: We have given no guidance to schools on the role of pupils in school governance because under current legislation it is not possible for young people under the age of 18 to become school governors. A young person over the age of 18 may become a governor but under existing regulations cannot be co-opted to serve as a governor at the school they attend. We are currently reviewing our policy in this area, in the light of new regulations we will be drawing up on school governance following the Education Bill.

Employment Rights

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the protection of employment rights for teachers who will transfer to new Private Finance Initiative secondary schools; and if she will make a statement. [46432]

Mr. Timms: There is no change to teachers' pay and conditions if their school is included within the scope of a Private Finance Initiative project. Teaching staff do not transfer to the private sector at these schools; they continue to be employed by the local authority or governing body, according to the status of the school.

Examination Papers

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many of the companies involved in marking examination papers made errors in the last 12 months for which figures are available; how many students were affected by mistakes made by examination boards; and how much examination work remains untraced. [46450]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The accuracy of the five examination boards (AQA, Edexcel, OCR, WJC, and CCA) has been assessed for the summer 2000 A level and GCSE examination series.

The figures are as follows:

Out of 774,380 candidate entries at A-level there were 4,505 marking errors discovered during inquiries about results—0.6 per cent. of all papers.

Out of 5,532,411 candidate entries at GCSE, 6,368 had marking errors discovered during inquiries about results—0.1 per cent. of all papers.

There are no reliable figures for untraced examination work.

City Academy, Newcastle

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions her officials have had with promoters of a City Academy in the City of Newcastle area; how many promoters have approached her; and whether those discussions are continuing. [46616]

Mr. Timms: Discussions have taken place, and are continuing, with a number of potential sponsors to establish City Academies across the country. There has been no formal approach from a partnership (comprising a sponsor and the local education authority) for a City Academy in the City of Newcastle area.

Entertainment Costs

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if she will list the total amount of money spent by Ministers in her Department since its creation on food, alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks for entertainment purposes; [47215]

(2) how much was spent by departmental special advisers on food, alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks for entertainment purposes in each of the last five years. [46847]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The total cost of entertainment for each of the last five years for this Department is set out as follows:

1998–99	31
2000–01	20

Note:
To provide the more detailed information requested would incur disproportionate cost.

Classics

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the maintained secondary schools which offered (a) Latin and (b) Greek at (i) GCSE and (ii) A level in each of the last five years. [48235]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The list of maintained secondary schools where pupils had taken (a) Latin and (b) Greek at (i) GCSE and (ii) A level in each of the last five years can be found in the House of Commons Library.

Examinations

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which local education authorities were in the (a) first and (b) tenth decile for results at (i) Key Stage 2, (ii) Key Stage 3 and (iii) GCSEs in each year since 1997. [48250]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries.

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of pupils in England achieving GCSEs in (a) mathematics and (b) English achieved grades A or above in (i) the best performing local education authority and (ii) the worst performing local education authority in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [48261]

Mr. Timms: (a) The percentage of pupils in England achieving GCSEs in mathematics that achieved grades A or above are:

(i) The best performing local education authority based on five or more grades A*-C GCSE or GNVQ equivalents is 23 per cent.

(ii) The worst performing local education authority based on five or more grades A*-C GCSE or GNVQ equivalents is 2.6 per cent.

(b) The percentages of pupils in England achieving GCSEs in English that achieved grades A or above are:

(i) The best performing local education authority based on five or more grades A*-C GCSE or GNVQ equivalents is 21.5 per cent.

(ii) The worst performing local education authority based on five or more grades A*-C GCSE or GNVQ equivalents is 4.3 per cent.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of students achieved each grade in GCSE (a) science, (b) English, (c) mathematics and (d) foreign languages examinations prior to reaching school year 11, for every year since 1997. [47880]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The percentage of students in schools in England that achieved grade in GCSE (a) science, (b) English, (c) Mathematics and (d) foreign languages examinations prior to reaching final year of compulsory education are shown in the table.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to the answer of 27 November 2001, Official Report, column 782W, when she will publish the findings of the inquiry into the early release of the 2001 Key Stage results; and if she will make a statement. [48169]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 24 January 2002, Official Report, column 1006W.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what was the average number of exams taken by (a) an 11-year-old, (b) a 14-year-old, (c) a 16-year-old and (d) and 18-year-old throughout their school career to that point, in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority. [47482]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: All local education authority maintained schools in England are required to administer the national curriculum tasks/tests for pupils at the end of Key Stage 1 and tests for pupils at the end of Key Stages 2 and 3 in the core subjects of English, mathematics and science. Schools may, at their discretion, choose to administer other non-statutory tests in addition to the statutory requirements.

For GCSE/GNVQ and GCE A/AS/Advanced GNVQ, schools enter pupils for the appropriate subjects; the number of exam papers will vary according to subject and awarding body.

The table shows the total number of statutory national curriculum test papers in English, mathematics and science which will have been taken by most pupils in the relevant age group; and the average number of GCSE and GCE A/AS and GNVQ examination entries for those age groups. (All ages are at the end of the academic year.)

2001	13 NC test papers	20 NC test papers	20 NC test papers and 8.2 GCSEs	7 NC test papers and 11.3 GCSEs and GCE A/AS and GNVQs

Notes:
1. Key Stage 1 tests for 7-year-olds were introduced nationally in 1991.
Key Stage 2 tests for 11-year-olds were introduced nationally in 1995.
Key Stage 3 tests for 14-year-olds were introduced nationally in 1993.
2. The number of papers taken for GCSE and GCE A/AS and GNVQ vary for each subject.
3. The increase in the number of national curriculum tests from seven to 20 for 14-year-olds and from seven to 20 for 16-year-olds reflects the fact that they were the cohort who took the first Key Stage 2 tests in 1994–95.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children sat the GCSE (a) science, (b) English and (c) mathematics examination prior to reaching school year 11 in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority. [47487]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The number of pupils that sat the GCSE (a) science, (b) English, (c) mathematics prior to reaching their final year of compulsory education in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority in England, are shown in the table:

[1] Information is not available by year group and so numbers relates to pupils that sat their examinations prior to reaching their final year of compulsory education.
[2] Indicates that due to LEA reorganisation, the figures for these LEAs are not available.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many requests there were for an exam paper to be re-marked for each exam paper offered by each of the exam boards; and what percentage this represented of the papers taken in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority. [47484]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information on requests for examination papers to be re-marked has been monitored by QCA since 1999 for each qualification. The small numbers involved make it impracticable to report on each specification, subject or local education authority.

Data are collected from the following awarding bodies:

Assessment and Qualifications Alliance (AQA),

Edexcel Foundation (Edexcel),

Oxford, Cambridge, and RSA Examination Board (OCR),

Council for Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment—Northern Ireland (CCEA), Welsh Joint Education Committee (WJEC).

Data for 2001 include results of the GCE A-levels; both the new Advanced Subsidiary and old Advanced Supplementary examinations; for the new VCE advanced and AS examinations; and for the GCSE full and short courses. The new examinations were not available in previous years.

Details are in the tables.

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the impact of compulsory AS levels on examination timetables in (a) secondary schools and (b) sixth form colleges; and if she will make a statement. [48258]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Joint Council for General Qualifications is responsible for devising the A level common timetable, in consultation with centres, and reviews its effectiveness after each examination series. The Secretary of State is closely monitoring centres' experiences of the common timetable.

Rural Schools Fund

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many schools have been assisted by the Rural Schools Fund initiative since its inception; [45976]

(2) how many schools have been assisted by the Rural Schools Grant Fund; and what is the total amount awarded since its inception. [46977]

John Healey [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The Department does not fund a Rural Schools Fund. However, rural schools in England can benefit from a number of programmes, including the Small Schools Fund. This Fund, part of the simplified Standards Fund, was set up in 2001 by the merging of two previous grants (the Administrative Support Fund for Small Schools and the Small School Support Fund). The Small Schools Fund is worth a total of £80 million a year, guaranteed until 2004. It is allocated to Local Education Authorities (LEAs) according to the number of their primary and special schools with 200 pupils or less, and secondary schools with 600 pupils or less. An allowance is also made for nursery schools and Pupil Referral Units (PRUs).

Using the Department's thresholds, based on the January 2000 school census, 9,982 schools, nurseries and PRUs were able to benefit from the total Small School Fund allocation to LEAs for 2001–02. LEAs have to devolve at least 95 per cent. of the funding to schools. However, LEAs can concentrate funding on fewer schools in their area by setting their own, lower thresholds should they so wish.

School Conditions

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools have been substantially repaired in 2001–02. [46116]

John Healey [holding answer 25 March 2002]: We do not hold information in the form requested. Much capital support is allocated to local education authorities and schools on a formulaic basis. Records of how it is utilised for specific projects are held locally.

Education Maintenance Allowances

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when evaluation of education maintenance allowances will be completed; if resources for the continuation of EMAs will be included in her departmental budget for the future; and if she will make a statement. [46662]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The evaluation of the EMA pilots will continue into 2003; but a rich seam of evaluation findings will become available during 2002. So far we have published a report on the effect of EMA on participation rates for the first of the two cohorts which the independent researchers are studying. This showed an increase in participation of five percentage points among the target group. During 2002 we expect to publish reports on the impact of EMA on drop out rates and end-of-course attainment for this first cohort. We also expect to publish the first reports on the second cohort of EMA recipients this year. We have always made clear that all of the EMA evaluation reports will be made public.

There is provision in our budgets to fund all young people who now receive an EMA until their entitlement expires. There is similar provision to fund new EMAs for young people in the pilot areas who begin post-compulsory education in September 2002. Wider decisions on the future of EMAs will be taken in the 2002 Spending Review.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many times special advisers have accompanied Ministers on overseas visits in each of the last five years; which countries were visited; and what the total cost of each visit was. [47152]

Estelle Morris: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 28 February 2002, Official Report, column 1543W. The country visited was China.

Details of special adviser travel for the period 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 will be published as soon as possible in the new financial year.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what new initiatives her Department has taken in 2001–02 to assist in achieving its Public Service Agreement targets. [47201]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information will be available in the departmental annual report, which is due to be published in May. This details progress against our PSA targets and reports on key initiatives undertaken by the Department in the last financial year.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target to increase the proportion of those aged 16 years who achieve one or more GCSEs at grade C, or equivalent, to 95 per cent. by 2002 will be met. [47891]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The relevant national learning target for 16-year-olds is that 95 per cent. of 16-year-olds should achieve one or more GCSE or equivalent by 2002. The target does not specify that the grade should be C or above. In 2001, 94.5 per cent. of pupils achieved this target compared with 94.4 per cent. in 2000. Although the target is challenging we do not believe it is unattainable.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target to increase the proportion of those aged 16 years who achieve five or more GCSEs at grade A*-C to 50 per cent. by 2002 will be met. [47892]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I am pleased to report that in 2001 exactly 50.0 per cent. achieved at least 5 A*-C grades at GCSE or the GNVQ equivalent compared with 49.2 per cent. in 2000. We were delighted that the target was achieved a year early.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if the target of successful establishment of a system of inspection of the new Connexions strategy and framework for inspection by March has been met. [47898]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This is a matter for the Office for Standards in Education (Ofsted) and I have asked HM Chief Inspector for Schools, Mike Tomlinson, to write to the hon. Gentleman and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target on school truancies will be met by 2002. [47278]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information about progress on PSA targets will be published in the Department's 2002 Departmental Report, which should be published in May.

Analysis of last year's data shows that the level unauthorised absence in primary schools has decreased between 1998–99 and 2000–01 in 44 LEAs and remained steady in a further 71 LEAs. The level of unauthorised absence in secondary schools has decreased in 60 LEAs and remained steady in a further 31 LEAs.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if the target of successful establishment of a system of joint inspections of further education institutions falling into the remit of Ofsted by March has been achieved. [47897]

Margaret Hodge: Yes. The Learning and Skills Act 2000 required there to be a common set of principles for the inspection of post-16 non-higher education and training. The Office for Standards in Education (Ofsted) and the Adult Learning Inspectorate (the ALI) jointly published these principles in the Common Inspection Framework in February 2001. Since April 2001, Ofsted have directed the programme of joint inspections of further education institutions against this Common Inspection Framework.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target of an increase in the proportion of those aged 19 years who have achieved national vocational qualification level 2 or equivalent to 85 per cent. by 2002 will be met. [47893]

Mr. Timms: While we have made good progress in increasing the achievement of level 2 by 19-year-olds, it is apparent on current trends that the 2002 target will not be reached. We are working closely with the Learning and Skills Council to ensure maximum progress is being made by implementing specific local and innovative approaches to improving level 2 attainment. A number of measures proposed by the Government in our recently published Green Paper "14 to 19—Extending Opportunities; Raising Standards" will contribute to higher attainment at age 19 subsequently.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of whether the target of 93 per cent. of inspection reports reviewed meeting HM Chief Inspector's standard by March will be achieved. [47895]

Mr. Timms: This is a matter for HM Chief Inspector of Schools. I have therefore asked Mike Tomlinson to write to the hon. Member and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target to increase the proportion of those aged 11 meeting the numeracy standard for that age from 62 per cent. to 75 per cent. by 2002 will be met. [47277]

Mr. Timms: In last year's Key Stage 2 mathematics tests 71 per cent. of pupils achieved the expected standard for their age. This represents a 10 per cent. points increase since 1997. The National Numeracy Strategy continues to raise standards in primary schools and we remain committed to achieving our 2002 target of 75 per cent. of 11-year-olds achieving the expected standard.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target to increase provision of nursery places for three-years-olds from 34 per cent. to 66 per cent. by 2002 will be met. [47275]

Margaret Hodge: On 27 February 2002, my noble Friend the Minister for Education and Skills in the Lords announced that two-thirds of all three-year-olds in England now have access to a free, part-time, early education place. The Government are committed to increasing this to all three-year-olds by September 2004.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of whether the target to complete benchmarking work for schools by December will be met. [47894]

Mr. Timms: The target will be met. All schools will be able to enter their expenditure data on the Audit Commission benchmarking website and compare them with a range of similar schools. All schools have been given full details of the Consistent Financial Reporting framework so that they can ensure a standard classification of expenditure.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target to increase the proportion of those aged 11 meeting the literacy standard for that age from 63 per cent. to 80 per cent. by 2002 will be met. [47276]

Mr. Timms: In last year's Key Stage 2 English tests 75 per cent. of pupils achieved the expected standard for their age. This represents a 12 per cent. increase since 1997. The National Literacy Strategy continues to raise standards in primary schools and we remain committed to achieving our 2002 target of 80 per cent. of 11-year-olds achieving the expected standard.

Teaching Vacancies

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated with regard to the number of (i) head teacher and (ii) teacher vacancies; and if she will make a statement. [47479]

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she proposes to publish the 2002 Census of Teachers undertaken in January; and if she will make a statement. [48227]

Mr. Timms: The annual Form 618g survey of teacher numbers and vacancies was conducted on 17 January 2002. I expect the provisional results of the survey to be published in late April or early May.

Green Paper

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she will publish the responses received as part of the consultation exercise linked to the publication of the Green Paper 14–19: Extending Opportunities, Raising Standards. [47486]

Mr. Timms: It is not usual practice to publish all the individual responses to an official consultation. In line with Cabinet Office guidelines, we intend to make widely available analysis of the responses to the Green Paper later this year alongside announcement of decisions taken following consultation.

In line with established open Government practices, we would also expect to make available, on request, copies of responses from individuals and organisations who have not specifically asked that their response be kept confidential.

Departmental Policies

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the (a) title, (b) subject and (c) associated funding of each (i) project, (ii) scheme, (iii) initiative and (iv) policy announced by the Department for Education and Employment since 1997, on a monthly basis. [47497]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information is not held in the format requested and generating it would incur disproportionate cost.

I refer the hon. Member to the Departmental Report (April 2000) for information on the Government's policies on education and associated expenditure.

Research

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated with regard to the number of teachers in secondary schools who are teaching a subject in which they are not specifically trained; and if she will make a statement. [47480]

Mr. Timms: This information is collected as part of the Secondary Schools Curriculum and Staffing Survey. Preparations for the next survey are in hand.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will take steps to improve the response time to parliamentary questions. [47719]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In its response to the Public Administration Select Committee's Second Report of Session 2000–01 on Ministerial Accountability and Parliamentary Questions, the Government made clear their commitment to providing prompt and accurate answers to parliamentary questions. This continues to be the Government's position.

Learning Support Units

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding each learning support unit has attracted for each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority. [47740]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Funding for learning support units is allocated to local education authorities through the Standards Fund and the Excellence in Cities Programme. Decisions on the amount made available for each unit are made at the local level, this information is not held centrally. The tables show the funding available for each local education authority for learning support units.

Table 1 shows the funding available for learning support units and learning mentors for each authority in the Excellence in Cities programme—which commenced in 1999. The table also includes those authorities with schools taking part in the Excellence Clusters programme. Funding for learning support units is made available alongside complementary support for learning mentors, it is not possible therefore to disaggregate this funding.

Since April 2000 funding has been available for authorities outside the Excellence in Cities programme to set up and run secondary school learning support units, including capital funding in the first two years. Table 2 shows the funding available for each authority.

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding has been provided to each learning support unit in each year since their creation, broken down by local education authority. [48274]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply provided earlier today to the hon. Member for Ashford (Mr. Green).

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many learning support units in England (a) opened and (b) closed in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority. [47745]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We are unable to provide a full breakdown of how many learning support units per local education authority have opened or closed since 1997 as we do not collate this information centrally.

However, the table does show a breakdown of the learning support units that are funded through Excellence in Cities as at 1 February 2002, including those proposed as part of the pilot set up for EiC Phase 1 Primary schools. Not all are up and running yet, the figures reflect the numbers and LEA location for approved learning support unit plans.

National School Leadership College/ General Teaching Council

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding has been received by the (a) National School Leadership College and (b) General Teaching Council from her Department in each year since its creation. [47741]

Mr. Timms: Grant in aid funding provided by this Department to the National College for School Leadership (NCSL) and the General Teaching Council (GTC) is as follows:

2000–01	[1]0	[2]4,000,000
2001–02	27,797,000	9,880,000
2002–03	60,000,000	2,911,000

[1] Grant in aid payments to the NCSL began in April 2001.
[2] Grant in aid payments to the GTC began in September 2000. Funding in 2000–01 therefore covered the period September 2000 to March 2001 inclusive.

Excellence in Cities Projects

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many Excellence in Cities projects in England opened in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority. [47746]

Mr. Timms: Phase 1 of the Excellence in Cities (EiC) project was launched by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and the then Secretary of State in March 1999. Phase 2 was announced in March 2000 together with a primary pilot extending EiC to primary schools in the Phase 1 areas. In October 2000, Phase 3 and new Excellence Clusters, targeting smaller pockets of social deprivation within LEAs not included in the main programme, were announced. The areas covered by EiC partnerships, ie local education authorities working with their schools, are consistent with LEA boundaries. Excellence Clusters, however, are clusters of schools within an LEA boundary.

Independent Schools

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) primary, (b) secondary and (c) both primary and secondary independent schools have (i) opened and (ii) closed in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority. [47750]

Mr. Timms: The table shows the number of independent schools that have opened and closed in each local education authority area in England in each of the last five years. The register of independent schools records the age range of pupils in each school which often spans one or more of the early years, primary, secondary and post-16 phases. The register does not categorise independent schools as primary or secondary because many do not conform with maintained school age ranges; for this reason we are unable to distinguish between primary and secondary schools listed in the table.

Teacher Work Load

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if her Department has estimated the amount of time spent by (a) head teachers, (b) deputy head teachers, (c) teachers and (d) classroom assistants dealing with (i) Government-produced circulars and (ii) other work, expressed as a proportion of total time worked by head teachers, for each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [47752]

Mr. Timms: My Department does not hold the information requested. The study on teacher work load that we commissioned last year from PricewaterhouseCoopers suggests that some 20 per cent. of teachers' time is spent on tasks not directly related to classroom teaching. We recently offered practical advice on how these tasks might be transferred to support staff and Information and Communications Technology. Beyond that, the School Teachers' Review Body (STRB) will be reporting on work load shortly. The STRB has been asked among other things to look at possible contractual changes to help teachers to focus on the core of their job.

Edexcel

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will publish the results of the assessment of examination board Edexcel; and if she will make a statement. [47743]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The results of the assessment of examination board Edexcel were published on 1 February by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority and made available on its website. http://www.qca.org.uk/news/press/20020201.asp

My Department made a press announcement on that day as did QCA and the Edexcel Foundation. QCA will continuously review Edexcel's performance against the eight action points agreed between Edexcel and the QCA. The QCA will not be publishing progress reports. However, the first four action points have been satisfactorily met and a report of a review of performance will be made in the autumn.

English for Speakers of Other Languages

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action she is taking in conjunction with the Learning and Skills Council to promote and resource English for speakers of other languages, with particular reference to vocational needs. [47878]

John Healey: Large numbers of people need access to good quality English language provision if they are to have equal chances of success at work, at home and in society in general. The Government are fully committed to providing tuition for adults who do not speak English as their first language as part of 'Skills for Life', our national strategy for improving adult literacy and numeracy skills. A core curriculum for English for speakers of other languages (ESOL) was published in December 2001 and 2,500 tutors have received training in its use. We are also developing ESOL diagnostic tools and learning materials. We are running a national promotional campaign to boost demand for literacy, language and numeracy learning which has so far resulted in over 70,000 calls to the promotional hotline.

Improving adult basic skills, including language skills, is also one of the Learning and Skills Council's most important objectives. Its priority was emphasised by the chief executive in his recent letter to all post-16 providers to encourage the expansion of provision to meet our target of improving the basic skills levels of 750,000 adults by 2004. To ensure the resourcing and promotion of basic skills matches local needs and reflects national policy, local LSCs have produced delivery plans, setting out how they intend to increase and improve literacy, language and numeracy provision. These plans also set local targets for participation and achievement in literacy, language and numeracy provision.

Maladministration

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what payments have been made to individuals following findings of maladministration ombudsmen with responsibility for agencies under the remit of her Department in the last 12 months; and what plans she has to review the powers to increase the level of awards that can be made. [47948]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Over the past 12 months no payments have been recorded as being made by the Department of Education and Skills as a result of the findings of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration (parliamentary ombudsman).

The Department no longer has any executive agencies under its control. Information on maladministration payments made by Non-Departmental Public Bodies, sponsored by the Department, is not held centrally and could be gathered only at disproportionate cost.

The level of award in maladministration cases is recommended, on an individual basis, by the parliamentary ombudsman and is not decided by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list by education authority the number of children of asylum seekers and refugees with English language difficulties who are not being counted as being at school for the purposes of calculating annual primary and secondary performance tables. [47990]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We received a number of requests from schools to discount children who had recently arrived from overseas (including children of asylum seekers and refugees) from the 2001 school performance tables.

For the primary school tables, a total of 1,648 children were discounted from the published results in the performance tables.

For the secondary school tables, a total of 1,559 children were discounted. A breakdown by local education authority, for the primary school and secondary school tables respectively, is provided.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list by education authority the amount of money paid in 2001–02 by her Department to support the education costs of children of asylum seekers dispersed to cluster areas under the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999. [47991]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: £1.5 million was made available in 2000–01 to support the education costs of children of asylum seekers dispersed to cluster areas under the Immigration and Asylum Act. This amounted to £500 per child and was to be used to help settle these children into school quickly. This funding was rolled forward into 2001–02 and, due to a greater number of eligible children, was increased to £2,377,000. Thus allowing this Department to continue to make a payment of £500 per child.

In addition, all schools with children of asylum seekers on their school roll, including those in the dispersal areas, receive funding for them in the same way as they do for all other children through the education standard spending assessment. In addition, there is support through the ethnic minority achievement grant. All local education authorities are eligible for this grant which totals around £154 million this year. The purpose of this grant is to support minority ethnic children at risk of underachieving and provide support to those for whom English is an additional language, including the children of asylum seekers and refugees.

The list of authorities in receipt of funding is as follows:

Special Educational Needs

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of primary schools have additional facilities for children with special needs. [48219]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children had statements of special educational needs in England in (a) 2001, (b) 1996 and (c) 1991. [37421]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is shown in the table.

Foreign Schoolchildren

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the number of children who are (a) citizens of other EU countries and (b) citizens of other non-EU countries studying in schools in England in each of the last five years. [48233]

Mr. Timms: This information is not collected centrally.

Ministerial Visits (Schools)

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the schools which have been visited on more than one occasion by Ministers in DfEE and DfES since 1 May 1997 giving in each case (a) the date, (b) the purpose of the visit and (c) the identity of the Minister. [48242]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information in the form requested is not held centrally and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

School Toilet Facilities

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the number of new outside toilet facilities installed in schools in England in each of the last five years. [48243]

John Healey: The Department does not collect information on construction of toilet facilities in schools.

Modern Languages

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils in secondary schools receive tuition in (a) French, (b) German, (c) Spanish and (d) another modern foreign language; and in each case what percentage this constitutes of the total number of pupils in secondary schools. [48236]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The School and College Performance Tables give information on how many pupils are entered for GCSE and A-level examinations. In 2000–01 entries for GCSE and A-level for (a) French totalled 321,200 and 15,170 respectively, for (b) German totalled 130,623 and 7,488, for (c) Spanish totalled 45,626 and 4,447 and for (d) all other languages, entries totalled 20,317 and 3,478.

Expressed as a percentage of all 15-year-old pupils attending school, the GCSE entries for each language represented 53.2 per cent. (French), 21.6 per cent. (German), 7.6 per cent. (Spanish) and 3.4 per cent. (other). The A-level entries expressed as a percentage of all 17 to 18-year-old candidates are 6.8 per cent. (French), 3.3 per cent. (German), 2.0 per cent. (Spanish) and 1.6 per cent. (other).

Data are not collected on how many pupils choose to study a language but do not go on to take an examination.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the number of children in each year of (a) Key Stage 1 and (b) Key Stage 2 who receive tuition in modern foreign languages in maintained schools; and what percentage that number is of the total for each year group. [48238]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: One in five primary schools currently offer some form of language learning at Key Stage 2. As language learning is not a compulsory element of the primary curriculum, it is not possible to give more detailed information.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of (a) the number and (b) the percentage of pupils aged 14 years and over who would choose not to study a modern foreign language if the national curriculum requirement were ended. [48239]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We are currently undertaking an extensive consultation on a range of proposals including the position of modern foreign languages in our Green Paper, "14–19: extending opportunities, raising standards". Our proposal for languages would allow all young people a statutory entitlement to study a modern foreign language but they would have no obligation to do so. Latest figures suggest that around 36,000 pupils are covered by the disapplication arrangements regarding modern foreign languages at Key Stage 4. We have made no estimates at this stage of the effect of our proposals on the study of modern foreign languages at Key Stage 4.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the number of additional language teachers which would be required for all maintained schools to offer a modern foreign language at Key Stages 1 and 2. [48237]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Our ambition that all primary school children will be entitled to study languages by 2012 is one of a number of proposals set out in our consultation pamphlet "Language Learning". The consultation period ends on 31 May.

We recognise the need to raise the number of primary teachers trained to teach languages and will develop our long-term language learning and teaching strategy in the light of the responses to our consultation. The Languages National Steering Group, chaired by my ministerial colleague Baroness Catherine Ashton, is developing that strategy which will be published in the autumn.

Capita

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if Capita will participate in individual learning account successor schemes; and if she will make a statement. [48277]

John Healey: There will be a replacement ILA-type scheme building on the strengths of the ILA and taking into account the findings of the current stakeholder consultation exercise which are due in early April. We will announce our plans for introducing the new scheme, including delivery arrangements, in due course.

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will publish the quality control directives given to Capita in relation to the operation of the individual learning account scheme. [48247]

John Healey: Capita Business Services Ltd. are required to meet a range of service standards as part of their contract to operate the individual learning account scheme. Although the precise nature of these is a matter between the Department and Capita, performance against the standards is appraised by the Department on a monthly basis.

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the target time will be in 2002–03 for (a) Ministers to reply to letters from hon. Members and (b) officials in her Department to reply to letters received directly from members of the public. [44938]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The correspondence standard in the Department for Education and Skills is to reply to 95 per cent. of all correspondence within 15 working days of receipt. The target will remain the same for 2002–03.

School Funding (York)

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how much funding has been allocated to the City of York Council for repairs to school buildings in each year since it became a unitary authority, including funding delegated direct to schools; [46769]

(2) how much funding has been allocated to the City of York Council for new or modernised classrooms in each year since it became a unitary authority, including funding delegated direct to schools; [46765]

(3) how much funding has been allocated to the City of York Council or delegated direct to schools for (a) new build, (b) modernisation and (c) repairs over the next three years. [46766]

John Healey: We do not hold information in the form requested. Much capital support for school buildings is allocated to Local Education Authorities and schools on a formulaic basis. Records of how it is utilised for specific projects are held locally. However, the table sets out the capital allocations made to date to York Local Education Authority (LEA) and its schools from 1996–97 to 2003–04.

[1] This covers allocations made under the original New Deal for Schools programme, which utilised resources raised from the Windfall Tax in order to address the backlog of repairs.

[2] Includes allocations made as of 31 March 2002, including £3 million allocated in 2002–03 from the Targeted Capital Fund.

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the percentage change in real terms was in education SSA in the City of York in each year since it became a unitary authority, including funding delegated direct to schools. [46768]

Mr. Timms: York became a unitary authority in 1996–97. Its Education SSA in real and cash terms is as follows.

York's SSA increases

1996–97	58.30	n/a	52.79	n/a

Notes

1. Figures reflect all sub-blocks of the Education SSA. The Private and Voluntary Institutions' element of the SSA that replaced Nursery Education Grant funding is not included in the figures for 2001–02 and 2002–03.
2. In 1997–98 £527 million was taken out of the SSA to fund the nursery voucher scheme.
3. Real terms figures are calculated using GDP deflators published by the Treasury on 20 December 2001
4. 2002–03 figures are gross of the Learning and Skills Council allocation.

Class Sizes

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what the average class size is in Lincolnshire secondary schools; and what the figure was in 1997; [48161]

(2) what the average class size is in Lincolnshire primary schools; and what the figure was in 1997. [48160]

John Healey: The information requested is shown in the table

Private Finance Initiative

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills of the applications for provisional support for schools PPP projects in 2003–04, (a) how many failed and (b) what the total value was of the applications that were turned down. [47983]

John Healey: 33 applications in this bidding round were unsuccessful, with a combined value of approximately £1.936 billion. 21 projects have been selected for provisional support, with a combined value of £939 million.

Standard-setting Bodies

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will name the organisations recognised by her Department as standard setting bodies and under section 36 of the Education Act 1997 specified as appropriate bodies to receive financial assistance from levy income collected from persons who award vocational qualifications; and whether national training organisations will lose such status in consequence of withdrawal of their overall recognition by the Department. [47660]

John Healey: Until 31 March 2002 all national training organisations and a few other bodies were recognised as standards setting bodies. From 1 April all NTOs ceased to have the formal recognition of the Department. The withdrawal of recognition applies also to their status as standards setting bodies.

No bodies were specified under Section 36 of the Education Act 1997. The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) acting jointly with the Scottish Qualifications Authority (SQA) administers a fund for the development of national occupations standards based on a certification fee charged on NVQs and SVQs. A remit letter from the Department instructs QCA as to which bodies may receive financial assistance.

Future arrangements are being considered in the light of the recent report by the Independent Review of National Occupational Standards, chaired by John Hillier, the establishment of the Sector Skills Development Agency from 1 April 2002, and the new stronger sector councils we are putting in place. In the short term we will ensure there are suitable arrangements in place so that essential national occupational standards work can continue.

Individual Learning Accounts

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what EU money supported the ILA scheme; and how it was distributed. [48268]

John Healey: The Individual Learning Account programme was not supported by European Union money. In England, the programme was funded centrally by the Department and by £127.5 million of existing TEC resources.

Underspend

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the (a) capital and (b) revenue underspend in her Department is expected to be in the financial year 2001–02. [47810]

Estelle Morris: Estimated outturn figures for 2001–02 will be published in the Budget Report on 17 April. For 2001–02 the initial Departmental Expenditure Limit appears in the Departmental Report (Cm 5102), published March 2001, and subsequently changed following the Winter Supplementary Estimate (Cm 5335), published November 2001, and the Spring Supplementary Estimate, (Cm 5385) published in February 2002.

Maintained Grammar Schools

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the number of places in maintained grammar schools in each of the last five years. [48231]

Mr. Timms: The Department does not regularly collect information on the number of school places in any type of school. The 164 grammar schools in England account for just over 4 per cent. of the maintained secondary school population.

School Boarding Places

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the number of boarding places available in maintained schools in England in each of the last five years. [48232]

Mr. Timms: No estimate is available because this information is not held centrally.

Legal Action

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what has been the cost to her Department of legal actions involving the adjudicator established under the School Standards and Framework Act 1998. [48229]

Mr. Timms: The Department has incurred costs of £77,934, since 1999, as a result of the judicial reviews of cases dealt with by the Schools Adjudicator.

Teacher Assaults

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teachers in maintained schools have been the victims of serious assaults by (a) pupils and (b) parents in each of the last five years. [48228]

Mr. Timms: My Department does not collect this information.

We deplore abuse by parents and others against teachers. We already have legal remedies in place to combat this, including injunctions, and prosecution for criminal damage, common assault and assault occasioning actual bodily harm. We have made it clear that, where necessary, pupils can be excluded from school for assaulting a teacher, and we intend to make Parenting Orders available for parents of pupils who receive several fixed period exclusions from school or a permanent exclusion.

Grammar Schools

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what has been the cost of servicing (a) petitions and (b) ballots on the future of grammar schools in each year since the introduction of the ballot regulations. [48230]

Mr. Timms: The Education (Grammar School Ballots) Regulations came into effect on 3 December 1998. Since then, there have been 39 requests for petition thresholds to be set, and one ballot has been held. To date, we have spent a total of £436,806.26 on petitions and ballots, as follows:

Petition year	(a) Petition costs	(b) Ballot costs	Total for year
1998–99	22,778.81	0	22,778.81
1999–2000	216,283.51	1,708.07	218,063.58
2000–01	58,285.36	0	58,285.36
2001–02	137,678.51	0	137,678.51
Totals	435,026.19	1,780.07	436,806.26

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many grammar schools have held ballots on their future status; and what were the results of those ballots in each year since 1997. [47490]

Mr. Timms: Grammar school ballots legislation came into effect in December 1998, and since then one ballot has been held in respect of Ripon Grammar School; parents in the area voted 2–1 in favour of keeping selective admissions.

School Sixth Forms

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what representations she has received from (a) schools with sixth forms and (b) local education authorities regarding the operation of learning and skills councils in respect of funding school sixth forms; and if she will make a statement. [48241]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: My right hon. Friend has received representations from a number of school headteachers, deputy headteachers and local education authorities.

The Real Term Guarantee given to sixth forms means that their funding will be maintained relative to 2000–01 funding levels, provided pupil numbers are maintained. The Learning and Skills Council has calculated two figures for each sixth form—its RTG and its LSC formula allocation—and the school will receive the higher of the two. The Financing of Maintained School Regulations 2002 have been amended to ensure that sixth forms funded through the LSC formula see some benefit. Schools should gain a minimum of one third of the potential benefit from the LSC's allocations for 2002–03. We intend to amend the regulations further for 2003–04 to ensure that such schools have a minimum two-thirds gain in that year.

Teachers' Pension Scheme

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) active members, (b) premature retirements, (c) ill-health retirements and (d) age retirements there were from the Teachers' Pension Scheme in each of the last 10 years. [47366]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is provided in the following table. Data on active members are obtained from returns submitted by employers. Not all returns have yet been received in respect of 2000-01. Data relating to numbers of retirements have been provided by the scheme administrators.

Financial year	Active members	Premature retirements	Ill health retirements	Actuarially reduced benefits	Age retirements

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the contribution rate for teachers' employers will, following the next quinquennial review of the scheme by the Government Actuary, be based on a valuation that includes increases in pensions. [47368]

Mr. Timms: The valuation of the scheme currently being conducted by the Government Actuary, and future valuations, will include the cost of providing annual increases to pensions in payment.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment her Department has made of the impact of increased salary costs of teachers on the required contribution rate for the Teachers' Pension Scheme. [47367]

Mr. Timms: In determining the required contribution rate at each actuarial review, the Government Actuary allows for future increases in salaries arising from general salary inflation and from promotion or scale increments. Details of the most recent assumptions are included in the Government Actuary's report on the actuarial review as at 31 March 1996. The actuarial review as at 31 March 2001 will reflect increases in salaries and the extent to which they differ from the assumed increases at the 1996 review. I expect to have the Government Actuary's report on the 2001 review by the end of this year.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the funds held by the Teacher Superannuation Fund, broken down by (a) asset type and (b) share holdings. [47751]

Mr. Timms: The Teachers' Pension Scheme is an unfunded scheme. There are, therefore, no assets or shareholdings.

School Exclusions

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much money was spent by her Department in pursuing legal action against children who have been (a) temporarily and (b) permanently excluded from school for each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority. [47742]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: None. My Department does not pursue legal action against children who have been excluded from school.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) temporary and (b) permanent exclusions were made by (i) primary, (ii) secondary and (iii) all schools in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority. [47483]

Mr. Timms: A table showing the available information has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Information on fixed term (temporary) exclusions in not collected centrally.

Information on permanent exclusions is collected only from maintained primary and secondary schools and special schools.

City Academies and Beacon Schools

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools have become (a) city academies and (b) beacon schools in each year since the beginning of the scheme, broken down by local education authority. [47493]

Mr. Timms: No city academies have yet been established. It is expected that the first three will begin operating in September 2002. The beacon school programme was launched in 1998. The number of beacon schools established each year was:

2001: 450.

The network currently consists of 1,000 schools. The breakdown by local education authority is as follows:

Specialist Schools

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools have become specialist schools in each year since the beginning of the scheme, broken down by (a) specialism and (b) local education authority. [47494]

Mr. Timms: The information is given in a table which has been placed in the Library.

Special Schools

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many special schools have closed in each of the last seven years. [48220]

Mr. Timms: The number of special schools that have closed in each of the last seven years is:

Year	Number
1999	35
2000	33
2001	31
2002	1
Total	195

Parental Choice

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children failed to gain a place at the (a) primary, (b) secondary and (c) special school of their first choice in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority. [47488]

Mr. Timms: The Department does not keep statistics on how many children fail to gain a place at primary, secondary and special schools of their first choice. It is possible, however, that local education authorities might collect this type of information individually.

Teachers (Early Leavers)

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teachers left the profession in each year since 1997; and what proportion had taught for (a) less than three years, (b) between three and five years, (c) between five and 10 years, (d) between 10 and 15 years and (e) more than 15 years, broken down by local education authority. [47510]

Mr. Timms: The numbers of teachers leaving regular full or part-time service in the maintained schools sector in England were as follows. For each local education authority the numbers leaving (in bold type) and the proportions of these leavers with different lengths of service are given. The latest provisional data available are for 31 March 2000 and has been placed in the Libraries.

Teacher Dismissals

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many teachers have been dismissed from their post (a) in each year since 1997 and (b) since June 2001, broken down by local education authority; [47495]

(2) how many (a) head teachers, (b) deputy head teachers and (c) classroom assistants have been dismissed from their post in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority; [47496]

(3) how many teachers have been suspended for misconduct from (a) primary, (b) secondary, (c) special and (d) all schools in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority; [47509]

(4) how many (a) classroom assistants, (b) deputy headteachers and (c) headteachers were suspended for misconduct from (i) primary, (ii) secondary and (iii) special, and (iv) all schools, in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority. [47491]

Mr. Timms: The Department does not collect this information.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many former grant-maintained schools have gained (a) specialist, (b) beacon and (c) city academy status in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority. [47489]

Mr. Timms: The number of former grant-maintained schools which have gained (a) specialist and (b) beacon status is provided in the tables. For (c), city academies, none of the schools involved were grant-maintained.

Teacher Numbers

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) male and (b) female teachers in the United Kingdom are employed in (i) primary schools and (ii) secondary schools. [47492]

Mr. Timms: The provisional numbers of teachers in regular full or part time service in the maintained schools sector in England at 31 March 2000 (the most recent date available) were as follows:

	Nursery/primary	Secondary
Male	28,300	86,100
Female	168,200	117,300
Total	196,500	203,300

Some 10 to 20 per cent. of part-timers are not recorded on the Teachers' Pension Scheme, from which the data are obtained.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many supply teachers were employed in each year since 1997, and what proportion had qualified teacher status, broken down by local education authority. [47485]

Mr. Timms: Information on the qualifications held by supply teachers is not collected centrally. The numbers of occasional teachers with contracts of less than one month, working for the whole day on the survey date, in the maintained schools sector, in January of each year, 1997 to 2001, by local education authority[1,2] were as follows:

[1] Local education authorities created by local government re-organisation in 1997 and 1998 are shown under their parent authority. Data have been aggregated to give totals for the former authority areas, in order to allow comparisons between years.
[2] All figures are rounded to the nearest 10. Totals may not appear to equal the sum of their component parts, due to rounding.
[3] 2001 figures include 820 teachers without qualified teacher status from outside the European Economic Area, collected for the first time in the January 2001 survey.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average pay is for teachers in (a) Staffordshire and (b) inner London. [47965]

Mr. Timms: The average salaries of regular full time teachers in the maintained schools sector at 31 March 2000 were as follows. This is the latest date for which provisional data are available.

Inner London LEAs	28,200

Teacher Training Council

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what (a) meetings and (b) communications there have been between her Department and the Teacher Training Council in each year since 1997. [48255]

Mr. Timms: Ministers and officials in this Department communicate regularly and have frequent formal and informal meetings with the Teacher Training Agency (TTA). The Department does not keep a central record of all meetings and communications. Key meetings include six TTA board meetings a year and quarterly meetings on audit and accreditation matters. Regular contacts and communications take place to ensure that TTA programmes are planned, managed and delivered effectively and in line with the Government's objectives.

Teacher Qualifications

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of teachers in England in secondary schools hold a (a) masters and (b) PhD in the subject area they are qualified to teach. [48276]

Mr. Timms: This information is not collected centrally.

Teachers (Age)

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of teachers in England employed in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools are (i) under and including the age of 35 and (ii) over the age of 35 years. [48275]

Mr. Timms: The proportions of teachers in regular full or part-time service in the maintained schools sector in England at 31 March 2000 (the latest date for which provisional data are available) who were under or over the age of 35 years were as follows:

Percentage

	35 and under	Over 35
Nursery/Primary	33	67
Secondary	29	71

Some 10 to 20 per cent. of part-timers are not recorded on the Teachers' Pension Scheme, from which the data are obtained.

Free School Meals

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils at (a) primary and (b) secondary level qualified for free school meals in each of the last seven years. [48223]

Mr. Timms: The available information is shown in the table.

Teaching Assistants

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action she is taking to put in place a career structure for teaching assistants; and if she will make a statement. [48296]

Mr. Timms: Developments in the roles of teaching assistants, including a career structure based on training, skills, experience and qualifications, are currently being considered by a working party which includes representatives of teachers and support staff, the local government employers and other government bodies. National Vocational Qualifications, based on the new National Occupational Standards for Teaching Assistants, are expected to be in place later this year and will form part of the proposed career structure.

Convent of Jesus and Mary High School

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the targets agreed by Convent of Jesus and Mary high school by Brent LEA at the time of its acquisition of specialist status identifying any not yet achieved. [48267]

Mr. Timms: The Convent of Jesus and Mary high school has been operating as a Language College since September 1996. The information requested is being collated. I will therefore write to the hon. Member shortly giving a full reply to the question raised.

Careers Guidance

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action she is taking to ensure continuing universal availability of careers information, advice and guidance. [47879]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Through the Connexions Service, all young people aged 13–19 will have access to a Connexions Personal Adviser (PA). One of the key roles of a PA is to provide independent information, advice and guidance on learning and career options. This can be delivered in class or small group settings, or through one-to-one interviews, depending on the young person's needs. The Connexions Service is now operating in 25 (out of a total of 47) Partnership areas and will be rolled-out nationally by 2003.

Television Licences

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the (a) number and (b) total cost of television licences paid for by her Department. [48336]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In line with Government policy my Department, like others, has Crown immunity and is exempt from the need to purchase television licenses for televisions which are used for official use. All of the televisions which are in use on my headquarter buildings are for official use only.

Schooling Costs

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her estimate is of the average annual cost of schooling for an individual student taking three A-levels at (a) an English maintained secondary school and (b) an English maintained sixth form college. [48244]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The figures for school and college funding have not been calculated on the same basis and cannot therefore be used to make comparisons. The FE unit funding figure includes total public funding allocated for further education, while the schools' figure does not. It is based only on delegated funds and excludes other funding the school receives centrally from LEAs which impacts on post-16 students.

The latest estimate of the average delegated funding per sixth form student in schools per year for 2001–02 is £3,330. The total funding per full time equivalent student in FE sector colleges per year for 2001–02 is £3,660. Separate figures for sixth form colleges are not available.

Vacant Teaching Posts

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many vacant (a) deputy head teacher, (b) head teacher and (c) teacher posts existed in (i) primary schools, (ii) secondary schools and (iii) special schools in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority. [47505]

Mr. Timms: The deputy head teacher, head teacher and classroom teacher vacancies in maintained nursery/primary, secondary and special schools by local education authority' in January of each year since 1997 has been placed in the Libraries.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will take steps to improve the response time to parliamentary questions. [47717]

Hilary Benn: The Department for International Development endeavours to answer all parliamentary questions in a timely manner. As the hon. Member will be aware there has been a sharp increase in the number of parliamentary questions in the current session and we will continue to aim to answer all questions as quickly and accurately as possible.

Entertainment Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list for 1997–98 and for each subsequent financial year, including the current year to date, the amount spent by (a) her Department, (b) its agencies and (c) its non-departmental public bodies on (i) food and (ii) alcohol, indicating how much was spent on guests, and how much in respect of (A) Ministers and (B) staff, broken down to show how much was provided directly by her Department and how much reclaimed. [34461]

Hilary Benn: This information is not held centrally and could be made available only at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list for 1997–98 and each subsequent financial year the amount spent by (a) her Department, (b) its agencies and (c) its non-departmental public bodies in respect of hotel and other similar privately-provided accommodation (i) in the UK and (ii) abroad for (A) Ministers, (B) staff and (C) other persons; if she will list the proportion of this cost incurred in respect of (x) food and (y) alcohol in each case; and if she will list the average cost per hotel room or similar unit of accommodation provided in each case. [34386]

Hilary Benn: This information is not held centrally and could be made available only at a disproportionate cost.

Underspend

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the (a) capital and (b) revenue underspend in her Department is expected to be in the financial year 2001–02. [47808]

Hilary Benn: Estimated outturn figures for 2001–02 will be published in the Budget report on 17 April.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list, for 1997–98 and for each subsequent financial year, the amount spent (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) abroad by (i) her Department, (ii) its agencies and (iii) its non-departmental public bodies on (1) providing mobile telephone equipment, including handsets and other associated equipment, (2) telephone calls made using such equipment and (3) telephone calls made using privately owned mobile telephones but subsequently reclaimed by (x) Ministers and (y) staff. [34409]

Hilary Benn: This information is not held centrally and could be made available only at a disproportionate cost.

Property Protection

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what new measures her Department took in 2001–02 to protect its property from theft or damage. [47326]

Hilary Benn: As part of the refurbishment of our new London Headquarters, a number of additional security measures were introduced. Additional external CCTV cameras were installed, and a purpose-built security control room constructed. Improved external doors, grills and locks were also fitted, and security pillars were installed to monitor and control access into the building. A new system for asset control has also been introduced, whereby valuable assets can be tagged, and their movement monitored.

Similar measures will be implemented during future refurbishment of our other two UK buildings. In the meantime our East Kilbride office is currently being fitted with secure storage for up to 30 bicycles.

Relocation

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to relocate executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies under the remit of her Department to Scotland. [47953]

Hilary Benn: The Department for International Development has no executive agencies. Two of the three non-departmental public bodies under my remit are based in the South East. The third, the Overseas Service Pensions Scheme Advisory Board, is administered from our offices in Scotland although their meetings take place in the South East. There are no plans to change these arrangements.

Television

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the number of subscriptions to (a) digital terrestrial, (b) digital satellite and (c) digital cable television held by her Department for services in any departmental building from which Ministers work, stating for each subscription its (i) cost and (ii) purpose. [48533]

Hilary Benn: The Department's 1 Palace Street, London office currently subscribes to the Annunciator Link to the Houses of Parliament, which transmits both digital terrestrial and satellite channels. The cost of this is £937 plus VAT per month. The link is used by my Private and Press Offices to keep in touch with events in both Houses of Parliament and to pick up broadcasts from the various news channels.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the (a) number and (b) total cost of television licences paid for by her Department. [48332]

Hilary Benn: We currently hold three television licenses at a total cost of £327. In addition, we also pay a monthly rental fee of £937 plus VAT for the Annunciator Link to the Houses of Parliament. This is used for the transmission of terrestrial and satellite channels to points to our 1 Palace Street, London office.

Pensions

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the average value in pounds sterling of pensions received by British nationals under the CAPF in the last year for which figures are available. [48020]

Hilary Benn: I am advised by the Crown Agents, who are responsible for the management of the Central African Pension Fund (CAPF), that the average CAPF pension is £451.17 a year. It is not possible to provide a figure for British nationals alone.

Electronic Invoices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the initiation by her Department of the electronic receipt of invoices. [47782]

Hilary Benn: A report on progress against this particular Public Service Agreement (PSA) target, and against all other PSA targets set by my Department between April 1999 and March 2002, will appear in DFID's 2002 Departmental Report to be published later this month.

Internet Access

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if access to the internet for all overseas staff of the Department and its agencies will be provided in 2002. [47776]

Hilary Benn: A report on progress against this particular Public Service Agreement (PSA) target, and against all other PSA targets set by my Department between April 1999 and March 2002, will appear in DFID's 2002 Departmental Report to be published later this month.

Audit Needs Assessment

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the result was of the consideration by the Department's Management Board of an audit needs assessment in March 2001. [47780]

Hilary Benn: A report on progress against this particular Public Service Agreement (PSA) target, and against all other PSA targets set by my Department between April 1999 and March 2002, will appear in DFID's 2002 Departmental Report to be published later this month.

Budgeting Forecasting

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the result of the testing of the pilot systems for improved budgeting forecasting and suspense management is. [47779]

Hilary Benn: A report on progress against this particular Public Service Agreement (PSA) target, and against all other PSA targets set by my Department between April 1999 and March 2002, will appear in DFID's 2002 Departmental Report to be published later this month.

Implementation Group (Tokyo)

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development who will represent the UK Government at the first meeting of the Implementation Group (Tokyo) due to meet in Kabul on 19 April; and if she will make a statement. [47702]

Hilary Benn: Senior officials from DFID will represent the UK at the Implementation Group meeting in Kabul, which is scheduled to take place from 10 to 11 April.

This will be the first meeting of the Implementation Group since the Ministerial Conference that was held in Tokyo in January 2002. Around 150 participants are expected to attend, approximately a third of whom will be representing Afghan line ministries. Issues for discussion are likely to include the National Development Framework; an analysis of donor pledges and commitments; a progress report on the Immediate and Transitional Assistance Programme (ITAP) for Afghanistan in 2002; and modalities of the World Bank Afghan Reconstruction Trust Fund (ARTF).

Afghanistan

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will support the call from Afghanistan's Minister for Women's Affairs for 25 per cent. female representation on the Loya Jirga being organised under the auspices of the UN. [47700]

Hilary Benn: We welcome the announcement by the Special Commission for the convening of the Emergency Loya Jirga on 31 March on the procedures and criteria for the selection of delegates for the Emergency Loya Jirga. This includes a quota of 165 seats for women: approximately 11 per cent. of the total Emergency Loya Jirga delegation. This is the highest proportion of women included in any Loya Jirga in Afghan history, and as such is an important first step in ensuring that the views of women will be represented. We will continue to urge the Special Commission for the Emergency Loya Jirga to actively encourage more Afghan women to participate in the political process.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to her answer of 5 February 2002, Official Report, column 916W, on her Department's office in Kabul, what jobs are filled by Afghan (a) women and (b) men at the office. [47656]

Hilary Benn: 25 Afghan staff are employed in the DFID office in Kabul: 24 of whom are male, and one female. National staff are predominantly employed as programme officers, programme assistants, security guards, drivers and housekeepers. The female Afghan member of staff is employed as a housekeeper.

All DFID positions for national staff in Afghanistan are advertised publicly with a notice encouraging women to apply.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she has received a report from UNIFEM on the meeting held in Kabul with the Association of Afghan Women on 7 and 8 March; and if she will make a statement. [47699]

Hilary Benn: The UNIFEM report of the meeting held in Kabul with the Association of Afghan Women in March has not yet been published. We have requested a copy of the final report when it is issued.

Gender Strategy

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what her Department's gender strategy is. [47696]

Hilary Benn: Inequalities between women and men are deeply embedded, and they need to be tackled in economic, political, social and cultural life. We are concentrating on supporting changes in policy, laws and attitudes, while maintaining links with work at the grass roots. Our strategy is set out in "Poverty Elimination and the Empowerment of Women", published in September 2000.

In respect of its role as an employer, DFID's gender policy is based on a long-standing policy of equal opportunities in respect of all aspects of our recruitment and employment practices. We have targets for the representation of women. A diversity audit, which addresses gender and other issues, is currently underway looking at DFID's policies and practices, and we are planning an equal pay audit.

Education

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of whether the target of 91 per cent. for the percentage of children in education in the top 30 UK development partner countries by 2002 will be met. [47772]

Hilary Benn: A report on progress against this particular Public Service Agreement (PSA) target, and against all other PSA targets set by my Department between April 1999 and March 2002, will appear in DFID's 2002 Departmental Report to be published later this month.

Special Advisers

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development on how many occasions since 1 May 1997 (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental special advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity; and if she will list the total cost, including (i) travel, (ii) accommodation and (iii) subsistence allowance, for each occasion. [37977]

Clare Short: Between 1 April 2000 and 31 March 2001, Special Advisers in my Department travelled abroad on two occasions, at an average cost of £3,100 per trip. This figure includes the average accommodation cost and subsistence allowance for all DfID staff travelling overseas, as it is not possible to provide specific information for these categories. Information for the period 2 May 1997 to 31 March 2000 is already in the public domain. All travel by Special Advisers is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code, and the Civil Service Management Code.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target for reducing maternal mortality will be met by 2002. [47771]

Hilary Benn: The final out turn of the Public Service Agreement (PSA) target covering maternal health and progress towards all other PSA targets set by my Department between April 1999 and March 2002, will appear in DFID's 2002 departmental report to be published in April.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target that 60 per cent. of departmental services should be reviewed by 2003 will be met. [47777]

Hilary Benn: A report on progress against this particular Public Service Agreement (PSA) target, and against all other PSA targets set by my Department between April 1999 and March 2002, will appear in DFID's 2002 department report to be published later this month.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target that 75 per cent. of relevant bilateral projects shall be likely to meet their objectives by 2002 will be met. [47769]

Hilary Benn: A report on progress against this particular Public Service Agreement (PSA) target, and against all other PSA targets set by my Department between April 1999 and March 2002, will appear in DFID's 2002 departmental report to be published later this month.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if the PSA target for the implementation of an overseas pilot exercise in the use of procurement cards was met by the end of 2001. [47781]

Hilary Benn: A report on progress against this particular Public Service Agreement (PSA) target, and against all other PSA targets set by my Department between April 1999 and March 2002, will appear in DFID's 2002 Departmental Report to be published later this month.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if the PSA target to reply to 100 per cent. of Ministerial correspondence within 21 days of receipt (a) was met in 2001 and (b) will be met in 2002. [47774]

Hilary Benn: A report on progress against this particular Public Service Agreement (PSA) target, and against all other PSA targets set by my Department between April 1999 and March 2002, will appear in DFID's 2002 Departmental Report to be published later this month.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target for the development of the performance reporting information system for management will be met in 2002. [47775]

Hilary Benn: A report on progress against this particular Public Service Agreement (PSA) target, and against all other PSA targets set by my Department between April 1999 and March 2002, will appear in DFID's 2002 Departmental Report to be published later this month.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of when the PSA target of an annual 1.5 per cent. real gross domestic product per capita growth in the top 30 UK development partners will be met. [47770]

Hilary Benn: A report on progress against this particular Public Service Agreement (PSA) target, and against all other PSA targets set by my Department between April 1999 and March 2002, will appear in DFID's 2002 Departmental Report to be published later this month.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what new initiatives her Department has taken in 2001–02 to assist in achieving its Public Service Agreement targets. [47199]

Hilary Benn: The Department for International Development's Service Delivery Agreement sets out in more detail how we are working to achieve specific Public Service Agreement outcomes. progress towards Public Service Agreement targets set by my Department between April 1999 and March 2002—as well as a full account of the UK's work to support poverty elimination—will appear in DFID's 2002 Departmental Report to be published in April.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target for reduction in sickness absence rates by 2003 will be met. [47778]

Hilary Benn: A report on progress against this particular Public Service Agreement (PSA) target, and against all other PSA targets set by my Department between April 1999 and March 2002, will appear in DFID's 2002 Departmental Report to be published later this month.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target to reduce central and support costs as a percentage of aid policy and administration by 1 per cent. or approximately to £0.5 million per year will be met by 2002. [47773]

Hilary Benn: A report on progress against this particular Public Service Agreement (PSA) target, and against all other PSA targets set by my Department between April 1999 and March 2002, will appear in DFID's 2002 Department Report to be published later this month.

Commonwealth Development Corporation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the value is of total investments of the Commonwealth Development Corporation. [46901]

Hilary Benn: At 31 December 2000, CDC's portfolio at valuation was £1,063.9 million. The valuation at the end of December 2001 will be published in CDC's annual report for 2001.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to expand the proportion of CDC Capital Partners' portfolio held in equity investments. [46906]

Hilary Benn: None. Management of CDC's portfolio is the responsibility of CDC's Board of Directors.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what percentage of CDC Capital Partners and the Commonwealth Development Corporation's portfolio was in countries with a per capita GNP of less than £1,600 in real terms in each of the last six years; [46900]

(2) in how many (i) countries and (ii) businesses CDC Capital Partners and the Commonwealth Development Corporation had investments in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001; [46902]

(3) what percentage of CDC Capital Partners' and the Commonwealth Development Corporation's investment was in sub-Saharan Africa by value in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001; [46903]

(4) what the average rate of return on capital employed was by CDC Capital Partners and the Commonwealth Development Corporation on a three year basis for (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001; [46904]

(5) what percentage of the portfolio of CDC Capital Partners and the Commonwealth Development Corporation was held in equity investments by (i) value and (ii) the number of investments in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001; [46905]

(6) what the return was on CDC Capital Partners' and the Commonwealth Development Corporation's equity portfolio as a percentage in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001; [46907]

(7) what percentage of CDC Capital Partners' and the Commonwealth Development Corporation's Equity Investments were in (i) least developed countries and (ii) sub-Saharan Africa in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001; [46908]

(8) what percentage of CDC Capital Partners' and the Commonwealth Development Corporation's equity investments were in (i) the agribusiness sector and (ii) the infrastructure sector in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001; [46909]

(9) what percentage of CDC Capital Partners' and the Commonwealth Development Corporation's investment in least developed countries were in (i) the agribusiness sector and (ii) the infrastructure sector in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001. [46910]

Hilary Benn: The Commonwealth Development Corporation was registered as CDC Group plc in 1999 and now trades as CDC Capital Partners. The data below refer to the portfolio or new equity investments of the group as a whole, and takes no account of new lending if any.

Statistics held by CDC are based on the category of poorer countries defined in the Investment Policy. These are countries with a GNP per capita below the weighted mean for lower middle income countries, based on World Bank data published in 1998. This category, which corresponds to a GNP per capita of $1,730 in 1996, has been used in the replies.

Some data for years preceding the establishment of CDC's Investment Policy are not readily available. CDC will write shortly to supplement the answers given for earlier years. Data for the year ending December 2001 will be published later this month in CDC's Annual Report.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Special Advisers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many times special advisers have accompanied Ministers on overseas visits in each of the last five years; which countries were visited; and what the total cost of each individual visit was. [47144]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Westmorland and Lonsdale (Mr. Collins) on 4 March 2002, Official Report, column 28W. Between 1 April 2001 and 31 March 2002, special advisers in the Department did not travel abroad on any occasion.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will take steps to improve the response time to parliamentary questions. [47723]

Maria Eagle: In its response to the Public Administration Select Committee's Second Report of Session 2000–01 on Ministerial Accountability and Parliamentary Questions, the Government made clear their commitment to providing prompt and accurate answers to parliamentary questions. This continues to be the Government's position.

Since the House returned in October we have received double the number of the previous session and by the end of this session we anticipate having dealt with significantly more questions than any of the last five years. This does of course have an impact on our ability to deal with questions speedily. We are confident that in deciding to table questions hon. Members take into account the impact of their requests on the ability of colleagues to secure answers to their inquiries. Many hon. Members secure information from other sources such as publications by the Department which are available in the Library.

Targeting Fraud Website

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he is conducting to evaluate the impact of the Targeting Fraud website. [46462]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department collates website statistics for all its sites including those for the Targeting Fraud site. The website has received more than 1.65 million hits and has generated more than 11,000 fraud referrals. The website is just one part of our campaign to raise awareness of benefit fraud and reinforce the message that committing fraud is wrong.

Secondments

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many members of staff were employed by his Department on secondment from non-governmental organisations in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [45220]

Maria Eagle: The table gives the number of staff recorded as having been seconded in to the Department (including Employment Service and the former Department of Social Security) from non-governmental organisations in the financial years (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–2000 and (c) 2000–01.

Secondments are part of the interchange initiative promoting the exchange of people and good practice between the civil service and other organisations. Interchange is a key component of the civil service reform agenda. The Department for Work and Pensions is committed to increasing interchange, in particular bringing more people in to the Department on secondment.

Flexible Working

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of the staff of his Department are (a) job sharing, (b) term working and (c) engaged in another form of flexible working. [42424]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: We have a range of alternative working practices available to all staff which aim to strike a balance between working life and personal commitments. The majority of staff work on a flexible working pattern, which allows a degree of freedom that they can tailor around their work and home life priorities.

The Department for Work and Pensions is a new Department, therefore figures supplied below have been supplied from Employment Services and DSS legacy systems.

(a) Job sharing

	ES	DSS	DWP
Number of staff employed	40,123	104,597	144,720
Number of job sharers	4	6	10
Proportion of staff employed as job sharers	0.01	0.01	0.01

(b) Part-year working

	ES	DSS	DWP
Number of staff employed	40,123	104,597	144,720
Number of part-year workers	539	3,328	3,867
Proportion of staff employed as part-year workers	1.34	3.18	2.67

(c) Other flexible working patterns

	ES	DSS	DWP
Number of staff employed	40,123	104,597	23.62
Number of staff employed on other flexible working patterns	9,477	29,770	28.46
Proportion of staff employed on other flexible working patterns	23.62	39,247	27.12

Accountancy Contracts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the contracts agreed by his Department with the five largest accountancy firms since May 1997; and what was the total value of contracts with each. [42098]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The question covers a period prior to the establishment of the Department for Work and Pensions in June 2001. The information requested on contracts let by the ex-Employment Service and ex-Department of Social Security is not held centrally in the new Department and the question could be answered only at disproportionate cost.

Information on contracts let by the Department for Work and Pensions will be collated for the current financial year but is not currently available.

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the saving from the PFI/PPP deal for IS and IT services to underpin child support reforms. [18990]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Doug Smith to John Bercow Esq., dated 9 April 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply by me. I apologise for the delay in writing to you.

You asked for a statement on the saving from the PFI/PPP deal for IS and IT services to underpin child support reforms.

Child Support Reform delivers new legislation, IS/IT services, procedures and working practices which together provide financial savings accruing over the life of the IS/IT contract. By 2005/2006 the changes will result in a reduction of 17% in the unit cost (which includes PFI costs) of handling child support applications.

Minimum Income Guarantee

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the rise in the minimum income guarantee has been since 1997 after taking account of inflation. [45913]

Mr. McCartney: The minimum income guarantee was introduced in 1997. Since 1999, annual rises in the minimum income guarantee have been linked to earnings. The rises, after taking into account inflation increases and the differences in the premiums paid, are shown in the table.

	Single (per cent. increase)	Couple (per cent. increase)
April 1997	n/a	n/a
April 1999	4.4	4.5
April 2000	3.0	3.0
April 2001	15.9	13.7
April 2002	4.8	4.9

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many claimants of the minimum income guarantee are attributed with income from private pension funds not yet annuitised; and how many claimants of MIG who were rejected were attributed with such income. [46613]

Mr. McCartney: Information regarding the numbers of minimum income guarantee claimants with income attributed to private pension funds not yet annuitised, and unsuccessful claims to minimum income guarantee attributed with such income, is not available.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners in Portsmouth receive the minimum income guarantee; and if he will make a statement. [46436]

Maria Eagle: As at November 2001, there were 5,000 claimants in receipt of the minimum income guarantee in the Portsmouth local authority area. However, when we include partners, 5,500 pensioners are benefiting from the minimum income guarantee.

Over two million pensioners nationwide benefit from the minimum income guarantee. Those pensioners in receipt of minimum income guarantee are at least £15 per week better off in real terms than in 1997. From April 2002, no single pensioner will be expected to live on less than £98.15 per week and no pensioner couple on less than £149.50.

Job Creation

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his estimate is of the number of jobs that have been created (a) under the Government's New Deal and (b) through local authority partnerships in the London boroughs of (i) Lambeth, (ii) Southwark and (iii) Lewisham; and if he will make a statement. [44718]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 21 March 2002]: The New Deals are not job creation programmes. They work closely with employers to ensure that New Deal participants are provided with the tailored help and support they need to be able to fill existing vacancies and meet the skills shortages faced by employers. The New Deals have already helped over 600,000 people move into work.

We have a good working relationship with Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham councils, all of whom have signed up as New Deal employers. In April we will also be introducing a StepUP pilot in the Lambeth area, which will provide a stepping stone for long-term unemployed people moving from benefits into work.

Widowed Parent's Allowance

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many widowers whose spouse died prior to 9 April 2001, were eligible for the widowed parent's allowance at the time of its introduction; and how many of them have received the benefit; [40455]

(2) how many fathers with dependent children have been widowed since 9 April 2001; and how many of them have received the widowed parent's allowance. [40456]

Malcolm Wicks: The information requested is not available but such information as we do have is shown in the table.

Men with dependent children widowed prior to the commencement of bereavement benefits on 9 April 2001 became eligible for widowed parents allowance from that date, subject to the normal conditions of entitlement. Such men whose awards were in payment at the date of the scan will be included in these figures.

Benefit Fraud

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many extra (a) internal and (b) claimant fraud investigators have been taken on by his Department in the last year. [47384]

Malcolm Wicks: Although the Department has replaced internal investigators as they have left, no extra internal investigators have been recruited. Information on the number of staff employed by the Department in claimant fraud investigation is in the table.

Quarter ending	Total number of fraud staff
March 2001	4,531

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people were successfully prosecuted for (a) housing benefit and (b) council tax benefit fraud in each local authority in 2000–01. [33624]

Malcolm Wicks: We are working in partnership with local authorities to tackle fraud and error. From April 2001 we introduced a comprehensive new incentive scheme that encourages authorities to focus more effectively on the full range of anti-fraud measures of which prosecution is only one. 63 local authorities are already on the new scheme and the rest will join in April 2002.

Local authorities' investigations in 2000–01 rooted out 100,000 cases of fraud and claimed a weekly saving. It is not possible to give separate figures for prosecutions for housing benefit and council tax benefit fraud. Information on the total numbers of successful prosecutions for benefit fraud reported by each local authority in 2000–01 has been placed in the Library.

Correspondence

David Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will reply to the letter of 20 February from the hon. Member for Walsall, North regarding correspondence sent by a Member of the Irish Parliament. [46504]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I have been asked to reply.

The Lord Chancellor's Department, which has responsibility for reciprocal maintenance arrangements between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland, the subject of the correspondence. The hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a response to his letter by 19 April 2002.

Benefits

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of the population received means tested benefits (a) in 1997 and (b) according to the most recent figures available. [40295]

Malcolm Wicks: Overall, the proportion of people aged 16 and over receiving income-related benefits has fallen from 17.5 per cent. to 16 per cent. between May 1997 and May 2000.

Notes:

1. Income-related benefits/tax credits are defined as income support, income-based jobseeker's allowance, housing benefit, council tax benefit (plus disability working allowance and family credit for May 1997 only and working families tax credit and disabled persons tax credit for May 2000).

2. The data refer to claims for income tested benefits, which may be a single person, a couple or a family. More than one person can live in one property, for example two or more adults in a flat or house share arrangement.

3. Overlaps between benefits/tax credits have been removed.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list each way in which benefit recipients can have their benefit income reduced because of a sanction; and how many people have been subject to each of these sanctions during the last year for which figures are available. [24239]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on how people's benefit income may be reduced because of a sanction is contained in the Decision Makers Guide, a copy of which is available in the Library.

The available information on the number of people who have been subject to a sanction is in the table.

Type of sanction	Numbers of people subject to sanctions
Community sentence	37
Income support—lone parents who fail to participate in a meeting with a personal adviser	765
Jobseeker's allowance	24,100

Notes:

1. Community Sentence data are based on clerical returns received at the DWP Information Centre between 15 October 2001 and 26 March 2002. Figures are unrounded.

2. Percentage figure on community sentence is not available, as the number of offenders on community orders in receipt of income support, jobseeker's allowance or training allowance is unknown.

3. Income support data for lone parents are based on a 100 per cent. count taken from the Labour Market Computer System between 9 April 2001 and 22 February 2002.

4. Jobseeker's allowance data are taken from a 5 per cent. scan of the benefit computer system. The figures in the table represent a snapshot as at 8 November 2001 of the number of jobseekers where a sanction has been applied.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total weekly benefit savings are for each local authority in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) each quarter of 2001–02. [42515]

Malcolm Wicks: The information requested has been placed in the Library. From April all local authorities will be operating within our new anti-fraud incentive scheme that provides a broader range of financial incentives to prevent, detect, punish and prosecute fraud than did the old weekly benefit savings scheme.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the (a) number and (b) total value of emergency benefit payments issued in each month since 1997. [42180]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 11 March 2002]: This is a matter for Alexis Cleveland, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Alexis Cleveland to Mr. Steve Webb, dated 13 March 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions has asked me to respond to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will estimate the (a) number and (b) total value of emergency benefit payments issued in each month since 1997.

Information held centrally records the total number of clerical payments that have been issued. This is not possible broken down into categories and the amount of the payments is not recorded.

It is not therefore possible to estimate how many payments were for emergency payments or the amount that has been paid. Emergency payments vary depending on individual customer's circumstances.

I'm sorry that I cannot be more helpful.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what impact Statutory Instrument 2002, No. 648 will have on the eligibility to claim disability living allowance by those with (a) visual and hearing impairments, (b) heart disease, (c) asthma, (d) epilepsy, (e) ME/CFS and (f) bowel disease. [47731]

Maria Eagle: Entitlement to disability living allowance is based on the claimant's need for personal care and/or walking difficulties which result from their severe disability. The claimant's medical condition is not, necessarily, the key factor.

This statutory instrument, the Social Security (Disability Living Allowance) (Amendment) Regulations 2002, makes clear that "fear or anxiety" experienced when walking out of doors can be taken into account for entitlement to the lower rate mobility component of disability living allowance only where they are a symptom of a mental disability. It does not alter the basic qualifying criteria for the lower rate mobility component, which require a person to be so severely disabled physically or mentally that they are unable to walk out of doors on unfamiliar routes without guidance or supervision from another person most of the time. The eligibility of claimants with any of the disabilities listed in the question will be unaffected by the statutory instrument except where their claims are based on 'fear or anxiety' experienced in these circumstances.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost would be of (a) extending the period from four to 13 weeks of an adult's stay in hospital before disability living allowance or attendance allowance is removed and (b) extending the period form 12 to 26 weeks before DLA is withdrawn for a child. [43984]

Maria Eagle [holding answer 18 March 2002]: The proposed change would cost in the order of £50 million per annum.

Notes:

Caseloads have been rounded to the nearest 5,000 and costs to the nearest 5 million.

Based on data taken from the May 2001 5 per cent. scan of the AA/DLA computer systems, and 1999 Hospital Episode Statistics.

The costs have been calculated based on the stock of hospital suspensions at a point in time. The proportion of suspensions who would be affected by the extension to 13 weeks (26 weeks for children) was derived from Hospital Episode Statistics which show the number of hospital episodes by completed duration.

Estimates of the stock of hospital suspensions at a point are available from the 5 per cent. scan of the AA/DLA computer systems. Estimates of the flow of DLA/AA claimants on to a hospital suspension are not available.

Carers (Savings)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how he proposes to enable people with caring responsibilities to save for their retirement. [45909]

Maria Eagle: SERPS has served many people well but, because it is purely earnings-related, people on the lowest earnings gain least, and carers and disabled people who cannot work, or earn very little, get nothing at all.

When state second pension is launched on 6 April, 18 million people will start to build up bigger pension entitlements. Some 4.5 million low-paid employees (those earning up to £10,800 in 2002–03) will get at least twice as much additional pension as a person earning £10,800 would have got from SERPS. In addition 2 million qualifying carers and a similar number of long-term disabled people with broken work records will benefit from state second pension. They will be treated, for state second pension purposes, as if they had annual earnings at the low earnings threshold, £10,800 for 2002–03.

State second pension will also deliver better pensions for 9.5 million moderately paid employees—those earning between £10,800 and £24,600 (in 2002–03 terms).

Employees earning more than £24,600 will get equivalent benefits to those provided by SERPS.

Enhanced national insurance rebates and state second pension "top-ups" will ensure that low and moderately paid employees who are contracted-out into private pensions will also benefit from the reforms.

In addition, we plan that the savings credit element of the pension credit will reward people with second pensions, including state second pension.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which local authorities have not sent information requested or expected by the Department relating to housing benefit administration in 2001; on which occasions figures have been estimated for non-responding local authorities; and what action the Department takes against non-responding local authorities. [41784]

Malcolm Wicks: At present information is provided on a voluntary basis by local authorities. We have reminded all authorities of the importance of providing management information.

Estimates have been made by the Department in respect of non-responding local authorities or missing information since 1994–95 for annual returns and since 1996–97 for quarterly returns.

Information on the number of local authorities who have failed to submit management information returns to the Department in 2000–01 has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to reform subsidies to local authorities for housing benefit administration so they become performance related. [42255]

Malcolm Wicks: We have already increased housing benefit administration subsidy for the year 2001–02 to £166 million, in 2002–03 it will increase to £170 million and to £174 million in 2003–04. This three-year settlement provides local authorities with stability, enabling them to plan more effectively for the future administration of housing benefit and council tax benefit.

As part of our drive to improve local authority performance in delivering housing benefit, we are developing a set of performance standards for effective and secure administration.

Local authorities will be able to self assess their performance against challenging standards that go beyond the core measures of speed, accuracy and basic security and address wider issues—customer service, housing need and anti-poverty objectives.

In April 2001 we launched a new anti-fraud incentive scheme which means that local authorities who uncover more fraud and prosecute fraudsters can expect to receive greater financial reward than before. 63 authorities are currently on the scheme, the rest will join in April 2002. [redacted] scheme offers additional reward to those authorities who [redacted] the Verification Framework.

For the future, we are looking at how we can use performance assessments to target help and support to authorities that need it most.

Income Support (Dumfries and Galloway)

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Dumfries and Galloway region are in receipt of income support. [45340]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is in the table.

Income Support recipients in the Dumfries and Galloway local authority area—November 2001

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest hundred, and are based on a 5 per cent. sample which is subject to a degree of sampling variation.
2. Minimum income guarantee for pensioners is defined as income support recipients where the recipient and/or partner are aged 60 or over.

Child Support

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when current customers of the Child Support Agency will enter the new scheme starting in April; and what plans he has for the implementation of the new plan for existing customers. [45342]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the Statement made to this House by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, on 20 March 2002, Official Report, columns 315–16. Existing cases will be transferred when the new system has been introduced and we are sure it is working well.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what gender impact assessment was carried out prior to changes being made to arrangements for child maintenance payments; and if he will place a copy of that assessment in the Library. [44403]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 20 March 2002]: Under the legislation, each non-resident parent and each parent with care is treated in the same manner, irrespective of the sex of the individual. The purpose of the reforms to the child support system is to ensure an increase in the amount of support for children, irrespective of their gender.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he estimates the PSA target for the introduction of the reformed child support scheme for new cases will be met on time. [46102]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 20 March 2002, Official Report, columns 315–16.

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many disqualification orders have been made since the provision came into effect; and how many prosecutions have been mounted for information offences since their introduction. [44431]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mr. Doug Smith to Mr. Mitchell, dated 9 April 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply by me.

You ask how many disqualification orders have been made since the provision came into effect; and how many prosecutions have been mounted for information offences since their introduction.

Our aim is to encourage parents to support their children. In the majority of cases our demonstrated intention to take a case to court has been sufficient to encourage the non-resident parent to make arrangements to pay maintenance.

In two cases the court has granted an order to suspend a driving licence but suspended the application of the order to permit the non-resident parent to comply with his liability. In both cases the non-resident parent is now making regular payments.

In a third case a driving licence was ordered to be withdrawn for six months, as the non-resident parent had been given the opportunity to pay his maintenance liability but failed to do so.

There have been no prosecutions and therefore no convictions made under the criminal offence of non-co-operation with the Child Support Agency. The deterrent effect of a criminal sanction for failing to provide information when requested is an important element of the new system. We strongly encourage parents to co-operate voluntarily with requests for information by contacting customers by telephone, letter and interview, and where necessary making them aware of this penalty before referring the case for consideration of prosecution.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his oral statement of 20 March, if lone parents receiving income support who start to receive child maintenance after April 2002 will qualify for a maintenance disregard; and what plans he has to compensate those who will not qualify because of the delay in implementing the new CSA computer system. [45919]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The child maintenance premium is an integral feature of the new child support scheme. Cases assessed under the current rules do not have entitlement to the premium. They accrue, depending on the amount of maintenance paid, a potential entitlement to child maintenance bonus. No question of compensation arises.

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to transfer existing CSA clients to the new system; and if he will make a statement. [35375]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer my hon. Friend to the Statement made to this House by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, on 20 March 2002, Official Report, column 315–16.

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what arrangements will apply to new clients of the child support system after April. [39896]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer my hon. Friend to the Statement made to this House by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, on 20 March 2002, Official Report, column 315–16.

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the impact of the enhanced enforcement powers for child support. [44437]

Malcolm Wicks: The new powers, in sections 13 (information—offences) and 16 (commitment to prison and disqualification from driving), are intended to help the Child Support Agency to secure compliance. Their success is in the extent to which non-resident parents co-operate with the Agency.

In the majority of the cases that the Agency has taken to court, the non-resident parent has been encouraged to make arrangements to pay maintenance. There have been no prosecutions and therefore no convictions made under the criminal offence of non-cooperation with the Child Support Agency. The deterrent effect of a criminal sanction for failing to provide information when requested is an important element of the new system.

Pension Credit

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of eligible claimants there will be for the savings credit component of the pension credit in (a) St. Helens, South, (b) St. Helens MBC area, (c) Merseyside, (d) the north-west and (e) England. [44716]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 21 March 2002]: Around half of all pensioner households in Great Britain will be eligible for pension credit in 2003–04. Of these, about 80 per cent. will be eligible for the savings credit. Remaining information is not available.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions to which benefits administered by his Department he proposes that the payment of pension credit should be a passport. [44708]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: We propose that recipients of pension credit should be entitled to the same DWP benefits administered by the Department as recipients of income support.

Pensions

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the numbers of contributors to (a) defined benefit occupational pension schemes, (b) defined contribution occupational pension schemes in (i) 1992, (ii) 1997 and (iii) the most recent year for which figures are available. [40195]

Mr. McCartney: The information requested is not available. The available information is given in the table.

Contributors to occupational pension schemes in the UK

Thousands

Defined benefit	9,800	9,200
Defined contribution	900	1,100
Total	10,700	10,300

Notes:

1. The GAD survey does not separate public sector schemes into defined benefit and defined contribution. It has been assumed that all public sector scheme members are in defined benefit schemes but the figures given for defined benefit will include a small number of public sector workers who are members of defined contribution schemes.
2. 1995 is the latest year for which information is available. The next GAD survey of occupational pension schemes covering the position in 2000 is due for publication later this year.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if his Department will consult on the introduction of compulsory pensions. [41730]

Mr. McCartney: Any employee earning over the primary threshold is making compulsory contributions to their pensions through national insurance.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the basis is of the attribution of income to a private pension pot before annuitisation for the assessment of income support on the minimum income guarantee; and how many claimants of each benefit were subject to such an attribution. [37032]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The income from an annuity purchased from a pension fund is taken fully into account for MIG purposes.

If a person over 60 has not taken an annuity he is treated as having a notional income of the amount he could have obtained if he had used his pension fund to buy an annuity. A similar approach is intended for pension credit.

Information regarding the number of claimants subject to such an attribution is not available.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will set out the circumstances under which SERPS entitlement can be offset against entitlement to a guaranteed minimum pension. [46435]

Maria Eagle: There are no circumstances under which SERPS entitlement can be offset against an individual's guaranteed minimum pension but the guaranteed minimum pension is offset against an individual's SERPS entitlement.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on how his policies for pensions will affect women. [45907]

Maria Eagle: We are committed to ensuring that our pension reforms significantly improve women's pension rights.

In April 2001 we introduced simple, low charge, flexible stakeholder pensions which are not restricted to those who are working. Women who wish to save towards a decent income in retirement can now do so and benefit from tax relief on the contributions paid into a stakeholder pension.

Stakeholder pensions can be moved between providers without charge. This is beneficial to those women in the modern labour market who move regularly between employers and occupations and who at different times, may be self employed, employed on a limited term contract or on a permanent contract.

The flexibility of stakeholder pensions means that they are a good option for women who take a break from work, for example to raise a family, as contributions can be started and stopped without penalty. As stakeholder pensions are open to non-earners those women who are not employed but can afford to save something towards their retirement can now do so. Stakeholder pension rules also allow family or friends to contribute towards someone else's pension, which may help the large number of women who are carers.

From April 2002, state second pension will boost the pensions of low and moderately paid employees and, for the first time, will provide additional pension for carers and some long-term disabled people. It will be of particular benefit to women, many of whom work part-time or as carers.

Some 2 million carers, at least 1.5 million of whom are women, will begin to build up entitlement to additional pension for the first time under state second pension. Just over 4.5 million low earners, 70 per cent. of whom are women, and 9.5 million moderate earners will gain under state second pension.

The minimum income guarantee for low-income pensioners, most of whom are women, allows people to have £12,000 savings and still qualify for extra support. From April 2002, minimum income guarantee will rise to £98.15 for single pensioners and £149.80 for couples. Currently, over 1.1 million women are in receipt of the minimum income guarantee.

From 2003, the new pension credit will benefit lower income pensioners. Two thirds of people receiving pension credit will be women, half of whom will be aged 80 or over. By April 2003, as a result of the pension credit no single pensioner will have to live on less than £100 a week (£154 for couples).

Winter fuel payments, at £200 for each eligible household, aim to ensure that no older person is fearful of turning up the heating in cold weather. Last winter (2000–01), over 11 million people aged 60 or over in around 8.5 million households received a payment; around 6.3 million of these recipients were women. In addition those aged 75 and over, the majority of whom are women, have been eligible for a free TV licence since February last year.

Under pension sharing legislation, couples whose divorces commenced on or after 1 December 2000 are able to apply to the courts to share the capitalised value of any pension rights held by either or both of them, a measure which benefits many women.

The Government recognise the importance of providing people with sound information on which types of pension provision best suit their individual need and circumstances. We will ensure that clear and understandable guidance is available to assist people in planning for their pension provision. So far, we have produced a series of leaflets to inform the public of the pension options open to them. One of these, "Pensions for Women", outlines the pension options available specifically for women.

State Pension

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the cost in a financial year of increasing the state retirement pension for (a) single pensioners by (i) £5 for those aged up to 74 years, (ii) £10 for those aged 75 to 79 years, (iii) £15 for those aged 80 years and over and (b) for married pensioner couples by (i) £8 for those aged up to 74 years, (ii) £18 for those aged 75 to 79 years, and (iii) £28 for those aged 80 years and over per week. [45620]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 25 March 2002]:

The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table:

Costs in 2002–03 of increasing the basic state retirement pension for single pensioners by the specified amounts or a proportion of the specified amounts

	Additional costs in 2002–03 £
Up to 74 years	420 million
75–79 years	540 million
80 years and over	1.33 billion
Total cost	2.29 billion

Notes:

1. Costs are in cash terms, rounded to the nearest £10 million, based on September 2001 GB administrative data.
2. Costs relate to recipients of category A, AB and B pensions only.
3. Figures represent the additional cost of introducing the principle set out in part (a) of the question rather than the stated increase in the basic state pension in 2002–03.
4. The costs are gross.

EU Pensions Directive

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what representations have been made (a) by his Department to the EU and (b) to his Department in respect of the proposed EU Pensions directive. [45310]

Mr. McCartney: Officials from the Department, together with their colleagues from the Treasury, are members of the council working group which is discussing the draft directive on the prudential supervision of occupational pension schemes. The directive has also been discussed at routine meetings between Ministers and their European counterparts. Ministers and officials frequently meet and receive representations from a range of organisations with an interest in occupational pension provision. The subjects discussed have included the draft directive.

Pensioners

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer of 18 March, Official Report, column 145W, to the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb), on pensioners, how many (a) men and

(b) women not making national insurance contributions or receiving credits in the years mentioned were (i) under 24 years of age and (ii) full-time students. [46619]

Mr. McCartney: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Figures are taken from the Lifetime Labour Market Database (LLMDB), extracted from the National Insurance Recording System.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the number of pensioners with low incomes who are living alone and who are not in recept of IS or CTB. [48019]

Mr. McCartney: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is contained in the publication, "Income Related Benefits: Estimates of Take Up 1999–2000". Copies are available in the Library.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the gap between the average income of the best off fifth of pensioners and the least well off was in the last year for which figures are available. [45914]

Maria Eagle: The information requested is contained in Table 13 of the National Statistics publication "The Pensioners' Incomes Series 1999–2000" a copy of which is available in the Library.

Winter Fuel Payments

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what measures his Department has taken to ensure that winter fuel payments are not paid twice to the same household. [36920]

Malcolm Wicks: Many households are entitled to more than one winter fuel payment. This is because whether a person is entitled to a winter fuel payment and, if so, at what level, is determined by their personal circumstances in a set qualifying week. An individual who is the only eligible person in that household will receive £200. However, where an eligible person shares a household with another eligible person, each will be entitled to £100, unless income support or income-based jobseeker's allowance is in payment, when the winter fuel payment is £200 per benefit unit.

We have procedures in place to ensure that all eligible people in a household receive the correct level of winter fuel payment. The addresses on the various benefit computer systems are cross-referenced and matched against each other where appropriate. By doing this, the correct level of payment can be determined.

As a further check, we use staff with local knowledge to identify cases where the nature of the address may cause an incorrect level of payment to be issued.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether someone aged over 60 remains eligible for the winter fuel payment if they move to another EU country; and in what other circumstances a British person living abroad can claim the benefit. [46464]

Mr. McCartney: Department officials met recently with officials from the European Commission to discuss the extent of the Government's responsibilities regarding winter fuel payments under Community law. As a result, we expect to bring this matter to a close shortly.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to the answer of 12 March 2002, Official Report, column 959W, on winter fuel payments, if he has concluded his discussions with the European Commission about the extent of the United Kingdom's legal obligations under European regulations on winter fuel payments; and if he will make a statement. [48306]

Mr. McCartney: No, but we hope to do so as soon as possible.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners in Clwyd, South are in receipt of the winter fuel allowance. [41901]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Figures for this year are not yet available. For details of last year's payments I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for South-East Cornwall (Mr. Breed) on 18 March 2002, Official Report, column 152W.

Sandler Review

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many responses to the Sandler Review had been received by the end of the consultation period; and when he expects the review to provide its report to the Government. [40193]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

The Sandler review is an independent review of the retail savings industry. More than 200 responses have been submitted to the review team, which is expected to report to the Government in the summer.

TREASURY

Public Relations Consultants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was spent by his Department and bodies for which it is responsible on external public relations consultants in each of the last four years. [27385]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The information is as follows:

Departmental Staff

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff left the service of his Department and its agencies in the year ended 31 March 2001; how many left before attaining the formal retirement age of 60 years; and in respect of how many his Department and its agencies assumed responsibilities for making payments until retirement age. [37552]

Ruth Kelly: The information is as follows:

Number of leavers in the year ended 31 March 2001

Department/Agency	Total number of leavers	Before retirement age	Early retirement
HM Treasury	126	117	10
Inland Revenue	3,451	2,965	46
Customs and Excise	1,081	858	168
Office of Government Commerce/ Buying Agency	73	64	7

Non-Governmental Organisations

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list non-governmental organisations operating in the south-west region that receive public funds from his Department; and what amount of annual funding they received in the most recent year for which figures are available. [39192]

Ruth Kelly: None that I am aware of.

EU Directives

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the European Union directives and regulations relating to his Department that have been implemented in each of the last four years, specifying (a) the title and purpose of each, (b) the cost to public funds of each and (c) the cost to businesses of each. [39123]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested is not held centrally and providing it would involve disproportionate cost. Regulatory impact assessments are produced for all proposals, including those originating in European legislation, likely to impose significant costs on businesses in the UK and are generally made available in the Libraries of the House. We do not hold information on the costs to public funds of implementation.

VAT

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects HM Customs and Excise to (a) complete, (b) submit to Ministers and (c) publish their estimate of VAT losses and their strategies to tackle them. [38595]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 4 March 2002]: The Government will prepare and publish any such estimates within the framework set out in Paragraph 2.4 of its "Tackling Indirect Tax Fraud" paper, published alongside the pre-Budget report.

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much VAT was paid by (a) further education colleges and (b) schools in the state sector in the last year for which figures are available. [46661]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is not available.

Pension Schemes

Chris Grayling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether, in the case of a small, self-administered pension scheme with one member who is also the managing trustee, the existence of a pensioner trustee takes the situation outside the exemption granted by section 36 of the Data Protection Act 1998. [41673]

Mr. Wills: I have been asked to reply.

In the first instance, responsibility for interpreting the Data Protection Act 1998 lies with the Information Commissioner. I understand that her view is that small, self-administered pension schemes do not benefit from the exemption provided by section 36 of the 1998 Act. I shall consider the case for providing an exemption for such pension schemes from the requirement to give a notification to the Information Commissioner under section 18 of the 1998 Act.

Health Expenditure

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will announce his plans for health spending in 2004–05 and 2005–06. [44693]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Government have said that they will set out the details of departmental spending allocations up to 2005–06 in this year's spending review.

Unpaid Advisers

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the names of the unpaid advisers appointed by him since June 1997, stating in each case (a) the date of their appointment, (b) the duration of their appointment and (c) the project or projects on which they have been engaged. [43375]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 25 March 2002]: Sue Nye was appointed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in accordance with the requirements of paragraph 51 of the Ministerial Code.

For details of unpaid appointments made by the Treasury to task forces, review groups and other ad hoc advisory groups, I refer to the answer provided by my hon. Friend the Member for Shipley (Mr. Leslie) on 16 November 2001, Official Report, column 958W.

Children's Tax Credit

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been spent, broken down on an annual basis, on advertising and promoting the children's tax credit. [46468]

Dawn Primarolo: The annual spend on advertising and promoting the children's tax credit is as follows.

Financial year	Expenditure
2001–02	363,625

In this, the third phase of children's tax credit, applications were driven from 2.7 million up to 3.8 million, reflecting the success of this advertising. The response can be measured by the fact that following the advertising we took over two million telephone calls.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total cost was of administering the working families tax credit in the last year for which figures are available. [46465]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 9 November 2001, Official Report, column 438W.

Tobacco Smuggling

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many officers are allocated by Customs and Excise to control the entry of contraband tobacco into the UK. [46271]

Mr. Boateng: The Law Enforcement arm of Customs comprises just under 7,500 staff, divided primarily between Detection, Intelligence and Investigation units. Many staff, particularly those in Detection, are multi-functional, working across the broad range of Customs responsibilities including tackling indirect tax fraud, the supply of Class A drugs and other import/export prohibitions and restrictions.

In March 2000, the Government published the "Tackling Tobacco Smuggling" strategy. This strategy included funding for an additional 955 Customs officers throughout the UK. This represented a broad doubling of Customs resource dedicated to tackling tobacco smuggling.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the rate of growth of tobacco smuggling in 2000–01 was. [47692]

Mr. Boateng: The estimated number of cigarettes smuggled in 1999–2000 and 2000–01 can be found in the xvi report by the Comptroller and Auditor General—Departments of the Chancellor of the Exchequer: HM Customs and Excise Appropriation Accounts 2000–01, paragraph 5.31.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the level of smuggling in 2002–03, as shown by illicit market share, will be reduced. [47694]

Mr. Boateng: The "Tackling Smuggling" strategy published in March 2000 set out targets for the illicit market share of smuggled cigarettes. These targets have been incorporated into a PSA target for Customs. For 2002–03, the aim is for the illicit market share of smuggled cigarettes to be 21 per cent. or less.

Information about the achievement of this PSA target will be published in Customs annual report for 2002–03.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what have been the measurable effects in the financial year 2001–02 of HM Customs and Excise targeting the organisers of tobacco smuggling. [47682]

Mr. Boateng: The "Tackling Tobacco Smuggling" strategy published in March 2000 set out targets for the number of smuggling gangs Customs aim to break up or disrupt. These targets have been incorporated into a PSA target for Customs. For 2001–02, the aim is for Customs to break up or disrupt at least 55 tobacco smuggling gangs.

Information about the achievement of this PSA target will be published in Customs annual report for 2001–02.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what increases in the inland activity of HM Customs and Excise took place in 2001–02 to tackle tobacco smuggling. [47669]

Mr. Boateng: As part of the "Tackling Tobacco Smuggling" strategy published in March 2000, Customs have developed a comprehensive approach to tackle all aspects of the tobacco smuggling problem.

Custo[illegible]pproach inland is to carefully plan and target their activities to inflict maximum disruption to the illicit inland distribution networks for smuggled tobacco.

Customs have also introduced new penalties and sanctions designed to disrupt inland supplies of smuggled tobacco. For example, in July 2001, Customs introduced a system for prominent marks to be placed on packs of cigarettes and tobacco indicating UK duty has been paid. This measure makes smuggled cigarettes very easy to identify and provides sanctions designed to hit those who sell smuggled tobacco or allow their premises to be used for selling.

Tax Revenue

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the tax revenue derived from non-domiciles who have (a) UK income or gains and (b) overseas income remitted to the UK in the last year for which figures are available. [46618]

Dawn Primarolo: The information on which such an estimate would be based is not available.

Taxation (Retirement)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the (a) Treasury and (b) Inland Revenue are reviewing the tax rules about (i) partial and (ii) flexible retirement; and if he will make a statement. [46617]

Dawn Primarolo: This issue is kept under regular review and an announcement will be made if it is decided to change the current rules.

Contingency Planning

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what additional expenditure has been incurred on counter-terrorism (a) planning, (b) provisions and (c) defences, including civil defence, since 11 September 2001. [46614]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Funds have been approved by Parliament in the normal way in Supplementary Estimates. The Chancellor of the Exchequer gave details of additional public spending arising from attacks on the USA on 11 September 2001 in his Pre-Budget Report Statement to Parliament on 27 November 2001. Departments are taking account of the importance of counter-terrorism issues in their departmental priorities and future spending is being considered in the normal way as part of the Spending Review 2002.

GDP

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the GDP per capita growth of (a) the English regions and (b) Wales was in each year since 1997. [46605]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Don Foster, dated 10 April 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question on estimating the GDP per capita growth of the English Regions and Wales in each year since 1997.

The latest GDP per capita estimates for the countries and regions of the United Kingdom are available up to 1999, and were published as an ONS News Release on 27 February 2001. These data form the basis for the growth rates shown in table 1.

Regional GDP data are only available on a current price basis. The growth rates shown in the table will therefore include the effects of inflation.

The publication referred to in this answer is available in the House of Commons Library and on the web at http://www.statistics.gov.uk/regionalaccounts.

Regional Statistics

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the Government's policy is toward the draft European regulation to recognise and adopt the current NUTS structure. [48266]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Andrew Turner, dated 10 April 2002:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question on Government policy towards the draft European regulation to recognise and adopt the current NUTS structure. (48266)

During the discussion of the regulation in the Council Working Group, the UK has supported the principle of the regulation, that common definitions must apply if statistics are to be comparable across the Community. However, the UK view has been that the initial draft would benefit from changes. The three principal concerns raised by the UK have been: (i) either that NUTS should provide a breakdown of the whole of the European Union rather than just the economic territory of the Member States, or that it should be clear to users that it does not (ii) that no changes should be imposed by the Commission, and (iii) that the regulation should cover all existing five NUTS levels, not just levels 1, 2 and 3. Council discussions are still underway to resolve the concerns of the UK and other member states. A revised version of the regulation, which seeks to address member states' concerns, will be discussed at a Council Working Group meeting on 16 April 2002 in Brussels.

UK support for the regulation will be considered on the basis of changes emerging from consideration by the European Parliament and the Council.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations were received from organisations in the Isle of Wight and Hampshire concerning the consultation on proposals by the Government Statistical Service Committee for Regional Statistics on NUTS area definitions. [48265]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Andrew Turner, dated 10 April 2002.

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question on representations from organisations in the Isle of Wight and Hampshire concerning the Government Statistical Service Regional Statistics Committee consultation on NUTS area definitions. (48265)

The consultation document was issued in July 1996, and about 120 responses were received by the deadline of September 1996. The organisations based in Hampshire and the Isle of Wight that made representations were the Isle of Wight Council, Wight Training and Enterprise, Hampshire County Council and Southampton City Council. Comments relating to the Isle of Wight and Hampshire were also made by Government Office for the South East and the Association of District Councils.

There was general support for the proposal to make Hampshire and the Isle of Wight separate NUTS2 areas, as opposed to the existing situation of the two areas being a single NUTS2 area. However, one organisation commented that there was no logical reason for such a split. The other main points made by these organisations related to (a) changing the NUTS1 structure for England from Standard Statistical Regions to Government Office Regions—some supporting and some opposing the proposal; and (b) a general welcome for the greater availability of data at the new smaller NUTS3 and NUTS4 levels that the new classification should enable.

Drugs Deaths

Brian Cotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people died as a result of illegal drugs related deaths in Weston-Super-Mare in 2001. [47762]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Brian Cotter, dated 10 April 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question concerning the number of people who died of illegal-drug-related deaths in Weston-Super-Mare in 2001. (47762)

Figure are not yet available for 2001. In 2001, the latest year for which figures are available, there were 9 deaths to residents of Weston-Super-Mare parliamentary constituency which mentioned drugs controlled under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971.

Cancer Statistics

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many men in England have been diagnosed with testicular cancer since 1 January 2000 aged (a) under 25, (b) 25 to 35, (c) 36 to 45, (d) 46 to 55 and (e) over 55 years. [46760]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Simon Burns, dated 10 April 2002:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question on the number of men in England who have been diagnosed with testicular cancer since 1st January 2000 aged (a) under 25, (b) 25 to 35, (c) 36 to 45, (d) 46 to 55 and (e) over 55 years. (46760)

Figures on the number of newly registered cases of testicular cancer since 1 January 2000 are not yet available. The latest available statistics for England cover registrations of cancer diagnosed in 1998. The table below shows the latest published available information.

Registrations of newly diagnosed cases of testicular cancer by age, 1998, England

	Cases of malignant neoplasm of testis
Under 25	182

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the survival rates for patients in England suffering from thyroid cancer over the last three years. [46742]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Simon Burns, dated 10 April 2002:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question on the survival rates for patients in England suffering from thyroid cancer over the last three years. (46742)

The information requested is not available. The latest available figures on survival of thyroid cancer patients relate to England and Wales and were published in "Cancer Survival Trends in England and Wales 1971–1995: deprivation and NHS region" Series SMPS No. 61, a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library. For patients diagnosed in 1986–90, the five year relative survival rate in England and Wales was 73%.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the survival rate for bowel cancer is in (a) the UK and (b) other European countries. [47550]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Tim Loughton, dated 10 April 2002:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question on what the survival rate for bowel cancer is in (a) the UK and (b) other European countries. (47550)

Comparable information on cancer survival in the parts of the UK and Europe covered by the Eurocare II study was published in "Survival of Cancer Patients in Europe: the EUROCARE-2 Study" (IARC Scientific Publications No. 151); a copy is available in the House of Commons Library.

Information on survival from bowel[1] cancer in England and Wales, Scotland and parts of Europe (see below[2]) is summarised in Chapter 4 of the book Cancer Survival Trends[3]. Figures for the UK as a whole are not available.

Five-year relative survival (%)

	Colon		Rectum
	Men	Women	Men	Women
Europe[2]	47	47	43	43
England and Wales	39	39	37	39
Scotland	41	41	38	39

[1] This includes cancers of the small intestine, colon and rectum (ICD 9 codes 152, 153 and 154, respectively). Survival is usually analysed separately for colon and rectum, (although the rates tend to be similar). There are relatively few cases of cancer of the small intestine: 0.3% of the total in England in 1998.

[2] Cancer registries in the following European countries participated in the EUROCARE-2 study (those countries with complete coverage of the population by cancer registries are marked ): Austria, Denmark, England*, Estonia*, Finland*, France, Germany, Iceland*, Italy, Netherlands, Poland, Scotland*, Slovakia*, Slovenia*, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) men and (b) women have been diagnosed with skin cancer in (i) 2002 to the latest available date and (ii) each of the last 10 years. [46754]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Simon Burns, dated 10 April 2002:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question on how many (a) men and (b) women have been diagnosed with skin cancer in (i) 2002 to the latest available date and (ii) each of the last ten years. (46754)

Figures on the number of newly registered cases of malignant melanoma of the skin for 2002 are not yet available. Registration of non-melanoma skin cancer (which is very common but rarely fatal) is unreliable.

Figures for malignant melanoma of the skin for the latest available ten years are given in the table below.

Registrations of newly diagnosed cases of malignant melanoma of the skin, by sex, 1989–98, England and Wales.

	Number of cases
	Male	Female
1989	1,421	2,385
1990	1,507	2,176
1991	1,488	2,268
1992	1,658	2,512
1993	1,915	2,823
1994	1,909	2,816
1995	1,928	2,872
1996	1,938	2,767
1998	2,257	2,989

Asthma

Tim Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many children have died as a result of asthma symptoms in each of the last 10 years. [47458]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Tim Loughton, dated 10 April 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question concerning the number of children dying as a result of asthma symptoms in each of the last 10 years. (47458)

The latest available figures are for the 10 years 1991–2000. Figures for children aged under 16 are given in the table below.

Taxation

Mr. Howard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he proposes to publish illustrations of the effect of direct and indirect taxes in the Budget on various specimen households. [48032]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Budget documentation will contain relevant and meaningful analyses showing the impact of the Budget on different types of households.

Indirect Taxes

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what improvements in risk targeting he has initiated in 2001–02 in HM Customs and Excise in order more effectively to tackle serious non-compliance in the payment of indirect taxes. [47668]

Mr. Boateng: As part of Customs' recent restructuring, greater emphasis is being placed on risk assessment, both at national and regional levels. During 2001–02 National Risk Managers have been appointed for VAT, Excise and International trade, supported by Risk Managers in each of the seven Customs geographical regions.

Special teams have also been established to tackle risks in relation to VAT Missing Trader Intra-Community fraud and VAT Avoidance, while 20 joint teams have been set up alongside the Inland Revenue and the Department for Work and Pensions specifically to identify and tackle businesses operating in the informal economy.

Following the independent investigation conducted by John Roques into excise diversion fraud, regional and national teams have also been set up to target risk in relation to excise warehouses, complementing the risk based controls applied to goods entering the country under duty suspense.

Aggregates Levy

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research his Department undertook to ascertain the effects of the aggregates tax on the (a) rate proposed in the UK and (b) rates levied in other European Union countries. [48167]

Mr. Boateng: The independent research which underpins the aggregates levy considered all aspects of the environmental damage caused by aggregate extraction. These environmental costs are reflected in the levy's rate of £1.60 per tonne.

Aggregate taxes in other EU member states are a matter for the individual states themselves.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research his Department undertook to ascertain the effects of the aggregates tax on (a) individual quarries in parts of the UK, (b) local government finance and (c) employment in the construction industry. [48050]

Mr. Boateng: A Regulatory Impact Assessment for the aggregates levy was published at the time of Budget 2000. It is available from the Customs and Excise website.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from the (a) Scottish Executive and (b) Welsh Assembly on the subject of the aggregates levy. [48036]

Mr. Boateng: The Government has received a large number of representations regarding the aggregates levy, and has held discussions regarding its implementation with a wide range of organisations both within and outside of Government.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the total amount that will be received from Scotland in each of the next five years from the aggregates levy at the proposed rate. [48037]

Mr. Boateng: No such estimate has been made.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the introduction of the aggregates levy on the implementation of public sector infrastructure projects. [46705]

Mr. Boateng: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Stroud (Mr. Drew) on 10 December 2001, Official Report, column 687W.

Television

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the number of subscriptions to (a) digital terrestrial, (b) digital satellite and (c) digital cable television held by his Department for services in any departmental building from which Ministers work, stating for each subscription its (i) cost and (ii) purpose. [48363]

Ruth Kelly: None.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the (a) number and (b) total cost of television licences paid for by his Department. [48362]

Ruth Kelly: The Treasury holds a multiple form TV licence at a cost of £327 covering its three buildings—Parliament street, Allington towers and Downing street.

CITES

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what percentage and how many seizures by

HM Customs of illegal wildlife items under the Control of Trade in Endangered Species System resulted in successful prosecution in each year since 1997; [48003]

(2) what the financial value is of illegal wildlife items seized by HM Customs under the Control of Trade in Endangered Species System in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement; [48005]

(3) what plans he has to increase the maximum sentence for import of wildlife items under the Control of Trade in Endangered Species System; and if he will make a statement; [48004]

(4) how many successful prosecutions have been brought under the Control of Trade in Endangered Species System in each year since 1997. [48002]

Mr. Boateng: HM Customs and Excise is responsible for enforcement of the restrictions on import and export from or to countries outside the European Union on goods covered by the Convention on Trade in Endangered Species and EU regulations made to implement the Convention. It is not responsible for the enforcement of controls on trade within the UK or European Union. Maximum penalties for illegal import or export are seven years imprisonment and an unlimited fine. There are no plans to increase these penalties.

Details of the number of seizures in each year since 1997 and the number of successful prosecutions are:

Calendar year	Number of seizures	Persons successfully prosecuted
1997	495	None
1998	498	None
2000	441	1

[1] To date
[2] Not available

The financial value of illegal wildlife items seized is not recorded since there is no legal trade in prohibited goods to provide a basis for valuation.

Correspondence

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many letters he has received from the public since June 2001; what his target time is for reply; what percentage of letters were replied to within that time; and of those exceeding it, what the range is of time spans in which he has replied. [48173]

Mr. Boateng: Between 1 June 2001 and 28 February 2002 13,459 letters were received of which 79 per cent. were replied to within the 15 working day target. A breakdown of time spans for those exceeding target is not known and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to improve the response time to Parliamentary questions. [47712]

Mr. Boateng: An increasing proportion of parliamentary questions has been answered on time by the Treasury in each session since PSA targets were introduced in 1998–99, and the Department is on track to meet its targets again in the present session.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average number of days, in excess of the day the question was put down for answer, that it has taken him to answer questions from (a) Opposition party hon. Members and (b) Government party hon. Members since 1 January; and if he will make a statement. [46445]

Mr. Boateng: 5.2 and 5.5 days respectively. However, 1,205 of the 1,522 written Parliamentary questions (79.1 per cent.) answered by Treasury Ministers between 1 January and 26 March received replies on or before the due date for answering.

Underspend

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) capital and (b) revenue underspend in his Department is expected to be in the financial year 2001–02. [47803]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Estimated outturn figures for 2001–02 will be published in the Budget report on 17 April.

Wanless Report

Mr. Howard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Buckingham on 25 February, Official Report, column 1045W, whether he has set a date for the publication of the Wanless report. [48216]

Mr. Andrew Smith: No date has yet been set for the publication of Mr. Wanless' final report.

London Underground

Mr. Howard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions (a) Ministers and (b) officials from HM Treasury have met (i) Ministers and (ii) officials from the Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions to discuss the potential liabilities to the Exchequer which will arise from underwriting the contingent liabilities of the public private partnerships for London Underground, as proposed in the letters of comfort and Minute from the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions to the partners in the PPP presented to Parliament on 21 March. [47962]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Treasury Ministers and officials have discussions with colleagues in other Departments on a wide range of subjects on a regular basis.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place the accounting advice he has received from the Office of National Statistics on the treatment of the commitments given in the London Underground Public Private Partnership letter of comfort in the Library; and if he will make a statement. [46676]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Office for National Statistics has not been asked for advice on the London Underground Public Private Partnership.

The Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions' Resource Accounts are drawn in accordance with the Treasury Resource Accounting Manual, which takes account of all Financial Reporting standards pronounced by the Accounting Standards Board. The contingent liability arising from any letters of comfort would therefore be recorded as a Note to the Department's Resource Accounts.

Network Rail

Mr. Howard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions regarding the underwriting of the debt of Network Rail by means of potential emergency loans from the Strategic Rail Authority. [47958]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Treasury Ministers and officials have discussions with colleagues in other Departments on a wide range of subjects on a regular basis.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many times Ministers in his Department have travelled abroad at taxpayers' expense since March 2001; what countries they visited; and what the total cost of each visit was. [47102]

Ruth Kelly: Treasury Ministers, including the Chancellor have made 40 trips abroad since March 2001 and visited USA, Belgium, Italy, Canada, Portugal, Luxembourg, France, Germany, San Juan, Spain, Ireland, Korea, Malawi and Japan. Total cost of the visits was £110,250.

Property Protection

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what new measures his Department took in 2001–02 to protect its property from theft or damage. [47242]

Ruth Kelly: It is not the Treasury's practice to comment on protective security measures.

Scottish Transport Group

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make public (a) correspondence, records of verbal communication and other documents and communications between himself and the Scottish Executive and (b) advice which he has received in connection with the Scottish Transport Group Pension schemes, the winding up thereof and the disposal of and entitlement to surplus funds therefrom. [48283]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Scottish Executive is responsible for these schemes. They announced in December 2000 how the surplus is being distributed.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the estimated value is of the Scottish Transport Group pension fund at 31 March; and whether increases in the value of the fund following 31 March 2000 will accrue to (a) the fund and (b) Her Majesty's Government. [48053]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Scottish Executive announced in November 2001 that the estimated net of tax surplus as at 31 March 2001 is £168 million and that £118 million is to be distributed as ex gratia payments by the Scottish Executive, which includes an additional £18 million as a result of an increase in the net of tax surplus. The size of the surplus as at 31 March 2002 is not yet known.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what reasons underlie the proposed distribution of the surplus from the Scottish Transport Group pension schemes; what part of the distributed surplus is to be used for a contingency fund in respect of indemnities against the risk of legal action based on the actions of trustees; and whether in the event that there are no successful claims against that contingency fund, it will be the subject of a subsequent distribution to Scottish Transport Group pensioners. [48052]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The wind-up of the STG pension schemes is being taken forward by the trustees and the Scottish Executive. The Scottish Executive has announced that £118 million will be made available as ex gratia payments to pensioners. I understand that there is no intention that any part of that sum will be used for a contingency fund against potential legal action.

Tax Thresholds

Mr. Howard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the threshold for paying (a) tax and (b) higher rate tax, in relation to average earnings, has changed since 1997. [47959]

Dawn Primarolo: The new earnings survey provides the best estimates for average earnings and the income tax personal allowance and thresholds are in annex A of Inland Revenue Statistics. The most recent edition is on the Inland Revenue website http://www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/tax—structure/menu.htm.

Sustainability Fund

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the total amount that will be paid to Scotland from the Sustainability Fund in each of the next five years. [48038]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Scottish Executive's share of the Sustainability Fund is estimated at £3 million in 2002–03 and 2003–04. Decisions on the size of the Fund in subsequent years, and consequently the total amounts the Scottish Executive will receive in these years, have yet to be made.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total liability to the Exchequer of current PFI projects and the expected liability of planned PFIs. [47792]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Eccles (Ian Stewart) on 7 February 2002, Official Report, columns 1144–46W.

Road Pricing

Chris Grayling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when road pricing for hauliers will be introduced. [48181]

Mr. Boateng: The Government published a consultation document "Modernising the Taxation of the Haulage Industry" alongside 2001 pre-Budget report. The consultation closed on 8 February and the Government are considering the responses ahead of the Budget.

Strip Stamps

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what analysis he has conducted of the experiences of countries that have abolished their strip stamp regimes; [46948]

(2) what analysis has been conducted of the experiences of countries that considered introducing strip stamps but then decided against it; [46949]

(3) whether the proposed whisky strip stamps would apply to miniature bottles of whisky. [46947]

Mr. Boateng: Customs and Excise are considering a wide range of issues as part of their ongoing consultation on the costs, benefits and practicalities of introducing a tax stamps system for spirits. This includes the experiences of other countries and the various sizes of container to which tax stamps would be affixed.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from the Scotland Office with regards to the proposed whisky strip stamps. [46950]

Mr. Boateng: The Chancellor and his Ministers meet regularly with their Ministerial colleagues to discuss a wide range of issues.

National Insurance

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the Government's income in 2001–02 was on national insurance on earned income from (a) employers and (b) employees. [47631]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer my hon. Friend to Appendix 6 of Cm5383—Report by the Government Actuary on the drafts of the social security benefits up-rating order 2002 and the social security (Contributions) (re-rating and National Insurance Funds payments) order 2002.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of revenue for financial year 2001–02 if top band taxpayers paid national insurance on unearned income. [47634]

Dawn Primarolo: If higher rate taxpayers paid national insurance on their taxed investment income then this would yield some £¼ billion in 2001–02. This estimate is based on the Survey of Personal Incomes.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the Government's income on national insurance is from taxpayers in the 40 per cent. income tax band. [47632]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government Actuary's Department estimate that some £6 billion primary class 1, class 2 and class 4 accrue in 2001–02 from higher rate taxpayers.

Tax Credit Fraud

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his most recent estimate is of the extent of fraud in tax credits; what assessment he has made of the Inland Revenue benchmarking exercise of fraud in tax credits; and if he will publish the benchmarking exercise. [46899]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 5 February 2002, Official Report, column 815W.

Unearned Income Tax

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people are paying tax at 40 per cent. on unearned income. [47633]

Dawn Primarolo: In 2001–02 some two million taxpayers were liable to tax at the higher rate on their investment income. This estimate is based on the Survey of Personal Income.

Alcohol Imports

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce a system of prior-approval for legitimate import of alcohol for personal use. [46979]

Mr. Boateng: The vast majority of people who import alcohol for personal use enter the UK without encountering any fiscal checks. A system of prior-approval would represent a significant restriction on movement of goods and people. It would be costly to introduce and could be held to contravene the UK's long-standing obligations under the Treaties of the European Union.

Alcohol Duty

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to receive the proposals from the EU on minimum duty rates on alcoholic drinks. [46978]

Mr. Boateng: The Commission proposals on EU minimum duty rates on alcoholic drinks are long overdue and are expected later on this year.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if the PSA target for UK revenue evasion prevention (a) was met in 2000–01 and (b) will be met in 2001–02; [47675]

(2) when the PSA target for HM Customs and Excise to pay 100 per cent. of undisputed invoices within 30 days will be met; [47691]

(3) if the PSA target for HM Customs and Excise to set up a virtual call centre structure to support the introduction of a national helpline for VAT, excise and customs freight by 31 March will be met; [47683]

(4) what recent assessment he has made of whether the HM Customs and Excise target of 18,500 detections of import and export irregularities will be met by the end of the Comprehensive Spending Review period; [47671]

(5) what recent assessment he has made of whatever the PSA target to ensure that by 2005 100 per cent. of HM Customs and Excise services are offered electronically, and that the take-up rate for these services is at least 50 per cent., will be met; [47679]

(6) if the PSA target for HM Customs and Excise to increase its electronic communications with traders from 29 per cent. to 58 per cent. of potential dealing by 31 March will be met; [47687]

(7) what recent assessment he has made of whatever the PSA target to improve value for money in HM Customs and Excise by achieving average annual productivity gains of at least 2.5 per cent. per year until March 2004, without detriment to accuracy or customer satisfaction, will be met; [47677]

(8) what recent assessment he has made of whether the PSA target in HM Customs and Excise to stabilise the level of smuggling in 2001–02 will be met; [47693]

(9) if the PSA target for HM Customs and Excise to have identified annual savings of at least £5 million on estate spending by 31 March will be met on time; [47685]

(10) if the target for the number of detections of indecent or obscene material featuring children, a performance indicator listed on page 49 of the 2001 departmental report of HM Customs and Excise, (a) was met in 2000–01 and (b) will be met in 2001–02; [47673]

(11) what recent assessment he has made of whatever the PSA target to limit the market share taken by smuggled goods will be met on time; [47681]

(12) if the PSA target for HM Customs and Excise to implement the Procurement Review by 31 March will be met; [47689]

(13) if the PSA target for HM customs and Excise to collect the amount of forecast UK revenue yield from indirect taxes (a) was met in 2000–01 and (b) will be met in 2001–02; [47676]

(14) if the PSA target for HM Customs and Excise to reduce sickness absence by 2001 was met; [47684]

(15) if the PSA target for HM Customs and Excise to increase customer satisfaction by 6 per cent. in VAT, customs freight and excise will be met in 2001–02; [47672]

(16) what improvements have taken place in 2001–02 in the level of compliance with Customs and statistical requirements of businesses engaged in international trade; [47680]

(17) what recent assessment he has made of whether the PSA target for the reduction in sickness absence in HM Customs and Excise by 2003 will be met; [47688]

(18) what reductions in the costs to business of compliance with the main UK duties and taxes payable to HM Customs and Excise were achieved in 2001–02; [47678]

(19) what recent assessment he has made of whether the PSA target for HM Customs and Excise to assess requests for international technical assistance against its overall objectives and strategic priorities and to provide a first class service to sponsors and recipients to achieve the agreed goals will be achieved in 2001–02; [47670]

(20) if the PSA target for HM Customs and Excise to review at least 60 per cent. by value of its services by March will be met; [47686]

(21) if the PSA targets for HM Customs and Excise to reduce the availability of drugs in the UK (a) were met in 2000–01 and (b) will be met in 2001–02; [47674]

(22) if the PSA target in HM Customs and Excise for 75 per cent. of the members of the Government Procurement Service in key designated posts to have, or to be working towards, a graduate level procurement qualification by 31 March 2000 was met. [47690]

Mr. Boateng: Information on performance against targets in 2000–01 is set out in the Customs and Excise's Report and Financial Statements published on 25 March 2002 (Cm 5309). Information on progress against targets in 2001–02 will be published in Customs' forthcoming departmental report.

Carrier Bags

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue to HM Exchequer which would result from the imposition of a tax on carrier bags in the UK at the same rate as in Eire. [47576]

Mr. Boateng: The Government keeps all taxes under review, but has not calculated the revenue that such a tax would bring.

Post-conflict Assistance Accounts

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress was made on post-conflict assistance accounts for countries which have not reached decision point under the HIPC Initiative at the Financing for Development in Mexico. [46658]

Mr. Boateng: There was no formal discussion on the Post Conflict Assistance Account at the UN Financing for Development Conference. However, the Post Conflict Assistance Account has been successfully established and has already provided assistance for six countries. The Department for International Development was the first contributor to this account, and the Government will continue to press for other countries to contribute.

Poverty Reduction Strategy Papers

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to discuss the Poverty Reduction Strategy papers under preparation with the IMF and World Bank at their Spring Meeting in April 2002, with particular reference to the (a) financial resources required to achieve the 2015 development targets, (b) creation of a post-conflict assistance account and (c) definition of debt sustainability. [46883]

Mr. Boateng: We expect the IMF and World Bank Spring Meetings to cover a broad range of issues of relevance to the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals; including support HIPC Initiative and support for countries emerging from conflict and the need to increase the level and effectiveness of finance for development.

In addition, the Government will continue to press for action to ensure that HIPC countries leave the process with sustainable levels, and that in particular each country will have its debt sustainability reviewed at Completion Point and will receive additional debt relief as appropriate.

The Post-Conflict Assistance Account had been set up following last Spring Meetings and the UK has been the first country to contribute to this fund. Several countries have already benefited from this account and the Government will continue to press for other donors to contribute.

Monterrey Conference

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions took place at the Financing for Development Conference in Mexico regarding the achievement of the UN target for spending national income on overseas development assistance and the effect this would have on achieving the 2015 development goals. [46654]

Mr. Boateng: Discussions at the Financing for Development conference in Monterrey covered all aspects of development finance, focusing on the UN target for developed countries to give 0.7 per cent. of national income as official development assistance, as a means of financing the Millennium Development Goals. The UK delegation, led by the Secretary of State for International Development, played a central role in these discussions. Countries attending the conference agreed principles representing a new partnership for development; reaffirmed the UN target, and strengthened their commitment to meeting the Millennium Development Goals.

In preparation for the conference, EU member states agreed to raise their development assistance to an average of 0.39 per cent. of national income by 2006. The UK was instrumental in securing this agreement by the EU, which will mean an additional $7 billion each year for poor countries by 2006. Together with the US announcement of an additional $5 billion, the additional resources announced at Monterrey will total $12 billion per year after 2006. These announcements of substantial additional aid, and the broad consensus reached on the measures required by all Governments to secure more, and more effective finance for development, helped to ensure a successful conference.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions took place at the Financing for Development Conference regarding his Department's Hold in Trust policy on debt repayments for countries which have not yet reached decision point within HIPC. [46655]

Mr. Boateng: The Government continue to press other countries to follow the UK's Hold in Trust policy. While there were no formal discussions scheduled on this issue at the UN Financing for Development Conference, there was agreement reached on the need to keep debt sustainability under review, and to take into account any external shocks when updating debt sustainability at Completion Point.

Scotch Whisky Duty

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much tax was raised by duty on Scotch whisky in each of the last 10 years. [46980]

Mr. Boateng: Information on total duty receipts from spirits can be found in HM Customs and Excise "Spirits Factsheet", a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library. Information on duty receipts from Scotch whisky is not collected separately.

Annuities

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will raise the age at which it becomes mandatory to purchase an annuity from 75 to 80 years. [47765]

Ruth Kelly: The consultation document, "Modernising Annuities", issued on 5 February, makes it clear that the Government continue to believe that, in the current circumstances, age 75 should remain the upper limit for turning pension savings into retirement income.

Tax Returns

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of businesses submitted their indirect tax returns correctly at the first attempt in (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01. [47667]

Mr. Boateng: Customs VAT systems perform automated checks once a VAT return has been received.

(a) Within the financial year 1999–2000 Customs received approximately 7.3 million VAT returns of which 98.2 per cent. were processed satisfactorily at the first attempt.

(b) For 2000–01, Customs received 7.3 million VAT returns of which 98.1 per cent were processed satisfactorily at the first attempt.

Credit Unions

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to ensure that the Financial Services Authority helps credit unions meet the new regulatory framework. [48632]

Ruth Kelly: The FSA recognises that transition to the new regulatory environment will be challenging for some credit unions. That is why, last autumn, Sir Howard Davies outlined to me a strategy for facilitating transition through a Credit Unions Support Programme: a proposal to which I gave my full support, and one which FSA has now brought to fruition.

Forest Stewardship Council

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will increase taxation on wood imported into the UK that does not meet standards set by the Forest Stewardship Council or equivalent credible and international certification systems. [48154]

Mr. Boateng: All options for taxes are kept under review as part of the Budget process.

Objective 1

Adam Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will award the National Assembly funding to cover the match funding of Objective 1 projects in Wales; [48215]

(2) if he will make a statement on the amount of match funding awarded to the National Assembly to cover Objective 1 programmes. [48303]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Additional provision of some £272 million was made available to the National Assembly in the 2000 spending review to ensure funding of the EU share of its Objective 1 needs.

State Aid

Paul Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the gross contribution was from public funds in 2000 and 2001 to (a) manufacturing and (b) farming. [46278]

Mr. Andrew Smith: According to the European Commission's Ninth Survey on State Aid in the European Union, total state aid to the manufacturing sector in the UK in 1999 totalled 1,238.8 million euro (in 1999 prices). 1999 is the latest year for which State Aid Survey figures are available.

According to the latest available figures, DTI spending on the promotion of enterprise, innovation and increased productivity was forecast to be £867 million in 2000–01, and £983 million in 2001–02. A significant proportion, though not all, of this money will have benefited manufacturing directly or indirectly.

Total public expenditure under the Common Agricultural Policy and on national grants and subsidies for farming was £3,043 million in 2000–01, and is forecast to be £5,255 million in 2001–02.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Aggregate Dredging

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria and what time scale is being used by her Department for the issuing of aggregate dredging licences for the Brucey's Garden Area of the NW Dogger shipping area of the North sea; and if she will make a statement. [46397]

Ms Keeble: I have been asked to reply.

Marine aggregate dredging licences are issued by the Crown Estate which owns nearly all of the seabed out to the UK 12 mile territorial limit and has rights to all minerals within the UK share of the European Continental Shelf. It issues licences only if the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions first issues a favourable 'Government View' on the proposed dredging.

The Crown Estate has received no dredging licence applications for the Brucey's Garden Area of the North West Dogger shipping area of the North sea but has received applications from two nearby areas, called North West Rough and Southernmost Rough. No applications in those areas have yet been submitted to the Secretary of State for a Government View.

If they are, as in all other cases, they will be subject to an Environmental Impact Assessment, including a Coastal Impact Study, and wide consultation with other Government Departments, relevant coastal local authorities and other bodies having responsibilities for the protection of the marine environment. The Secretary of State would not issue a favourable Government View unless he was satisfied that there will be no adverse impact on the coast and no unacceptable effect on the marine environment that could not be mitigated through the observance of conditions attached to the licence.

Time scales for the issue of marine dredging licences are a matter for the Crown Estate. Suggested time scales for processing and determining applications for a Government View are set out in the former DETR/WO publication "Government View: New Arrangements for the Licensing of Minerals Dredging" dated May 1998.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what priority the home efficiency scheme gives to (a) the elderly and (b) low-income priority groups. [22890]

Mr. Meacher: The Government's main programme for tackling fuel poverty in the private sector in England is the home energy efficiency scheme (HEES), which is now marketed as 'The Warm Front Team'.

HEES has been developed to help tackle the problem of fuel poverty, which is caused by a combination of energy inefficient housing and low incomes. Certain people are particularly vulnerable to cold-related ill health—the old, families with children, the disabled and the long term sick. HEES is targeted at these priority households, providing two levels of financial assistance for the installation of insulation and heating measures dependent upon the needs of the householder and property type.

HEES—up to £1,500 for low income households with children under 16, disabled persons or those suffering a long term sickness on a qualifying benefit; and HEES Plus—up to £2,500 for over-60s on an income related benefit.

All applications to the scheme are treated equally in terms of priority.

Correspondence

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) when she will reply to the letter of the hon. Member for West Derbyshire, dated 18 July, concerning dormant quarries in the Peak District National Park; [7972]

(2) when she will answer the letter from the hon. Member for West Derbyshire of 18 July about dormant quarries within the Peak District National Park Authority. [11967]

Mr. Morley: The Department transferred the hon. Member's correspondence to the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions in December, as they have responsibility for the issue of dormant quarries. I understand that a response was sent on 14 January.

I am sorry that the hon. Member's parliamentary questions tabled to this Department in October and November were not answered at the time the correspondence was transferred.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects a reply to be sent to the letters to the Minister for the Environment dated 31 October 2001 and 8 August 2001 concerning Mr. James Bourne of Maldon. [45493]

Mr. Morley: A reply was sent to the hon. Member on 27 March 2002.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the conclusions of Professor Mercer's report on foot and mouth in Devon in respect of (a) the handling of the outbreak and (b) the lessons of the 1967 outbreak; [11725]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 1 November 2001]: The report of a committee of Devon County Counsellors chaired by Professor Mercer clearly provides a local perspective and reflects local views and conclusions. I am afraid I do not accept those conclusions. The recommendations of the Northumberland Committee were taken into account as appropriate during the 2001 outbreak. Inevitably, conditions have changed here and in Europe since the Northumberland Committee's report, and the 2001 outbreak was clearly different in nature and extent to the 1967–68 outbreak.

More generally, the Government's position is set out in its written response to Dr. Iain Anderson's independent Lessons Learned inquiry, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what reports she has received from (a) the Army and (b) the Ministry of Defence, regarding their role during the foot and mouth outbreak. [48318]

Margaret Beckett: I have not received any reports from the Army or the Ministry of Defence regarding their role during the foot and mouth outbreak.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimates she has made of the total cost to public funds of the three inquiries following the foot and mouth epidemic. [48202]

Margaret Beckett: The estimated cost of the Policy Commission into the Future of Farming and Food is £176,000 (including gross salary costs of secretariat members). The estimated likely cost of the Royal Society study is £320,000. £620,000 has been set aside for the Lessons Learned Inquiry, which expects to complete its work within its budget.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what advice on re-stocking is issued by her Department to farms culled out as part of the foot and mouth disease control measures in 2001. [46386]

Mr. Morley: The Department has provided a wide range of advice to livestock farmers on the re-stocking of farms. This was compiled with the help and co-operation of farmers' organisations and representatives and can be found on the Department's website at www.defra.gov.uk/footandmouth/farmers/index.htm.

We have explained the procedure that must be followed when restocking which includes arrangements for the cleansing and disinfection of the premises, the testing of flocks of origin and inspection of animals once restocking has commenced. We have also sent out information on biosecurity and herd and flock health including a video on "Biosecurity" and leaflets on "Golden rules for a healthy herd: advice on restocking cattle herds", "Golden rules for a healthy flock: advice on restocking sheep flocks", "TB in cattle; reducing the risk" and "Brucellosis: a reminder for all cattle farmers". These include the recommendation that farmers consult their veterinary surgeon and develop an overall health plan for their herd or flock. This would not only be used for evaluating prospective purchases but could be incorporated into the farm management system.

To cover the wider issues associated with restocking, the Farm Business Advice Service offer up to five days of free business advice for farmers whose livestock have been slaughtered under FMD control measures. Seminars have also been run covering advice on both business and farming operational issues.

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to increase levels of inspection of food contained in luggage from countries infected with foot and mouth disease. [46430]

Mr. Morley: The Government announced on 26 March a programme of work the aim of which is to reduce exotic animal and plant disease entering the country and then threatening our public health and livestock, agriculture and horticulture industries.

The programme includes assessing the disease risks posed by personal imports; work to achieve effective inter-agency enforcement co-operation on the ground, and looking at new, more effective ways of working. We will review, in the light of the risk assessment, the appropriate level and type of resources committed to inspection of luggage.

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the cost of the recent foot and mouth disease outbreak to the (a) cattle, (b) pig and (c) sheep sectors. [46788]

Mr. Morley: The recent foot and mouth outbreak is estimated to have resulted in losses of some £3.1 billion to agriculture and the food chain. However, some £2.6 billion has been paid by the Government in compensation for slaughtered livestock and payments for disposal and clean up costs. Separate estimates for the different sectors are not available.

Edmonton Incinerator

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) which body carried out the 1997 study into dioxin levels in ash from the Edmonton incinerator; [20760]

(2) what was the basis on which the 1997 analysis of ash from the Edmonton incinerator showed dioxin levels close to background levels. [20761]

Mr. Meacher: I am not aware of any formal study carried out in 1997 on dioxin levels in ash from the Edmonton incinerator. However, under section 34 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, operators of such plant must provide sufficient information to those managing waste ash to ensure appropriate disposal. From analyses carried out for the operators, there is data showing dioxin levels in electrostatic precipitator ash from the Edmonton incinerator.

Industry figures for dioxins in ash entering the construction market in 2000 (20–50 ng/Kg I-TEQ) indicated levels close to those found in normal urban soils, which 1999 AEAT figures show to be 4.9–87 ng/Kg I-TEQ, with a mean of 28 ng/Kg I-TEQ. Analysis for the industry is carried out by independent laboratories.

Refrigerator Recycling

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations her Department has received on the impact on local authorities of the regulations on the recycling of fridges which come into force on 1 January 2002. [22071]

Mr. Meacher: The Department has received a number of representations from English local authorities concerning EC Regulation 2037/2000 and the collection and disposal of domestic fridges and freezers. We have received representations through stakeholder meetings, individual meetings, letters, e-mail and telephone calls.

We announced a package of measures to assist local authorities at the end of last year. This included guidance on storage, disposal and funding for local authorities.

Off-farm Employment

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will estimate the number of farm women engaged in employment off-farm in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what recent representations she has received from the Women's Food and Farming Union in respect of the trend in the level of farm incomes. [31514]

Mr. Morley: Information on farm women with employment off-farm is not available. Although the Department maintains regular contact with the Women's Food and Farming Union, we have no record of any detailed representations on off-farm employment of farm women.

Secondments

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many staff were seconded between (a) PWC Consulting and PricewaterhouseCoopers, (b) Ernst and Young, (c) Deloitte and Touche, (d) KPMG and (e) Andersen and his Department in (i) 1999–2000, (ii) 2000–01 and (iii) April 2001 to the latest date for which figures are available. [33864]

Mr. Morley: One member of staff (formerly of the Department for Environment, Transport and the Regions) was seconded to Andersen in January 2001.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many members of staff were employed by her Department on secondment from non-Governmental organisations in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [45233]

Mr. Morley: The Department employed three members of staff on secondment from non-governmental organisations in 1999, four in 2000 and six in 2001. Secondments refer to all continuous interchange activity of three months or more.

Special Advisers

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on how many occasions since 1 May 1997 (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental special advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity; and if she will list the total cost, including (i) travel, (ii) accommodation and (iii) subsistence allowance, for each occasion. [37974]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 27 February 2002]: Between 1 April 2000 and 31 March 2001, special advisers in the former Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food travelled abroad on 12 occasions, at an average cost of £515 per trip. Information for the period 2 May 1997 to 31 March 2000 is already in the public domain. All travel by special advisers is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code, and the Civil Service Management Code.

Community Councils

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on what help is available through (a) her Department and (b) the Countryside Agency to local community councils. [39397]

Alun Michael: Support for rural community councils is now provided by the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs through the Countryside Agency. £2.984 million was paid in 2001–02; from 2002–03, under a new three-year service level agreement, £3.334 million will be available each year. Rural community councils may be eligible for funding under other programmes run by DEFRA and the Countryside Agency—for instance if a particular rural community council puts forward a successful bid to run a project under the England Rural Development Programme or within one of the programmes run for us by the agency, but no separate record is kept of money they may have received from such sources.

Timber and Wood Products

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs from which companies her Department has obtained its timber and wood products in the past two years. [39892]

Mr. Morley: The information requested is not held centrally and could not be provided without incurring disproportionate costs.

Refrigerants

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement indicating what her understanding is of whether part of Article 15, Paragraph 5 of EC Regulation 2037/2000 applies to foam-insulating materials used in pre-2001 manufactured refrigerators and freezers. [39993]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 4 March 2002]: Article 16(5) of EC Regulation 2037–2000 requires member states to promote the recovery, recycling and destruction of ozone-depleting substances and to assign to appropriate bodies responsibility for ensuring compliance with the provisions of paragraph 1. Since the obligations under paragraph 1 are also applicable to paragraph 2, the Government's interpretation of paragraph 5 is that it applies in its entirety to insulating foam blown with ozone-depleting substances in any refrigerators or freezers.

Gender-based Assessments

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many gender-based assessments she has undertaken in her Department since June 2001. [40699]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 5 March 2002]: The Department's employment practices and procedures are monitored on a regular or rolling basis by gender as well as by ethnicity, disability and full time/part time categories.

Press Office

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many staff in his Department's press office have received (a) termination and (b) redundancy payments in each of the last four years. [41086]

Mr. Morley: In the past four years one member of staff in DEFRA's press office has received a redundancy payment. No termination payments have been made.

Anderson Inquiry

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the verbatim oral evidence of witnesses to the Anderson Inquiry will be made public. [41358]

Mr. Morley: This is a matter for the Lessons Learned Inquiry. I understand that verbatim transcripts of the public meetings held in Okehampton, Builth Wells, Lockerbie, Newcastle and Carlisle are available on the inquiry website. The transcript of the public meeting held in Harrogate will be published shortly. The inquiry is not otherwise taking verbatim notes of interviews.

Cloud Seeding

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) whether cloud seeding is allowed in the UK; [43850]

(2) whether the Government have used cloud seeding in Great Britain since 1972; [43849]

(3) what research the Government are conducting into cloud seeding; and if she will make a statement. [44122]

Mr. Meacher: None. The Met Office maintains a watching brief on any developments in this area of science, but it has not pursued research into cloud seeding for many years.

There is no legislation to prevent cloud seeding in the UK.

The Government have not used cloud seeding since 1972.

Illegal Meat Imports

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the Home Office about the level of penalties for convictions of persons having imported meat illegally into the UK; and if she will make a statement. [44062]

Mr. Morley: We have had no discussions with the Home Office about the current level of penalties, which on conviction are up to two years imprisonment and/or a fine of up to £5,000. This Department is leading an initiative to address the disease risks posed by illegal imports of meat, and our work will look at what additional or improved deterrents might be put in place.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she intends to make her first assessment of the impact of her Department's recent poster campaign at United Kingdom seaports and airports on the dangers of illegal meat imports and associated penalties; how she intends to measure its effect on the number of illegal meat imports made through UK points of entry; and if she will make a statement. [44061]

Mr. Morley: We are continuously reviewing the impact of our poster campaign. We are undertaking market research to help assess the impact of the posters and provide information on how public awareness can be improved still further. We will also be monitoring and sharing information with enforcement bodies during this time to assess the effects on the number of illegal imports. We have improved our intelligence gathering and sharing of information and there is increased vigilance among enforcement officers.

We have commissioned a risk assessment of the animal disease risks posed by illegal imports of meat, the results of which will provide information about what further action to reduce the risk is needed and where this will be most effective.

We are also amending secondary legalisation to generalise powers to search suspect consignments, including personal baggage. We are actively looking at other measures such as warnings on landing cards, use of detector dogs and better use of x-ray technology.

Timber

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received concerning recent shipments of Brazilian mahogany to the UK; and if she will make a statement. [44703]

Mr. Morley: Representations have been received from members of the public, from 10 Members of Parliament and from Greenpeace. In addition illegal logging in Brazil has been the subject of recent parliamentary questions.

Greenpeace sought to take the Department to judicial review in order to compel DEFRA and HM Customs and Excise to seize a recent importation of Brazilian mahogany. The judgment refusing Greenpeace's application is now the subject of appeal.

I can assure the hon. Member that we continue to take a strong stance on illegal logging and welcome the Brazilian Government's efforts to tighten controls on the concessions and logging facilities. In particular we totally support the temporary moratorium by the Brazilian Federal Environment Agency on transport and commercialisation of mahogany. My officials are in contact with their opposite numbers in the Brazilian CITES Management Authority and I hope that they will be able to meet shortly to discuss bilateral measures to combat illegal trade. The shipments concerned did have the required documentation complying with Brazilian law and following inquiries made were confirmed by the Brazilian authorities as genuine and in line with CITES regulations.

Access to Information

Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the administrative manuals and internal guidance which her Department has made public as required by Part 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information; and which of these were first made available after May 1997. [45396]

Mr. Morley: No administrative manuals or internal guidance are currently published though certain material, particularly in relation to handling complaints, is published on the DEFRA website.

Forests

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average acreage of new forest land planted in each of the last five years was. [45210]

Mr. Morley: The information is given in the table.

Thousands of hectares

Year ended 31 March	New planting
1999	5.1
2001	5.9

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what role her Department has played in discussions relating to the fourth Ministerial Conference on the Protection of Forests in Europe; and if she will make a statement. [46570]

Mr. Morley: The Forestry Commission is actively involved in the discussions and preparatory meetings and will represent the interests of the UK at the conference. Some of the key issues are likely to be national forest programmes, biodiversity and forest conservation, fostering cooperation with central and eastern European countries and cultural and spiritual aspects of sustainable forest management.

Ham Fen Beaver Project

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when her Department was first informed of the situation of the Norwegian beavers involved in the Ham Fen Beaver Project. [44766]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 21 March 2002]: I understand that Kent Wildlife Trust contacted the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 30 January 2001 to notify them of the possible importation of beavers for conservation purposes.

The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions (DETR), which had responsibility for controls on non-native species was not contacted. The DETR became aware of the situation on 1 May 2001, following the beavers' arrival at Heathrow Airport on 30 April.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reason the Ham Fen beavers have been held in quarantine for 11 months. [44768]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 21 March 2002]: The Norwegian beavers, which are not native to the UK and are subject to import, quarantine and release controls, entered the UK on 30 April 2001 and were subject to six months quarantine, which is now complete.

The beavers are also subject to release controls. Kent Wildlife Trust made an application for a licence for permission to release some of the beavers to Ham Fen nature reserve, under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981. This application was received on 10 September 2001. It raises some serious environmental questions. The Department has agreed in principle to issue the licence, with conditions, as soon as possible.

Waterways (Kendal Canal)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans the British Waterways Board has to reopen the canal to Kendal; and by what means. [45303]

Mr. Morley: British Waterways have announced proposals to restore the northern section of the Lancaster Canal to navigation. The project will be taken forward by the Northern Reaches Restoration Group which comprises British Waterways, local authorities, The Waterways Trust and other voluntary organisations.

Beef

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she will take to secure the lifting of the ban imposed by the French Government on imports of beef from the UK. [45388]

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what recent representations she has made to the Government of France to lift the ban of British beef; [45213]

(2) what recent representations she has made to the Government of France on compensation for British farmers affected by the ban of British beef; [45215]

(3) what representations she has made to the Government of France on compensation for British farmers affected by the ban on British beef; [45212]

(4) what recent representations she has made to the Government of France to lift the ban on British beef. [45214]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The Secretary of State met the French Agriculture Minister at the 18 March Agriculture Council and made it clear that we expect France to lift its ban on the import of UK beef produced in accordance with the Date-based Export Scheme as soon as possible. However, it is for the Commission to take action to enforce EU law and on 20 March the Commission wrote to the French Government seeking observations on France's failure to comply with the ruling of the European Court of Justice (ECJ). This is the first stage in a process which may lead to a further ECJ case against France.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of the beef consumed in the UK was imported in the last 10 years for which figures are available; what proportion of the beef imported annually into the European Union is used by the UK for domestic consumption; and what assessment she has made of the effect on the UK beef industry of the European Commission's proposal to increase beef imports from Argentina. [46403]

Mr. Morley: The amount of beef imported as a proportion of the total available for consumption in the UK between 1991 to 2000 has fluctuated between 18 per cent. and 25 per cent. Detailed figures are shown in the table.

Imports of beef into the UK originating outside the EU as a proportion of imports into the EU rose from 15 per cent. in 1991 to 31 per cent. in 1996 but then fell to 24 per cent. in 2000. Detailed figures are shown in the table.

Imports from third countries of beef, 1991–2000

Units: Thousand tonnes product weight

Year	EU imports	UK imports	UK imports as % of EU imports
1991	216.5	33.0	15
1992	219.7	32.4	15
1993	194.9	34.3	18
1994	209.1	43.1	21
1995	161.8	45.9	28
1996	170.3	52.8	31
1997	202.7	57.8	28
1998	177.9	46.4	26
1999	201.3	42.4	21
2000	202.4	48.0	24

This table is not directly comparable with the supply and use table which is expressed in carcase weight and includes the meat equivalent of live trade.

The EU may import up to 293,690 tonnes of beef, under various concessionary tariff schemes. This represents less than 4 per cent. of EU beef production, which totals approximately 8 million tonnes per year. UK beef consumption is around 900,000 tonnes a year, of which imports from third countries account for less than 10 per cent., around 64,000 tonnes. The proposal to increase imports from Argentina may increase UK third country imports by around 2,000 tonnes.

Although UK consumption has shown steady recovery since the BSE crisis in 1996, recent estimates of consumption in 2000 and 2001 show a downward trend of 2 per cent. on previous years but an increase of 4 per cent. is expected in 2002.UK beef production fell 8 per cent. in 2001 following the effects of the FMD crisis. Although recovering, UK production is still expected to meet only 69 per cent. of consumer demand in 2002.

Furthermore, the Community beef market is well protected from third country imports by the use of import tariff systems. While some imports are allowed under certain limited concessionary import schemes, the concessions are limited to a quantity of beef amounting to no more than 5 per cent. of total Community production.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she next intends to hold discussions with (a) her French Government counterpart and (b) the European Commission about the continuing French ban on imports of British beef; and if she will make a statement. [46402]

Mr. Morley: The Secretary of State repeatedly raises this issue with both her French counterpart and the Commission at Agriculture Councils.

Action to enforce the Judgment of the European Court of Justice (ECJ) lies with the Commission which wrote to the French Government on 20 March seeking observations on France's failure to comply with the ruling. This is the first stage in a process which may lead to a further ECJ case against France.

Sand Eels

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact on sand eel stocks of the 2002 total allowable catch for sand eel stock. [46395]

Mr. Morley: No assessment has yet been made. The fishery operates during the second and third quarters of the year, approximately from May to August.

Horticulture

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much financial support has been granted by HM Government to horticultural research and development projects in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [46399]

Mr. Morley: A summary of the total spend by DEFRA (and prior to 2001–02 MAFF) for horticultural research and development projects, including potatoes, is given in the table. Annual spends are given in £ millions.

£ million

	Annual spends
1992–93	3.7
1993–94	4.2
1994–95	13.4
1995–96	13.3
1996–97	13.4
1997–98	12.3
1998–99	12.1
1999–2000	11.7
2000–01	11.5
2001–02[1]	11.4

Details of current projects can be found on the DEFRA website at www.defra.gov.uk/research.

In addition, the Scottish Executive Environment and Rural Affairs Department and the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development, Northern Ireland support research projects on horticulture. The Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council provides funding for underpinning research relevant to horticulture.

Bovine TB

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on progress in her Department's bovine TB cattle testing programme; when she expects the TB testing programme to be brought up to date; and how many of (a) her Department's staff and (b) the State Veterinary Service are employed directly in the testing programme. [46390]

Mr. Morley: The vast majority of TB testing is carried out on behalf of the State Veterinary Service (SVS) by private vets from local large animal practices, who work for the SVS as local veterinary inspectors (LVIs). Nearly 4,000 are approved to carry out this testing. For February 2002 nearly 3,000 hours of veterinary and technical time was spent on TB testing within the SVS and just over 11,500 hours of administrative time.

We cannot yet say when the backlog of overdue TB tests will be cleared.

Egg Production

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she next intends to meet representatives of the British Egg Industry Council to discuss the future viability of the UK egg production industry. [46393]

Mr. Morley: I will next be meeting representatives of the British Egg Industry Council on 15 April 2002

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of total domestic egg sales is achieved through (a) retail, (b) catering and (c) processing/manufacturing; what percentage of total egg sales volume was organic; and what percentage of total UK egg production by volume was (i) cage, (ii) barn and (iii) free range in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [46391]

Mr. Morley: Official figures are not available at the level of detail requested.

The provisional figure for UK production of eggs for human consumption in 2001 was 803 million dozen; of which 17 per cent. were bought by UK egg processors for breaking; around 50 per cent. were sold through retailers (based on National Food survey estimates for 2000); with the remainder to other processing, i.e. hard boiling, manufacturing, catering and other.

Official figures are not available on the percentage of total organic egg sales by volume. However, using the farmgate value of organic eggs in 1999–2000 from the Soil Association Organic Food and Farming Report, the percentage of egg sales by value is estimated to be about 5 per cent.

In 2001 UK egg production by volume was split as follows:

laying cages—72 per cent.

barn—5 per cent.

free range—23 per cent.

The methodology used to calculate this split by production system is being updated with a view to publishing revised figures in the Summer.

Poultry

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she next intends to meet representatives of the British Poultry Council to discuss levels of imports of turkey meat from competitor nations; what assessment she has made of domestic market conditions for domestic turkey producers; and if she will make a statement on the health and hygiene standards of turkey meat imported into the United Kingdom. [46400]

Mr. Morley: There are currently no plans to meet the British Poultry Council to discuss this specific issue, although there has been frequent contact with officials on this and other issues.

The EU turkey market has been oversupplied for a number of years and the UK industry is to be congratulated on its past voluntary efforts to improve the market situation by reducing production. It is also pleasing to see that the traditional farm fresh turkey market enjoyed a prosperous 2001, with most birds selling out by Christmas. A surge in production in a number of member states has recently depressed prices throughout the EU, but Italian and French producers have voluntarily destroyed large numbers of hatching eggs in order to help bring the market back into better balance.

All consignments of fresh poultrymeat imported into the UK from other EU member states must have been produced in accordance with the harmonised Community rules laid down in Council Directive 71/118/EEC (as amended). Imports from third countries must have been produced to standards at least equivalent to those in the Directive. Among other things, this Directive sets out the licensing, structural and veterinary supervision requirements to be applied in abattoirs, cutting plants and cold stores.

Ensuring that all member states comply with their Community obligations in properly implementing and applying the Directive is the responsibility of the European Commission, whose Food and Veterinary Office carries out regular programmes of inspection visits to all member states. The Food and Veterinary Office are also responsible for carrying out inspections in the third countries from which fresh meat is imported into the Community.

All consignments of fresh poultrymeat imported from third countries are subject to veterinary inspection on entering the EU to ensure that conditions of import have been complied with and to ensure that they have remained in a satisfactory condition during transport. In line with Community rules, random spot checks at destination may be carried out on consignments of fresh meat imported into the UK from other EU member states.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the (a) economic and (b) welfare consequences of the use of levels of carbon dioxide exceeding 30 per cent. concentration of the gas mixture for poultry gassing. [46378]

Mr. Morley: The Welfare of Animals (Slaughter or Killing) Regulations 1995 (WASK) limit the concentration of carbon dioxide in gas mixtures to a maximum of 30 per cent. The limit was based on behavioural research studies in which the aversiveness to poultry of various concentrations of carbon dioxide was investigated. The research indicated that the 30 per cent. limit provided the best balance between reduced aversiveness to birds while guaranteeing a rapid loss of brain function. Given that, on welfare grounds, the concentration of carbon dioxide was limited to 30 per cent. no economic assessment of higher concentrations has been made.

However, recent developments in the industry have shown that gas mixtures comprising nitrogen and reduced levels of carbon dioxide produce economic benefits both in terms of reduced operating costs and reduced maturation times. In addition these mixtures are less aversive to birds.

Detailed neurophysiological work is currently under way to assess the effects on poultry of a variety of gas mixtures (including carbon dioxide) at varying concentrations.

North Eastern Fisheries Committee

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria her Department uses in making appointments to the North Eastern Sea Fisheries Committee; if she will list (a) the membership of the North Eastern Fisheries Committee and (b) the nature of the members' fishing activities; what assessment she has made of the composition of committee membership; and if she will make a statement on the role of the North Eastern Fisheries Committee chairman in making appointments to the committee. [46398]

Mr. Morley: The Sea Fisheries Regulation Act 1966 requires members appointed by the Secretary of State to local government Sea Fisheries Committees to be acquainted with the needs and opinions of local fishing interests, or have knowledge of or expertise in, marine environmental matters. These members are expected to represent in a balanced way all the local fishing and marine environmental interests in the waters of the committee districts.

Half the members on each Sea Fisheries Committee are appointed by its constituent local councils; the remainder are appointed by this Department or by the National Assembly for Wales. One member is appointed to each committee by the Environment Agency.

For the North Eastern Sea Fisheries Committee, the 17 members appointed by the Secretary of State for a four year term commencing June 2001 are: Dr. C. Frid, Mr. D. Heselton, Mr. D. Johnson, Mr. T. Smith, Mr. G. Traves, Mr. M. Emmerson, Mr. G. Collins, Mr. D. Horsley, Mr. F. Nesbitt, Mr. I. Rowe, Mr. J. Wilkinson, Mr. A. Pockley, Mr. C. Easton, Mr. J. Johnson, Mr. J. Linstead, Mr. J. Whitton and Mr. N. Proctor. Between them, these members have many years experience of trawling, gill netting, longlining, salmon netting, shellfish fishing, sea angling, boat chartering and marine ecology and biology. The chairman of the committee has no active involvement in making the Secretary of State's appointments to the committee.

State Veterinary Service

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Scotland Office on the devolution of powers and functions of the State Veterinary Service to the control of the Scottish Executive. [46396]

Mr. Morley: There have been no such discussions. Responsibility for animal health is devolved to the Scottish Parliament and the relationship between the State Veterinary Service and Scottish Ministers is outlined in the concordat with the Scottish Executive.

Wind Speeds

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent changes have taken place in respect of recording wind speeds and directions at the horticultural research station at Efford; and if she will make a statement. [45954]

Mr. Morley: Horticulture Research International informs me that it had been providing the Meteorology Office with wind speed measurements using cup-counter anemometers at its Efford site. The Meteorology Office has now discontinued the use of data from low-level counters of the type used by HRI. We understand that this change has been discussed with HRI who have agreed.

New Forest

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many representations have been received regarding the inclusion of (a) Fordingbridge and (b) Milford on Sea within the designated boundary for the proposed New Forest national park. [46265]

Alun Michael: As at 26 March, 46 representations have been received regarding the inclusion of Fordingbridge within the boundary of the proposed New Forest national park and 54 on the inclusion of Milford on Sea.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her procedure and timetable for designating the New Forest as a national park. [46266]

Alun Michael: The New Forest National Park (Designation) Order 2002 was submitted by the Countryside Agency to the Secretary of State in late February and was on deposit for public comment until 25 March. The objections and representations received are being considered and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will decide shortly whether or not to confirm the Order or to call a public inquiry. If the Order were confirmed, it would take about a year to establish a national park authority. If a public inquiry were called, this would start in the autumn. Depending on the length of the inquiry, it could be 2004 before the Order was confirmed and 2005 before a national park authority was set up.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to designate the New Forest as access land within the terms of the provisions of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000; and if she will make a statement. [46264]

Alun Michael: I understand that the Countryside Agency expects to issue a draft map of open country and registered common land for the south of England, including the New Forest, later this year. Following consultation on the draft map, the agency will issue provisional and then conclusive maps. Part of the New Forest will be land to which there is an existing right of access under section 193 of the Law of Property Act 1925: the new right under the 2000 Act will not apply to such land. The Forestry Commission has already announced its intention in principle to dedicate the national forestry estate under section 16 of the 2000 Act.

Laying Hens

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if egg producers will be permitted to beak trim chickens intended for laying up to a maximum of 10 days of age, where carried out by qualified staff. [45315]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 26 March 2002]: Council Directive 99/74/EC prohibits all mutilation but permits member states to authorise beak trimming provided it is carried out by qualified staff on chickens that are less than 10 days old and intended for laying. It is intended that the directive will be implemented in England without being added to in any way. An implementing SI will shortly be presented to Parliament.

Animal Health

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government are taking to develop an animal health strategy; and to what extent this strategy is based on (a) the promotion of health and (b) the treatment and prevention of disease. [46636]

Mr. Morley: Work is already in hand to develop some aspects of an animal health strategy. In particular work on a strategy for veterinary surveillance was interrupted by the FMD epidemic, but has now been resumed; a draft strategy for surveillance of antimicrobial resistance in animals was published on 12 February; a programme of work to tackle illegal imports is being developed; plans for the improvement of cattle tracing systems and for identification and tracing of other livestock are being developed; and the Government are already consulting on changes to the rules on animal welfare. The Government have commissioned Royal Society and Lessons Learned inquiries into the FMD epidemic which will inform the animal health strategy when they are available later this year.

The strategy will be developed in conjunction with stakeholders, as it will include the promotion of biosecurity measures which are conducive to good health and the prevention of animal disease.

Treatment of animal disease will generally remain a matter for the individual choice of animal owners and their veterinary surgeons, except where the disease is subject to statutory control.

Water Pollution

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the level of pesticide residues found in fresh water in the UK which comes from (a) agrochemicals used in farming and (b) products used by organic farmers to control insect pests. [46637]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency is responsible for monitoring ground and surface waters for pesticides in England and Wales. A summary of the results is published by the agency; the most recent publication is called 'Pesticides 2000'. The 180 different pesticide active substances monitored do not include any insecticides used by organic farmers. Even if these compounds were to be included in the monitoring programme, most are also used in conventional farming and it would be impossible to identify whether a particular finding in water arose from a particular pattern of farming.

Agricultural Employees

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many agricultural employees there are per hectare on (a) organic and (b) non-organic farmland. [46628]

Mr. Morley: While the Farm Business Survey does collect limited data on organic farmland, the sample size for organic farms is too small to enable reliable comparisons with non-organic farmland to be made.

Organic Food

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of baby food consumed in the UK was organically produced in (a) 1990, (b) 1995 and (c) 2000. [46620]

Mr. Morley: Information published in the MINTEL report—Baby Food and Drinks—October 2000 is as follows:

UK retail sales of organic baby food as a percentage of total baby food and drink market

Year	Percentage
1996	2.3
1997	2.7
1999	7.5

[1] Estimate

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of organic food sold in the UK in (a) 1987, (b) 1992, (c) 1997 and (d) 2002 was grown in the UK. [46631]

Mr. Morley: Official figures on the split between organic and non-organic food produced in the UK are not available.

However, the following table based on estimates produced by the Soil Association in their Organic Food and Farming Report 2001, shows the proportion of organic sales that are produced in the UK.

	Percentage of organic sales produced in the UK
Dairy products	65
Meat	55
Fruit and vegetables	15
Cereals[1]	20
Eggs	90

[1] And baked products.

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to (a) collect organic food market and production data and (b) track developments in the organic market. [46641]

Mr. Morley: The forthcoming June Agricultural Census will identify farms with organic production or in conversion to organic status. There are also plans to improve the collection of organic data within the Farm Business Survey. Information from other organisations, including the Soil Association, will continue to be used to monitor developments in the organic sector. Further developments on the collection of organic data by the Department will be considered as part of our statistical planning process, but will need to balance the requirements for the information with the additional burdens imposed on survey respondents.

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total value was of the organic retail market in the UK in (a) 1987, (b) 1992, (c) 1997 and (d) 2002. [46630]

Mr. Morley: Information is not available for earlier years. It is estimated that the retail value of the UK organic food market was of the order of £100 million in 1993–94, £200 million in 1996–97 and £800 million in 2000–01.

Pesticide Residues

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether multiple pesticide residues on food produced with agro-chemicals are covered by testing procedures; and what steps the Government are taking to ensure that foods possibly containing such multiple residues are safe for consumers. [46624]

Mr. Morley: The Government's annual programme of residues testing in food generates results for about 90,000 pesticide/commodity food combinations. This includes an assessment of the number of multi-residues that may be present.

The potential health implications of multi-residues in food has been examined by The Advisory Committee on Pesticides in the past. The Committee concluded (on the basis of the evidence available at the time) that at the very low levels at which they occur, pesticide residues were unlikely to act synergistically. However, the issue remains under review and the Food Standards Agency has asked the Committee on Toxicity of chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment (COT) to look again at this issue sometimes known as the 'cocktail effect'. A working group of the COT (known as the Working Group on Risk Assessment of Mixtures of Pesticides (WIGRAMP) is working on this and has recently published its draft findings.

We will be working closely with the Food Standards Agency (FSA), the Independent Advisory Committee on Pesticides (ACP) and the Veterinary Products Committee (VPC) to take forward the COT's recommendations as soon as they are finalised.

Soil Strategy Report

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how the soil strategy report being prepared by her Department will recognise the role played by soil organisms in relation to (a) the ability of soil to retain moisture and carbon, (b) delivering nutrients to plants and (c) preventing soil erosion. [46635]

Mr. Morley: In the draft "Soil Strategy for England", issued for public consultation last year, we said that greater understanding of the functioning of soil biological processes was a priority and that we recognised the need to take these more fully into account. DEFRA is already funding research relevant to this. Other bodies, including the Natural Environment Research Council, are also carrying out research into soil biodiversity.

Our view remains unchanged that soil organisms play a key role in relation to retention of moisture and carbon, delivering nutrients and the avoidance of soil erosion, and thus a key role in the sustainable use of soil.

We expect to make an announcement later in the spring on how we plan to develop policies on the sustainable use of soil in England.

Food Production

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of food produced in the UK was sold to British consumers in (a) 1997 and (b) 2001. [46626]

Mr. Morley: The proportion of food produced in the UK and sold to British consumers was around 87 per cent. in both 1997 and 2001.

Source:

DEFRA self sufficiency calculation.

Organic Farming

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of organic land area is used in the production of (a) arable crops, (b) sheep, (c) beef and (d) dairy products. [46632]

Mr. Morley: The information is not available in the form requested. However it is estimated that around 80 per cent. of the organic area in the UK (fully organic land and land in conversion) is permanent pasture and rough grazing and around 8 per cent. is in arable production. The remainder of the area is taken up with temporary grass, horticulture and woodland.

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many acres of land was organic or in conversion to organic in the UK in (a) 1985, (b) 1990, (c) 1995 and (d) 2000. [46629]

Mr. Morley: The estimated area of organic land and land in conversion in these years is set out in the following table.

	Hectares
1985	6,000
1990	14,000
1995	45,185
2000	527,323

Live Animals (Transport)

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when Ministers from her Department last raised EU obstacles to the ban of live exports and their replacement by meat exports in the Council of Ministers; and if she will make a statement. [46551]

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with her European counterparts on the abolition of long distance transportation of live farm animals throughout the European Union. [47421]

Mr. Morley: The Government have been consistent in its preference for meat to be exported rather than live animals for slaughter. Two judgments of the European Court of Justice have made it clear that the UK does not have the legal powers to introduce a unilateral ban on live exports. The Government have continued to press for better enforcement and stronger rules on the welfare of animals during transport. In the June 2001 Agriculture Council my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, supported a unanimous resolution that specifically invited the Commission to report on options for reducing long distance transport of animals for slaughter. In the November 2001 Agriculture Council my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, called on the Commission to make their promised proposals on the protection of animals during transport.

Primate Imports

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many wild caught non-human primates were imported into the United Kingdom in the last five years; for what purposes; and if she will make a statement. [48000]

Mr. Meacher: Imports of non-human primates are controlled under the European Commission Regulation dealing with the control in trade in endangered speeies. Our records show that 547 wild caught non-human primates were imported into the UK between 1 January 1997 and 31 December 2001.

The purposes of the imports were categorised as follows:

2 personal;

266 commercial;

32 zoological collections.

Emissions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how far below 1990 levels (a) greenhouse gas and (b) carbon dioxide emissions were in percentage terms in (a) 2000 and (b) 2001. [47342]

Mr. Meacher: In 2000, total emissions of the 'basket' of six greenhouse gases, weighted by global warming potential, were 13 per cent. below 1990 levels. Estimates of greenhouse gas emissions in 2001 are not yet available. These figures confirm that the UK has met, and significantly exceeded, its commitment under the Framework Convention on Climate Change that was agreed at Rio de Janeiro in 1992 to return its emissions of greenhouse gases to 1990 levels by the year 2000.

Carbon dioxide emissions in 2000 were 7.5 per cent. below 1990 levels. Provisional estimates suggest that in 2001 carbon dioxide emissions were 6 per cent. below 1990 levels. Final estimates for 2001 are not yet available. The increases in 2000 and 2001 were caused by the increased amount of coal used in electricity generation in those years and colder weather in the winter months.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how far below (a) 1980 and (b) 1990 levels SO_2 emissions were in percentage terms in (i) 2000 and (ii) 2001. [47404]

Mr. Meacher: Sulphur dioxide (SO_2) emissions fell by 76 per cent. between 1980 and 2000, and by 69 per cent. between 1990 and 2000. Estimates of SO_2> emissions in 2001 are not yet available.

Nitrate Pollution

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent estimate she has made of the percentage of nitrate pollution in rivers which arises from discharges by sewage treatment plants. [48076]

Mr. Meacher: The Environment Agency's 2001 publication "Rivers and Estuaries—a decade of improvement" provides information on general trends in nitrate levels of rivers in England and Wales. Although this information does not identify the source of the nitrates, the Agency's assessment was that in 2000 some 32 per cent. of rivers had high average concentrations of nitrate (greater than 30mg/l), and about 50 per cent. moderate or high average concentrations (greater than 20mg/l). It is considered that the average nitrate contribution from sewage treatment works is likely to be less than 20 per cent., and in most cases less than 10 per cent. However, where relatively large works, such as Altrincham and Sale, discharge to small rivers and provide a significant proportion of their flow, the nitrate contribution is likely to be higher than 20 per cent. immediately downstream of the discharge.

Where surface freshwaters are used for the abstraction of drinking water the Environment Agency has on-going monitoring at numerous points. If sampling confirms the presence, or likelihood, of more than the permitted concentration of nitrates, and the source of the nitrates is sewage treatment works, then we identify the stretch of river as a Sensitive Area (Nitrate) under the Urban Waste Water Treatment Regulations, and reduce the amount of nitrates in the discharge from qualifying works.

On 5 March 2002 I announced the identification of stretches of the rivers Chelmer, Leam, Stour and Wissey as Sensitive Areas (Nitrate), and the requirement for two water companies to reduce the nitrate in discharges from six sewage treatment works by 2004.

Ozone Depletion

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate her Department has made of the environmental effects which will follow from the use of ozone depleting substances for the eight year period allowed under the EU Regulations on Ozone Depleting Substances. [48074]

Mr. Meacher: Under EU regulation number 2037–2000, the production and use of virgin ozone depleting HCFCs is due to be prohibited in Europe by 2010. In the interim 8-year period, we anticipate that there will be a maximum HCFC emission of 27 thousand ODP (ozone depleting potential) Tonnes in Europe. This is a small figure in comparison to peak emissions of CFCs during the 1980s, which reached a maximum of 435 thousand ODP Tonnes per year, and thus makes a very small addition to the current atmospheric chlorine burden. The additional effect on ozone depletion is likely to be very small relative to other factors which influence the stratosphere. HCFCs have a much smaller impact on ozone depletion than CFCs, which they replace in many applications, and HCFC use until 2010 has allowed a more rapid move away from reliance on CFCs.

Bushmeat

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what response her Department has made to the report of Evan Bowen-Jones, David Brown and Elizabeth Robinson entitled "Bushmeat—a Pilot Study". [48149]

Mr. Meacher: Evan Bowen-Jones, David Brown and Elizabeth Robinson submitted their final report on the Government's research project, "Bushmeat—A Pilot Study", in January 2002. The report, entitled "Assessment of the Solution-orientated research needed to promote a more sustainable Bushmeat Trade in Central and West Africa", examines the trade in terms of institutions, policies, biodiversity and livelihoods and sets out principles for further action in promoting more sustainability.

The report is an extremely thorough and useful piece of work. Arrangements have been made for its publication on the Department's website and on the UK's Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES) website, as well as on that of the Overseas Development Institute. We have drawn it to the attention of key stakeholders—including UNEP's Great Ape Survival Project—through the UK Tropical Forest Forum's Bushmeat Working Group, encouraging them to use it as the basis for further targeted work. We shall also be presenting it to the next meeting of the CITES Bushmeat Working Group later this year, to obtain the maximum engagement of African range states in identifying subsequent actions and taking them forward.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what actions her Department proposes to tackle the trade in bushmeat; [48151]

(2) what plans she has to raise the subject of the trade in bushmeat internationally. [48150]

Mr. Morley: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 15 January 2002, Official Report, column 272.

We have also now published our Action Plan for combating the illegal trade in all meat and animal products, including those commonly referred to as "bushmeat". High priority actions include enhanced co-operation for effective inter-agency enforcement, strengthened intelligence to counter smuggling, increased powers to search for illicit produce and increased public awareness through more publicity.

The Action Plan has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Abandoned Cars

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many abandoned cars local authorities have had to remove each year since 1997. [47380]

Mr. Meacher: Information on the number of abandoned vehicles removed by local authorities was collected for the first time in the Department's 2000–01 Municipal Waste Management Survey which should be published in July 2002.

Hazardous Waste (Shoreham Harbour)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 19 March 2002, Official Report, column 272W, on hazardous waste, on what date the shipment of hazardous waste passed through Shoreham Harbour; and what safety measures were taken. [47559]

Mr. Meacher: The Environment Agency area office report that the waste was offloaded at the port of Shoreham on 27 February 2002.

Safety measures for the carriage of dangerous goods are enforced by the Health and Safety Executive within the UK and the port authority at the point of entry into the UK. The port authority, once informed of the nature of a cargo, will enforce any special measures they deem necessary.

In this case, the Environment Agency local office report that two of their officers visited the port on 27 February 2002 to inspect the waste, and were satisfied that the waste was packaged appropriately. They further report that the waste arrived at its destination facility within 24 hours of being inspected.

Waste Disposal

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to increase provision to local authorities to help combat (a) fly-tipping and (b) abandoned cars. [47379]

Mr. Meacher: The financial pressures on local authorities generated by waste management, including abandoned cars and fly-tipping, will be considered in the course of the current spending review (SR2002).

Local authorities' waste management services are funded through council tax revenue and revenue support from Government via the Environmental Protection and Cultural Services (EPCS) block of funding. The spending review 2000 announced the framework for the Government's support to local authorities for the next three years up to 2003–04. This included an annual increase in the revenue support to local authorities for EPCS. By 2003–04 this support will have risen by £1.1 billion over the 2000–01 provision. Consistent with the general local authority financial framework, it is for individual local authorities to decide the proportion of their budget that should be directed to waste management work and what proportion of spending on waste management should go towards areas of work such as combating fly-tipping and abandoned cars.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) individuals and (b) companies since 1997 have been prosecuted for illegal fly-tipping; and if she will make a statement as to the range of penalties imposed. [47378]

Mr. Meacher: Both local authorities and the Environment Agency may prosecute for fly tipping offences. Between 1996 and 2001 the Environment Agency recorded prosecutions for waste offences generally and on a financial year basis. Therefore, this information did not distinguish fly tipping offences from other waste offences. From 2001, data is collected on a calendar year basis and records whether an incident involves the unlawful deposit of waste (breach of section 33(1)(a) of the Environmental Protection Act 1990), and whether an individual or company is involved. From December 2001 the data now specifically records whether an incident involves fly tipping. The information is as follows:

	Number of prosecutions
Prosecutions for general waste offences
1996–97	241
1997–98	345
1998–99	367
1999–2000	342
2000–01	439
Prosecutions under section 33 (1)(a)
2001	[1]234

[1] 196 individuals and 38 companies

No central register is kept of local authorities' prosecutions.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether liquid animal carcases were dumped in the Irish Sea from 1 May 2001 to 28 February 2002; and if she will make a statement. [47050]

Mr. Morley: Liquid animal carcases have never been dumped in the Irish Sea but I can confirm that between 1 May 2001 and 10 December 2001, the leachate from the Watchtree (Great Orton) mass burial site was discharged via a long sea outfall at Workington, into the Irish Sea.

Between 8 April and 15 June, the leachate (including body fluids, the breakdown products of animal carcases and any rainfall or surface water ingress into the pits) was pH adjusted for FMD virus control purposes. The Department installed a Dissolved Air Flotation (DAF) treatment plant on the site during June and from 15 June all leachate underwent additional primary treatment in the DAF plant before being tankered to Workington. On 2 October the pH adjustment ceased and on 10 December all use of the long sea outfall was stopped.

Since the 10 December, leachate has been tankered off site and disposed of at suitably licensed sites.

Air Pollution

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how her Department will implement EU requirements to reduce emissions of air pollutants from industrial plant and power stations. [46734]

Mr. Meacher: Directive 96/61/EC concerning integrated pollution prevention and control addresses emissions to all environments from a wide range of industrial plant, including power stations. It is being implemented through the Pollution Prevention and Control (England and Wales) Regulations 2000 (SI 1973). Any industrial installation covered by these Regulations which is newly constructed or substantially changed needs a permit from the Environment Agency or, for some smaller installations, from the relevant local authority. These permits will contain pollutant emission limits and other conditions concerning the operation of the installation. Operators of installations which were in existence before 31 October 1999 have to apply for permits according to a timetable for each of the main industrial sectors. This timetable, laid down in Schedule 3 to the Regulations, extends overall to March 2007. Existing power stations, which generally fall into the 'combustion' sector, have until 31 March 2006 to make permit applications under these Regulations.

Directive 1999/13/EC on the limitation of emissions of volatile organic compounds due to the use of organic solvents in certain activities and installations is being implemented by Directions to the Environment Agency, in respect of some plants. The Department expects to consult on draft implementation proposals for other plants later in the year.

Directives 2000/69/EC relating to limit values for benzene and carbon monoxide in ambient air, 2000/76/EC on the incineration of waste, 2001/80/EC on the limitation of emissions of certain pollutants into the air from large combustion plants, 2001/81/EC on national emission ceilings for certain atmospheric pollutants, and 2002/3/EC relating to ozone in ambient air have not yet been transposed. The Department expects to consult on draft implementation proposals later in the year.

Emissions (Sellafield)

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent representations she has received from the Government of Norway regarding emissions from Sellafield. [48043]

Mr. Meacher: The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs met the Norwegian Environment Minister, Borge Brende in December 2001. They discussed a number of issues, including Norway's concerns about radioactive discharges from Sellafield. The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs also exchanged letters with Mr. Brende following that meeting. I also met Mr. Brende immediately prior to the fifth North Sea Conference of Ministers in Bergen on 20 March. A number of issues were discussed at that meeting and Mr. Brende re-iterated his concerns about Sellafield discharges, especially those of technetium-99. In January of this year I also discussed Sellafield with members of the Standing Committee on Energy and Environment of the Norwegian Storting (Parliament).

Aggregates Levy

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has made to the Chancellor on the environmental impact of the aggregates levy. [48042]

Mr. Meacher: We fully support the aims and objectives of the Aggregates Levy and have had no call to make any representations to the Chancellor of the Exchequer on its environmental impacts.

Aircraft Hazards (Birds)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what plans she has to amend the Game Act 1831 to enable aircraft operators to deal with game birds posing a threat to aircraft; [47557]

(2) what action is available to the management of Shoreham Airport to deal with game birds posing a hazard to aircraft movements during the closed season; [47556]

(3) what directions she has issued to regional airports to deal with game birds in the closed season. [47558]

Alun Michael: DEFRA has received correspondence from Shoreham Airport about the occasional incursion of pheasants and roe deer into the airport perimeter.

A DEFRA Senior Wildlife Adviser has carried out a site inspection at Shoreham Airport to quantify and provide advice. An internal report is also being prepared for consideration by Ministers and I will write to the hon. Member responding in full to his questions as soon as that report has been considered.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many officials her Department employs at its office in Worcestershire; and what functions they perform. [47599]

Mr. Morley: At the office in Worcestershire, DEFRA currently employs 466 officials. The majority of these staff work either for the State Veterinary Service (dealing with animal welfare, disease control and central support functions) or for the Rural Development Service (dealing with the implementation and delivery of the England Rural Development Programme).

EU Directives

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 12 March 2002, Official Report, column 942W, on EU directives, what sources of information she uses regarding implementation and enforcement in other member states. [47628]

Mr. Morley: Information may be obtained from bilateral contacts with other member states, usually through their embassies here or our embassies there, or from UK involvement in EU inspection visits which take place in certain sectors.

Research Funding

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what level of funding her Department intends allocating to support research to help industry take advantage of new technology and higher safety, environmental and other standards of production. [46744]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA jointly funds with industry research under the LINK banner; Government sponsors provide up to half the costs. LINK aims to enhance the competitiveness of UK industry and the quality of life through support for managed programmes of pre-competitive research and development. Funding for LINK is won in a competitive process so it is not possible to be precise about the allocation for 2002–03, however it is likely to be in excess of £5 million.

Rural Policy

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how her Department intends to ensure that the policies of Government are rural-proofed. [46729]

Alun Michael: The Rural White Paper "Our countryside: the future", published in November 2000 (Cm 4909), in Chapter 13, set out the proposed measures which the Government have now put in place, to ensure that all its domestic policies in England are rural-proofed. In summary these are:

- a requirement on Departments to rural-proof all new policies—that is, to ensure that they have taken proper account of the impact on people living in rural areas—and to report annually on how they have done this;
- development by the Countryside Agency of a rural-proofing checklist, sent to all Departments in April 2001, to help them take account of the rural dimension in developing policy;
- publication of an annual report by the Countryside Agency on how effectively rural-proofing has been implemented across Government; the first of the Agency's reports will be published shortly.

The establishment of the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA), with responsibility for all aspects of rural policy, has given fresh impetus and focus to rural-proofing, reinforced by the establishment of a Cabinet sub-committee on rural renewal, and the representation of DEFRA in each of the Government offices for the regions (except London). Both I and Ewen Cameron—the Chairman of the Countryside Agency, whom the Prime Minister also appointed as Rural Advocate—have met ministerial colleagues in all the Departments concerned over the past few months to discuss how rural-proofing is being implemented and to offer our assistance in making it fully effective across Government.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what targets are set by her Department for the achievements of rural policy. [46710]

Alun Michael: The Department accepted responsibility for the Interim Public Service Agreement (PSA) targets previously assigned to the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions. Of the PSA targets, four cover the environment, rural development, countryside, wildlife and sustainable development responsibilities. These PSA targets are set out on the Department's website at http://defraweb/corporate/busplan/01psa.htm

Future PSA rural targets arising as a result of SR2002 will be published on the DEFRA website in due course.

More specific rural policy targets and commitments are set out in the Government's Rural White Paper published in November 2000, setting out the Government's vision for a living, working, protected and vibrant countryside in which everyone can enjoy a high quality of life.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which proposals in the rural White Paper have been implemented. [46993]

Alun Michael: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for South Derbyshire (Mr. Todd) on 12 December 2001, Official Report, column 920W. This announced publication of "England's Rural Future" which included a progress report on implementing the rural White Paper. This demonstrated that considerable progress had been made during the first year despite the massive diversion of effort and resources required to deal with foot and mouth disease. The same document also set out the Government's efforts to help rural recovery and our response to the reports of the rural task force and Lord Haskins. However the rural White Paper set out a long-term approach to meeting the needs of individuals, families and communities in rural areas and we continue to work towards the achievement of all the White Paper's long term goals.

The rural White Paper Implementation Plan which is on the Department's website at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/wildlife-countryside/index.htm shows how all the commitments made in the White Paper are being taken forward. An updated version will be available shortly.

Efficiency

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what efficiency measures have been achieved by her Department since its establishment. [46992]

Mr. Morley: Since DEFRA's creation in June 2001, all Directorates have been required to develop efficiency targets. Their achievement will be monitored from 2002–03.

Publications

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost was of printing and distributing the publication "Working for the Essentials of Life"; and what is the print run. [46989]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA's work affects the lives of everyone and the activities and policies of many other Departments, businesses and community groups. It is important that the Department establishes and maintains high quality dialogue and communications with all whose who we deal with. "Working for the Essentials of Life" attempts to describe in accessible language and using professional presentation and design our work and how it affects others. The costs of printing and distributing 15,000 copies equates to approximately £2.96 per copy, a cost which is justified if we communicate more effectively and clearly with people.

Biosecurity

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans her Department has implemented to increase biosecurity. [46745]

Mr. Morley: The Department has responsibility for a range of biosecurity issues. Throughout the foot and mouth outbreak, the Department has imposed strict animal health biosecurity measures, based on expert veterinary advice, to contain and eradicate the disease. Improvements in biosecurity within the livestock sector were achieved through the rules on the movement of animals and the arrangements for the cleansing and disinfection of vehicles, premises and equipment. Some of these conditions have been amended as the disease situation has improved. We will be carefully considering how animal disease control precautions should be developed in the future in the light of reports from the independent FMD inquiries.

Our approach to improved animal health biosecurity includes steps to reduce disease risks that might be linked to illegal imports of animal products, and a copy of the Government's action plan has been placed in both Libraries of the House.

We are also developing plans to encourage the wider livestock industry and those involved in rural activities to adopt improved standards of biosecurity to the general benefit of animal health in our national flocks and herds.

Biosecurity measures to protect plants from imported pests and diseases are based on legislation which implements the EC Plant Health Directive. Following risk assessments carried out by DEFRA the Plant Health Directive is currently being amended to increase the range of imported plant produce which is subject to phytosanitary certification from the country of origin. Proposals for further changes to the Directive would permit a more risk-targeted approach that has long been advocated by the UK.

DEFRA's Plant Health and Seeds Inspectors enforce plant health import controls in England and Wales in collaboration with HM Customs. They aim to inspect all commercial imports of plants from non-EC countries and a proportion, according to risk, of imported consignments of fruit, vegetables and cut flowers. Trials are under way of a computer link with Customs systems to enable more effective control and inspection of relevant consignments. Further information is available on the plant health pages of the Department's website http://defraweb/planth.ph.htm.

Biosecurity issues also include the problems caused by non-native species which may become established in this country. Some non-native species can become invasive and cause serious problems by altering native ecosystems and threatening native species, and also by causing considerable economic damage, for example to forestry or agriculture. Invasive non-native species have been identified as one of the main causes of biodiversity loss worldwide. The Government are currently undertaking a fundamental review of policy on invasive non-native species, with industry and conservation bodies, considering the causes of, and problems arising from, the introduction and spread of non-native species.

DEFRA Management Board

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish the CVs of the non-executive members of the DEFRA management board. [47388]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA's management board includes three non-executive members, Elizabeth Ransom and Alison Huxtable, both with private sector backgrounds, and Richard Wakeford, Chief Executive of the Countryside Agency. Their biographical details are as follows:

Alison Huxtable was formerly a member of the Amerada Hess senior management team for the UK. She was responsible for developing the people, structure and strategies of six distinct areas of professional service provision. She was also instrumental in the Amerada Hess change management programme. She was called to the Bar in 1983, and is a Justice of the Peace in Devon. She was appointed as a non-executive member of the MAFF management board in September 2000.

Elizabeth Ransom was a consultant with KPMG for 15 years, nine years of which as a partner. She led KPMG's work in central Government, focusing on improving performance in Government Departments and Agencies. The Departments she was involved with include the Ministry of Defence, DfEE, FCO and MAFF. She therefore has wide experience of managing change in public services. She was appointed as a non-executive member of the MAFF management board in September 2000.

Richard Wakeford became Chief Executive of the Countryside Agency at its formation in April 1999 and was previously Chief Executive of the Countryside Commission from 1996. Prior to this he worked in the Cabinet Office, where he dealt with economic and environmental affairs across Government. Before that in the Department of the Environment, he developed a range of land use planning policies and implemented the 'plan-led', system. He edited the land use and transport chapters of the 1994 UK Sustainable Development strategy, building on his earlier work on the team which prepared this country's first environment White Paper "This Common Inheritance" in 1990. He was appointed a non-executive member of the management board of the Department of Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) in September 2001 and is a member of the UK Sustainable Development Commission.

Market Towns

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many

Lancashire market towns have received grants for regeneration under the new deal for market towns, giving the (a) grant amount and (b) reason of the grant; and if she will list the market towns which can not bid for the grant in Lancashire. [47426]

Alun Michael: There are five towns in Lancashire in the market towns initiative—Barnoldswick, Padiham, Clitheroe, Garstang and Carnforth. There is no list of towns which cannot bid provided they meet the population size criteria of between 2,000 and 20,000.

The market town initiative is being taken forward on DEFRA's behalf by the regional development agencies, working with the Countryside Agency and local partners and using the £37 million of Government funding announced in the Rural White Paper. We hope that match funding will raise the resources available to market towns through the initiative to some £100 million. The process at a local level of creating a strong local partnership is important in itself. Most towns are still at the stage of community consultation prior to agreeing action plans, and approval of project grants will come at the next stage.

Agricultural Shows

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance she has issued on a consistent approach by officials across the country to the implementation of the 21-day standstill rule in respect of attendance of animals at agricultural shows in the summer of 2003. [46784]

Mr. Morley: Show animals are exempted from the 20-day standstill rule if they meet certain conditions. The key requirements are that the animals must be individually identified and have been kept in and returned to DEFRA approved isolation facilities on their farm of origin. The Department has issued operational instructions to our veterinary staff regarding these arrangements. The conditions for approving on farm isolation units are available on the DEFRA website at http://www.defra.gov.uk/footandmouth/movements/cattle/guidance/ei31.pdf.

Fallen Stock

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what analysis she has made of the proportions of fallen stock which are (a) centrally buried, (b) centrally burned, (c) buried on the farm, (d) burned on the farm and (e) otherwise disposed of, in respect of (i) cattle and (ii) sheep on average over the last five years. [46787]

Mr. Morley: The central burial or burning of fallen stock is not permitted except in emergency situations such as the outbreak of foot and mouth disease in 2001. We do not collect information on the routine disposal of fallen stock, but the State Veterinary Service carried out small scale surveys in the years 1998–2000. The results (which may not be representative) suggest that the following proportions of fallen cattle and sheep were buried or burned on farm. The remainder were disposed of by alternative routes such as incineration or disposal to a knacker's yard or hunt kennel.

Cattle buried on farm	17	22	21
Cattle burned on farm	1	1	4
Sheep and goats buried on farm	60	76	65
Sheep and goats burned on farm	6	1	7

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what charges are made to farmers for the disposal of fallen (a) cattle and (b) sheep. [46786]

Mr. Morley: To facilitate the UK's programme of surveillance for Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathies, the Government currently pays the full cost of collecting 6,000 fallen sheep per year and all fallen cattle aged over 24 months. Charges for the disposal of other fallen stock are a matter for negotiation between the farmer and the collector. However, we understand that charges made for the disposal of fallen cattle range from zero to £50, and for fallen sheep from zero to £15.

Stranded Cetaceans

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will estimate the number of cetaceans stranded on the UK shorelines by species in each of the last 12 months; what percentage of those post mortemed were recorded as bycatch deaths; and if she will make a statement. [48001]

Mr. Morley: Data on the cetaceans reported as stranding in the period January 2001 to December 2001 on a quarterly basis is contained in the table. Figures for the UK for the first three months of 2002 are not yet available, but for England and Wales, during the month of January 994 cetaceans were reported as stranded. Post mortems were carried out on 34 of these cetaceans, 79 per cent. of which were bycaught.

Fur Farms

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many fur farms were licensed in each month from December 2001 to March 2002 inclusive in England; and if she will list their locations by county. [47399]

Mr. Morley: During the period 1 December 2001 to March 2002 the following fur farms were licensed in England:

County	Number of licensed fur farms
Hampshire	1
Lancashire	3
Yorkshire	1
Total	5

All these farms are thought to have ceased fur production.

Departmental Responses

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will take steps to improve the response time to parliamentary questions. [47718]

Mr. Morley: In its response to the Public Administration Select Committee's Second Report of Session 2000–01 on Ministerial Accountability and Parliamentary Questions, the Government made clear their commitment to providing prompt and accurate answers to parliamentary questions. This continues to be the Government's position.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what new initiatives her Department has taken in 2001–02 to assist in achieving its Public Service Agreement targets. [47200]

Mr. Morley: Information about progress on PSA targets will be published in the Department's 2002 departmental report.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target for reducing the incidence of BSE will be met in 2002. [47906]

Mr. Morley: The number of clinically suspect cases of BSE reported in Great Britain continues to decline, and the epidemic has now fallen to levels well below those observed when the disease was first made notifiable in 1988.

The Department's Public Service Agreement (PSA) target for the control of BSE is:

> "To reduce the annual incidence of BSE to less than 650 cases by 2001 and by 2004 to be on track for fewer than 30 cases by 2006. This reflects a 99 per cent. reduction compared with 1997 when there were 4,312 cases".

This target is based on confirmed, clinical cases. The actual figure for 2001 is likely to be around 780 confirmed BSE cases in cattle presented as clinical suspects. Progress against the PSA target has been affected by movement restrictions introduced to deal with the foot and mouth outbreak. This has disrupted the slaughter of older cattle under the OTMS because available rendering capacity has been used to dispose of the carcases of animals arising from the control of FMD. This, in turn, has increased the mean age of the cattle population and resulted in more cases than previously anticipated. Nevertheless, the outturn for 2001 still represents a reduction of more than 40 per cent. compared to 2000 when there were 1,311 cases in cattle presented as clinical suspects. The epidemic continues to decline rapidly and there is no particular concern at present in relation to the 2004 and 2006 targets.

Surplus Laboratories

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if the two surplus laboratories at Harpenden and Torry referred to on page 21 of the 2001 departmental report, have been sold. [48171]

Mr. Morley: The laboratory at Torry was sold in April 2001. DEFRA has a leasehold interest in the laboratory at Harpenden. A joint conditional sale of the property by DEFRA and the freeholder floundered in January 2002 after planning consent was refused to the prospective purchaser. Negotiations are continuing with the planning authorities to facilitate a successful future sale.

Maladministration

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what payments have been made to individuals following findings of maladministration by ombudsmen with responsibility for agencies under the remit of her Department in the last 12 months; and what plans she has to review the powers to increase the level of awards that can be made. [48048]

Mr. Morley: One payment of £50.27 has been made to an individual following findings of maladministration by the ombudsman with responsibility for agencies under the remit of my Department in the last 12 months: and there are no plans to review the powers to increase the level of awards that can be made.

Deer

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the estimated deer population was in each of the last 30 years; by what method the estimates were determined; and if she will make a statement. [48068]

Mr. Meacher: These data are not available to the Department.

Hunting With Dogs

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 26 March, ref. 46360, if she will make a statement on the future duties of Lord Burns in relation to hunting with dogs, with special reference to the issues of cruelty and utility. [47877]

Alun Michael: My noble Friend Lord Burns, was appointed in December 1999 to carry out an inquiry into hunting with dogs. He discharged his task with the submission of his report on 9 June 2000.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Music Teaching

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) how much money the Department has spent on encouraging schoolchildren to play a musical instrument in each of the past 10 years; and if she will make a statement; [46587]

(2) how many schoolchildren have been offered training on a musical instrument in each of the past 10 years; and if she will make a statement; [46586]

(3) how much money the Department and its predecessors have spent on providing schools with instruments in each of the past 10 years; and if she will make a statement. [46588]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I have been asked to reply.

As part of the national curriculum in music, all pupils up to Key Stage 3 are introduced to playing musical instruments. The Department does not, however, collect information on the numbers of schoolchildren receiving additional instrumental music lessons.

We do recognise the value of instrumental music tuition and have taken a number of steps to support Local Education Authorities Music Services. In 1999 the Music Standards Fund was introduced. Between 1999 and 2004, total funding of £270 million will have been made available to music services across England. The Department's contribution towards this was £35 million in 1999–2000, £40 million in 2000–2001 and £50 million in 2001–2002. LEAs may spend Music Standards Fund in any way which enhances the opportunities for pupils to access musical education of high quality, including providing schools with musical instruments or encouraging children to play a musical instrument.

Our wider opportunities programme will expand existing provision to give all primary school pupils who want to the opportunity to learn a musical instrument. The Department is working with partners, including representatives from LEA Music Services, on the best way to fulfil this pledge. As part of this exercise we are considering what information to ask LEAs to collect in order to monitor the numbers of school children learning a musical instrument.

Ministerial Private Offices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the running costs were of (a) her Ministers' private offices, separately identifying expenditure on staff, and (b) her Department in each year from May 1997 to the nearest date for which the information is available. [40979]

Dr. Howells: The running cost information requested for the Department is shown in the table. It reflects information published in the appropriation accounts and resource accounts. Information in the format requested is not held centrally for previous years and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

£ million

	DCMS running costs	Ministers' private office running costs	Ministers' private office staff running costs
1998–99	21.862	1.638	1.048
1999–2000	25.186	1.560	1.031
2000–01	26.234	1.603	1.061

Departmental Contracts

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by her Department from (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999, (c) May 1999 to April 2000, (d) May 2000 to April 2001 and (e) May 2001 to the latest date for which figures are available, stating in each case the values of the contracts and the companies with which the contracts were placed. [43679]

Mr. Caborn: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for North Tayside (Pete Wishart) on 28 February 2002, Official Report, columns 1537–38W.

Golden Jubilee

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if awards, other than the Queen's Golden Jubilee Medal, are to be presented during the Jubilee festivities; and if she will make a statement. [44580]

Tessa Jowell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills announced last December that the 2002 National Training Awards will include a special Jubilee award for individuals or organisations who have made an exceptional contribution to the community through training. The award of city status and a Lord Mayoralty to mark the Queen's Jubilee celebrations have already been announced. No other new awards specifically for the Jubilee are planned to be presented during the festivities.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list Government-sponsored commemorative Golden Jubilee items; what the cost to make each item is; how many of each item will be produced; and if she will make a statement. [44564]

Tessa Jowell: The Golden Jubilee Medal is the only commemorative item being sponsored by the Government. Approximately 370,000 will be produced, at a cost of approximately £21 each.

There are no plans to produce any other Government-sponsored commemorative items.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people are working on the planning and organisation of the Queen's Golden Jubilee; what Departments each of those people work for; and if she will make a statement. [44582]

Tessa Jowell: The Golden Jubilee Office in my Department comprises 24 staff (two of whom work part-time) and three temporary staff working on a short-term basis. In the Ministry of Defence, 23 staff are currently employed on planning the Queen's visit to the armed forces in Portsmouth on 27 June. In other Departments the work, which includes representation on the Official Committee for the Golden Jubilee which has met roughly every two months, is spread among staff working on other issues. In so far as this is readily quantifiable, the Northern Ireland Office has the equivalent of four full-time staff; the Foreign and Commonwealth has the equivalent of 1.25 staff; the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions has 0.7 of one post; the Department for Education and Skills has 0.7 of one post spread across five members of staff; the Department of Trade and Industry has 0.05 of one post; and the Scotland Office has 0.05 of one post (the work on the Queen's visit programme being largely dealt with by the Scottish Executive).

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people have been employed by her Department in each of the last three years under (a) the new deal for young people, (b) the new deal for the over 50s and (c) the new deal for lone parents; and at what cost, listed by category, to public funds. [44919]

Dr. Howells: My Department does not hold information on the category of programme under which new dealers employed by this Department and the Royal Parks Agency are included. Information on the overall number of new dealers employed in the last four years follows:

	Number
1999–2000	2

My Department expects to offer employment to at least three new dealers shortly as part of a recent external recruitment campaign for administrative staff.

New dealers take up existing vacancies so extra costs to public funds are limited to the subsidy, where appropriate, and any additional training and development which may be needed. The cost of the latter cannot be readily identified.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people employed by her Department under the new deal for young people in each of the last four years have subsequently (a) found unsubsidised employment for more than 13 weeks and (b) returned to jobseeker's allowance or other benefits. [45083]

Dr. Howells: My Department and the Royal Parks Agency does not hold this information for people employed under this scheme who then move on. However, three out of the four people employed under this scheme since 1998–99 were subsequently offered permanent appointments in this Department (one in 1998–99 and two in 1999–2000).

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the (a) private finance initiative and (b) public private partnership projects which have been delayed. [44881]

Dr. Howells: None.

Sports Days

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the ability of schools to hold an annual sports day. [45110]

Tessa Jowell: The Government have so far designated 506 school sport co-ordinators, to be placed within secondary schools across the country, who will have specific responsibility for planning and organising inter and intra-school competitive sport, including sports days. We have set a target of 1,000 co-ordinators in place by 2004, and it is expected that secondary schools—and through them, primary schools—in every LEA will have access to their expertise and support by that date. In addition, guidance is available from Sport England on holding school sports days.

Secondments

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many members of staff were employed by her Department on secondment from non-governmental organisations in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [45234]

Dr. Howells: The information in respect of DCMS is contained in the following table.

	Secondments
1999–2000	2
2001 to date	7

Secondments are defined as all continuous interchange activity of three months or more.

Access to Information

Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the administrative manuals and internal guidance which her Department has made public as required by Part 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information; and which of these were first made available after May 1997. [45339]

Dr. Howells: My Department's interface with the public is conducted largely through our 66 NDPBs. Information about our commitment to the Code of Practice and Modernising Government is on our website, under the Open Government heading. Reference is made there to our procedure guidelines on implementing an 'open' policy.

Internal guidance is currently on our internal communications system and e-mail network and will form part of our forthcoming Publication Scheme, as required under the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000.

Unpaid Advisers

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the names of the unpaid advisers appointed by her and her predecessor since June 1997, stating in each case (a) the date of their appointment, (b) the duration of their appointment and (c) the project or projects on which they have been engaged. [43388]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 25 March 2002]: There have been no unpaid advisers appointed, in line with the requirements of paragraph 51 of the Ministerial Code, by me or my predecessor since June 1997

For details of unpaid appointments made by this Department to task forces, review groups and other ad hoc advisory groups, I would refer the right hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 16 November 2001, Official Report, column 958W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Rhondda (Mr. Bryant).

Challenge Fund

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much of the £15 million Challenge Fund established to fund investment in the designated museums has been spent. [46096]

Dr. Howells: To date a total of £12,254,735 has been claimed from the Designated Challenge Fund. All the funds (£15 million) have been committed to projects and final claims are expected to be made shortly.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on progress towards meeting the PSA target to achieve a £23 million saving through a new strategic body for museums, libraries and archives. [46094]

Dr. Howells: The PSA target covers the savings to be realised as a result of restructuring in most of the Department's sectors. An annual saving of £7 million has already been made through the restructuring of the arts, tourism and heritage sectors, and this money has been redirected into front-line services. Further administration savings of £8 to £10 million are forecast from the imminent merger of the Arts Council of England and the Regional Arts Boards. The Department is continuing to work with its non-departmental public bodies, particularly through Quinquennial Reviews, to find further efficiency savings.

National Stadium

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, (1) pursuant to her answer of 25 February 2002, Official Report, columns 709–10W, what advice she has received from the (a) National Audit Office and (b) other authoritative sources about the concerns raised by the David James/Berwin Leighton report about the relationship between Wembley National Stadium Ltd and Multiplex; and if these concerns have been satisfactorily addressed; [45712]

(2) pursuant to her answer of 25 February 2002, Official Report, columns 709–10W, when the National Audit Office was notified that it will receive a copy of the David James/Berwin Leighton report; and when she expects to receive its advice. [45711]

Tessa Jowell: [holding answer 25 March 2002]: As I made clear to the House on 19 December, (Official Report, column 292), as soon as I received a copy of the David James/Berwin Leighton Paisner Report on procurement processes relating to the National Stadium project I asked the Football Association and Wembley National Stadium Ltd. to make a copy available to the National Audit Office who received it on 18 December. While the National Audit Office has no role in the decision making process, it gave initial advice to my Department on the report that same day. Subsequently the NAO has also given my officials advice more generally on corporate governance and value for money methodologies and criteria.

As I explained to the House on 19 December, it was because of the concerns raised in the David James/Berwin Leighton Paisner Report that I asked the Football Association and Wembley National Stadium Ltd. to commission an independent value-for-money assessment of the proposed contracts and to ensure that corporate governance and procurement arrangements from now on represent best practice. Cyril Sweett Ltd. are carrying out that study and a copy of their terms of reference were placed in the House Library on 12 March. The Government will determine whether or not the Cyril Sweett Ltd. Report and the Football Association and Wembley National Stadium Ltd's work on corporate governance, procurement and other issues satisfies the conditions I set out on 19 December in the light of advice received from Sport England, Patrick Carter's review team and from within Government.

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to her statement of 19 December 2001, Official Report, columns 291–93, if she will publish the terms of reference for the final report by Patrick Carter into the review of an English national football stadium; and whether they include an assessment as to the achievement of Government value for money and procurement standards and associated accounting issues. [46254]

Tessa Jowell: The terms of reference for Patrick Carter's remain those which I set out in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for West Lancashire (Mr. Pickthall) on 25 June 2001, Official Report, column 37W namely:

> "In the light of the FA's announcement of 1 May 2001 about the project to develop a new English National Stadium at Wembley for Football and Rugby League, to examine if the project can be funded and managed at Wembley or if that proved impractical, at another location in England."

I published the Review Team's interim report on 19 December and I intend to publish the Review Team's final report when it is completed in due course.

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to her oral statement of 19 December 2001, Official Report, columns 291–93, on the National Stadium, what assessment she has made of (a) the corporate governance changes made to the WNSL Board and (b) whether the present management arrangements can deliver the project on time and within a procedure acceptable to the public sector. [46343]

Tessa Jowell: As I set out on 19 December the Government's conditions for support of the Football Association's National Stadium project includes the requirement for changes to corporate governance to produce a management structure capable of delivering a complex project within procedures acceptable to the public sector. The Football Association and Wembley National Stadium Ltd. are working to meet the Government's conditions. I expect the FA's work to be completed in April. The Government will determine whether or not that work satisfies the conditions I set out on 19 December in the light of advice received from Sport England, Patrick Carter's review team and from within Government.

Mr. Dennis Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to her statement of 19 December 2001, Official Report, columns 291–94, if she plans to publish the Carter report into the English National Stadium and her final decision on whether to support the National Stadium at Wembley on 30 April. [46188]

Tessa Jowell: The Football Association and Wembley National Stadium Ltd are working with a lead bank on financing the National Stadium project and undertaking the necessary work to fulfil the Government's conditions. I expect the FA's work to be completed in April. The Government will determine whether or not that work satisfies the conditions I set out on 19 December in the light of advice received from Sport England, Patrick Carter's review team and from within Government. It is my intention that Patrick Carter's final report be published. However, in line with the convention on announcements during local elections, I will not be making any statement until after 2 May 2002.

Broadcasting Regulation

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which elements of the programme content rules imposed upon broadcasters cover (a) responsibility in religious programme content, (b) exploitation of audience susceptibilities, (c) abuse/incitement to hatred, (d) declaration of identity of religious bodies involved in programmes, (e) accuracy and fairness, (f) recognition of other religions, (g) appeals and donations, (h) recruitment, (i) claims and substantiation, (j) blasphemy and obscenity, (k) unacceptable organisations or practices, (l) religious advertising and (m) religious worship; and what assessment she has made of whether these rules adequately regulate the content of religious broadcasting. [46128]

Dr. Howells: The information is set out in the following table:

Question	Provision
(a) Responsibility in religious programme content	BSC: Code on Standards (Section 31) ITC: Broadcasting Act 1990: Section 6 (1) (d) and ITC Programme Code (Section 7) BBC: BBC Producers' Guidelines (Chapter 6: Section 9) RAu: Programme Code Rule 7

We stated in the Communications White Paper that we will "maintain the requirement that due responsibility be exercised with respect to the content of religious programmes. Under the Broadcasting Act 1990, such programmes must not involve an improper exploitation of any susceptibilities of those watching or any abusive treatment of the religious views and beliefs of those belonging to a particular religion or religious denomination" [6.9.1]. The regulators are responsible for the Codes and guidelines, and from time to time to review them. Copies are available from the regulators.We are considering, in the light of the responses to the various consultations on ownership of the permitted licences by religious organisations, whether or not to retain rules in this respect also.

Religious Broadcasting

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what information she has as to the Christian radio stations which broadcast to United Kingdom listeners; and in the case of each such broadcaster, what information she has on (a) the size of audience and (b) the extend to which it complies with the relevant codes regulating broadcast output. [46122]

Dr. Howells: The Department only has information on radio stations licensed by the Radio Authority. To date, the Radio Authority licence two local analogue religious licensees both in Greater London. These are Premier Christian Radio (176,000 listeners) and Liberty Radio (72,000 listeners). [source—RAJAR audience figures 4 Quarter 2001]

The Radio Authority also licence 17 satellite stations of a Christian nature. These are:

UCB Europe
Stitching Transworld Radio Europe
Transworld Radio Europe (German language)
UCB Cross Rhythms
Transworld Radio
EWTN
Premier Christian Radio
The Spoken Bible
Advèntist World Radio
Family Radio
Family Radio International UCB—Talk
UCB—Inspirational
The Dream
TalkGospel.com
UCB—Bible
Radio Al Mahabba.

Audience information is not held for these channels.

In addition, the Radio Authority issue restricted short-term licences (RSL's) for a wide range of reasons and events. RSL's are issued for a restricted coverage area as well as being restricted by duration (maximum 28 days) and are for small-scale community use. During 2001, the Radio Authority issued 21 licences to mark notable dates in the Christian calendar. These were awarded to:

Caleb Radio (received 2 RSL licences during 2001)
Flame FM, Bradford
Flame FM
New Life Radio (received 2 RSL licences during 2001)
Hope FM (received 2 RSL licences during 2001)
Branch FM
Revival Radio
GBMR
Stoneleigh FM
Kingdom Faith Camp Radio
New Wine Radio
Flame FM on the Wirral
ARB
Lighthouse
Radio Grove
Adventist Radio—Heavenly Hampstead
Good News Radio
ARMK/Adventist Radio Milton Keynes.

Audience information is not held for these channels.

All these stations must comply with the Radio Authority's relevant codes regulating broadcast output. During 2001, the Radio Authority issued a warning to Premier Christian Radio for several breaches of the Broadcasting Act 1990 and the Programme Code, and to Liberty Radio for breaching the Advertising and Sponsorship Code.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) whether it is her policy to permit and encourage the Christian broadcasting industry in the United Kingdom; [46129]

(2) what representations she has received from (a) right hon. and hon. Members and (b) others supporting the lifting of statutory prohibitions on religious broadcasters; [46123]

(3) which categories of broadcasting licence ownership are prohibited for religious bodies; and in the case of each category of licence, what public policy objectives are served by the ban; [46127]

(4) what consideration she has given to the implications for (a) listeners, (b) competition and (c) religious activity of the statutory ban on Christian broadcasters being granted categories of broadcasting licence; and if she will make a statement. [46126]

Dr. Howells: The Broadcasting Acts of 1990 and 1996 do not permit the regulators to award licences for: national analogue sound programmes; digital sound programmes; terrestrial television services; an radio and TV multiplex licences (local or national). The Acts do give the regulators discretion to award the following licences to religious organisations: local analogue, satellite and cable sound programme licences; cable and satellite television services; and restricted service sound programme licences.

The White Paper 'A New Future for Communications' published in December 2000 and the more recent paper 'Consultation on Media Ownership Rules' published in November 2001 confirmed that the Government planned to bring forward legislation to allow religious bodies to hold a local digital sound programme licence. The papers also discussed the background to the restrictions on religious ownership of certain broadcasting licences: "We would welcome views on whether we should further relax the ban on religious ownership. There is a strong demand by some for religious content. But religious content has a particular capacity to offend those with different views and opinions, or, sometimes to exploit the susceptibilities of the vulnerable. Religious issues may also shade into matters of political controversy. These concerns may not be fully dealt with by the regulation of religious content and are particularly acute in relation to terrestrial licences where scarce spectrum means that choice is naturally limited for viewers. We nevertheless welcome views on whether we could relax the prohibition when choice increases in the digital future, or whether it will remain a necessary safeguard which should be retained".

We receive approximately 14,500 (6,500 and 8,000 respectively) responses from MP's, organisations and members of public broadly supporting the lifting of the current restrictions. We are reviewing the restrictions on the holding of certain licences by religious bodies in the light of these responses, and will publish details of our proposals with the draft Communications Bill, which we expect to be in the spring.

It is for organisations in the Christian broadcasting industry to decide if they wish to apply to the Radio Authority for any of the aforementioned licences.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if she will include consideration of the Christian broadcasting sector in her commitment to consult widely and deeply about outstanding questions of broadcasting regulation; [46125]

(2) what representations she has received on the future regulation of Christian broadcasting in the United Kingdom. [46121]

Dr. Howells: We will be consulting widely and deeply on a draft Communications Bill, and will of course consider all points raised by the Christian broadcasting sector before finalising the proposals which we put before Parliament when the legislative timetable allows. We have already received a large number of representations about the future regulation and ownership of religious broadcasting.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received concerning the Carla Rosa Opera Company; and if she will make a statement. [46228]

Dr. Howells: We have received three letters from members of the public about the Carl Rosa Opera Company. I was pleased to learn that the excellent work of this historic company will reach an even wider audience with the announcement this week by the Arts Council of England of a national touring programme grant for a tour of three operettas to smaller venues in England.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the effect of continued statutory prohibition on religious broadcasting on her policies of promoting quality, diversity and plurality in the broadcast sector. [46124]

Dr. Howells: Religious broadcasting is not prohibited in the United Kingdom. The Government take the view that religious programming is an important element of radio and television services. Furthermore, under the Broadcasting Acts of 1990 and 1996, the regulators are given discretion to award the following licences to religious organisations: local analogue, satellite and cable sound programme licences; cable and satellite television services licences; and restricted service sound programme licences.

Press Complaints Commission

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent representations she has received concerning the effectiveness of the Press Complaints Commission. [46209]

Dr. Howells: Over the last six months, DCMS has received 23 letters mentioning the Press Complaints Commission, of which 16 made specific complaints.

Communications Bill

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the pre-legislative scrutiny procedure will be for the Communications Bill; and when it will start. [46130]

Dr. Howells: The Government hope that the two Houses will agree to establish a Joint Committee to consider any draft Communications Bill and will bring forward the necessary motions sometime after the Easter Adjournment.

Pugin's "The Grange"

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received concerning The Grange, the home of Augustus Pugin; and if she will make a statement. [46227]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, has received no representations concerning The Grange. The Landmark Trust, an independent UK building preservation charity which restores neglected historic buildings, has been awarded £1.1 million by the Heritage Lottery Fund towards restoration of The Grange. The Landmark Trust has an existing grant offer from English Heritage also towards the conservation and repair of The Grange. English Heritage are currently considering making an increased grant offer for the restoration project.

Sponsorship

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the industries sponsored by her Department, stating for each the (a) amount and (b) percentage of GDP they represented in each of the last five years. [45200]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has responsibility for sponsoring the tourism, gambling, video and film, radio and TV, and music industries.

BBC News 24

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the terms of reference are of the review she announced on 12 March into BBC News 24. [45201]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 25 March 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Hyndburn (Mr. Pope) on 21 March 2002, Official Report, column 510W.

Library Staff

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the average salary for (a) a professionally trained librarian and (b) an untrained library assistant has been in each local authority in each of the past 10 years; and if she will make a statement. [46590]

Dr. Howells: Information on salary levels for professional and non-professional staff across the 149 English Library Authorities is not held centrally.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) professionally trained librarians and (b) untrained library assistants were employed by each local authority in each of the past 10 years; and if she will make a statement. [46589]

Dr. Howells: This information is not readily available. However, we can extract and then represent the required data from the 149 English Library Authorities from existing reference sources. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as this has been done, placing copies of my letter in the Libraries of both Houses.

Independent Television Commission

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) which representatives of the ITC have attended meetings with minsters and officials from her Department in the last six months; [46593]

(2) how many times (a) ministers and (b) officials from her Department have met representatives of the ITC in the last six months. [46592]

Dr. Howells: The Independent Television Commission are involved in taking forward work on the draft Communications Bill, the Digital Action Plan, the establishment of the new converged communications regulator (OFCOM), and other projects with which my Department engages. Ministers and officials from the Department for Culture, Media and Sport have therefore met representatives of the ITC frequently in the last six months. It would not be possible to list all the meetings or all the individuals involved without disproportionate cost.

Music Advisers

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what figures she has collated on how many music advisers in the Department (a) perform or have performed music in the past, (b) play an instrument and (c) studied music at university; and if she will make a statement. [46585]

Dr. Howells: My Department sponsors the music industry and is committed to working closely with them and other Government Departments to help ensure that all parts of the UK music industry thrive both at home and abroad.

Of the five officials directly involved in providing advice on music industry issues in the Department:

(a) four perform or have performed music in the past,

(b) four play an instrument,

(c) none studied music at university.

Archives

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether the Government are establishing regional archivist groups; what movement of archives there will be to such groups from county and national archives; and what representations she has received on the matter. [45925]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 26 March 2002]: With encouragement from this Department, the National Council on Archives has set up a network of Regional Archive Councils which were formally established in 1999. They co-ordinate the development of archives policy and promote archives within the regions. As they are councils rather than repositories there are no plans to move archives from county and national archives to these groups. The Regional Archive Councils published archives strategies for each region in 2001.

My Department has received the National Council on Archives report "Archives in the Regions", an overview of the English regional archive strategies, and is in discussion with Resource, the Council for museums, archives and libraries and other interested groups on how to take the recommendations of the report forward.

User Consultation

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what new steps her Department took in 2001–02 to consult the users of its services about their wishes and expectations; and if she will publish the findings. [47307]

Dr. Howells: The Department is actively following the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations in order to consult the users of its services about their wishes and expectations, efficiently and effectively. These findings are published and consistently updated on the Department's website.

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage of external correspondence was answered within 18 working days as of December 2001. [47256]

Mr. Caborn: For the period 1 April to 31 December 2001, 89 per cent. of the Department's external correspondence was answered within 18 working days.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what recent assessment she has made of whether the target to reduce staff absence to nine days per employee by 2003 will be met; [47259]

(2) if the target to reduce absence to seven days per staff year by 2001 was met; [47261]

(3) what recent assessment she has made of whether the target to reduce absence to six days per staff year by 2003 will be met. [47258]

Dr. Howells: No, but significant progress has been made. In 2001, the average sickness absence was 7.86 days per member of staff, compared with 9.28 in 2000.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if the target to reduce absence in the Royal Parks Agency to 10 days per employee by 2001 was met. [47260]

Dr. Howells: Responsibility for the subject of this question has been delegated to the Royal Parks Agency under its Chief Executive, William Weston, and I have asked him to reply.

Letter from William Weston to Mr. John Bercow, dated 10 April 2002:

I have been asked by the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the target to reduce sick absence rates in the Royal Parks Agency, as this is an operational matter for which the Agency is responsible.

The Agency's target was to reduce the rate to 10 days per employee per year by the end of 2001/02, as a step towards reducing it to 9 days per employee per year by the end of 2002/03.

The average rate for the year ending 31 March 2002 was 20 days per employee. This is higher than that for the previous year, and is largely attributable to significant rates of long term sick leave within the Royal Parks Constabulary. It does not reflect more frequent instances of short-term sick leave among the staff as a whole, which is evidenced by the fact that the average rate for non-uniformed staff was less than 5 days per year.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what was the outturn achieved at 31 December 2001 on the target that all invoices not in dispute should be paid within 30 days. [47262]

Dr. Howells: 99.1 per cent. of invoices not in dispute were paid within 30 days, or agreed contractual terms, by the Department during the period January to 31 December 2001.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will take steps to improve the response time to Parliamentary Questions. [47713]

Tessa Jowell: In its response to the Public Administration Select Committee's Second Report of Session 2000–01 on ministerial accountability and Parliamentary Questions, the Government made clear their commitment to providing prompt and accurate answers to Parliamentary Questions. This continues to be the Government's position.

Service Reviews

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proportion of departmental services and activities have so far been reviewed, as required by the policy set out in the handbook, "Better Quality Services". [47257]

Dr. Howells: So far reviews of 8 per cent. of departmental services and activities have been completed. A recent study carried out jointly with the Treasury and the Centre for Management and Policy Studies will lead to the completion of reviews of a further 40 per cent. The Department is on course to meet its service delivery agreement target of conducting better quality services reviews of 50 per cent. of its activities by the end of 2004.

Property Protection

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what new measures her Department took in 2001–02 to protect its property from theft or damage. [47320]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him of 31 January, Official Report, columns 547–49, in which it was stated that measures were being taken to resite internal and external surveillance equipment. All departmental premises abut public thoroughfares making more stringent preventative measures impractical.

Press Office

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many press officers there were in her Department on (a) 1 May 1997 and (b) the latest available date. [46886]

Dr. Howells: There were nine press officers in my Department on 1 May 1997, including two working part-time. The figure today is seven.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total cost of running his press office was in (a) 1996–97 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available. [46815]

Dr. Howells: The total cost of running the Department for Culture, Media and Sport press office in 1996–97 was £236,524.53. The latest year for which figures are available for the total cost of running the press office is 2000–01, which totalled £582,442.74.

Special Advisers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many times special advisers have accompanied Ministers on overseas visits in each of the last five years; which countries were visited; and what the total cost of each individual visit was. [47149]

Mr. Caborn: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Westmorland and Lonsdale (Mr. Collins) on 28 February 2002 Official Report, column 1534W.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much was spent by departmental special advisers on food, alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks for official entertainment purposes in each of the last five years. [46834]

Mr. Caborn: Expenditure on official hospitality by special advisers in this Department over the past three years was:

1999–2000	335.05
2000–01	146.80
2001–02[1]	218.51

[1] Provisional.

Information on earlier years is not readily available.

Free Television Licences

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many residents of Dumfries and Galloway are in receipt of free television licences; and how many residents are entitled to this benefit on age grounds. [46976]

Dr. Howells: TV Licensing, which administers the free television licence scheme for the BBC as Licensing Authority, is not able to provide geographical breakdowns of the number of free licences issued. However, estimates based on the 1991 Census indicate that there were approximately 10,700 people aged 75 or over in the constituencies of Dumfries and Galloway and Upper Nithsdale.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will award concessionary television licences to the partially-sighted. [48016]

Dr. Howells: No. The independent review panel on the future funding of the BBC, which reported in 1999, considered the concessionary arrangements but recommended the introduction only of a 50 per cent. reduction in the licence fee for registered blind people. We have implemented that recommendation but have no plans to extend the concession.

Maladministration

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what payments have been made to individuals following findings of maladministration ombudsmen with responsibility for agencies under the remit of her Department in the last 12 months; and what plans she has to review the powers to increase the level of awards that can be made. [47950]

Dr. Howells: The Department has responsibility for one executive agency, the Royal Parks Agency. No payments have been made to individuals following findings of maladministration ombudsmen with responsibility for the Royal Parks Agency in the last 12 months.

Relocation

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to relocate executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies under the remit of her Department to Scotland. [47951]

Mr. Caborn: There are no such plans at present.

Tourism

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement about the progress of the English Tourism Council's stepping stones scheme. [46914]

Dr. Howells: The stepping stones scheme is currently in its third year of operation and eight local authority districts are already participating, exceeding the target of six by the end of 2002–03. Of these eight participating districts, five (including North Devon) are in the south-west region where over 600 assessments have taken place to date.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how the new grading schemes for hotels, guest accommodation, caravan parks and self-catering accommodation introduced by the English Tourism Council are being evaluated; and if she will make a statement. [46915]

Dr. Howells: The English Tourism Council (ETC) evaluates the quality assurance schemes it has introduced in a number of ways: standards are reviewed periodically in consultation with the industry and consumers; statistics on numbers participating are compiled monthly; quarterly feedback is sought from the 22,000 participants and from the quality assessors; and the industry is also asked three times a year for its views on the assessment process. In addition, Regional Tourist Boards monitor comments and complaints about accommodation in their regions; and the ETC has commenced market research this year on changing public perceptions of accommodation quality.

The Department for Culture Media and Sport has highlighted accommodation quality as one of the most important areas of work for the ETC, who must report under its funding agreement on increased participation in the schemes, which should impact ultimately on occupancy levels.

Golf Tourism

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department is taking to promote golf clubs as part of a golf tourism strategy. [47946]

Dr. Howells: The British Tourist Authority (BTA) has developed a mini-marketing plan for golf and works closely with Wales and Scotland on their golf strategies.

The BTA's website features various aspects of golf including participation, event information, history and sports wholesalers who package golf tours to the UK. In addition, BTA is considering producing a publication specifically dedicated to golf tourism.

Public Libraries

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proportion of public libraries in the UK had public internet access by December 2001. [46650]

Dr. Howells: The £100 million lottery funded programme to connect public libraries to the internet is proceeding well and by the end of last year 67 per cent. of all UK libraries offered public internet access. The programme is expected to fulfil its target of connecting all libraries to the internet by the end of 2002.

Digital Television Website

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) unique visitors and (b) page impressions there have been for the digital television website, digitaltelevision.gov.uk [46913]

Dr. Howells: From the period of 12 October 2001 to 27 March 2002 the details are:

(a) page impressions 64,643;

(b) unique visitors 23,887.

Creative Industries

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what the (a) revenues generated and (b) employment created by the creative industries were for the financial years (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99, (iii) 1999–2000, (iv) 2000–01 and (v) 2001–02 to the most recent date for which figures are available; [46919]

(2) what has been the total change in output of the creative industries in the financial years (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000, (d) 2000–01 and (e) 2001–02 to the most recent date for which figures are available; [46921]

(3) how much the creative industries contributed to the balance of trade through exports in the financial years (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000, (d) 2000–01 and (e) 2001–02 to the most recent date for which figures are available. [46920]

Dr. Howells:

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment her Department has made of the competitiveness of the creative industries in the UK in each year since 1996–97. [46649]

Dr. Howells: My Department is not able to make an accurate assessment of the competitiveness of the creative industries as figures are not yet available from the Office for National Statistics.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on her Department's plans to improve the dissemination of statistics on the creative industries; and what progress has been made towards that aim. [46648]

Dr. Howells: In March 2001 my Department published the second Creative Industries Mapping Document, providing a measure of the economic contribution of the creative industries to the UK. This document remains relevant and is available from my Department's website at www.culture.gov.uk/creative/mapping.html.

My Department is also working closely with the Office for National Statistics (ONS) in order to develop estimates that report on the performance of the creative industries nationally. We are also working with the Regional Development Agencies (RDA) on a broad framework for the collation of statistics, including those for the creative industries, in order to provide consistency across the regions.

The Department is considering, in cooperation with other stakeholders, whether there is a need for a further mapping exercise.

Invoices

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage of invoices to the Department not in dispute were paid within 30 days or the otherwise agreed contractual terms in 2001. [47393]

Dr. Howells: 99.1 per cent. of invoices not in dispute were paid within 30 days, or agreed contractual terms, by the Department during the period January to 31 December 2001.

European Regional Development Fund

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which of her Department's projects have received finance from the European Regional Development Fund in the financial years (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98, (c) 1998–99, (d) 1999–2000, (e) 2000–01 and (f) 2001–02 to the most recent date for which figures are available. [46651]

Mr. Caborn: My Department does not administer any regeneration initiatives nor does it receive finance from the European Regional Development Fund (ERDF). However, many public bodies in the culture and leisure field, including many funded by DCMS, participate in such initiatives and, during the period in question, applicants from within the fields of tourism, culture and leisure received ERDF finance in excess of £200 million and will continue to receive funding throughout the 2000–06 programme.

Historic Sites (Worcestershire)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the sites of historic interest in Worcestershire which have received grant aid in the last five years, indicating (a) the date and (b) the amount awarded in each case. [47601]

Dr. Howells: The following sites in Worcestershire were offered grant aid from English Heritage:

Public Service Broadcasting

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received on the regional dimension to public service broadcasting; and if she will make a statement. [47932]

Dr. Howells: I have received representations from 25 hon. Members on the future of ITV regional programming. I understand that five members of the public have also raised this subject with my Department.

The Government's proposals to retain and to strengthen the regional dimension to public service broadcasting to ensure that it continues to meet the needs of different communities and cultural interests were set out in the White Paper "A New Future for Communications". The necessary provisions will be included in the forthcoming Communications Bill.

Youth Football

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received from (a) Sport England and (b) others in respect of the future funding of youth football associated with Football League clubs; and if she will make a statement. [47039]

Mr. Caborn: Nationwide Football League clubs face the prospect of reduced broadcasting revenues for the next two seasons, and it is possible that this will have consequences for the levels of funding they presently devote to youth development. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I are in regular contact with the League and the Football Association, and will discuss this issue with them in detail once the position is clearer. My Department has not received representations from Sport England on this subject.

ITV Digital

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with Granada plc and Carlton Communications plc over the future of ITV Digital; and if she will make a statement. [47041]

Dr. Howells: Over the past few weeks, I have been kept closely in touch by all sides involved in the ITV Digital negotiations. However, the decisions taken by ITV Digital are commercial decisions for them, and them alone, to take. An administrator has now been appointed and is in charge of finding a satisfactory outcome for all the parties.

Lottery Funding

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much National Lottery funding has been received by organisations within the Torbay Unitary Authority. [48196]

Mr. Caborn: Torbay has received grants from the National Lottery worth a total of £4,971,268.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she made of the suitability of including Torbay in the list of areas under the targeted Lottery initiative. [48195]

Mr. Caborn: The selection of Fair Share areas was a matter for the Community Fund and the New Opportunities Fund, based on broad criteria set by the Government. Torbay was not selected because it is not one of the 100 most deprived Local Authority Districts in England.

Gaming Machines

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what estimate her Department has made of the impact on the (a) revenues and (b) viability of registered and proprietary clubs of implementing proposals to limit jackpots for gaming machines; and if she will make a statement; [48536]

(2) what plans she has to implement proposals restricting jackpots on gaming machines in registered and proprietary clubs; and if she will make a statement. [48535]

Mr. Caborn: Consultations on the report of the Gambling Review Body established that its recommendation that registered clubs should lose their entitlement under the current law to install jackpot gaming machines would have a significant adverse impact on the revenue and viability of many. We have decided not to accept this recommendation, for the reasons set out in paragraph 4.17 of "A safe bet for success" (Cm 5397) which we laid before Parliament on 26 March, and as I explained in reply to a question from the hon. Member for Fareham on 25 March 2002, Official Report, column 549.

Gambling

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list all the proposals in A Safe Bet for Success-Modernising Britain's Gambling Laws, which will not require a change in primary legislation and for each proposal state (a) the method by which it will be implemented and (b) the date on which she expects the implementation to take place. [48379]

Mr. Caborn: Appendix B to Cm 5397 identifies which proposals require changes in primary legislation and which do not. Of the proposals in the latter category which the Appendix indicates that the Government has decided to accept, most will not be implemented in advance of primary legislation, because they involve either action by the proposed Gambling Commission which that legislation will establish, or substantial changes to the current balance of regulation which it would not be desirable to take forward ahead of the establishment of the Commission, with its new powers to supervise, monitor and enforce them.

The proposals which the Government proposed to implement in advance of primary legislation are as follows, as set out in Chapter 9 of Cm 5397.

Recommendation	Method of implementation
12	Administrative action by Gaming Board
56	Industry code of practice or Regulations under the European Communities Act 1972
73	Order under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994
77	Code of practice issued on behalf of the Gaming Board and BACTA
81	Order under the Regulatory Reform Act 2000
93	Order under the Gaming Act 1968
94	Advice from Gaming Board to licensing justices
98	Order under the Gaming Act 1968
102	Order under the Betting, Gaming and Lotteries Act 1963
134	Advice from DCMS to local authorities and pools companies

Recommendations 12 and 73 were implemented on 1 March 2002. Recommendations 93, 94, 98, 102, 118 and 134 should be implemented, subject to Parliament's approval where subordinate legislation is concerned, before the Summer Recess. I intend that the remaining recommendations should be implemented in the course of this financial year.

Television Licences

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the (a) number and (b) total cost of television licences paid for by her Department. [48334]

Dr. Howells: The DCMS core functions are in a single building and that building alone requires the single television licence that is purchased annually by the Department at a cost of £109.00.

Television Licensing

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the number of prosecutions undertaken by Television Licensing in each of the last five years, stating for each prosecution (i) whether the defendant was convicted, (ii) where convicted, the punishment the defendant received and (iii) the age of the defendant. [48373]

Dr. Howells: The available information relates to prosecutions for all offences under the Wireless Telegraphy Acts of 1949 and 1967 (though the great majority of these involve licence fee evasion) and distinguishes only between people aged under 21 and those aged 21 or over. The figures for England and Wales for each of the years from 1996 to 2000 are shown in the table.

Persons proceeded against at the magistrates' courts and found guilty and sentenced at all courts for offences under the Wireless Telegraphy Acts 1949 to 1967 (mainly television licence evasion), England and Wales 1996 to 2000[1]

				Sentence breakdown
	Proceeded against	Found guilty	Sentenced[2]	Absolute/ conditional discharge	Fine	Community sentence	Otherwise dealt with
1996	188,108	164,848	164,851	2,703	161,984	7	157
1997	92,728	76,984	76,985	1,331	75,600	16	38

2000	121,124	105,714	105,715	2,149	103,542	4	20

[1] These data are on the principal offence basis.
[2] In some years the number sentenced may exceed the number found guilty as these may include cases where a person is found guilty at the magistrates court and committed for sentence at the Crown Court, but the sentencing at the Crown Court does not take place until the following year.

Digital Television

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will publish statistics on the take up of digital television by age group. [48369]

Dr. Howells: Research commissioned by my Department into consumer attitudes towards digital television will include take-up figures for digital television by age group and is due to be published in May. We published similar research in June 2001. The Report is available on the DCMS website at http://www.digitaltelevision.gov.uk/pdfs/digtv_final_report.pdf

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on access by (a) the BBC and (b) all other broadcasters to the (i) digital terrestrial, (ii) digital satellite and (iii) digital cable television platforms in the United Kingdom. [48375]

Dr. Howells: In the White Paper "A new Future for Communications", the Government made a commitment to ensure that the public service broadcasting channels (those of the BBC, ITV, Channel 4 and Channel 5) are available on all the main platforms, both before and after switchover. The forthcoming Communications Bill will give us the opportunity to include any provisions necessary to achieve this objective. The access of other channels to the digital platforms is a commercial matter for them and the platform operators, subject to fair competition rules.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on what (a) date and (b) grounds the recent change in the affordability element of the digital switchover tests was made. [48370]

Dr. Howells: There has been no such change.

Radio and TV Licences

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list (a) the cost and (b) the number of holders of (i) the wireless licence and (ii) the TV licence in each year of their operation. [48372]

Dr. Howells: The radio licence was introduced in 1922 and the television licence in 1946. Information on the number of licences in force prior to 1947 is not readily available. The information requested is as follows.

BBC

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the criteria by which she assessed applications for BBC new services. [48368]

Dr. Howells: The criteria for assessing BBC public service proposals were published by my right hon. Friend the Member for Islington South and Finsbury (Chris Smith) and laid in the Libraries of both Houses in January 2001.

Documents

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list all the documents published by her Department since 8 June 2001, for each one stating (a) the date of publication, (b) the purpose of publication, (c) the cost of publication, (d) the number of copies produced, (e) the cover price, (f) the number of copies sold, (g) the number of copies sent after request from members of the public or interested parties and (h) the number of copies disposed of by other, specified, means. [48380]

Dr. Howells: The table sets out the documents published by my Department since 8 June 2001 with the cover price, copies produced and cost to the Department. Documents with a cover price are printed and distributed by The Stationery Office (TSO) and the number of copies produced and sold is for them.

The purpose of these publications is to provide the Department's stakeholders with information on policy developments and, where appropriate, to provide public information more generally.

Information on the number of copies of free documents sent after request from members of the public or interested parties is not held centrally.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Crime (Romford)

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the level of violent crime in Romford. [21015]

Mr. Denham: The information available relates to the borough of Havering as a whole, where there were 3,337 offences of violence recorded by the police in 2000–01. This total included 158 sexual offences and 392 robberies.

Vandalism

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what projects his Department is supporting to combat vandalism in suburban areas. [26941]

Mr. Denham: We are employing a range of measures to combat vandalism. The work of the crime and disorder partnerships, set up under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, in formulating local strategies for the reduction of crime and disorder in their area is crucial in securing local commitment to effective action against vandalism.

Closed circuit television (CCTV) is an effective way to detect and reduce vandalism. Under the crime reduction programme CCTV initiative a potential £170 million has been allocated to 683 CCTV schemes in England and Wales. We introduced neighbourhood wardens and street wardens in suburban areas where they have reduced vandalism. Anti-social Behaviour Orders (ASBOs) and Acceptable Behaviour Contracts have also been successfully employed to combat vandalism.

The Youth Justice Board has a number of schemes, which focus on the problems of criminal damage such as the Artscape-graffiti Outreach Project, the Youth Inclusion Programme and from next year the Community Payback Scheme. Funding of £13.5 million has been allocated to March 2003 for the Youth Inclusion Programme.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further guidance he intends to issue to (a) local authorities and (b) police forces to (i) deal with and (ii) reduce the numbers of instances of disorder and vandalism. [26928]

Mr. Denham: Important guidance for local crime and disorder reduction partnerships on how to deal with anti-social behaviour was issued in January last year in the form of a comprehensive toolkit posted on the Home Office Crime Reduction website which will be kept updated. The Government are also currently providing assistance to all partnerships on the drawing up of their local crime strategies, due by April 2002. Partnerships are required to address the anti-social behaviour problems in their area and have been asked to identify a named person in each local authority district to co-ordinate action on anti-social behaviour.

We also want to see partnerships make use of the full range of measures available to them, such as Anti-social Behaviour Orders (ASBOs) and Acceptable Behaviour Contracts, to deal with these problems. Our extensive review of ASBOs will be published shortly and we are currently proposing further legislative changes in order to streamline the process of applying for ASBOs and extend the circumstances in which they may be granted, to help ensure that local crime and disorder reduction partnerships make maximum use of this measure.

Robbery

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offences of robbery there were in each police force area in (a) 1998–99 and (b) 2000–01; what the percentage change between the two periods was; and if he will make a statement. [29623]

Mr. Denham: The requested information is given in the table.

We are determined to reduce the number of robberies across the country as a whole. That is why we have given five metropolitan forces, including the Metropolitan police, an additional £20 million specifically to assist their efforts in tackling robbery, and have set them the challenging target of a 14 per cent. reduction of robbery in our principal cities by March 2005. We are working with those forces, as well as progressing an extensive robbery research programme, to enable us to identify good practice in tackling robbery which we will ensure is disseminated to all forces.

A research study, "Mobile phone theft" (by Victoria Harrington and Pat Mayhew, Home Office Research Study 235) has recently been published. Based on data from those forces which noted whether a recorded robbery involved a mobile phone, the study shows that there was an increase in the proportion of robberies involving mobile phones, from about 8 per cent. in 1998–99 to about 28 per cent. in 2000–01. Also, from robberies in four police Basic Command Units in the first quarter of 2001, the study estimated that in 23 per cent. of mobile phone robberies, victims were using their phone or had it on display.

We are working with the police and the mobile phone industry to reduce mobile phone robbery, undertaking public awareness campaigns and joint tracking exercises. The phone operators are testing ways of putting stolen phones out of action. They have also agreed to improve security as they invest in new systems. We are pressing the handset manufacturers for similar commitments.

A start has been made, but more needs to be done before Britain's mobile phone system can lead the world in security. The mobile phone industry needs to show more interest in the security of phones they are selling to British consumers and, as the motor industry has done, do more to prevent their customers from becoming the victims of crime.

Nuisance Calls

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research his Department is conducting in respect of nuisance calls. [34620]

Mr. Denham: Information on nuisance calls derived from the British Crime Survey (BCS) was published in Home Office Research and Planning Unit paper no. 84 "Obscene, threatening and other troublesome telephone calls to Women in England and Wales: 1982–1992". Results from the 1982 and 1992 sweeps of the BCS indicated that 8 per cent. and 7 per cent. of women aged 16 or over had suffered from one or more obscene call in the course of 1981 and 1991 respectively. This information was derived from special questions included in the BCS for those years.

In 1998 the BCS included a computerised self-completion questionnaire on stalking. Respondents who said that they had suffered such unwanted attention and were also asked whether they had received silent phone calls from the person involved and whether they had received obscene phone calls. Findings of this analysis were published in a Home Office Research Study 210, "The extent and nature of stalking: findings from the 1998 British Crime Survey" which has been deposited in the Library.

A recent study which examined 167 protection from harassment cases provides further information though recorded accounts about the characteristics of each case and how it was processed through the Criminal Justice System. The study identified several different types of behaviours which constituted harassment, including making obscene and silent telephone calls. Findings of this analysis were published in a Home Office Research Study 203, "An evaluation of the use and effectiveness of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997" which has been deposited in the Library.

The BCS 2002 questionnaire asks respondents who use a mobile phone whether they have received in the last 12 months voice or text messages on their mobile phone which they consider offensive, or harassment.

Working Conditions and Practices

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are employed in his Department on a job share contract; and what percentage of vacant positions was advertised on this basis in the last 12 months. [35362]

Angela Eagle: Job sharing is only one of a number of alternative and flexible working patterns that employees are welcome to take up. The flexibility of the pattern is decided in conjunction with local management to suit an individuals need and the needs of their work. For example, 11 per cent. of staff work part-time in a range of ways from reduced days per week to working alternate weeks. 38 staff are currently recorded as being job sharers in the Home Office, United Kingdom Passport Service and Forensic Science Service. Information on staff in the Prison Service who are job sharers is not held centrally and could not be provided without disproportionate costs.

It is Home Office policy (including the Prison Service) to advertise jobs as being open to part-timers or job sharers unless there is an operational reason for not doing so. Information on the percentage of posts advertised to job sharers is set out in the table.

Vacancies advertised over the last 12 months to 31 December 2001

	Percentage
Home Office[1]	95.8
United Kingdom Passport Service	91.9
Prison Service	[2]—
Forensic Science Service	[3]—

[1] Period of advertising 26 April-31 December 2001.
[2] Information not available.
[3] In the Forensic Science Service (FSS) part-time work is readily available without the need to find job share partners.

We are currently establishing a database to assist staff to find job-share partners. We have also volunteered to participate in the similar Cabinet Office cross-Whitehall scheme that they are setting up.

Metropolitan Police (Retirement Age)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will permit serving Metropolitan police officers with specialist anti-terrorist-related skills to extend their service in the force beyond the age of 60 as an exceptional measure. [35808]

Mr. Denham: Under the Police Pensions Regulations the compulsory retirement age ranges from 55 for constables and sergeants to 65 for those above the superintending ranks outside the Metropolitan police area. An officer's retirement on grounds of age is already subject to flexibility in that it can be postponed by up to five years at the discretion of the chief officer or the police authority, depending on the officer's rank.

Publicity Expenditure

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the total real terms expenditure of his Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on publicity in each of the years (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000, (d) 2000–01 and (e) 2001–02 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole of the present year; and if he will break these figures down to indicate expenditure on (A) advertising and (B) press and public relations. [36174]

Angela Eagle: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Ministerial Boxes

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what means ministerial boxes are conveyed from private offices in his Department to (a) himself and (b) his Ministers; how frequently and at what expense private courier firms are employed for such a task; and which courier firms have been used for such duties. [36268]

Angela Eagle: Ministerial boxes originating from this Department are transported to Ministers' homes either by Government car or by a service provided by the Royal Mail. Where exceptional circumstances require it, a courier service may be used.

Capita Group

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the contracts that have been awarded to the Capita Group by the Department. [39348]

Angela Eagle: The list of contracts awarded to the Capita Group by the Home Department since 1997 is as follows:

Project type
Capita[1]
Designing and Managing Building Projects
Capita EC
Environment/Space Planning
Capita Business Service
Recruitment of General Managers
Capita Training

Parental Leave Directive

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the (a) financial costs and (b) benefits to his Department of the Parental Leave Directive. [42475]

Angela Eagle: Parental leave is available to all Home Office staff as one of a number of policies designed to help staff achieve their preferred balance between work and home. These include paid and unpaid maternity leave, paid paternity leave, career breaks, paid and unpaid special leave and a range of flexible and alternative working patterns. As an unpaid entitlement the costs of parental leave to the Department is minimal.

The Home Office is committed to helping staff balance their work and home life and as an employer recognises that work/life balance policies have significant business benefits including: improved recruitment and retention of staff; reduced absenteeism and a happier and therefore more productive work force.

Domestic Violence

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what domestic violence perpetrator programmes and linked partner support services are provided in the London probation area. [42660]

Beverley Hughes: The central area currently has four groups running per week and a women's support service is provided. In the north-west of London current provision is by the Domestic Violence Intervention Project, and the south-east, south-west and north-east areas are piloting the Domestic Violence Pathfinder programme delivering Duluth. The programme for perpetrators is known as 'Duluth'. It gets its title from the programme under development in Duluth in Minnesota, in the United States of America. A multi-agency programme runs in conjunction with support services to women and involves close networking with police, the Probation Service, Social Services, voluntary agencies and any other appropriate organisations. The programme is 24 weeks long and involves pre and post group work. It is currently running in West Yorkshire and London as a pathfinder project and is currently subject to an evaluation process allied to a research programme concerning the issues around domestic violence.

Speed Cameras

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many convictions for speeding were obtained as a result of evidence from speed cameras in (a) South Tyneside, (b) the north-east and (c) the United Kingdom in 2001; [39759]

(2) how many speed cameras there are in (a) South Tyneside, (b) the north-east and (c) the United Kingdom. [39758]

Mr. Denham: The available information on the number of convictions and fixed penalty notices issued for the offence of "speeding detected by camera device" for 2000 is shown in the table. Statistics for 2001 are not yet available. It is not possible from the data collected to identify South Tyneside and there are no central records to indicate the number of speed cameras in operation in England and Wales. However, the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) estimates that there are about 4,500 speeding camera sites in England and Wales. Information relating to Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland (Mrs. Liddell) and Northern Ireland (Dr. John Reid).

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals have been prosecuted as a result of speed camera evidence in each year since 1997 broken down by (a) police force area and (b) local authority area. [45587]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Information on the number of prosecutions for speeding as a result of camera evidence, by police force area, is shown in the table. Data are not available by local authority area.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how much net income police forces have received from speed camera fines in each year since 1997 broken down by police force area; [45585]

(2) what the aggregate revenue from speed camera fines has been in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) police force area and (b) local authority area. [45586]

Mr. Denham: Available information on aggregate revenue is given in the table. This shows the total number of fixed penalties and court proceedings for speeding offences detected by camera from 1997 to 2000. This information is not available by local authority area and to provide a breakdown by police force area would be possible only at disproportionate cost.

[4] Estimate based on £40 fixed penalty charge from 1997 to 2000.

All revenue from speeding offences is normally paid to Her Majesty's Treasury. But since April 2000, seven partnership areas in England and Wales have been piloting a new netting-off scheme. The partnerships comprise police forces, local authorities, highways authorities and magistrates courts. The scheme allows fixed penalty fine revenue from speed and red-light traffic cameras to be re-invested to meet the costs of camera enforcement. Money left over goes, as before, to Her Majesty's Treasury.

Set out is the amount of netted off income each of the seven police forces in the pilot scheme received, for the financial year 2000–01.

Bootlegging

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions have resulted from fuel bootlegging in each of the last five years. [45410]

Mr. Boateng: I have been asked to reply.

Customs central records do not differentiate between the type of fraud or smuggling involved in their successful prosecutions in the road fuel sector across the whole of the UK.

However, Customs do hold records centrally of the successful prosecutions for road fuel smuggling specifically in Northern Ireland and I provided these in answer to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) on 21 November 2001, Official Report, column 266W.

Sex Offenders

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to extend treatment of sex offenders in prison; [45375]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of treatment provided to convicted sex offenders. [45374]

Beverley Hughes: The Prison Service provides five versions of the sex offender treatment programme, that have been independently accredited as likely to be effective in reducing reconviction: a core programme; an extended programme (for high risk sex offenders); an adapted programme (for sex offenders with learning difficulties); a booster (for those that have completed other versions of the programme and are nearing release); and rolling (for low risk sex offenders).

The Service's present and coming targets for completions by prisoners of versions of the programme are 1,020 for the current year, 950 for 2002–03 and 1,240 for 2003–04.

Versions of the programme are currently delivered in 25 prisons; this is planned to rise to 27 prisons in 2002–03 and 28 in 2003–04.

The Prison Service studies rates of reconviction to assess the effectiveness of the programme. Matched cohorts of programme graduates and untreated offenders are compared.

Offenders included in the cohorts need to have completed their sentences and have been at liberty in the community for at least two years. It has therefore been possible to complete only one substantial study so far. In that, the treatment group was of 647 offenders treated between 1992 and 1996, and the comparison group 1,910 offenders. The study indicated reductions in treated group reconviction rates of between one and 10 per cent., depending on level of risk.

Many more studies will be needed over a much longer period before firm conclusions can safely be drawn about the efficacy of the programme. Independent assessments of aspects of the programme and of the reconviction studies will also be carried out.

Police Spending

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 19 December 2001, Official Report, column 481W, on police spending, what the average per capita spending in 2001–02 is in (a) the Thames Valley Police Force area and (b) Aylesbury Vale police area. [30131]

Mr. Denham: The gross cost of policing on an average per capita basis in the Thames Valley area in 2001–02 is estimated at £126.20. A figure at the Aylesbury Vale area level is not available.

Source for calculating the average per capita basis: The Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy Police Statistics (Estimates) 2001–02.

Drink Driving

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of breath tests resulted in arrest for drink driving in December (a) 2001 and (b) 2000. [30170]

Mr. Denham: 8.2 per cent. of screening breath tests carried out in December 2000 in England and Wales were positive or refused, compared with 7.4 per cent. in December 1999.

Statistics for 2001 will be published in the autumn.

Police Recruitment

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which applicants to join the police service are classified as recruits. [45873]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 25 March 2002]: Applicants to the police service are classified as recruits when they take up appointment with a police force.

For the purposes of the Home Office statistical bulletins on Police Service Strength, "recruits" covers officers joining the police service, including those transferring from forces outside England and Wales, but not those transferring from other forces within England and Wales.

World Cup

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his cooperation with the Governments of Japan and South Korea on their deportation processes during the World Cup finals. [43164]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 25 March 2002]: We are involved in the most extensive co-operation with the Japanese and Korean police and civil authorities in preparation for the World Cup. The police in both countries have assured us that, where individuals have been detained, they will consider prosecution prior to deportation.

Football Hooliganism

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions his Department is having with football clubs on crowd misbehaviour. [43171]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 25 March 2002]: We work closely with the police, football authorities and football clubs in order to ensure that crowd misbehaviour is addressed and offenders are identified and prosecuted. An extensive array of legislation is in place for tackling football related disorder and the Government expect the police and courts to make full use of the powers that have been placed at their disposal.

Community Wardens

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many community wardens will be employed in (a) Lancashire and (b) Chorley in the next financial year. [45928]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 25 March 2002]: Twenty-six central Government-funded Street Wardens will be employed in Lancashire in the next financial year. Ten will be in Morecambe, nine in Hyndburn, five in Preston and two in Burnley. Sixteen central Government-funded neighbourhood wardens will be employed in Lancashire in the next financial year. Six will be in Burnley, six in Skelmersdale and four in Wyre. No bid was received for central Government-funded neighbourhood or street wardens in Chorley.

Probation Service

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the business strategy and business model developed for the effective use of IT by the National Probation Service. [46016]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 25 March 2002]: "A New Choreography: an Integrated Strategy for the National Probation Service for England and Wales", published in August 2001, sets out the vision for the National Probation Service over the next three years. The information technology strategy is to design and develop a system which fully supports the business needs of the Service enabling it to meet the aims and objectives as set out in "A New Choreography".

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what resources are available to implement the National Probation Service's IT strategy; and if he will make a statement. [46017]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 25 March 2002]: For financial year 2002–03 a provisional budget of £34.65 million has been allocated to information technology within the Home Office National Probation Directorate. This figure is part funded by the recovery of £16 million from probation areas (question 254 refers).

For financial years 2003–04, 2004–05 and 2005–06 the total information technology requirement of £34 million, £35 million, and £36 million respectively will be found from the overall National Probation Service budget.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how recharging arrangements are being negotiated for the National Probation Service's IT desktop services. [46019]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The current contract with Integris centralises the cost of the information technology (IT) provision for the National Probation Service (NPS). Prior to 1 January 2002 the IT provision through the National Probation Service Information System Strategy (NPSISS) contract was met through a mixture of central service costs and area payments to the supplier for IT maintenance. The recharging arrangements for 2002–03 exist to realign the NPS budget to meet the costs where they now fall due.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made by the National Probation Service Directorate to direct human resources policies needed to attract, retain and develop staff to deliver IT capabilities. [46018]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The National Probation Directorate has recently administered an external recruitment scheme which selected nine new members of staff in key positions for the Information and Technology Group.

The recruitment and retention of IT staff in local probation areas is the responsibility of each individual local area.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if an outsourcing contract has been signed for the Probation Service's IT; and how the scope and costs of the technology upgrade has been determined. [46020]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 25 March 2002]: On 26 October 2001, following an open competition, the Home Office signed a 2 and a half year interim contract, on behalf of the National Probation Directorate, for the support and maintenance of the Information Technology infrastructure and the case record management system (CRAMS) with Integris.

An upgrade of the infrastructure forms a vital part of this contract. This technology upgrade will include the replacement of old hardware and the revision of all software to currently maintained versions. The equipment for the technology upgrade was procured via a separate competitive tender using G-CAT suppliers after an assessment had been made of market rates to ensure best value for money.

Official Visits

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the official visits within the UK outside London made by each Minister in his Department in 2001, giving for each (a) the origin and destination and (b) the mode of travel used; and what guidance is provided to Ministers in his Department on choice of mode of travel for official visits. [38191]

Angela Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State on 6 March 2002, Official Report, column 421W.

Criminal Records Bureau

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many umbrella bodies have registered with the Criminal Records Bureau; how many of them are open to take registrations from outside their own membership; and if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of arrangements in covering the registration need of the voluntary sector. [45810]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 26 March 2002]: We have been determined that employers and voluntary organisations wishing to use the service to be provided by the Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) will have a ready means of access. To meet the needs of those employers and organisations which do not wish to register with the Bureau in their own right, we have encouraged others to consider acting on their behalf, as umbrella bodies, and we shall continue to do so. Up to 21 March 2002, a total of 704 umbrella bodies had registered with the CRB. Of these, 419 organisations had indicated that they are prepared to countersign applications from employers or organisations outside their own circle or sector. A list is available from the CRB on request, and information is also available on the CRB website, www.disclosure.gov.uk.

Prison Population

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason the data for women are not disaggregated in Table 6 of the Prison Population Brief for England and Wales, January 2002; and if he will make a statement. [46500]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 26 March 2002]: Table six of the Prison Population Brief deals with receptions into prison establishments. Female prisoners currently account for 7.8 per cent. of all receptions into prisons and 5.9 per cent. of the total prison population. For this reason we have up to now stated the total number of female receptions while providing a more detailed analysis of the male population.

However, the data are readily available and I have arranged for future briefs to include more analysis of the data on women.

Drug Treatment and Testing Orders

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drug treatment and testing orders have so far been issued. [47232]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Between 1 October 2000, when the Drug Treatment and Testing Orders (DTTO) was rolled-out to courts in England and Wales, and 31 January 2002, which is the latest month for which complete figures are available, 5,188 Orders were made.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the PSA target to increase by 10 per cent. the number of offenders dealt with for supply offences in respect of Class A drugs was met. [47403]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth [holding answer 9 April 2002]: Data on seizures and offenders is published annually in the Home Office statistical bulletin: "Drug Seizure and Offender Statistics, United Kingdom". Figures are by calendar year. Data for the year 1999 by comparison to 1998 were published in 2001.

This data show that the number of persons dealt with for supply offences (possession with intent to supply unlawfully, unlawful supply and import/export) involving class A drugs rose by 17.5 per cent. between 1998 and 1999, well above the target of 10 per cent. In fact subsequent data received by the Home Office after publication of the statistics, indicates that the increase was greater still—around 19.8 per cent. These revised figures will be published in the next edition of the bulletin for the year 2000 which will be published shortly.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of whether the PSA target for the rate of positive results from mandatory random drugs tests will be met by March. [47223]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The Service Delivery Agreement (SDA) target set following Spending Review 2000 was to reduce the rate of positive results from random mandatory drug tests (MDT) from 20 per cent. in 1998–99 to 10 per cent. by 31 March 2004.

MDT data are collected and reported monthly. The interim target set for achievement by 31 March 2002 was a rate of positive results of 12 per cent. The latest available year to date figures run to the end of February 2002 and show a positive rate of 11.5 per cent. Data for the last three months are provisional.

The target that the Prison Service has been set for achievement by 31 March 2003 is a rate of positive results of 10 per cent. or lower, which brings forward the SDA target by one year.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of whether the PSA target of a reduction of three percentage points in the proportion of arrestees testing positive for heroin and/or cocaine/crack will be met by December. [47402]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The commitment "to achieve a reduction of three percentage points in the proportion of arrestees testing positive for heroin and/or cocaine/crack from the 1999–2000 half-baseline" is a drugs strategy target for 2002 under the Communities objective, as set out in the United Kingdom Anti-drugs Co-ordinator's Second National Plan.

Information on progress against this target, derived from data from the New English and Welsh Arrestee Drug Abuse Monitoring (NEW-ADAM) research programme, will not be available until the autumn of 2002.

The target contributes, with other measures, towards delivery of the current Public Service Agreement (PSA) target "to reduce levels of repeat offending among drug misusing offenders by 25 per cent. by 2005 (and by 50 per cent. by 2008)".

We are currently reviewing the drugs strategy targets and progress on them, to ensure we still have the right balance and focus.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the PSA target to increase class A drugs prevented and seized by 10 per cent. has been met. [47235]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Data on seizures and offenders is published annually in the Home Office statistical bulletin: "Drug Seizure and Offender Statistics, United Kingdom". Figures are by calendar year. Data for the year 1999 by comparison to 1998 were published in 2001.

The data published in 2001 showed that the number of seizures within the United Kingdom involving class A drugs increased by 4.3 per cent. in 1999, against the target set of 10 per cent. However, subsequent data received by the Home Office after publication indicated that the number of seizures within the United Kingdom involving class A drugs had in fact increased by 7.3 per cent. This revised figure will be published in the next edition of the bulletin for the year 2000, which will be published shortly.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of whether the PSA target that all police services should operate face-to-face referral schemes covering all custody suites will be met by March. [47401]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Face-to-face arrest referral schemes were operating in 41 out of 43 police forces as at end February with an estimated 95 per cent. coverage of custody suites by arrest referral workers. These were funded by the Crime Reduction Programme, under the Joint Funding Initiative. All forces will be operating face-to-face arrest referral schemes by the end of April 2002.

Young Offenders (Sentencing)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of whether the time from arrest of persistent young offenders to their sentencing will be down to 71 days by March. [47408]

Beverley Hughes: In 1996, dealing with a persistent young offender took an average of 142 days. We have reached our target of halving this to 71 days. In the last two quarters the number of days was 70 and 68 respectively. This shows what can be achieved with good local and national co-ordination and a determined focus on achieving the objective. We will continue our work to ensure that this progress is maintained.

Entertainment Costs

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent by Ministers in his Department on food, alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks for entertainment purposes in each of the last five years. [47056]

Mr. Blunkett: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Catering Services

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost was of (a) in-house canteen and (b) other catering services provided by his Department in each of the last four years. [38915]

Angela Eagle: The following subsidy costs were paid for the Home Office's main central London buildings for the last four financial years.

Costs for catering subsidy

2001–02	218
2000–01	229
1998–99	161

The costs are expected to reduce to £180,000 in 2002–03.

Electronic Tagging

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what performance penalties have been imposed on contractors providing electronic monitoring services in the last 12 months; and for each occasion what the (a) reason for and (b) amount of the penalty was. [40027]

Beverley Hughes: In the 12 months from February 2001 to January 2002, a total of £141,286.70 was deducted from the payments made to the electronic monitoring contractors in respect of performance measures. The performance measurement system assesses performance across a range of indicators including response times for installing and removing equipment, and making telephone calls and visits in respect of alleged breaches of the curfew requirement.

Police Pay (Advertisements)

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost was of the advertisements in national newspapers relating to his police pay proposals. [39689]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 1 March 2002]: The advertising cost was £30,002, which included both production and media costs.

Police Pensions

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of each local authority's police budget (a) was accounted for by police pensions in 1997 and (b) will be accounted for by police pensions in (i) 2002 and (ii) 2008. [41689]

Mr. Denham: Figures for police pensions as a proportion of net expenditure in 1997–98 are set out in the table. Figures for 2002–03 and 2008–09 are not available.

Police Candidates

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many approved police candidates are awaiting their training start date; and if he will make a statement. [41597]

Mr. Denham: Records are not held centrally for police forces who send their recruits to National Police Training. However, there is no reported backlog of approved candidates waiting to start their training.

The Metropolitan police has reported that there are no specific delays in successful candidates being assigned to training courses.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis about intervention in the operational independence of the Metropolitan Police Force; and if he will make a statement. [41613]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 8 March 2002]: My right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary and the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis, (Sir John Stevens) meet regularly, both formally and informally to discuss a range of issues relating to policing in London.

Special Constables

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many special constables were in service in each police force area in (a) March 1997 and (b) March 2001; and if he will make a statement. [41615]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 8 March 2002]: The number of serving special constables in each police force area in March 1997 and March 2001 are set out in the table:

The Government are committed to increasing the size of the Special Constabulary and is working on a number of options designed to achieve this. These include improvements to the recruitment, training, conditions, management and deployment of specials—focusing their role on intelligence-led, high visibility patrolling and local crime reduction initiatives.

Women Prisoners

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision is made for mothers who are in prison to have regular access to their children. [43540]

Beverley Hughes: The Prison Service provides the necessary facilities for mothers in prison to ensure that they can sustain a relationship with their children, including regular access. Many of these facilities are available to both male and female prisoners, but have a particular benefit to those that are mothers.

On their initial reception at an establishment, women are given a phonecard at the prison's expense or a free telephone call so that they can immediately let their families know their whereabouts. Subsequently they are allowed to purchase phonecards from the prison shop to maintain that contact. Every woman is able to send a free letter on arrival at an establishment and subsequently is allowed to send a letter at the prison's expense every two weeks. Prison staff can assist prisoners in dealing with these letters.

Visits and family contact are encouraged and every effort is made to emphasise the role that can be played by the prisoner in parenting and sharing the responsibility for the family in general. Governors often provide extra facilities for children's visits and, where resources allow, find new ways in which they can assist prisoners to maintain links with their families. For example, where staffing resources permit, some establishments hold family days where children can visit their mothers for a whole day, share meals and participate in other structured activities for families, for example in the gymnasium or education areas.

In certain cases, families may apply for financial assistance to visit their relatives in prison through the services offered by the Assisted Prison Visits Unit.

Prisoners are also enabled to maintain family ties through Release on Temporary Licence. Prisoners may be released on resettlement licence once they have served the requisite period of their sentence and passed a risk assessment. Resettlement leave is usually overnight and can be of up to five days' duration plus travelling time. Prisoners can also be released on compassionate licence. For example, a mother may be granted a compassionate licence to visit her child if the child is unable to visit her.

Mothers are allowed to have their babies with them in prison and at present, there are 64 places spread between four prisons in specialist Mother and Baby Units. There are plans for four more units. The purpose of a Mother and Baby Unit is to enable the mother/baby relationship to develop while safeguarding and promoting the child's welfare. There is an established procedure of admissions boards, assessment and review, involving outside experts. Throughout the whole process the best interests of the child is the guiding principle.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women prisoners (a) have committed suicide in the last year and (b) are on suicide watch. [43538]

Beverley Hughes: In the year 2001 there were a total of six self-inflicted deaths by women.

Her Majesty's Prison Service does not collect data specifically on "suicide watch". If a prisoner is considered at risk of suicide or any form of self-injury a form called an F2052SH is opened. This form initiates a sequence of events to make sure the inmate is cared for. This includes ensuring the prisoner is engaged in conversation at regular intervals, and holding individual case reviews in consultation with health care and other staff. The form remains open until the prisoner appears to coping satisfactorily.

The table shows the total number of F2052SH forms raised in 2001 for female prisoners and the length of time the form was open.

	Number
Under 1 week	1,876
1 to 2 weeks	1,092
2 to 4 weeks	837
Over 4 weeks	912

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of women prisoners were diagnosed with mental health problems in the last 12 months for which figures are available; and what provision is made available for mental healthcare in women's prisons. [43556]

Beverley Hughes: This information is not available in the form requested. A survey of mental ill health in the prison population of England and Wales, was undertaken by the Office for National Statistics in 1997. Some 96 per cent. of remanded and 90 per cent. of sentenced women prisoners showed evidence of at least one of the five mental disorders considered in the survey (personality disorder, psychosis, neurosis, alcohol misuse and drug dependence).

Women prisoners needing in-patient treatment for mental disorder may be transferred to psychiatric hospitals. The care and treatment of prisoners with mental health problems is shared between the Prison Service and the national health service (NHS). Our plans for improving mental health services for prisoners, including the development of NHS in-reach services in the 70 or so prisons with the greatest mental health need, were set out in "Changing the Outlook. A Strategy for Developing and Modernising Mental Health Services in Prisons", which was published in December 2001. I am arranging for copies to be placed in the Library. The text of the document is also available on the prison health section of the Department of Health website at www.doh.gov.uk/prisonhealth. Since the strategy document was published it has been announced that NHS in-reach services will be established in 25 more prisons, including three for women, during 2002–03.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of the female population is in prison (a) in the UK and (b) in other EU countries. [43537]

Beverley Hughes: The female prison population in England and Wales on 31 January 2002 was 4,056. This was 0.019 per cent. of the general female population aged 15 and over in England and Wales (21.9 Million). Data for Scotland and Northern Ireland are not held centrally.

The female prison and general population data for other European Union (EU) countries is given for the latest available dates.

	General female population aged 15 and over	Female prison population	Percentage

Dangerous Weapons

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions there were for possession of dangerous weapons in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [43416]

Beverley Hughes: The available information for 1999 and 2000 is contained in the table and relates to convictions for offences of possession of offensive weapons, knives, firearms or explosives.

Information on court proceedings for 2001 will be available in the autumn.

[1] Figures provided are on the principal offence basis.
[2] Staffordshire police force were only able to submit sample data for persons proceeded against and convicted in the magistrates courts for the year 2000. Although sufficient to estimate higher orders of data these data are not robust at a detailed level and have been excluded from this table.
[3] For the purposes of recording offences, firearms are divided into the following three groups:
Group I—All firearms etc. other than those described in Group II and III.
Group II-Shot guns as defined in section 1(3)(1) of the Act.
Group III—Air weapons as defined in section 1(3)(b) of the Act.

Territorial Forces

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many members of staff in his Department are members of the territorial forces; and if he has a strategy to encourage members of staff to become members of the territorial forces. [44075]

Angela Eagle: The information requested is not held centrally.

Staff in the Home Office (including the Prison Service) who are members of, or who intend to join, the reserve forces are granted up to eight days special leave for the purpose.

The Home Office is the lead Government Department for the active community initiative. Staff can take paid leave for volunteering in certain public capacities (e.g. school governors up to six days, magistrates up to 18 days). Staff can also take up to five days paid leave a year for any other voluntary activity.

A Volunteering Manager has recently been appointed, seconded from the voluntary sector, actively to promote volunteering among Home Office staff, ensure that a wide range of opportunities is available, monitor participation and evaluate the benefits to the individual and the Department.

Road Traffic Penalties

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to bring forward proposals arising from the road traffic penalties review. [43859]

Mr. Denham: We are currently in the process of formulating the Government's response to the consultation exercise on road traffic penalties. We hope to publish this soon.

This report has taken some time to complete due to the high number of responses we received. We have also been waiting for the outcome of the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions commissioned research project into the law on dangerous driving by the Transport Research Laboratory. The publication of this report was delayed until January 2002 and we are now considering its findings.

Sonja Ojerholm

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, in the case of the appeal lodged by Sonja Ojerholm against the refusal of permanent settlement in the UK, he will state the date on which the first copy of the appeal papers was dispatched by the British Consulate General in Los Angeles and received by his Department, the date on which the second copy of the appeal papers was dispatched by the British Consulate and received by his Department and the date his Department submitted the explanatory statement to the Appellate Authority. [44231]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 18 March 2002]: The appeal papers were first dispatched by the British Consulate in Los Angeles on 7 September 2001. These papers were received by the Home Office on 6 November 2001, but were misfiled. A second copy of the appeal papers was faxed by the British Consulate on 14 January 2002. The case is now awaiting the production of an explanatory statement.

Prison Officers

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he defines prison officers as members of the emergency services. [44422]

Beverley Hughes: The prison service is defined as a discipline service, not an emergency service. Emergency service status is reserved for those services available to respond to emergency 999 calls.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what London allowance is paid to prison officers working at London prisons. [44623]

Beverley Hughes: London allowance is paid by way of a local pay allowance to all Prison Service staff at sites in London and around the south-east. The annual rates payable from 1 January 2002 at the following sites are:

£3,500 rate—Brixton, Wandsworth, Holloway, Pentonville, Wormwood Scrubs, Feltham, Huntercombe, Headquarters Westminster.

£2,300 rate—Belmarsh, Latchmere House, Downview, Highdown, Send, The Mount, Coldingley, Aylesbury, Headquarters Croydon.

£1,000 rate—Reading, Woodhill, Bullingdon, Grendon/Spring Hill, Chelmsford, Bullwood Hall and Bedford.

Wandsworth Prison

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) plans he has and (b) funding has been allocated for the refurbishment and rebuilding of E Wing at Wandsworth prison. [44634]

Beverley Hughes: E wing at Wandsworth prison is included in the Prison Service's Safer Cell Programme and the work on site was funded and planned to start this September. Owing to population pressures at the prison, and across the penal estate, this work is to be held in abeyance temporarily to enable E wing to remain in use. There is, however, to be no reduction on the focus of Wandsworth prison as one of the five safer local pilot sites. A re-ordering of the overall programme will result in work being carried out on reception first, then on health care with the work to E Wing following later. Should the population pressures still be such that the capital work in E Wing cannot go forward, some safer custody initiatives will still be undertaken.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total prison budget is for Wandsworth prison in the current year; and what total allocated funding has been made available to the prison in each of the last five years. [44632]

Beverley Hughes: The present budget for Wandsworth prison for the financial year 2001–02, which is expressed in resource accounting terms, is for £24.184 million resource and £0.204 million capital spending within Departmental Expenditure Limits.

The final budgets for the previous five years, which were allocated as cash budgets, were:

£ million

	Current	Capital	Total
1996–97	18.850	0.165	19.015
1997–98	19.984	0.339	20.323
1998–99	21.627	0.194	21.821
1999–2000	22.397	0.294	22.691
2000–01	22.434	0.113	22.547

The capital budgets do not include major capital investment projects undertaken during this period for the refurbishment or replacement of existing facilities, which have been funded through the central building programme.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many vacancies there are for prison officers in Wandsworth Prison; and if he will make a statement. [44631]

Beverley Hughes: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 14 March 2002, Official Report, column 1223W.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what arrangements have been made for local authorities to be compensated for additional costs incurred as a result of the announcement of possible sites for accommodation centres; [44573]

(2) what additional resources are given to local authorities to meet additional calls on their services resulting from the presence of asylum seekers. [44572]

Angela Eagle: We expect that, nationally, accommodation centres will reduce the burden on local authorities due to the range of facilities provided on site. This includes education for children and adults, and primary healthcare facilities. We will, however, take funding considerations into account as we continue to develop our policy.

Driving Offences

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been in each of the last five years for offences of causing (a) dangerous and (b) careless driving on motorways. [44653]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 19 March 2002]: Information on prosecutions collected centrally does not distinguish the classification of road on which the offence took place.

Criminal Damage

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost has been of criminal damage to his Department's buildings in each of the last four years. [44850]

Angela Eagle: Central records of the occurrences or cost of criminal damage to the Home Office buildings are not kept and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Creche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what creche facilities are provided by his Department; and at what cost. [44871]

Angela Eagle: The Department provides 146 nursery places for children under the age of five years. These places are available to Home Office staff (including the agencies) at a variety of locations. In addition to these facilities the Forensic Science Service runs a Childcare Support Scheme which provides staff with the opportunity to receive a contribution towards professional child care.

In addition around 1,250 days of school holiday provision are provided throughout the Department in the form of play schemes for children aged between five and 12 years.

These arrangements involve a subsidy to the parent of up to 50 per cent. of the contractual running costs depending on local circumstances. The cost to the Department for providing these facilities is approximately £435,000 per year, depending on take up of the places available.

Design Champion

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 14 March 2002, Official Report, column 1223W, on the design champion, which two projects within the Department's remit the Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, my hon. Friend the Member for Wallasey (Angela Eagle), sponsored in her role as the Department's design champion. [45006]

Angela Eagle: Officials are currently working on an action plan to deliver the Home Office commitment to my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's Better Public Buildings Initiative. Selection of projects to sponsor is a matter currently under consideration, and I will make these known in the very near future.

Irish Terrorist Murders

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress in the police investigations into the murders of (a) Airey Neave MP and (b) Ian Gow MP. [44331]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 20 March 2002]: The investigation into any crime is, in the first instance a matter for the Chief Constable/Commissioner of the force concerned. I understand, however, that up to now there has been no firm evidence to establish responsibility for these murders. Should any new information or intelligence be received then this will be investigated immediately.

Correspondence

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date his Department sent to the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs correspondence from the hon. Member for Aylesbury dated 6 September 2001 (ref. PO 17699/1). [45142]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 21 March 2002]: Departmental records show that this correspondence was sent to the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for a reply on 10 October 2001.

West Mercia Police

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many new recruits to West Mercia police transferred from other police forces in (a) 1998, (b) 1999, (c) 2000 and (d) 2001. [48292]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The information has been provided by the Chief Constable and is for each calendar year.

Year[1]	Number of transfers from other police forces
1999	0
2000	24
2001	52

[1] Figures are for period 1 January to 31 December.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Small Business

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the sources of regulations that affect small business. [36972]

Nigel Griffiths: United Kingdom, European Union and local government legislation are the main sources of regulation that affect small business. There are also a significant number of regulations that come from outside Government, for example from professional bodies and institutions.

Motor Sport

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what support the Government are giving to the motor sport industry in the current financial year; and if she will make a statement; [44775]

(2) which individuals in the UK motor sport industry have had discussions with her Department about possible Government financial assistance; [44785]

(3) on what grounds the UK motor sport industry qualifies for Government assistance; and if she will make a statement; [44774]

(4) what financial assistance has been provided to the UK motor sport industry in each of the last 20 years. [44786]

Ms Hewitt: DTI has been involved in discussions with the Motorsport Industry Association, several Regional Development Agencies and industry on an industry-led performance engineering and motorsport strategy.

The group is examining plans to develop a motorsport and performance engineering cluster development programme, based on organising business networking and education and skills events and activities.

There has been no direct funding of the motorsport industry in this financial year or in previous years. Companies in the motorsport industry (which primarily comprises a range of niche engineering SMEs) are subject to the same criteria as companies in other sectors to qualify for any form of Government support.

MOX Fuel

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what type of processing BNFL plans to undertake on the faulty MOX fuel supplied to Japan. [45470]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 26 March 2002]: The fuel will be placed in a storage pond at Sellafield. BNFL has yet to decide finally what to do with the fuel. Whatever it decides will be in accordance with all necessary regulatory approvals.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will ensure that there are no additional transports of radioactive material to Sellafield before October 2002, with particular reference to the return of the faulty MOX fuel which BNFL supplied to Japan. [45471]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 26 March 2002]: No. It is a matter of public knowledge that there will continue to be routine transports to Sellafield of spent fuel from Europe in fulfilment of existing reprocessing contracts and also that BNFL aims to return to Sellafield the MOX fuel currently at Takahama in Japan as soon as practicable—possibly during the course of this year. The Government has made this position clear both to the Irish Government and to the International Tribunal on the Law of the Sea. These transports do not take place as a consequence of the commissioning and operation of the Sellafield MOX Plant.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the necessary domestic regulatory approvals are which British Nuclear Fuels must obtain before it can return the MOX fuel it has supplied to Japan in respect of which data had been falsified; and whether these approvals have been granted. [45469]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 26 March 2002]: BNFL must obtain the approval of the Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions for the shipment and the transport package in which the fuel will be transported; the Health and Safety Executive's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate must be satisfied with the safety of BNFL's arrangements for the receipt, handling and storage of the fuel on the Sellafield site. BNFL has satisfied these requirements. The Office for Civil Nuclear Security (OCNS) must approve the arrangements for the security of the fuel in transport and its security once received at Sellafield. OCNS has approved the security arrangements for the fuel once received at the Sellafield site. The arrangements for the security of the fuel in transport are subject to ongoing consultation between BNFL and OCNS and transport will not commence until OCNS has granted formal regulatory approval for all of the detailed security plans.

Sellafield

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent report she has received in respect of the state of (a) concrete and (b) steel structures at the reactor at Sellafield where the fire took place in 1957. [47036]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has not received any recent reports about the concrete or steel structures in Windscale Pile One.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what response she has received from the Atomic Energy Authority, regarding the review which has been undertaken in respect of the reactor at Sellafield where the fire took place in 1957. [47035]

Mr. Wilson: The United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority has initiated a comprehensive technical review of the second stage decommissioning of Windscale Pile One. This review is on-going, and is likely to take several years to complete. UKAEA and the regulator, the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate of the HSE, will need to be satisfied with the final proposal for decommissioning before the project progresses and will ensure the reactor remains in a safe and stable condition throughout.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what efforts have been made towards establishing a decommissioning strategy for the reactor known as Pile 2 reactor at Sellafield. [47034]

Mr. Wilson: All the fuel was removed from the Windscale Pile Two reactor soon after it was shut down in 1957. Since then it has been maintained in a safe and passive state of care and maintenance, pending decommissioning and dismantling at a later stage.

The United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority is currently discussing a strategy for the future management of Pile Two with the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate of the HSE. The current plan is to decommission and dismantle the reactor in 2040–50.

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she will establish a liabilities management agency to manage the closing down and decommissioning of old nuclear power stations. [47045]

Mr. Wilson: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry made clear in her statement to the House on 28 November 2001, Official Report, column 990, the establishment of the liabilities management authority (LMA) will require primary legislation. A Bill will be brought forward as soon as parliamentary time allows.

Nuclear Safety

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will ask Her Majesty's Chief Nuclear Inspector to review the adequacy of the nuclear installations inspectorate's safety assessment principles numbers 126 and 127 in respect of aircraft crashes. [46197]

Mr. Wilson: No. HSE keeps its safety assessment principles for nuclear plants under review as a matter of course. These principles provide a robust framework for regulatory decisions by the HSE's nuclear installations inspectorate (NII). NII's regulatory assessments also take into account current relevant knowledge.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent funding her Department has provided to the International Atomic Energy Agency's programme to combat nuclear terrorism and protect nuclear materials; what additional resources have been made available to strengthen physical protection measures at United Kingdom nuclear facilities since 11 September 2001; and if she will make a statement on the work done by the International Physical Protection Advisory Service. [46196]

Mr. Wilson: On 18 March 2002, the UK Governor announced at the IAEA Board of Governors meeting a £250,000 voluntary contribution to the IAEA's Protection Against Nuclear Terrorism fund.

No additional resources have been made available to the UK nuclear industry to strengthen physical protection measures at civil nuclear sites since 11 September 2001. Costs for security are met by the site licensees.

The IAEA's International Physical Protection Advisory Service (IPPAS) provides member states with advice on their legal and regulatory infrastructure and the implementation of physical protection arrangements. At the request of an IAEA member state, the IAEA convenes an international team of specialists experienced in the physical protection of nuclear material to review the requesting member state's physical protection system and compare it to international guidelines and internationally recognised best practices. Based on this review, the team provides the member state, in confidence, with recommendations for improvements and recognises current good practices already instituted by that State. IPPAS missions have been conducted in eastern/central Europe, Africa, South America and SE Asia. The UK has led three of these missions and participated in a number of others.

Vickers OMC

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what powers the Government have to prevent Vickers Defence Systems' South African subsidiary Vickers OMC from entering into a joint venture with Indian company Tata Engineering to produce Casspir armoured personnel carriers in India. [40285]

Mr. Wilson: The Casspir mine protected vehicle is a product of Vickers OMC of South Africa. Any proposed joint venture to produce the vehicle in India is a matter for the South African and Indian Governments.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she will answer the written parliamentary question from the hon. Member for Banbury of 27 February on Vickers Defence Systems' South African subsidiary. [46646]

Mr. Wilson: I have replied today.

Cluster Munitions

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what end-use documentation was provided with the export licence application from Hunting Engineering for the export of the BL755 cluster munitions (Batch No. 82529); and if she will make a statement on discussions her Department has had with the manufacturer and the Government in the original country of destination regarding the (a) diversion and (b) re-export of the original transfer to Ethiopia. [46149]

Nigel Griffiths: Information on end use documentation provided in support of an export licence application is confidential and exempt from disclosure under Part 2, Sections 1, 13 and 14 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

The Department of Trade & Industry's Export Control Organisation maintains regular contact with exporters on a range of export control issues. Discussions with individual exporters on such issues are confidential and exempt from disclosure under Part 2, Sections 1, 13 and 14 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

No discussions with overseas Governments have as yet taken place with regard to their possible re-export of this particular item, since it is not yet clear whether any country might have re-exported these items to Ethiopia.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what export licences were granted between 1972 and 1989 for the export of BL755 cluster munitions (Batch No. 62529); and if she will provide the (a) number of cluster munitions exported, (b) category codes, and (c) final end-use destination; [46154]

(2) what export licences were granted between 1972 and 1989 for the export of cluster munitions; and if she will provide (a) the number of cluster munitions exported, (b) category codes and (c) final end-use destination; [46159]

(3) what export licences were granted for the export of BL755 cluster munitions to Ethiopia between 1972 and 1989; and if she will provide the (a) number of cluster munitions exported, (b) category codes and (c) final end-use destination; [46151]

(4) what export licences were granted for the export of BL755 cluster munitions to Israel between 1972 and 1989; and if she will provide the (a) number of cluster munitions exported, (b) category codes and (c) final end-use destination; [46153]

(5) what export licences were granted between 1972 and 1989 for the export of BL755 cluster munitions; and if she will provide the (a) number of cluster munitions exported, (b) category codes and (c) final end-use destination. [46152]

Nigel Griffiths: Previous administrations have not considered it appropriate to publish information on individual licensing decisions. This information is not held centrally, and a manual search of all the case files would incur disproportionate cost.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if an export licence is required for the refurbishment, and subsequent re-export, of cluster munitions. [46253]

Nigel Griffiths: An export licence is required from the Department of Trade and Industry's Export Control Organisation to export cluster munitions, controlled under entries ML3 and ML4 in Part III of Schedule 1 of the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, as amended, from the UK.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will describe the end-use procedures in place to monitor and prevent the re-export and proliferation of British supplied cluster munitions. [46158]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

There are no end-use controls applied specifically to exports of this equipment. Our overseas posts have standing instructions to report on allegations of misuse of any UK-origin defence equipment to take into account in the licensing process. We focus our efforts on assessment of potential end-use at the export licensing stage. Carrying out effective risk assessment on end-users before making the export licensing decision is the surest way to prevent UK arms falling into the wrong hands. We will not issue an export licence if there is a clear risk that the equipment for export could be used for internal repression or international aggression, or where there is an unacceptable risk of diversion to an undesirable end-user.

In determining whether any such risk exists, we take into account all reliable information on proposed end-use and end-users of potential concern, including reporting from our overseas posts, other countries and non-governmental organisations. We are pursuing improved information sharing with like-minded countries through the EU and the Wassenaar Arrangement.

The Government remain committed to carrying out end-use monitoring in those circumstances where this will genuinely add value to our efforts to minimise the risk of misuse and diversion and where such monitoring is practicable. The Government have the legal power to revoke export licences in the event of substantive misuse or diversion.

Administration Procedure

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in how many cases the administration procedure was initiated by (a) company directors and (b) creditors in (i) 1998, (ii) 1999, (iii) 2000 and (iv) 2001. [44997]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 25 March 2002]: This information is not available. Administration is an insolvency procedure which is initiated by the presentation of a petition to court. The requirements for information regarding the company's financial affairs and prospects in support of such a petition mean that very few are presented other than by the company concerned.

Broadband

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assistance is being received from the EU in pursuit of expanded broadband access in the UK. [45312]

Mr. Alexander: The Lisbon Summit on Economic Reform in 2000 launched work on the eEurope Action Plan, which reprioritises all EU and national policies, assistance and support, in order to help increase access to the internet. The European Council meeting in Barcelona on 15–16 March concluded that the next phase of the eEurope strategy should give priority to the widespread availability of broadband networks throughout the EU. The ways in which the EU and the member states can support and assist this objective in the period to 2005 will be set out in a new eEurope Action Plan, to be presented to the Seville European Council in June.

The following websites of the European Commission set out the activities covered by the eEurope Action Plan, and list sources of EU assistance for information and communications technology:

http://www.europa.eu.int/informationsociety/eeurope/indexen.htm

http://europa.eu.int/informationsociety/programmes/indexen.htm

World Bank

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the consequences for British international investors of the decision of the World Bank's Ad Hoc Committee to uphold the arbitration award of the International Centre for the Settlement of Investment Disputes in favour of WENA Hotels against the Government of Egypt; and if she will make a statement. [39722]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 12 March 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on Tuesday 12 March 2002, Official Report, column 869W.

General Agreement on Trade in Services

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what meetings (a) she and (b) her officials attended, and which meetings are scheduled, for discussion of GATS. [48618]

Ms Hewitt: My ministerial colleagues and I and my officials regularly meet with a wide range of organisations (NGOs, trade unions, business, academics, the European Commission, other EU member states, other WTO Members, intergovernmental organisations and others) at which the current World Trade Organisation negotiations under the General Agreement on Trade in Services are often discussed.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what services the United Kingdom (a) as part of the European Union and (b) unilaterally will be requesting from other states under the World Trade Organisation's General Agreement on Trade in Services. [47564]

Ms Hewitt: The United Kingdom negotiates in the World Trade Organisation as part of the European Union. Liberalisation requests are still being formulated. The EU's broad objectives are set out in negotiating proposals already tabled in the WTO and available publicly.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the commitments already made under the World Trade Organisation's General Agreement on Trade in Services. [47418]

Ms Hewitt: Commitments already made by WTO members under the General Agreement on Trade in Services generally reflect, or are less than, the existing levels of market access prevailing at the time of the conclusion of the Uruguay Round. The United Kingdom maintains very few restrictions in its GATS schedule of commitments.

The full range of GATS commitments can be found on the WTO website at www.wto.org/english/tratop_e/serv_e/serv_commitments_e.htm.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how she estimates the full implementation of the World Trade Organisation's General Agreement on Trade in Services will affect public services in the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement. [47417]

Ms Hewitt: The General Agreement on Trade in Services permits World Trade Organisation members to define and maintain their own public services, and does not require them to make liberalising commitments where they choose not to.

Miners' Pensions

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if an asset liability study has been carried out by (a) the Mineworkers Pension Schemes and (b) the British Coal Staff Superannuation Scheme. [48301]

Mr. Wilson: Yes. The Trustees of both schemes commissioned asset and liability modelling studies last year.

Miners' Compensation

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to her answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 671W, on miners' compensation, what performance and quality targets are given to Healthcall to secure delivery of accurate reports within acceptable time scales. [48035]

Mr. Wilson: Healthcall should provide a fit for purpose report within 28 days of an assessment.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how she will ensure that claims for special damages from mineworkers suffering from vibration white finger are settled rapidly. [47972]

Mr. Wilson: The main outstanding issue concerns claims for "services" which compensates those who need additional assistance in carrying out household tasks. The pilot to progress these claims has been completed and the Department is currently working closely with the claimants' solicitors in reviewing the results. All parties concerned are interested in settling claims as soon as possible.

Multilateral Environmental Agreements

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how existing multilateral environmental agreements will be incorporated into the new trade round. [48621]

Ms Hewitt: Under paragraph 31 of the Doha Ministerial Declaration, WTO Members agree to negotiations on the relationship between existing WTO rules and specific trade obligations set out in multilateral environmental agreements (MEAs) and to procedures for regular information exchange between MEA Secretariats and the relevant WTO Committees. These negotiations will take place in the WTO Committee on Trade and Environment meeting in special session.

The EU tabled a paper exploring this important issue at the first meeting of the Committee on Trade and Environment since Doha several weeks ago. This will shortly be available on the WTO website at www.wto.org

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what meetings she has had with (a) DEFRA and (b) the Sustainable Development Commission to discuss the impact of multilateral environmental agreements on current trade negotiations. [48620]

Ms Hewitt: I liaised closely with the Minister of State for Environment on this issue during the fourth Ministerial meeting in Doha last November and my Department works very closely with all interested Departments, particularly DEFRA on the relationship between multilateral environmental agreements and World Trade Organisation Rules. I have not discussed this particular issue with the Sustainable Development Commission.

European Directives

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many European regulations and directives affecting businesses were implemented in the last calendar year; and what assessment she has made of what the total cost of their implementation was on business. [45317]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 26 March 2002]: The Department was responsible for 92 regulations introduced in the calendar year from 1 March 2001. Of these regulations 71 imposed negligible or no costs on business and 11 have saved costs.

Records relating to the origin of regulations are not held centrally. The information requested could be obtained and collated only at disproportionate cost.

All Government Departments and agencies are required to produce regulatory impact assessments (RIAs) for proposed regulations that could impact on business, charities or the voluntary sector. This is the case for legislation emanating from Europe. Copies of all RIAs are published and are available from the Libraries of the House.

Export Credit Assistance

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if it is possible for companies receiving ECGD assistance for their involvement in a project, to subcontract work to other companies without affecting their agreement with the ECGD. [44619]

Ms Hewitt: Yes, companies in receipt of ECGD support are free to subcontract work to others, but under the terms of that support they must remain responsible for the overall performance of the contract, and for any failures by their subcontractors. This responsibility includes ensuring compliance with any environmental, social, financial, or other covenants and pre-conditions specified by ECGD.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list by name and location the fossil fuel power projects that the ECGD has approved for support, but which have not yet been built. [44621]

Ms Hewitt: There are seven cases that ECGD has supported which are still under construction. These projects are as follows:

Project name	Country	Fuel type
Shandong	China	Coal
Manjung	Malaysia	Coal
Afsin-Elbistan	Turkey	Coal
Nantong	China	Coal
Blackpoint	Hong Kong	Gas
Ghubrah	Oman	Oil
San Pedro	Dominican Republic	Oil

In addition, ECGD has provided Overseas Investment Insurance support for one case which is under construction but details are commercial in confidence.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which UK companies have received ECGD services since 1997 for contracts involving fossil fuel power transmission in the energy sector, in (a) Thailand and (b) the Philippines; and what projects are involved. [44618]

Ms Hewitt: ECGD has not supported any export contracts involving fossil fuel power transmission since 1997 in Thailand and the Philippines. However, support was provided for an overseas investment insurance case, which is not disclosed, since such cases are treated as commercial in confidence.

Urban Post Office Network

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when her Department lodged an application with the European Commission for permission to use state aid to subsidise the urban post office network. [44712]

Mr. Alexander: A notification was made to the European Commission on 27 March relating to the proposed programme of reinvention of the urban post office network.

Postal Charges

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what annual revenue would accrue from a one pence increase in the price of (a) first and (b) second class stamps; if Consignia plans to increase postal charges; and if she will make a statement. [45959]

Mr. Alexander: Increases in the prices of first and second class stamps require the approval of Postcomm. The company estimates that an increase of one pence on both first and second class stamps would generate additional income of £170 million over the financial year.

Postal Services

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she had made of the costs and benefits of Postcomm's proposals to bring in market opening in postal services in advance of other EU member states. [47580]

Mr. Alexander: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Morecambe and Lunesdale (Geraldine Smith) on 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 803W.

Bank Holidays

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she next intends to review the pattern of bank holidays in England and Wales. [47128]

Alan Johnson: There are no current plans to review the existing bank holiday arrangements.

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will maintain 2002 arrangements under which the spring bank holiday falls on the first Monday in June for future years. [47127]

Alan Johnson: Changes that were made to existing bank holiday arrangements in 2002 as part of the Queen's Golden Jubilee celebrations will not be maintained in future years and the spring bank holiday will revert to the last Monday in May in 2003.

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the implications for the length of school terms when deciding bank holiday dates. [47176]

Alan Johnson: The timing of school terms is the responsibility of local education authorities, who were consulted on the one-off bank holiday arrangements for the forthcoming Queen's Golden Jubilee.

Supermarket Competition

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list recommendations received from the Meat and Livestock Commission and other bodies designed to improve competition in the supermarket sector, stating for each (a) from whom received and when and (b) what action is (i) planned and (ii) in place to implement such recommendations. [48270]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department of Trade and Industry has not received any such recommendations. However, evidence from the Meat and Livestock Commission and a number of other bodies was considered by the Competition Commission in their investigation into the supply of groceries from supermarkets. Views of interested parties are listed primarily in Chapters 14 and 15 of the Commission's report "Supermarkets: A report on the supply of groceries from multiple stores in the United Kingdom", Cm 4842, published October 2000).

Doha

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement in respect of UK involvement in the follow up to Doha. [48619]

Ms Hewitt: We are working hard to implement all of our commitments in respect of the Doha Ministerial Declaration together with our European partners and other WTO members.

ADSL Lines

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the (a) provision of ADSL lines in Wales and (b) future development of that provision. [47614]

Mr. Alexander: ADSL is not the only technology for the delivery of broadband, and a map showing availability of broadband including cable modem services is contained in the UK Online annual report (December 2001) and has been placed in the Libraries of the House. I have recently challenged BT to extend ADSL coverage within the United Kingdom.

Social Chapter

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the total cost to business of the Social Chapter since it was implemented; and if she will make a statement. [46853]

Alan Johnson: European directives adopted as a result of the Social Chapter for which my Department is responsible are parental leave, part-time work, the European works councils, the fixed term contract, information and consultation of employees and the working time (excluded sectors) directives. The directive on the burden of proof in sex discrimination is the responsibility of the Women and Equality Unit at Cabinet Office.

I refer the hon. Member to answer given on 26 March 2002, Official Report, columns 807–809, which gave the costs of the regulations implementing the parental leave, part-time work and the European works councils directives.

The fixed term contract, information and consultation of employees and the working time (excluded sectors) directives have not yet been implemented. Estimated costs for the fixed term contract directive are to be found in the consultation document URN 02/547 published in January 2002 and estimated costs for the Information and Consultation of Employees were attached to the Explanatory Memorandum 13099–98 of 15 January 1999. Both documents are in the Library of the House. A regulatory impact assessment for the working time directive (excluded sectors) will be prepared prior to going out to consultation on the implementing regulations next year.

The regulatory impact assessment to the burden of proof directive in Sex Discrimination (Council Directive 97/80/EC) is also available in the Libraries of the House.

Dog and Cat Fur

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations she has made to European Commissioner Byrne regarding his proposed ban on the import into the EU of domestic dog and cat fur; and if she will make a statement. [48170]

Ms Hewitt: The Commission, like the UK Government are aware of some concerns on animal welfare grounds of the import into the EU of domestic cat and dog fur. We understand there are presently no Commission proposals to ban these products. The UK Government, as my noble Friend the Minister for Trade said in a statement to the Lords and in a letter to all Members of Parliament last November, has undertaken to explore the current situation in the UK before considering the issue on the grounds of what is practical, proportionate and enforceable.

Wind Farm (Cefn Croes)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many letters her Department received (a) in favour of and (b) opposing the decision on developing a wind farm site at Cefn Croes in Wales. [48595]

Mr. Wilson: Pursuant to the Electricity (Applications for Consent) Regulations 1990, the Department received the following:

Letters of objection—257

Petitions against—586 signatures

Letters of support—106

Petitions for—215 signatures.

In addition to the above, over 750 letters of objection and three letters of support were received after the period allowed for pursuant to the regulations.

Polyester Film Products

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations have been made to the EU on the implications for UK jobs of dumping of polyester film products by Indian manufacturers. [48007]

Ms Hewitt: My Department has received no recent representations from UK industry on this matter, and have made no recent representations to the European Commission. European Community definitive anti-dumping measures were imposed on imports of polyester film from India on 24 August 2001.

Chapelcross Power Station

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the date of decommissioning of Chapelcross power station. [48009]

Mr. Wilson: I am advised by BNFL that closure of the Chapelcross nuclear power station is currently projected to take place between 2008 and 2010. It is anticipated that decommissioning will begin immediately thereafter.

Structural Funding

Mr. David: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what discussions she has had with the European Commission about the Structural Funds after 2006; [47973]

(2) what her philosophy is on the underlying principles which will determine EU regional policy after 2006. [47974]

Alan Johnson: Although the debate on the future of European cohesion policy post 2006 has started, very few national governments have so far committed themselves to a particular position.

The next reform of the Structural Funds must ensure that they contribute better to the Lisbon agenda of improving Europe's competitiveness and modernising its economies. I believe that improvements are needed in both the effectiveness of the funds and the means to evaluate their impact and added value. Also, greater efforts must be made to simplify the funds and remove unnecessary bureaucracy, while maintaining proper financial control.'

While my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has not attended any formal discussions with the European Commission on this issue, officials in the Department of Trade and Industry have participated in a number of relevant meetings and events including the Cohesion Forum organised by the Commission in Brussels in May 2001. In addition, I attended the Namur Informal Council on Regional Policy in July of last year. In May of this year officials in the Department will participate in the Commission's seminars on the 10 priorities highlighted in the "Second Cohesion Report" in May.

Accounting Companies

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the extent of competition between accounting companies; and if she will refer to the competition authorities the five largest firms which operate in the United Kingdom. [48305]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Under UK competition legislation, the Director General of Fair Trading is responsible for monitoring markets and considering allegations of anti competitive behaviour. The Director General is best placed to consider these issues.

Petrol Prices

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the average figures for European unleaded petrol in each country of the EU in price per litre, with the amount of tax paid and the percentage of tax this represents. [45814]

Mr. Wilson: The latest available information for unleaded petrol prices and taxes is for December 2001 and is shown in the table.

European unleaded petrol prices

Electronic Procurement

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the result is of the scoping study for the delivery of electronic procurement. [47327]

Ms Hewitt: The scoping study took account of developments in the IT market and recommended some interim steps to be taken as part of developing a way forward on e-procurement within the Department. The Department is now involved in an e-procurement pilot with OGC which is due to conclude at the end of June.

Science Enterprise Challenge Scheme

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many spin-outs in the university sector have been created (a) since 1997–98 and (b) in 2001–02 by the Science Enterprise Challenge Scheme. [47348]

Ms Hewitt: The Science Enterprise Challenge was set up to establish a network of centres in UK universities, specialising in the teaching and practice of commercialisation and entrepreneurialism in the field of science and technology. The creation of spin-outs is not an explicit objective. However, in their first two years of operation (period ending September 2001), the centres established under the scheme have provided help and support with the development of over 400 credible business ideas. Over 80 have led to early stage businesses, including both spin-outs and start ups from individuals receiving training or advice from the centres.

University Activities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the pilot survey due to be conducted in the first quarter of 2001–02 on university exploitation activities. [47349]

Ms Hewitt: The survey is encouraging and shows that the higher education sector is increasing exploitation activities, resulting in more spin-off companies and a higher proportion of research income from business. Creating stronger links between universities and businesses is an important part of improving our economic performance while maintaining excellence in higher education. The results of the survey are informing the Cross-Cutting Review of Science and Research which is being carried out as part of the Spending Review.

Science Citation Index

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what change there has been in UK performance on the Science Citation Index since 1999. [47351]

Ms Hewitt: Data from the Science Citation Index are used as an indicator of the relative quality of the UK Science and Engineering Base in my Department's Public Sector Agreement. The latest calculations show that there has been no change since 1999. Fuller details will be published shortly in my Department's Expenditure Plans report.

Business Performance

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how and by whom is a judgment reached on progress in UK business performance overseas. [47352]

Ms Hewitt: Engaging in international trade is an important element in improving business competitiveness and productivity.

My Department has an objective, shared with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, to enhance the competitiveness of companies in the UK through overseas sales and investments. Information on performance against the PSA target supporting that objective is published annually in the Government Expenditure

Plans reports for my Department and British Trade International, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Power Cuts

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many electricity power supply interruptions there were in 2001 per customer; and how many minutes per customer were lost in the same year. [47344]

Mr. Wilson: In 2000–01, there were 84 electricity supply interruptions per 100 customers. The number of minutes lost was 86 per 100 customers.

Electricity Prices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of how (a) domestic and (b) industrial electricity prices compared with the EU/97 median in (i) 2000 and (ii) 2001. [47726]

Mr. Wilson: In 2000, average UK domestic electricity prices, including taxes, were 9.5 per cent. lower than the EU and G7 median based upon data for 11 countries. On an excluding tax basis, the average price in the UK was 14.5 per cent. higher than the EU/G7 median, based upon data for 12 countries.

In 2000, the UK's price for industrial electricity including taxes, was 1.5 per cent. lower than the EU and G7 median based upon data for eight countries. On an excluding tax basis, the price in the UK was 13 per cent. higher than the EU/G7 median, based upon data for nine countries.

Data for 2001 are not yet available from the International Energy Agency (IEA).

Gas Prices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of how (a) domestic and (b) industrial UK gas prices compared with the EU/97 median in (i) 2000 and (ii) 2001. [47728]

Mr. Wilson: In 2000, average UK domestic gas prices, including taxes, were 16 per cent. lower than the EU and G7 median, based upon data for 13 countries. On an excluding tax basis, the UK price was 2.5 per cent. lower than the EU and G7 median, based upon data for 11 countries.

Average UK industrial gas prices in 2000, including taxes, were 38 per cent. lower than the EU and G7 median, based upon data for nine countries. On an excluding tax basis, the price in the UK was 35 per cent. lower than the EU and G7 median based upon data for eight countries.

Data for 2001 are not yet available from the International Energy Agency (IEA).

Benchmarking

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the ranking of the United Kingdom is on the Department's International Benchmarking Study. [47346]

Ms Hewitt: The International Benchmarking Study 2001 was published in October 2001 and is available in the Libraries of the House. The 2002 study is being undertaken at the moment and will be published later this year. The 2001 study showed that the UK continues to be one of a 'leading' group of countries in the general use of e-commerce, along with the US, Canada and Germany. There is no single ranking figure used as the report contains many different facets of e-commerce uptake and development. However in 2001 there was an overall improvement in the UK's relative position against some key indicators—for example:

Connectivity: UK small and micro businesses now ranked third instead of fifth;

Trading Online: UK micros up to third from fifth

National Weights and Measures Laboratory

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the National Weights and Measures Laboratory's total overhead costs were at the end of December 2001 as a percentage of total costs. [47337]

Ms Hewitt: Overhead costs at NWML represent 54.7 per cent. of total costs for the period April to December 2001, against a target of less than 55 per cent.

Companies House

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the percentage unit cost reduction was in real terms on document registration achieved by Companies House in 2000–01; and what she expects the reduction to be in 2001–02. [47340]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The percentage for 2000–01 was 7 per cent, as published in the Annual Report and Accounts.

The corresponding figure for 2001–02 will not be known until the accounts are prepared and audited.

Bankruptcy

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the percentage change was in the unit cost of investigating bankruptcy and compulsory liquidation at December 2001, by comparison with (a) December 2000 and (b) December 1999. [47338]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The unit cost of case investigation at December 2001 had (a) decreased by 7.2 per cent. in comparison with December 2000 and (b) decreased by 19.5 per cent. in comparison with December 1999.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the percentage of electricity generated from renewable sources was in (a) 2000 and (b) 2001. [47343]

Mr. Wilson: The percentage of electricity generated in the UK from all renewable sources in 2000 was 2.8 per cent. Detailed renewable energy statistics for 2001 are not yet available, but provisional figures show that large scale hydro schemes provided about 0.8 per cent. of electricity generation in 2001 compared with 1.2 per cent. in 2000. This was because of lower precipitation in Scotland during the winter of 2000–01. However, it is expected that generation from other renewable sources will have increased in 2001.

Transport and Telecommunications Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the outcome was of the Transport and Telecommunications Council held in Brussels on 25–26 March; what the Government's stance was on issues discussed, including its voting record; and if she will make a statement. [46923]

Mr. Alexander: The Deputy UK Permanent Representative to the European Union, Bill Stow, attended the Council on 25 March on my behalf.

There was a Presidency briefing, followed by an exchange of views, on the follow-up to the Barcelona European Council conclusions on the eEurope 2005 Action Plan. There was broad agreement on the importance of third generation mobile and digital television alongside computer-based internet access to deliver broadband services. A UK-led call to focus as much on content as infrastructure, creating demand for broadband services as well as the supply of networks, received the support of six member states. The Commission announced that they aim to have the eEurope 2005 Action Plan ready for the 17 June Telecommunications Council.

The council adopted general orientations on amendments to the existing decisions on electronic interchange of data between administrations (IDA), and the trans-European telecommunications networks (TEN) decision. The Presidency is now expected to pursue informal contacts with the European Parliament to try and secure first reading deals on both dossiers.

The council adopted a resolution on web accessibility, to encourage member states to implement the Web Accessibility Initiative's (WAI) guidelines in respect of public sector websites, aimed at making it easier for the EU's 37 Million elderly and disabled citizens to access the internet. Social and geographic digital exclusion are likely to feature prominently under the Greek Presidency the first half of 2003.

The commission gave a presentation on international governance of the internet, following which member states exchanged views on reform issues under consideration by ICANN (Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers)—the private US corporation established to manage the internet domain name system. The council gave a mandate to COREPER to develop a common EU position to be fed into the EU-US Information Society Dialogue and the ongoing discussions of the Government Advisory Committee (GAC) to ICANN.

Final adoption of the regulation to establish the .eu internet top level domain was among the A points adopted by the council.

Trade Partners UK

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the work of Trade Partners UK in facilitating dialogue between the British Film Council and its counterparts in India. [48157]

Ms Hewitt: Trade Partners UK is in regular contact with the British Film Council, and is helping to develop contacts between the British Film Council and its counterparts in India. The Chief Executive of the British Film Council is a member of the Creative Export Group, one of the Creative Industry Advisory Groups run by Trade Partners UK and DCMS. Trade Partners UK helped to arrange the programme of the Chief Executive and senior colleagues from the British Film Council during their visit to India in March 2002, when they met leading representatives of the Indian film industry and the Indian Minister for Information and Broadcasting. Trade Partners UK is also involved in arranging the programme for an inward mission by top Bollywood producers to the UK in May 2002, in collaboration with the British Film Council and the Manchester Investment and Development Agency Service (MIDAS).

Energy Market

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures she is taking to increase consumer protection in the energy market. [48162]

Mr. Wilson: Gas and electricity consumers are protected by general competition and consumer legislation, including the Doorstep Selling Regulations, which were enhanced in 1998, and the new Distance Selling Regulations, which were introduced in 2000. They are also protected by specific regulations, which are the responsibility of the Office of Gas and Electricity Markets (OFGEM). In the Utilities Act 2000, OFGEM was given the principal objective of protecting the interests of consumers. The Act also established the Gas and Electricity Consumer Council (Energywatch) to represent the interests of consumers. OFGEM maintains licence conditions governing the sale and marketing of gas and electricity supply, and has recently given a commitment to extending these for a further two years. Where appropriate, OFGEM takes action against suppliers that breach these conditions. On 1 April, OFGEM introduced new Guaranteed Standards of Performance for gas transporters and electricity distributors.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry with regard to the European Parliament's First Reading position of 13 March on the proposal for a directive amending Directives 96/92/EC and 98/30/EC concerning common rules for the internal market in electricity and natural gas, if she will indicate, with particular regard to the interests of those consumers living in rural areas, the position that she will take in council on the Parliament's Amendment 42 that seeks to strengthen the terms of the universal service (Article 3(3), 96/92/EC). [47642]

Mr. Wilson: It is a Government priority to bring the benefits of market liberalisation to all consumers, including those living in rural areas. The Government will have this objective in mind when it takes a position on the proposal which the commission will submit to the council in the light of the European Parliament's amendments. Individual amendments are not voted on by the council; rather, the commission presents a revised text which includes those European Parliament amendments which it accepts. I note that Amendment 42 does not mention rural consumers, merely vulnerable consumers.

Regional Development Agencies

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the budget is for each of the regional development agencies in England; and what it is expressed as a percentage of total identifiable public expenditure in each English region. [46946]

Alan Johnson: The allocation of budgets for each regional development agencies for 2001–02 is as follows:

	£ million
One North East	162
North West	280
Yorkshire Forward	246
East Midlands	97
West Midlands	170
East of England	62
South East	110
South West	91
London	298

The percentage of total identifiable public expenditure in each English region is highlighted in Table 8.12 of the 'Public Expenditure, Statistical Analyses 2001–02' report.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer of 21 January 2002, Official Report, column 561W, on mobile phones, what stage has been reached in discussions between her Department and mobile phone manufacturers on how mobile phone handset security might be improved; and when she estimates such measures will be introduced. [46429]

Mr. Alexander: The manufacturers have responded positively to the joint request made by DTI and Home Office Ministers and are co-operating in a study of the current level of security and of plans for the future in this regard. The Home Office will publish this study that is expected to be completed shortly and consideration will then be given as to what action needs to be taken.

In the meantime, all the UK licensed cellular operators are co-operating to develop a shared register of stolen mobile handsets, which will be used to de-activate those handsets. I welcome this positive initiative by the mobile industry.

Trading Links (Baltic States)

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what support her Department is giving to the promotion of trading links between Scotland and the Baltic states. [45767]

Nigel Griffiths: Businesses in Scotland can access British Trade International national schemes, such as the trade mission to all three Baltic countries in October 2002. BTI also works with Scottish Development International in highlighting export and investment potential through awareness-raising events, including an EU enlargement event to be held in Glenrothes on 25 April.

Scotland is an important trading partner for the Baltic states, with much interaction in the forestry sector. A new investment in Riga by a Scottish based timber-processing company, BSW, was inaugurated by the Prince of Wales last November.

Gender Pay Gap

Barbara Follett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans the Government have to commission data on the gender pay gap in Stevenage. [46299]

Alan Johnson: The Office for National Statistics publishes data on the gender pay gap in the New Earnings Survey. However, in the case of Stevenage constituency, the data are not sufficiently reliable for publication.

Current trends in women's individual incomes have been explored in two studies published last year by the Women and Equality Unit (WEU). Copies of these reports are available on the WEU website:

http://www.womenandequalityunit.gov.uk/research/publications/researchandpublications.htm.

WEU Gender Briefing, which provides statistical briefing on the position of women compared with men in the labour market, is also available on the website:

http://www.womenandequalityunit.gov.uk/research/gender_briefing/home .htm.

There are no plans to commission further research into the gender pay gap in Stevenage.

Mair Barnes

Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer of 28 February 2002, Official Report, column 1486W, if she will list the boards of which Mair Barnes is a non-executive director. [46346]

Ms Hewitt: Mair Barnes is a non-executive director of Scottish Power plc, Patientline plc and the South African retailer Woolworth Holdings Ltd. She is also a director of Minkley Ltd. (Jersey).

Japanese Investment Projects

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many Japanese investment projects there were into Britain in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98, (c) 1998–99, (d) 1999–2000 and (e) 2000–01; what their size was; and how many of those projects were (i) engineering and (ii) manufacturing based. [46344]

Nigel Griffiths: The figures provided are based on information provided by companies at the time of the announcement of the decision to invest in the UK. They are based on the companies' best estimate, at that time, of the number of jobs associated with each investment.

There is no requirement on companies to notify inward investment decisions to Invest.UK and so the figures include only those projects where Invest.UK or its regional partners were involved or which have come to their notice. They are therefore likely to be an underestimate. The number of manufacturing projects notified by year is provided but Invest.UK does not record the number of all engineering projects during the period concerned.

	Number of projects	Number in manufacturing	Total investment £
1996–97	43	30	838,729,000
1997–98	59	38	330,510,000
1998–99	43	30	786,227,000
1999–2000	62	28	372,919,000
2000–01	52	24	358,020,000

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations the Small Business Service has received from the Small Business Council on regulatory impact assessments. [46303]

Nigel Griffiths: The Small Business Council is working with the Small Business Service to develop and implement an updated version of the so-called Litmus test, which forms part of the regulatory impact assessment procedure. It has also asked the Small Business Service to analyse the cumulative burden of regulation on small businesses.

Construction Industry

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of employment legislation in the construction industry; and if she will make a statement. [45757]

Mr. Wilson: The Government's programme of employment legislation represents a balanced package of measures. The goal is to ensure that the UK has a modern productive workplace for the 21st century and a flexible labour market to be competitive and at the same time ensure minimum standards for workers.

The Government do evaluate, as far as possible, employment legislation across the economy. However, they have not assessed separately the effectiveness of employment legislation in the construction industry. The effects of new employment legislation on the economy as a whole and the labour market are assessed through the Government's Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) process. Where appropriate these RIAs include an industry based assessment. This is the case where industries are affected to different degrees. The regulatory impact assessments are carried out on each new proposal to evaluate the likely costs and benefits.

Business Links

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) amount and (b) proportion of the DTI's budget has been allocated to support Business Links over the past five years. [46192]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The proportion of the DTI's budget that has been allocated to support Business Links over the past five years is:

£ million

	Business link	DTI	Per cent.
1996–97	115	2,861	4.0
1997–98	129	2,847	4.5
1998–99	118	2,909	4.0
1999–2000	120	3,370	3.6
2000–01	137	4,355	3.1

User Consultation

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what new steps her Department took in 2001–02 to consult the users of its services about their wishes and expectations; and if she will publish the findings. [47311]

Ms Hewitt: In June last year I announced two major reviews—one of the priorities and structure of my Department, and the other of its support for business. During those reviews almost 1,500 organisations and individuals gave us their views. These were gathered through regional workshops, face to face discussions, direct correspondence and specially commissioned market research. Views were also received via the DTI website mailbox.

Details can be found in the "House of Commons Trade and Industry Committee, Reviews of DTI Structure and Business Support—Minutes of Evidence, Wednesday 12 December 2001 (HC 454–1)".

Relocation

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to relocate executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies under the remit of her Department to Scotland. [47947]

Ms Hewitt: The locations of my Department's executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies are determined by business need and, accordingly, they already have a strong presence in Scotland. All but one of the Agencies have offices throughout Scotland and the non-departmental public bodies are also well represented with offices in 24 different locations. In addition my Department's headquarters has four offices in Scotland.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the timescale is for achievements of the PSA target to put in place policies to narrow the productivity gap relative to other industrialised countries over the cycle. [47354]

Ms Hewitt: The joint DTI/HM-Treasury PSA target is to improve UK competitiveness by narrowing the productivity gap with the US, France, Germany and Japan over the economic cycle. The Government has put in place a wide range of policies to drive up productivity by improving innovation, investment and skills and by fostering enterprise and fair competition. A full assessment of performance against the PSA target can only be made once the current economic cycle has ended. The methodology for identifying the economic cycle is given in the document "Fiscal policy: public finances and the HM Treasury", published in March

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target to narrow the productivity gap relative to other industrialised countries over the cycle will be met by June 2005. [47356]

Ms Hewitt: The DTI and HM Treasury are monitoring performance against the PSA target to improve UK competitiveness by narrowing the productivity gap with the US, France, Germany and Japan over the economic cycle. They will make a full assessment of whether the PSA target has been achieved at the end of the current economic cycle.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on performance in 2000–01 against the PSA target to narrow the productivity gap relative to other industrialised countries over the cycle. [47355]

Ms Hewitt: The most recent data published by ONS show that the UK had a labour productivity gap, on both a per worker and a per hour worked basis, with the US, France and Germany in 2000. It also shows that since 1997 the productivity gap on both a per worker and per hour basis has remained broadly unchanged with France and Germany. The gap with the US has remained broadly the same on a per hour basis, but has widened on the per worker measure. However, a full assessment of the PSA target can only be made once the current economic cycle has ended. The latest data are available from ONS's website www.statistics.gov.uk/themes/economy/Articles/nationalaccounts/international_comparisons_productivity.asp.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what new initiatives her Department has taken in 2001–02 to assist in achieving its Public Service Agreement targets. [47202]

Ms Hewitt: General information on the work carried out by the Department during 2001–02 in pursuit of its Public Service Agreement targets will be incorporated in the Departments' 2002–03 to 2003–04 Expenditure Plans Report, due to be published in May. Copies of the report will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target to increase the productivity and profitability of SMEs assisted by Business Link Partnerships, and to show year by year improvements in the quality of services delivered under the Business Link brand will be met throughout the period June 2001 to June 2006. [47357]

Ms Hewitt: An impact assessment framework has been established to track the productivity and profitability of SMEs assisted by Business Link Partnerships. The time lags involved in collection of these data mean 2001 figures will not be available until at least 2003 and this will continue throughout the specified period. Early results show that a large majority of BLO clients first assisted in 1997–98 demonstrated increases in productivity. The average increase was 30 per cent. for Business Link clients compared to 18 per cent. for non-clients. Profitability also increased with 42 per cent. of clients having a positive profile compared to 40 per cent. for non-clients.

The quality of services delivered under the Business Link brand will be measured via customer satisfaction. Results of a new Customer Satisfaction Framework, requiring each operator to carry out independent customer satisfaction surveys every six months, will be available from spring 2002. In the interim the SBS Omnibus Survey (using a relatively small sample of Business Link users) suggests that satisfaction is in the 75–80 per cent. range of regular users, but less so for past and infrequent users.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target to maintain or improve levels of energy security, diversity, sustainability and competitive energy price will be met. [47345]

Ms Hewitt: The public service agreement target to maintain or improve levels of energy security, diversity, sustainability and competitive prices has been updated for 2001–2004 to:

> "to develop strong, competitive markets within a regulatory framework which promotes fairness and sustainability".

This was set out in the "Spending Review 2000: Public Service Agreements 2001–04" White Paper (Cm 4808).

The specific energy targets relating to this objective are as follows:

> Ensure competitive gas and electricity prices in the lower half of the EU/G7 basket, while achieving security of supply and social and environmental objectives.
> Improve the environment and sustainable use of natural resources, including by reducing greenhouse gas emissions by 12.5 per cent. from 1990 levels and moving towards a 20 per cent. reduction in CO2 emissions by 2010 (joint target with DEFRA).

An assessment of progress towards the targets currently monitored is as follows:

Competitive energy prices

> Overall, in 2000, based on incomplete data, it appears that UK industrial and domestic gas prices were in the lower half of the EU/G7 basket. UK domestic electricity prices including taxes and industrial prices including taxes were also in the lower half of the EU/G7 basket during 2000. Figures for the UK show that electricity prices have fallen in 2001.

Security

> The Department's target to maintain or improve the number of electricity power supply interruptions per 100 customers, and average time lost was not met in 2000–01 as it increased to 84 interruptions per 100 customers with 86 minutes lost per customer from 81 interruptions per 100 customers and 71 minutes lost per customer in 1999–2000. Oil stocks are also monitored, with a target to maintain national emergency oil stocks at, or above, levels required by international obligations. At the end of January 2002 the UK held stocks equal to 82 days of consumption, compared with an obligation of 67½ days.

Diversity

> The Department has a target to achieve 10 per cent. of electricity generated from renewable resources by 2010, subject to the costs to consumers being acceptable. The percentage of electricity generated in the UK from all renewable sources in 2000 was 2.8 per cent. Detailed renewable energy statistics for 2001 are not yet available, but provisional figures show that large scale hydro schemes provided about 0.8 per cent. of electricity generation in 2001 compared with 1.2 per cent. in 2000. This was because of lower precipitation in Scotland during the winter of 2000–2001. However, it is expected that generation from other renewable sources will have increased in 2001.

Social

> The Department has introduced a social target of fuel expenditure as a percentage of income (including housing benefit and income support for mortgage interest) for the lowest three income deciles to be reducing and below 5 per cent. by 2003–04. Over the last four years fuel expenditure as a percentage of income has generally been reducing and in 2000–01 was 7 per cent.

Sustainability/Environment

> Although provisional figures indicate that CO_2 emissions were higher in 2001 than 1999 and 2000, due to increased coal burn in power stations as a result of higher gas prices, and colder weather in the winter months, CO_2 emissions are nevertheless 6 per cent. below 1990 levels. It is estimated that the quantified measures in the UK Climate Change Programme could reduce carbon dioxide emissions by about 19 per cent. below 1990 levels in 2010. The programme is also designed to stimulate a wider response from all parts of society, which could reduce emissions still further and deliver the 20 per cent. goal.

In 2000 greenhouse gas emissions were 13 per cent. lower than in 1990. Projections suggest that the UK remains on course to meet its Kyoto commitment to reduce emissions of greenhouse gases by 12.5 per cent. by 2008–12 from 1990 level.

Sulphur dioxide emissions in 2000 were 76 per cent. lower than in 1980. The Department remains on course to meet the sulphur dioxide emissions target of 80 per cent. below 1980 levels by 2010.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment she had made of the date by which the PSA target to secure an increase in the number of successful high growth business start ups will be met. [47358]

Ms Hewitt: An estimate of the number of successful high growth business start-ups has been made annually for the last four years. The estimates are shown in the table. There is an inevitable lag in recording high-growth start ups. For example the 1998 figures relate to businesses first registering for VAT in 1994. An estimate relating to firms first registering for VAT in 1998 will be available later this year.

Year started	Number of firms	Year progress known
1994	12,300	1998
1995	11,800	1999
1996	11,100	2000
1997	11,200	[1]2001

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will set out the criteria and timescale for the measurement of progress against the PSA target to secure an increase in the number of successful high growth business start-ups. [47360]

Ms Hewitt: The aim of the target is to raise the number of successful high growth business start-ups to 20,000 a year by 2002. A successful high growth start-up is defined as a firm having 10 or more employees and/or turnover of at least £1 million by the fourth year of trading. an estimate of the number of successful high growth start-ups is produced annually. The estimate for 2002 will be available in 2007, as there is an inherent four year time lag and a further one year time lag in collating the data.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the definitions are of (a) successful and (b) high growth in the PSA target to secure an increase in the number of successful, high growth business start-ups. [47353]

Ms Hewitt: A successful high growth start-up is defined as a firm having 10 or more employees and/or turnover of at least £1 million by the fourth year of trading.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target to increase by 50 per cent. the 1997–98 number of companies spun out from universities by 2001–02. [47350]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 17 December 2001, Official Report, column 118W.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target to make the UK the best place in the world to trade electronically will be met by (a) June 2005 and (b) June 2006. [47347]

Ms Hewitt: The DTI's e-commerce PSA target is to make and keep the UK the best place in the world to trade electronically, as measured by the cost of internet access, and the extent of business to business and business to consumer transactions carried out over e-commerce networks by 2004. The DTI works with Oftel and the Office for National Statistics in order to measure these indicators.

Recent figures show that:

The UK is ranked third lowest with regards to narrow band internet access costs in OECD countries and second lowest in the G7.

The UK is among the leading group of countries on the number of businesses trading online and other key measures.

The UK has the one of the largest e-commerce markets in Europe, with e-sales representing over 5 per cent. of the value of total sales

In May 2001 the total value of business to business transactions in sectors covered amounted to 6 per cent. of total value of sales.

In May 2001 figures showed that £10 billion of sales over the internet were from businesses to households.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on performance in 2001 against the PSA target to ensure 98 per cent. of EU single market measures to be transposed into UK law. [47341]

Ms Hewitt: By November 2001 the UK had transposed 97.2 per cent. of EU single market directives due by that date. By the time of the Barcelona Council in March 2002, the UK had increased its transposition rate to 98.7 per cent.

Access to Information

Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the administrative manuals and internal guidance which her Department has made public as required by Part 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information; and which of these were first made available after May 1997. [45393]

Ms Hewitt: According to records held centrally, the administrative manuals and internal guidance listed are currently publicly available as required by paragraph 3 (ii) of Part I of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. Documents marked [1] were first made available after May 1997.

Non-Departmental Public Bodies

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to her answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 673W, on public bodies, what information she receives on possible appointees to non-departmental public bodies prior to their appointment; and what method her Department uses to notify people of their appointment to a non-departmental public body. [44083]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 18 March 2002]: The procedures for making appointments to non-departmental public bodies are governed by the rules of the Commissioner for Public Appointments as set out in her Code. This includes the requirement for completion of an application form by each individual being considered for appointment. In addition to information relevant to the specific appointment application forms request monitoring information on ethnicity, gender and disability. It is also a requirement of the OCPA Code that information is collected from all applicants on political activity in the five years prior to application.

Individuals who are appointed through the procedures receive a letter of appointment. Details of appointees to individual bodies are made public in press releases at the time of appointment or in the annual report of the NDPB and details of all appointees are published in the Departmental Annual Expenditure Plans Report copies of which are placed in the Libraries of the House.

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many appointments to public bodies have been made through her Department (a) from April 2000 to March 2001 and (b) since 31 March 2001; and how many of these were (i) men and (ii) women. [42151]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 12 March 2002]: The numbers of men and women appointed to bodies for which my Department is responsible during the periods in question are:

Period	Men appointed	Women appointed
1 April 2000—31 March 2001	347	129
1 April 2001—28 February 2002	207	62

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people have been appointed by her to official bodies and NDPBs coming under the aegis of her Department in the last three years; and who they were. [33346]

Ms Hewitt: Details of all individuals appointed to NDPBs falling within the responsibility of my Department are set out in the DTI's annual Expenditure Plans reports, copies of which are placed in the Libraries of the House. The reports set out the body to which the appointment has been made, the name of the appointee, the position to which they have been appointed, the period of the appointment, the remuneration where applicable and the time commitment required of the appointee.

Details for all appointments made in 1999 are given in the report for 1999–2000 published in April 2000 (Cm 4611) and those for 2000 are given in the report for 2000–01 published in March 2001 (Cm 5112). Details for appointments made in 2001 will be included in the next report for 2001–02, due to be published in May. In advance of that publication I have placed a table giving the details in the Libraries of both Houses.

Knowledge Transfer Initiatives

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the (a) purpose and (b) cost of knowledge transfer initiatives sponsored by her Department in (i) 2000–01 and (ii) 2001–02. [42595]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 12 March 2002]: The knowledge transfer initiatives supported by the Department for Trade and Industry in 2000–01 and 2001–02 are listed in the table.

Initiative	Purpose	Cost to DTI 2000–01	2001–02

Legal Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what legal costs have been incurred by her Department in each of the last four years. [34349]

Ms Hewitt: Information on legal costs is not held centrally, except for costs awarded against the Department, details of which were as follows:

Year	£000
1998–99	1,915
1999–2000	288
2000–01	532
2001–02	450[1]

[1] Estimated

Departmental Website

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total cost of her Department's website was in real terms in each of the last four years; and how many hits it received in each of those years. [36149]

Ms Hewitt: The support costs underpinning the operation of the Department's websites are included in the service charges paid under the DTI's overall IT service contract. The website costs are not identified separately in these charges and therefore the figures requested are not available.

The core DTI site www.dti.gov.uk has been updated twice in the last four years, involving design costs of £13,075 in FY 1999–2000, and £16,560 in FY 2000–01 (figures include VAT, and at FY 2001–02 prices). A more substantial redevelopment of the site went live on 9 April 2002, at a cost of £60,294 including VAT.

The Department has been collecting access statistics on a comparable basis since July 1998. The number of hits to the site www.dti.gov.uk since then has been:

July 1998—December 1998: 16,265,698

January 1999—December 1999: 59,498,841

January 2000—December 2000: 81,730,285

January 2001—December 2001: 95,226,594.

Secondments

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many members of staff were employed by her Department on secondment from non-Governmental organisations in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [45231]

Ms Hewitt: The numbers of inward secondments commenced, continued or completed in each of the years requested are:

Period	Number
1 April 1999—31 March 2000	163
1 April 2000—31 March 2001	176
1 April 2001—28 February 2002	158

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff in her Department have been seconded to jobs in the (a) private and (b) public sector in each of the last four years. [31769]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Member to the information given by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister on 7 February 2002, Official Report, column 1130W, which gave these details for all Departments.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if she will list the names of staff who have been seconded to her Department from the private sector since May 1997, indicating (a) the names of the organisation from which each has come, (b) their responsibilities and civil service grade within her Department and (c) the organisation responsible for paying their salary; [32550]

(2) if she will list the secondees to her Department from the private sector and their roles. [32553]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 1 February 2002]: The information requested was last provided on 28 June 2001, Official Report, column 143W in answer to a question from the hon. Member for Northampton, South. I have placed in the Libraries of both Houses the original table as at 28 June 2001 and an update to that information showing all secondees into my Department since then. The table shows the name of each secondee, the company from which they have come, the grade of the post which they are filling in the Department, the Directorate in which they are working, the period of their secondment and a brief description of their duties. In all cases secondees are paid by their employing company.

It is not possible for me to give this information on all secondees from May 1997 onwards as the non-disclosure provisions of the Data Protection Act prevent me from doing so without the express consent of the individuals concerned.

Public Bodies (Chairmen)

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the appointments made by her Department since 1 May 1997 of chairmen of (a) non-departmental public bodies, (b) commissions, (c) inquiries, (d) agencies and (e) task forces; and if she will list their (i) term of office, (ii) salary and (iii) known political affiliation (A) past and (B) present. [33893]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested for NDPBs and NDPB commissions within the responsibility of my Department is as follows:

Information on political affiliation of public appointees is not collected.

Information on task forces, ad hoc advisory groups and reviews has been published by the Cabinet Office on a regular basis. The first report was published on 11 January 2000 and gives information for the period between 1 May 1997 to 31 October 1999. Subsequent reports covering the periods between November 1999 to March 2001 have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Press Office

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total cost of running the Department's press office was in (a) 1996–97 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available. [46798]

Ms Hewitt: The cost of running DTI press office was: (a) 1,439,000 (1996–97); (b) 1,984,000 (2000–01). These figures consist of staff and operating costs and reflect the increase in departmental responsibilities in the period.

Unpaid Advisers

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the names of the unpaid advisers appointed by her and her predecessors since June 1997, stating in each case (a) the date of their appointment, (b) the duration of their appointment and (c) the project or projects on which they have been engaged. [43386]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 25 March 2002]: For details of unpaid appointments made by this department to task forces, review groups and other ad hoc advisory groups, I refer you to the answer provided by my hon. Friend the Member for Shipley (Mr. Leslie), on 16 November, Official Report, column 958W.

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for the five largest PFI contracts let by her Department in each of the last four years; and if she will make a statement. [45602]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The Department and its agencies have signed three PFI contracts in the last four years—Elgar (which provides the Department's IT infrastructure), the re-development of the National Physical Laboratory at Teddington and the Radiocommunications Agency's Strategic Partnership.

In the case of the Elgar and RA Strategic Partnership contracts, the procurement process (or competition) did not involve the selection of a 'preferred' bidder.

The net present cost of the National Physical Laboratory PFI contract (excluding support services) was estimated to be £92 million at the time of the selection of the preferred bidder and £116 million at contract signature, primarily reflecting a re-definition of the scope of the project by the Department.

Procurement

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the procurement payment target for 2000–01 was met. [47328]

Ms Hewitt: The Department has a payment performance target to pay 100 per cent. of its suppliers within 30 days of a correctly presented invoice. Against this target for financial year 2000–01, the Department achieved 94 per cent.

Departmental Administration

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total of efficiency savings for departmental administration were in 2000–01 in (a) money and (b) percentage terms. [47727]

Ms Hewitt: The efficiency savings achieved by my Department in 2000–01 have been calculated at £19.3 million. This figure represents a percentage saving of 4.6 per cent.

Departmental Underspend

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the (a) capital and (b) revenue underspend in her Department is expected to be in the financial year 2001–02. [47811]

Ms Hewitt: Estimated outturn figures for 2001–02 will be published in the budget Report on 17 April.

Property Protection

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what new measures her Department took in 2001–02 to protect its property from theft or damage. [47323]

Ms Hewitt: My Department uses a range of measures to protect its property from theft or damage, including security guarding, CCTV, intruder alarms and asset marking of valuable items. A review of security measures is a standard response to any incident and increased measures, such as additional security patrols in vulnerable areas and bag searches are brought in as appropriate. Advice is also sought from the local police crime prevention officer.

Aggregates Levy

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment has been made of the likely change in the price of construction materials following the introduction of the aggregates levy. [46478]

Mr. Boateng: I have been asked to reply.

The levy's impact on the price of construction materials will depend upon the amount of virgin aggregate used in their manufacture and the extent to which aggregates suppliers pass on the cost of the levy to customers.

HEALTH

Cancelled Operations

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of patients were not readmitted within a month of their operation being cancelled in (a) England and (b) each health authority in each year since 1997–98; [44368]

(2) what was the percentage of operations cancelled at short notice for non-clinical reasons in (a) England and (b) each health authority for each year since 1997–98. [44290]

Mr. Hutton: Information for 1997–98 to 2000–01 is shown in the tables.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations were cancelled or delayed in each of the last 12 months in each health authority in England. [46994]

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations were cancelled more than one day before the due date, broken down by health authority in the last 12 months. [47545]

Mr. Hutton: Copies of quarterly statistics on cancelled operations by health authority are available in the Library. The publication gives the number of operations cancelled (for non-medical reasons) on the day patients are due to arrive or after arrival in hospital or on the day of the operation.

Treatment Costs

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average gross cost in pounds per course of treatment in England for (a) children and (b) adults in 2000–01, [44289]

Mr. Hutton: The costs of courses of treatments for adults and children are not routinely recorded at national level.

The NHS records different elements of care in different ways. Inpatient and day case treatments are counted using Finished Consultant Episodes. In 2000–01, the average costs for an Inpatient Episode and a Day Case Episode are £1,188 and £386 respectively.

Outpatient attendances are reported separately and reported on a cost per attendance basis. In 2000–01, the average cost per attendance, across all specialties was £78. It is not possible from current data to split these costs between adults and children.

The NHS records activity and costs at a more detailed level than the aggregate costs shown above. The average unit costs of individual treatments, procedures and types of appointments etc. for each NHS provider are collected annually. From this data national average unit costs are produced and published annually. This detailed cost and activity data is published in the Reference Costs publication and can be combined in various combinations to reflect the course of treatment for individual conditions. These costs do not include associated costs incurred in general practice.

Full details of these unit costs for 2000–01 can be found in the Reference Costs 2001 publication located in the Library. This information is also made more widely available through the Department's Internet site at www.doh.gov.uk/nhsexec/refcosts.htm.

Food Supplements

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of the proposed EU Directive on Foods and Supplements on the ability of patients who choose to treat themselves to continue to do so; and if he will make a statement. [44271]

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Yvette Cooper: The proposed Directive would establish lists of permitted vitamin and mineral sources and a framework for setting maximum permitted levels. The lists would remain open for seven years pending safety assessments for additional substances, and individual maximum permitted levels have not yet been set. The Directive would not immediately outlaw any products that are currently on the market in the United Kingdom; in the longer term its impact would depend on future developments on additions to the lists and setting of maximum levels.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he plans to take to implement the EU Directive on Food Supplements; what impact the Directive will have on the continued availability of products that can currently be used; and if he will make a statement. [44288]

Yvette Cooper: The Government intend to implement the proposed EU Directive as agreed, taking full advantage of the opportunity we have secured for Member States to allow continued sale for up to seven years of products containing vitamin and mineral sources not on the permitted lists. The Food Standards Agency is responsible for preparing implementing legislation and will be consulting widely on draft Regulations.

The impact of the Directive on the continued availability of products currently on the market would depend on future developments on maximum limits and lists of permitted nutrients. We are firmly committed to the view that, in the interests of consumer choice, the law should allow food supplements which are safe and properly labelled to be freely marketed.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received regarding the EU Directive on Food Supplements; and if he will make a statement. [44270]

Yvette Cooper: Several letters and telephone calls have been received recently from industry, consumers and health practitioners such as nutrition therapists. Broadly, these have expressed concerns over the potential for the Directive on food supplements to restrict the availability of some vitamin and mineral supplements, especially those which contain high doses of individual nutrients.

Public Service Agreements

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many public service agreements his Department (a) passed and (b) failed to meet in each year since 1999; and if he will make a statement. [44309]

Mr. Hutton: Information about progress on public service agreements targets has been published in the department's Departmental Reports for 2000 and 2001. Further details will be published in the next Departmental Report, due in spring 2002.

Work Loads

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he collates on the average lifetime workload of (a) general practitioners, (b) hospital doctors and (c) nurses. [44282]

Mr. Hutton: The Department does not currently hold this kind of data. The NHS workforce censuses do identify individuals, and in theory it is possible to track doctors through their working life over time. However, this data source has only existed since 1987, and does not provide enough data to allow us to analyse doctors' whole careers.

This type of analysis may be possible in the future. The Electronic Staff Record, which is anticipated to be fully operational from early 2005, should enable more direct analyses of flows of staff into and out of the NHS. The Department is investigating the practicality of this.

The Department is aware of the importance of participation rates and lifetime working patterns to inform workforce planning. It uses labour force survey data and reviews labour market research to estimate average wastage rates from the qualified workforce. The average wastage rate reveals how many people we might expect to lose from the workforce each year, before we add in the new qualifiers.

Health Ladder Programme

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the future arrangements for the Health Ladder programme as it affects Waltham Forest; and if he will make a statement. [45181]

Mr. Hutton: From 1 April 2002, accountability for the SRB Health Ladder Scheme in Redbridge and Waltham Forest will transfer from Redbridge and Waltham Forest health authority to the North East London Strategic health authority.

The scheme's management team will be transferred to the North East London NHS Workforce Confederation.

The team will continue to be based locally in Becketts House in Ilford and the work will continue to be overseen by a local Partnership Board.

Lou Gehrig's Disease

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the United Kingdom by nation and region, are diagnosed as having Lou Gehrig's disease; and what percentage of these are veterans of the Gulf War in the last year for which figures are available. [23207]

Jacqui Smith [pursuant to her reply, 14 January 2002, c. 65–66]: I regret that my previous reply was incorrect.

Lou Gehrig's disease is classified as Motor Neurone Disease (MND) in this country and there are between 5,000 and 6,000 sufferers of MND in the UK. Worldwide, the annual incidence of MND is estimated to be 1.5 new cases per 100,000 people. To date, the Ministry of Defence is aware of four veterans of the 1990–91 Gulf conflict who have been diagnosed with motor neurone disease, three of whom have died. The table shows the hospital admission figures for motor neurone disease in 2000–2001.

Hospitals (Shropshire)

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the specialties provided at (a) the Royal Shrewsbury Hospital and (b) the Princess Royal Hospital, Telford. [45733]

Yvette Cooper: The Royal Shrewsbury Hospital provides the following inpatient specialties:

General Surgery
Urology
Trauma and Orthopaedics
ENT
Ophthalmology
Oral Surgery
Anaesthetics
General Medicine
Gastroenterology
Haematology (Clinical)
Cardiology
Dermatology
Medical Oncology
Neurology
Paediatrics
Obstetrics for patients using a hospital bed or delivery facilities
Gynaecology
General Practice with Maternity Function
Radiotherapy.

The Princess Royal Hospital provides the following in-patient specialties:

General Surgery
Urology
Trauma and Orthopaedics
ENT
Ophthalmology
Oral Surgery
Plastic Surgery
Anaesthetics
Pain Management
General Medicine
Haematology (Clinical)
Dermatology
Neurology
Paediatrics
Gynaecology

Note:
The specialties were present for the year 2000–01. Specialties recorded for fewer than six in-patient episodes have been omitted.

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) consultants, (b) doctors and (c) nurses there are at (i) the Royal Shrewsbury Hospital and (ii) the Princess Royal Hospital, Telford. [45734]

Yvette Cooper: The information is shown in the table.

Air Pollution

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has collated on the threat to human health from emissions of (a) benzene and (b) 1,3 butadiene, (c) particulates (i) PM10 and (ii) PM2.5, (d) carbon monoxide, (e) sulphur dioxide and (f) oxides of nitrogen from road transport; and if he will make a statement. [45947]

Yvette Cooper: The Department of Health's Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants (COMEAP) and its predecessor the Advisory Group on the Medical Aspects of Air Pollution has collated information and written subsequent reports on:

Oxides of Nitrogen

Sulphur Dioxide, Acid Aerosols and Particulates

Health Effects of Exposures to Mixtures of Air Pollutants

Non-Biological Particles and Health

Asthma and Outdoor Air Pollution

Quantification of the Effects of Air Pollution on Health in the United Kingdom (this report covers particles, nitrogen dioxide, sulphur dioxide, ozone and carbon monoxide)

Long-term Effects of Particles on Mortality.

COMEAP has also written Handbook on Air Pollution and Health. Details of these publications are available from the Department's website at http://www.doh.gov.uk/hef/airpol/airpolh.htm.

The Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs' (DEFRA) Committee, the Expert Panel on Air Quality Standards (EPAQS), which has a joint DH/DEFRA Secretariat, has also written reports on:

Benzene

1, 3-Butadiene Particulates (2 reports, the latest including $PM_{2.5}$ as well as PM_{10})

Carbon Monoxide

Sulphur Dioxide

Nitrogen Dioxide.

These reports cover the effects of health of each of the substances and further details about each report can be found on DEFRA's website at http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/airquality/index.htm.

These reports provide support for the objectives in The Air Quality Strategy for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. These objectives aim to reduce levels of these pollutants from all sources, including road transport.

Health Services (Barnet)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the demands on health services in (a) Barnet and (b) Hendon of (i) the growth in population in the last 10 years and (ii) the predicted growth in population over the next 15 years; and if he will make a statement. [45823]

Mr. Hutton: It is anticipated that the overall population of Barnet will grow over the next 15 years by around 12 per cent. (ONS). Barnet Primary Care Trust is currently finalising a health improvement and modernisation plan which sets out principal areas for action over the coming years to improve the health and well being of the people of Barnet. This takes account of the needs of the local population (including population size, deprivation and other determinants of health), as well as national requirements. As well as taking forward plans for NHS modernisation, key priority area for action have identified as:

Smoking

Health development and community development

Coronary heart disease and stroke

Cancer

Diabetes

Children

Accidents.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the number of people in (a) Barnet and (b) Hendon who are not registered with a GP; and if he will make a statement. [45826]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Edgware Hospital

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress towards the new hospital development at Edgware. [45821]

Mr. Hutton: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave on 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 699.

Nurse Training

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurse training organisations were operating the new model of nurse education and training outlined in the NHS Plan by Q3 2001–02. [46283]

Mr. Hutton: A total of 54 higher education institutions had been approved by the former English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting (ENB) to deliver the new pre-registration nursing programmes at diploma and/or degree level—equating to over 95 per cent. of existing organisations.

Health Inequalities

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what national targets have been developed by stakeholders to narrow the health gap (a) in childhood and (b) throughout life between socio-economic groups. [46292]

Yvette Cooper: Following the comment made in the NHS Plan, the two national health inequalities targets were announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in February 2001, and are as follows:

(a) Starting with children under one year, by 2010 to reduce by at least 10 per cent. the gap in mortality between manual groups and the population as a whole.

(b) Starting with health authorities, by 2010 to reduce by at least 10 per cent. the gap between the fifth of areas with the lowest life expectancy at birth and the population as a whole

Negligence Compensation

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, by regional health authority, the compensation payments paid to members of the general public in response to claims of negligence upheld against the authority in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98, (c) 1998–99, (d) 1999–2000 and (e) 2000–01. [46287]

Ms Blears: Regional health authorities were abolished in 1996 by the Health Authorities Act 1995. It is not therefore possible to break down figures relating to clinical negligence by regional health authority.

Overall figures for expenditure on clinical negligence are available for the following years, as follows:

1996–97	235
1997–98	144
1998–99	221
1999–2000	373

Note:
The figure for the year 2000–2001 is not yet available.

The figures are taken from the National Audit Summarised Accounts for health authorities, NHS trusts and NHS Litigation Authority. Changes to accounting policies mean that these amounts are not directly comparable.

These figures represent all expenditure for clinical negligence which will include compensation payments and legal expenses. Figures relating specifically to compensation payments for successful clinical negligence claims against NHS bodies are not available.

Fertility Treatment

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS trusts provided IVF treatment on the NHS as of 1 March; how many patients have received IVF treatment in the last year; how many patients he expects to be provided with IVF treatment in the next year; and if he will make a statement. [46030]

Yvette Cooper: A baseline survey of national health service infertility provision was carried out by the Department in 1999. The report on "Survey of NHS Infertility Services 1997–98" has been published and copies are available in the Library. Information about the number of patients who have received IVF treatment in the last year will be made available shortly by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority.

Cancer

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent steps he has taken to improve the cervical cancer screening programme. [45778]

Yvette Cooper: The Government are currently piloting new technologies in order to improve the cervical screening programme. These are Liquid Based Cytology (LBC) and Human Papilloma Virus (HPV) testing. If evaluation proves that the pilots are successful, and if recommended by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence, they will be introduced across the NHS.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what extra major pieces of diagnostic equipment have been purchased under the Cancer Plan. [45776]

Yvette Cooper: The NHS Cancer Plan provided details of diagnostic equipment to be purchased for the NHS. This included 88 MRI scanners, 200 CT scanners and over 300 items of breast screening equipment.

Programmes to deliver this essential equipment are well under way. By March 2002, 28 new MRI scanners, 81 CT scanners and almost all of the breast screening equipment had been delivered to the NHS. The remaining equipment is due for delivery by 2004.

As well as investment in diagnostic radiology equipment, the NHS Cancer Plan makes a commitment to providing £15 million for the modernisation of 23 pathology services.

Dentistry

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines exist for NHS dentists concerning the removal of wisdom teeth. [46178]

Ms Blears: In March 2000, the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) issued the following guidance.

1.1 The routine practice of prophylactic removal of pathology-free impacted third molars should be discontinued in the NHS.

1.2 The standard routine programme of dental care by dental practitioners and/or paraprofessional staff, need be no different, in general, for pathology free impacted third molars (those requiring no additional investigations or procedures).

1.3 Surgical removal of impacted third molars should be limited to patients with evidence of pathology. Such pathology includes unrestorable caries, non-treatable pulpal and/or periapical pathology, cellulitis, abcess and osteomyelitis, internal/external resorption of the tooth or adjacent teeth, fracture of tooth, disease of follicle including cyst/tumour, tooth/teeth impeding surgery or reconstructive jaw surgery, and when a tooth is involved in or within the field of tumour resection.

1.4 Specific attention is drawn to plaque formation and pericoronitis. Plaque formation is a risk factor but is not in itself an indication for surgery. The degree to which the severity or recurrence rate of pericoronitis should influence the decision for surgical removal of a third molar remains unclear. The evidence suggests that a first episode of pericoronitis, unless particularly severe, should not be considered an indication for surgery. Second or subsequent episodes should be considered the appropriate indication for surgery.

BSE

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the (a) operation and (b) effectiveness of the Beef Assurance Scheme in the prevention of BSE infected cattle entering the food chain; and what proportion of the cattle slaughtered for human consumption in the last year for which figures are available were produced under the Beef Assurance Scheme. [46382]

Yvette Cooper: I am advised by the Food Standards Agency that while normally animals over 30 months are not permitted to enter the food chain under the Beef Assurance Scheme (BAS) certain cattle exceptionally may do so up to the age of 42 months. Under the scheme, a number of stringent conditions apply, for example that cattle must be drawn entirely from specialist grass reared beef herds known not to have consumed mammalian meat and bone meal. In addition, in common with other cattle, certain specified risk material where any BSE infectivity is thought likely to reside, must also be removed. There have been no clinical cases of BSE in bona fide BAS herds.

From 1 January 2001, EU rules were introduced to require all cattle over 30 months of age—including those registered under the BAS—to be tested for BSE and only enter the food chain if found negative. The agency has advised that 20 BAS cattle entered the human food chain last year without having been tested in this way. Prior to 2001, these animals were regarded as sufficiently low-risk to enter the human food chain without testing.

There are currently 66 BAS herds in Great Britain. The total number of BAS cattle is 4,000, out of a total UK herd of 5.3 million. Last year 181 cattle were slaughtered for human consumption under the scheme.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to improve the response time to parliamentary questions. [47706]

Ms Blears: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the Secretary of State (Mr. Milburn) gave the hon. Member for Ellesmere Port and Neston (Mr. Miller) on 25 March 2002, Official Report, columns 756W-59W).

Prescribing Rate

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average general prescribing rate for all practices was in 2001–02. [47290]

Ms Blears: The average number of prescription items per head of population dispensed in the community in England in the period October 2000 to September 2001 was 11.5.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if the PSA target to improve continuity of care given to children looked after by local authorities by reducing to no more than 18 per cent. in all authorities the proportion of such children who leave three or more placements in one year by 2001 was achieved; [47284]

(2) if the PSA target to increase to at least 50 per cent. by 2001 the proportions of children leaving care aged 16 or above with nine GCSE or GNVQ qualifications was met; [47282]

(3) if the PSA target to increase to at least 75 per cent. by 2003 the proportion of children leaving care aged 16 or above with a GCSE or GNVQ qualification will be met. [47283]

Jacqui Smith: Information about progress on PSA targets will be published in the Department's 2002 Departmental Report.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of whether the PSA target to reduce the national average emergency psychiatric re-admission rate by two percentage points by 2002 will be met. [47286]

Jacqui Smith: The most recent assessment made on whether the PSA target to reduce the national average emergency psychiatric re-admission rate by two percentage points by 2002 will be met is shown in the table. This indicates that the target was achieved for the third quarter of 2001–02 but that the current forecast is for the average for the whole year to be 0.4 percentage points above the target reduction.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if the PSA target for the appointment of new practice nurses by 2002 will be met on time; [47296]

(2) if the PSA target for the improvement of the quality of primary care premises targeted towards areas of deprivation will be met on time; [47295]

(3) if the PSA target of a national average annual increase of 1 per cent. whole-time equivalent GPs by 2002 will be met on time. [47297]

Mr. Hutton: We are on track to achieve each of these targets.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of whether the PSA target to review at least 60 per cent. of services will be met. [47279]

Jacqui Smith: Information about progress on public service agreement targets, including Better Quality Services, will be published in the Department's 2002 Departmental report.

PFI Projects

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated average cost of preparing and submitting tenders for PFI projects in his Department; and how much he expects to spend reimbursing such costs under the PFI hospital building programme to be completed by 2010. [47791]

Mr. Hutton: Information on the costs to the private sector of preparing and submitting tenders is not collected. There has been no change in policy regarding the reimbursement of bid costs. At present, the winning contractor recovers their bid costs as part of the overall tender price. Losing bidders are not reimbursed.

Following a review of the PFI process, with the objective of speeding up and simplifying the PFI process, two changes were announced on 18 March. Firstly, if Trusts require further clarification after Best and Final Offers (BAFOs) have been submitted, and Trusts want these clarifications to be undertaken by both bidders in a competitive environment, then the additional bid costs of both bidders will have to be refunded. Trusts will need to agree how these additional costs will be calculated. The reimbursement only applies to the additional cost of the clarification work done in a competitive situation. The second change is that a budget for bid costs will be set at BAFO stage, within which the winning bidder will have to keep. If their costs to financial close are less, then they keep the difference. If they are greater, the cost must be met by them. The losing bidder will not be entitled to receive anything as by definition they cannot reach financial close.

These changes have been made to incentivise both Trusts and the private sector to reach financial close. As overall costs will be less as a result of these changes, no estimates of cost have been prepared.

Mixed-Sex Wards

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to end the use of mixed sex wards in NHS hospitals in England. [46988]

Ms Blears: Guidance on maintaining privacy and dignity was first issued to the service in 1997 and since then the national health service has been working towards a clear target to eliminate mixed sex accommodation in 95 per cent. of NHS trusts by December 2002.

Testicular Cancer

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement as to what measures are being taken to raise awareness of testicular cancer and the importance of self-checking, with specific reference to men aged under 35 years. [46761]

Yvette Cooper: The consensus among health professionals is that promoting testicular awareness is the most effective way to tackle this disease. The Department contributed to the recent production of Cancer Research UK's leaflet "Testicular Cancer—spot the symptoms". Copies are available in the Library and will soon be available on both Cancer Research UK's and the Department's websites.

Complaints Procedures

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to expedite the procedures for investigating complaints against NHS medical staff who have been suspended. [46824]

Ms Blears: We are currently in the process of considering reforms to the NHS complaints procedure, including the need to ensure that complaints are resolved as quickly as possible. We are also reviewing the current guidance on suspensions to ensure that cases where the clinical performance of a doctor or dentist gives concern will be dealt with quickly in a fair and effective manner.

Hysterectomies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women in England were given hysterectomies in an NHS hospital in the latest year for which figures are available. [46698]

Yvette Cooper: The following information is extracted from the Hospital Episodes Statistics (HES) system, which contains details of patients admitted to, and treated in, NHS hospitals in England.

	Number of hysterectomy operations
1999–2000	53,132
2000–01	[1]47,053

[1] Provisional. The figure for 2000–01 has not yet been adjusted for shortfalls in data. The final figure, therefore, may be higher.

NHS Appointments

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many appointments to positions and bodies within the NHS (a) he and (b) the NHS Appointments Commission have made since the inception of the NHS Appointments Commission; [46723]

(2) how many people who have been appointed to a position within the NHS by (a) himself and (b) the NHS Appointments Commission have declared a political interest, broken down by political parties; and what proportion of the total number of appointees this represents for each political party between (i) 2 May 1997 and 31 March 2001 and (ii) 1 April 2001 and the latest available date. [46724]

Ms Blears: Since its establishment in April 2001, the National Health Service Appointments Commission has made 1,469 executive appointments to the boards of national health service trusts, primary care trusts, health authorities and strategic health authorities. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made 421 appointments to these boards between 1 April and 2 July. This covered the period where the Commission had been formally established, but when the regional commissioners had not been appointed.

Information on the political activity of candidates appointed since 2 May 1997 is given in the tables.

Table 1: Secretary of State for Health appointments to NHS trusts, primary care trusts and health authorities from 2 May 1997 to 31 March 2001

Tamoxifen

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost per annum of Tamoxifen for women who do not have breast cancer but are considered to be at high risk. [46722]

Yvette Cooper: Tamoxifen is licensed for the treatment of breast cancer and the treatment of anovulatory infertility.

Tamoxifen is not licensed for the prevention of breast cancer in women who do not have breast cancer. A large international research trial is currently investigating whether tamoxifen can prevent cancer in healthy women who are considered to be at high risk. When the full trial results are published we will consider what action may be appropriate and estimate the cost implications.

Intensive Care Baby Incubators

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many intensive care baby incubators are available for use in London NHS hospitals. [46687]

Mr. Hutton: Data on the availability of intensive care incubators are not collected centrally.

The Department does however have data on the number of neonatal intensive care cots available. There are 146 intensive care cots available at London NHS hospitals.

The Department also has data on the number of cots designated for providing lesser dependency care.

There are 82 High Dependency Cots, 333 Special Care Baby cots and 38 Transitional Care Cots.

Ambulance Response Times

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average time is that it took an ambulance to reach an emergency after the initial 999 call is made in (a) England and (b) Greater London over the last 12 months. [46752]

Ms Blears: This information is not collected centrally in this format.

Information about ambulance response times is contained in the Department of Health Statistical Bulletin "Ambulance Services, England 2000–01". A copy of the Bulletin is in the Library and available at www.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0115.htm

Hospital Waiting Times

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many patients in each of the last 12 months had their first out-patient appointment after waiting (a) less than four, (b) less than eight, (c) less than 12, (d) less than 24 and (e) more than 24 weeks; [46712]

(2) how many people were waiting 13 weeks or more for an out-patient appointment in England in each of the most recent three quarters; [46696]

(3) how many patients since 1997 have waited more than 26 weeks for their first out-patient appointment following GP referral; [46714]

(4) how many patients were waiting more than 13 weeks for their first out-patient appointment following GP referral in each of the last 12 months; [46702]

(5) how many patients in each of the last six years had their first out-patient appointment after waiting (a) less than four, (b) less than eight, (c) less than 12, (d) less than 24 and (e) more than 24 weeks. [46711]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the tables.

Table 1 shows the number of patients who had first outpatient appointments (following referral by a GP) at NHS trusts in England, broken down by the available waiting time bands. This information is published on a quarterly basis.

Table 2 shows the number of patients referred by general practitioners who were on a waiting list for their first outpatient appointment at the end of the quarter, and had been waiting over 13 weeks at that time. This information is also published on a quarterly basis.

Table 1: Number of patients who had a first outpatient appointment in the quarter following GP referral, by time waited: England (NHS trust based)

NHS Appointments Commission

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the members of the NHS Appointments Commission and their qualifications; and if he will make a statement on the appointment process for the membership of the Commission; [46718]

(2) how many members of the NHS Appointments Commission have declared themselves to have been politically active in the last five years; and in which political parties they have been active. [46717]

Ms Blears: Details of the chair and members of National Health Service Appointments Commission were given in press releases issued at the time of their appointment. Copies are available in the Library. The chair and all the commissioners declared in their applications that they had not undertaken any political activity in the last five years.

The appointments process was carried out in accordance with the Code of Practice issued by the Commissioner for Public Appointments. The posts were advertised nationally, and candidates interviewed by properly constituted panels, which included independent members.

London Ambulance Service

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many 999 calls were made to the Greater London Ambulance Service between 20 December 2001 and 3 January 2002 for which it was decided an ambulance was not necessary; and what proportion of calls over this period such calls represented. [46756]

Ms Blears: The London Ambulance Service operates a system of priority despatch, under which all calls are categorised according to their clinical priority. Under this system 6,041 calls received between 20 December 2001 and 3 January 2002 were determined to fall into the categories of neither serious nor life-threatening. This represented 20 per cent. of the total workload for that period.

Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what proportion of patients were seen by a doctor or consultant within one hour of their arrival at accident and emergency in (a) each of the last six years and (b) 2002 to the latest available date. [46728]

Ms Blears: This information requested is not collected centrally.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish the latest quarter figures for accident and emergency waiting times. [47546]

Ms Blears: The number of patients admitted through accident and emergency departments for quarter 4 will be released in the "Quarterly Review", which will be pre-announced shortly. The information is collected on the form "Your guide to the NHS". Latest published figures are for quarter 3 and this is available on the Department's website www.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average accident and emergency department waiting times were (a) in England, (b) in each region and (c) in each NHS trust in the last year; and if he will make a statement. [44056]

Ms Blears: The average waiting time in accident and emergency units is not collected centrally.

NHS Re-admissions

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS re-admissions there were within (a) one, (b) three, (c) six, (d) eight and (e) 12 months of previous treatment in the last quarter of (i) 2001 and (ii) 1997. [46704]

Ms Blears: This information requested is not held centrally.

Brain Cancers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research is (a) underway and (b) planned to commence this year to develop new and more effective chemotherapy drugs for the treatment of serious brain cancers. [46751]

Yvette Cooper: A worldwide review of over 3,000 patients, conducted by the Medical Research Council Clinical Trials Unit (CTU) and published in The Lancet on 23 March 2002 has found that chemotherapy in addition to surgery and radiotherapy may benefit adult patients with certain types of brain tumour.

Previously individual trials that assessed the efficacy of giving chemotherapy as well as surgery and radiotherapy to adults with high grade glioma, and spanned 30 years, did not include enough patients to give clear results. So leading researchers from around the world formed the Glioma Meta-analysis Trialists' Group and provided their original research from 12 trials to the CTU for re-analysis.

The MRC Clinical Trials Unit is currently conducting a Randomised trial of adjuvant PVC (procarbazine, lomustine, and vincristine) chemotherapy for anaplastic oligodendroglioma, which is looking at whether adjuvant chemotherapy following surgery and radiotherapy can provide longer and better survival than surgery and radiotherapy alone.

We made clear in the NHS Cancer Plan of September 2000 that by 2003 the Government would be investing an additional £20 million each year in the infrastructure for cancer research. Progress in establishing the National Translational Cancer Research Network (NTRAC) and the National Cancer Research Network (NCRN) has been rapid and substantial. NTRAC is focusing on speeding up the processes for getting scientific breakthroughs from the laboratory bench to the hospital bedside. NCRN is focusing on doubling the number of cancer patients in clinical trials, including trials of new chemotherapy drugs for brain cancer.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of chemotherapy for patients suffering from brain tumours; and the impact of the treatment upon the life expectancy of brain tumour patients. [46747]

Yvette Cooper: First line treatment for brain tumours is usually surgery and/or radiotherapy. For a patient whose tumour recurs or progresses following surgery and radiotherapy, the chemotherapy treatment options are limited because the currently available agents have only a small chance of being effective.

As indicated in the NHS Cancer Plan, the Department of Health and the National Assembly of Wales are currently considering a proposal for referral to National Institute for Clinical Excellence of service guidance for tumours of the brain and central nervous system.

GP Vacancies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress made in GP recruitment in the last 12 months. [46736]

Mr. Hutton: In the past year we have continued to work closely with the profession on measures to boost general practitioner (GP) numbers and make general practice a better place to work. Good progress has been made. During this period we have boosted recruitment by increasing training places; by recruiting from overseas; and by offering cash incentives, additional training and support to new GPs. We have similarly addressed retention through the revised retainer scheme; by developing flexible career options (especially through personal medical services); through further initiatives to reduce bureaucracy; and by improving GPs' working lives with the introduction of a range of family friendly initiatives. The additional resources which we have made available to the NHS are also enabling primary care trusts and others to give better support to GPs by providing better information technology, better buildings and promoting different ways of working.

Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were admitted to wards from accident and emergency departments after arriving in accident and emergency eight or more hours prior to being moved to a ward in the last 12 months. [46703]

Ms Blears: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Health Care Regulations

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps have been taken by his Department to notify medical practitioners who operate exclusively outside the NHS of the requirements of Clause 4(1)(b) of the Private and Voluntary Health Care (England) Regulations 2001, prior to registration packs being sent out to them; [46796]

(2) what consultations his Department had, and with which professional bodies, concerning the requirements of Clause 4(1)(b) of the Private and Voluntary Health Care (England) Regulations 2001; [46795]

(3) what information his Department made available to those covered by Clause 4(1)(b) of the Private and Voluntary Health Care (England) Regulations 2001, (a) prior to the Regulations being debated by Parliament and (b) prior to their implementation. [46685]

Jacqui Smith: The following organisations were among those consulted by the Department prior to the public consultation on the regulations and national minimum standards for exclusively private medical practitioners:

The Independent Healthcare Association

The British Medical Association

The Independent Doctors Forum

The Network for Private General Practice

Federation of Independent Practitioners

The Royal Colleges

The General Medical Council

The Medicare Group, via the Medicare Centre at Waterloo.

Trade associations for private medical practitioners

The national minimum standards and regulations were developed with the help of an external consultation group comprising users, providers, inspectors, healthcare professionals and specialists. The standards for the different specialties were developed in consultation with appropriate stakeholder organisations, and throughout 2000 and 2001, Dr. Derek Machin, the chair of the BMA group on private practice, assisted in the development of the standards for private medical practitioners.

In early 2001, before the formal consultation period, officials had two meetings with a representative of the Independent Doctors Forum. In July 2001, the regulations and standards were published for a three-month consultation period. The consultation document was also available on the Department's website.

National Care Standards Commission

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the budget for the National Care Standards Commission is for 2002–03; and what it is forecast to be over the next three financial years. [47530]

Jacqui Smith: The National Care Standards Commission provisional resource budget is £132.5 million for 2002–03, of which £1.5 million is a capital budget. This includes provision for capital charges and depreciation, and assumes that a proportion of the budget will be derived from fee income.

Decisions on the level of funding for 2003–04 to 2005–06 will be made in the light of the work on the 2002 spending review.

Social Care Institute for Excellence

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list (a) the number of people who work for the SCIE, (b) its budget allocation for 2001–02 and (c) the expected budget allocation for the next three years. [48685]

Jacqui Smith: The Social Care Institute for Excellence (SCIE) currently have 24 staff in post and the Department made a total resource of £2 million available for 2001–02, of which £1.1 million was a capital budget.

The SCIE budget for 2002–03 is £3.2 million. Decisions on the level of funding for 2003–04 to 2005–06 will be made in the light of the work on the 2002 spending review.

Emergency Ambulance Calls

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost of the response to 999 ambulance calls received between 10pm and 7am in Barnet was in each of the last three years; how many such calls there were; what estimate he has made of the number of such calls for 2002–03; and if he will make a statement. [46877]

Ms Blears: Information about the cost of a response for ambulance services is not required to be collected centrally.

In 1999 a total of 6,699 calls were received in Barnet between 10pm and 7am; in 2000 there were 6,663 calls and in 2001, 6,854 calls were received.

The London Ambulance Service would expect to receive approximately 7,000 calls in Barnet between 10pm and 7am in 2002–03.

Mental Health

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the link between mental health problems in children and adolescents and suicide/self-harm when they are adults. [47440]

Jacqui Smith: Mental disorder in childhood is a risk factor for mental disorder in adulthood, which itself is a risk factor for suicide and self-harm. The continuities between childhood and adulthood vary according to the nature and severity of the disorder.

Under the leadership of Professor Louis Appleby, National Director for Mental Health, we are developing a coherent national suicide prevention strategy. The strategy will strike a balance between a population approach and a focus on specific high risk/high benefit populations. We recognise that young people are a key "at risk" group and one of the key strategy objectives will be to promote the mental health of children and young people. We plan to publish a draft strategy for wide public consultation later this spring.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when (a) he and (b) his Ministers last met Ministers in DfES to discuss co-ordination of children's mental health services with education services. [47441]

Jacqui Smith: Ministers in the Department of Health and the Department for Education and Skills have many regular meetings and, although Ministers have not met specifically to discuss this topic, child mental health services are raised at many of these meetings. In addition, officials at both Departments' meet frequently to discuss multi-agency mental health services for children.

The Department for Education and Skills will be an important contributor to the development of the mental health module of the Children's National Service Framework. This is a major development and will ensure that co-ordination of child and adolescent mental health services is safeguarded when considering the quality of services.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mental health promotion work is taking place with children and adolescents. [47438]

Jacqui Smith: The promotion of children's mental health and the prevention of mental health problems in childhood are central to many Government programmes.

The Mental Health National Service Framework has set mental health promotion as its first standard. The project group taking this work forward has recently published a "Mental Health Promotion Update" focusing on mental health promotion in schools and for children and young people. Programmes such as sure start are designed to ensure that children get the best possible start in life so that they can thrive and make effective use of opportunities when they start school.

The Department for Education and Skills issued guidance last year specifically addressing mental health promotion in schools, to which this Department contributed. This guidance is designed to increase awareness about children's mental health among teachers and to provide examples of good practice.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the cost of delivering a world class mental health service for children and adolescents. [47432]

Jacqui Smith: The National Service Framework for Children, which will include child and adolescent mental health services and the psychological wellbeing of children and young people, will set out service standards to improve the quality of care provided. The framework will take account of studies on the cost of delivering effective services.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the link between mental health problems in children and adolescents and crime. [47439]

Jacqui Smith: The results of a major literature review on antisocial behaviour by young people, commissioned by the Department, was published in 1998 (Rutter, Giller, Hagel—"Antisocial Behaviour by Young People", Cambridge University Press). This looked at international research evidence on antisocial behaviour and covered all the factors relevant to the development of such behaviour in young people, including mental health problems and serious mental disorder. The review clearly illustrated the complex nature of causal relationships in this field and the difficulty of establishing clear links between psychosocial (and other) risk factors and specific behaviours, including criminality.

In addition a report "Psychiatric Morbidity among Young Offenders in England and Wales" was published by the Office for National Statistics in 2000, representing a further analysis of wider survey data on psychiatric morbidity among prisoners originally collected in 1997 on behalf of the Department. The report included a finding that more than nine in 10 of imprisoned young offenders in the survey showed evidence of mental disorder (assessed in the survey as: personality disorder; psychosis; neurotic disorder; drug dependence; and hazardous drinking).

Copies of these documents are available in the Library.

Locum Doctors

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many locum doctors are available, broken down for primary and secondary care, in (a) England, (b) each NHS region and (c) each health authority; [48059]

(2) what arrangements have been made to ensure there are sufficient locum doctors available in each health authority area; and if he will make a statement; [48063]

(3) if he has plans to increase the use of locum doctors from overseas; and if he will make a statement; [48061]

(4) if his Department monitors the availability of sufficient locum doctors to cover each area in England. [48062]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not collected centrally. It is for NHS trusts locally to determine their need for locums and how they are used. However, the Department will be collecting data on medical and dental locums from September 2002 onwards.

From 1 April 2002 all non-principal general practitioners working in the provision of NHS general medical services are required to be on a health authority/primary care trust supplementary list. From June 2002 we will be collecting information on the number of non-principal general practitioners on health authority/primary care trust supplementary lists as part of the GMS census data.

The NHS Plan set out the Government's intention to increase consultant numbers by 7,500 and GPs by 2,000. We expect increases in the number of permanent staff to help reduce demand for locums.

The Department has advertised in Europe, North America, Australia and the Middle East for consultants and GPs. In general, international recruitment for doctors is generating a good level of interest from good quality overseas candidates. The majority of positions will be for full-time consultants. However, some trusts may wish to employ the consultants in locum positions with a view to employing them in permanent positions. This would provide the consultants with an opportunity to experience working in the UK before settling into a permanent post and also enable trusts to assess the induction processes required for the doctor.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many locum doctors there were (a) at the latest available date, (b) in 1999, (c) in 1997 and (d) in 1994. [46740]

Mr. Hutton: The Department stopped collecting data for medical and dental locum numbers in 1996. Data for locum general practitioners are not collected.

Available information is shown in the table.

Hospital, Public Health Medicine and Community Health Services (HCHS): medical and dental locum staff

England at 30 September	Numbers
1996	2,760

Notes:
Figures rounded to the nearest ten.

Locums are either persons working in the temporary absence of a doctor/dentist until their return or someone who fills a temporary post for a period of time or a vacant post until it is filled.

Voluntary Euthanasia

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his policy on voluntary euthanasia. [48021]

Ms Blears: Voluntary euthanasia—the intentional taking of life at the patient's request—is unlawful in the United Kingdom. Anyone alleged to have undertaken it would be open to a charge of murder or manslaughter. Similarly, medical treatment that is either omitted or given to a patient with the specific intention by the health care professional of hastening or inducing death is an illegal act.

The Government have no plans to change the law in this respect.

"Keep Warm, Keep Well"

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was of the Keep Warm, Keep Well leaflet issued by his Department in the winter of 2001–02. [48014]

Jacqui Smith: The cost of the Keep Warm, Keep Well leaflet issued by the Department in the winter of 2001–02 was £257,353.11.

Diabetes

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many patients are receiving treatment for diabetes in England and Wales; [47462]

(2) what his Department's projections are for the number of diabetes sufferers in England and Wales in each of the next 10 years; [47463]

(3) what his Department is doing to promote earlier detection of diabetes; [47464]

(4) what his Department's estimate is of the annual cost of care for a diabetic in financial year 2001–02; [47470]

(5) what his Department's budget committed to the treatment of diabetes is in 2001–02; and what it is projected to be for 2002–03. [47469]

Jacqui Smith: There are an estimated 1.3 million people with diagnosed diabetes in England. Incidence is difficult to predict in diabetes, but it has been estimated that this figure will increase by 3 per cent. each year.

Information is not collected on the cost of treating individuals with diabetes. Around 5 per cent. of total NHS resources, and up to 10 per cent. of hospital in-patient resources are used for the care of people with diabetes.

The Diabetes National Service Framework: "Standards", published in December 2001, sets 12 standards in nine areas, including the prevention and detection of diabetes. We have asked the National Screening Committee to assess the benefits and drawbacks of screening for Type 2 diabetes. The Committee has decided that further research, which may require some complex studies, is needed to inform its advice. It will report to the Department of Health in 2005.

Mobile Operating Theatres

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many MASH type mobile operating theatres are (a) in use and (b) on order; [47459]

(2) what the average cost is of the MASH-type mobile operating theatres being supplied to hospital trusts; [47453]

(3) what guidance has been issued to hospital trusts looking to acquire MASH type mobile operating theatres; [47461]

(4) which hospital trusts are negotiating to acquire MASH type mobile operating theatres. [47460]

Mr. Hutton: The Department does not collect data on how many NHS Trusts are negotiating to acquire mobile operating theatres, or on how many trusts already have them in place. The purchase of mobile operating theatres is a matter for individual NHS trusts to make, in partnership with their commissioners.

Costs for the provision of mobile operating theatres vary according to the type of facility, the costs of securing plumbing and power, and the length of time the facility is likely to be in operation, as well as a range of site-specific conditions. However, the approximate costs are £3,600 a day or £12,000 per week for a "low loader" facility (which can be moved around from day to day) and for Modular kits, which provide a fixed-temporary service, the cost is £1,200 a day or £750,000 as an outright purchase.

Guidance on ventilation in health care premises and operating departments have been issued by NHS Estates. In 1991, NHS Estates issued "Health Building Note 26 on Operating Departments" which covers the planning and design, including space requirements, maintenance, cleaning, energy consumption, engineering and staffing requirements. While the guidance does not refer directly to mobile operating theatres, the standards set out in the guidance applies to all types of operating theatre. Health Technical Memorandum 2025 was issued in 1993 and sets out how the NHS can ensure facilities control and reduce hazards to patients and staff from airborne contaminants, dust and harmful micro-organisms.

Asthma

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures his Department is taking to ensure appropriate medication is provided for children suffering from asthma. [47457]

Jacqui Smith: We commissioned the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) to produce guidance on inhalers for children under five with chronic asthma. Guidance on that topic was issued in September 2000. Further guidance was commissioned from NICE on the clinical and cost effectiveness of inhalers in older children. This appraisal will be available on the NICE website (www.nice.nhs.uk) from 11 April.

Cancer Patients

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cancer patients have been waiting more than four weeks, broken down by cancer types. [47456]

Yvette Cooper: Standards of a maximum wait of one month from diagnosis to first treatment for breast cancer and one month from urgent GP referral to treatment for children's and testicular cancers and acute leukaemia came into effect at the end of December 2001. Central monitoring of these standards began on 1 January 2002 and data will be published on a quarterly basis. Data collection on waiting times to treatment for other tumour types will be introduced as we roll out the Cancer Plan waiting times targets.

Hospital Re-admission Rates

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish the latest quarter figures for hospital re-admission rates for (a) all ages and (b) those aged over 75. [47543]

Jacqui Smith: Quarterly information on re-admissions is only collected for those aged 75 and over. We currently anticipate that the Quarter 4 (January-March) 2001–02 information will be available late in May.

NHS Leadership Centre

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to make an announcement of a permanent appointment to the position of Head of the NHS Leadership Centre. [47534]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 850W.

Health Trusts (Security Staff)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if health trusts are given an allocation of their budgets to fund security staff for hospital accident and emergency departments. [47524]

Ms Blears: Security and safety of staff, patients and property in the national health service is of great importance to the Government. It is for health authorities in partnership with primary care trusts and other local stakeholders to determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services.

Security is provided in trusts by 'in-house' staff or by private security organisations. The method of provision and level of staffing is a matter for individual trusts dependent on the size of the hospital, the locality, staffing levels and the general configuration of the building.

Guidance on effective management of security in accident and emergency departments was issued by the NHS Executive in 1997 and was an important aspect of the Government strategy when funding the upgrading of A and E departments.

NHS Patients (Overseas Treatment)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the policy of his Department is on sending national health service patients for treatment in South Africa; and which health authorities have approached his Department about sending NHS patients for treatment in South Africa. [47455]

Mr. Hutton: Our policy on commissioning health care outside the European Economic Area remains that such commissioning should only take place where exceptional circumstances apply. No health authorities have approached the Department about sending NHS patients for treatment in South Africa.

NHS Beds

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds are available in the NHS. [47734]

Ms Blears: The latest information on the average daily number of available beds for England is on the Department of Health website www.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity

Anti-impotence Drugs

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria were used to decide which medical conditions qualify for anti-impotence prescribing; and if he will make a statement. [37637]

Ms Blears: In 1999 we decided to constrain the spend on drug treatments for impotence broadly within the range £12-£14 million a year, the approximate amount that was being spent on these treatments before the first oral treatment became available. The medical conditions conferring eligibility for NHS prescriptions from GPs were those believed to be commonly associated with impotence that we estimated could be met within the spending range (although, in fact, latest figures indicate that annual expenditure on drug treatments for impotence is £25 million). This does not mean that patients suffering from impotence arising from other causes have no access to drug treatment on the NHS. NHS treatment for such patients is available from specialist services where impotence is causing severe distress.

Following a review in 2001, we decided to continue the existing scheme.

Clive Mason

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met Clive Mason of his advisory task force. [40881]

Mr. Hutton: Clive Mason was a member of the NHS task force on Staff Involvement that was announced in January 1998 by the then Secretary of State my right hon. Friend, the Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson). The task force was set up to report on how front-line health service staff worked with local managers to improve services. Following the production of their report in July 1999 the task force was disbanded. According to records Clive Mason has not met with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State.

Boarding Schools

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he proposes to respond to the representations made in October 2001 by the Independent Schools Council about the charges proposed for the welfare inspections of boarding schools. [41944]

Jacqui Smith: I replied to the Independent Schools Council on 1 March 2002. Department of Health officials have also had discussions with the Independent Schools Council on issues relating to regulation by the National Care Standards Commission.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his Department's policy is towards age discrimination. [42578]

Jacqui Smith: The aim of standard 1 of the National Services Framework for Older People is rooting out age discrimination.

The Department is committed to ensure that older people are never unfairly discriminated and has an equal opportunities policy that encompasses this. The Department's valuing diversity policy states that:

> "Everyone who works for the Department of Health or with it should be treated fairly and with respect. This is regardless of race, nationality, ethnicity, personal beliefs, colour, gender, sexual orientation, disability, age, responsibility for dependants, working pattern or position in the organisation"

All staff are provided access to training and promotion without regard to their age—the criteria that apply relate to the individual's capability and business need.

Respiratory Specialists

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions he has had with the British Thoracic Society concerning the number of respiratory specialists in the NHS. [42707]

Mr. Hutton: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met representatives from the British Thoracic Society and the British Lung Foundation on 5 March and discussed a number of issues at the meeting including the number of respiratory specialists in the NHS.

We recognise that treatment of respiratory disease is a high priority specialised area. In 1997 there were 109 Specialist Registrars in Respiratory Medicine. This figure has increased year-on- year and by 2001 had reached 257. This represents a significant increase. As of 30 September 2001 there were 1,020 hospital medical staff within the Respiratory Medicine speciality. This number included 470 consultants.

Timber and Wood Products

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the companies from which his Department have obtained timber and wood products and the total spent with each firm over the last five years. [43412]

Ms Blears: There is no central record of companies from which the Department obtains timber and wood products.

The Department has a contract for furniture in its offices with Kinnarps (UK) Ltd. for the supply, replacement and renewal of wooden office furniture and the amount spent with that firm over the last five years is:

	£000s (excluding VAT)
1996–97	211
1997–98	337
1998–99	401
1999–2000	637
2000–01	364

Building Land

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors inform the decision to sell his Department's real estate as building land; and if he will make a statement. [43563]

Ms Blears: Once a property has been identified as surplus to national health service (NHS) requirements it will be disposed of. In accordance with Treasury guidance a planning application is likely to be made that will maximise the receipt that will then be re-invested in new NHS capital developments. The local planning authority is responsible for determining the alternative use of the land. Most surplus land disposals over the past few years have been for residential development.

Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it is his policy that Persons Responsible should be indemnified by their (a) employer and (b) defence body under the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990. [43611]

Yvette Cooper: Within the national health service, employing authorities should make appropriate indemnity arrangements in discussion with the Person Responsible. Outside the NHS, the Person Responsible should make their own arrangements for liability cover in discussion with their employer where appropriate.

Deep Vein Thrombosis

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial contribution HMG has agreed to make toward the World Health Organisation research into air travel and deep vein thrombosis. [43803]

Yvette Cooper: Representatives from the Department and the Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions will be visiting the World Health Organisation before the end of March 2002 specifically to discuss funding for research into air travel and deep vein thrombosis.

North and East Devon Health Authority

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the change in the number of care home beds in the North and East Devon health authority since 1997. [43626]

Ms Blears: Information on the number of nursing care beds in the North and East Devon health authority since 1997 at 31 March each year is shown in the table.

Nursing care beds in North and East Devon Health Authority.

Year (as at 31 March)	Nursing care beds[1]
1997[2]	2,620
1998	2,410
1999	2,280
2000	2,080
2001	2,020

[1] Includes beds in private hospitals and clinics.
[2] Relates to the period 1 October 1996 to 31 March 1997.
Note:
Numbers are rounded

Department of Health's annual returns.

The Department has allocated an additional £1,082,000 in 2001–02 and £2,270,000 in 2002–03 to Devon county council to assist in stabilising and maintaining capacity in the care home sector.

Further information on the number of residential and nursing care home beds in residential and nursing care homes is available in the statistical bulletin "Community Care Statistics 2001: Residential Personal Social Services for Adults, England" available at http://www.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0129.htm.

Sellafield

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what dates, and where, (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have met the Irish Government to discuss the British Nuclear Fuels plant at Sellafield since 5 October 2001; and which Ministers and which Irish Government Departments were involved in each meeting. [43474]

Yvette Cooper: Officials from the Department have been involved in two meetings since 5 October 2001 with the Irish Government to discuss the British Nuclear Fuels plant at Sellafield. These meetings were on:

11 December 2001—Compliance with the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea (ITLOS) Provisional Measures Order (Dublin, Ireland) involving officials from the Department, the Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) and other Government Departments, the Department of Public Enterprise (Ireland) and the Radiological Protection Institute of Ireland.

15 February 2002—UK Ireland Contact Group on Radioactivity (London) involving officials from the Department, DEFRA, other Government Departments, devolved Administrations, Department of Public Enterprise (Ireland), Radiological Protection Institute of Ireland and the Isle of Man Government.

Heart Disease

Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the United Kingdom have been prescribed statins for heart disease in each of the last five years. [43869]

Yvette Cooper: The number of prescription items dispensed in the community for statins in England for the period 1996 to 2000, and the first three quarters of 2001 is listed in the table. The actual number of people being prescribed drugs is not collected. The data include statins prescriptions written in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland but dispensed in England. The data do not cover drugs dispensed in hospital or private prescriptions. Information about prescriptions written and dispensed in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are matters for the devolved Administrations.

Thousand

Year	Prescription items
1996	2,053.1
1997	3,316.1
1998	4,988.5
1999	6,989.6
2000	9,423.0
January to September 2001	9,070.0

Parkinson's Disease

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what actions he is taking to raise awareness of Parkinson's Disease. [43967]

Jacqui Smith: The National Service Framework (NSF) for long-term conditions (NSF) will have a particular focus on the needs of people with neurological disease, brain and spinal injury, as well as some of the common issues faced by people with a long-term condition. It will include services for people with epilepsy, Multiple Sclerosis, Parkinson's Disease, Motor Neurone Disease and other similar conditions.

Lung Cancer

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to improve the early detection of lung cancer. [43945]

Yvette Cooper: Trials for lung cancer screening conducted in the United States and Czechoslovakia in the 1970s using chest x-rays and/or sputum cytology showed no reduction in cancer mortality. Recent research has shown that low dose spiral computer tomography (CT) scanning can identify lung cancer in asymptomatic individuals at high risk. While this research suggests that CT scanning may be a useful screening test for lung cancer, more research is needed. A proposal for a trial in the United Kingdom is being considered by Medical Research Council.

Domiciliary Oxygen Therapy

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how must has been spent by (a) his Department and (b) each trust or health authority, in each of the last five years on each type of prescribed domiciliary oxygen therapy. [44301]

Ms Blears: The tables set out payments made for domiciliary oxygen therapy. The payments are made by the Prescription Pricing Authority, on behalf of HAs who are responsible for the provision of these services. The tables cover payments for services, hardware and concentrators between 1997–98 and 2001–02. Also included is the net ingredient cost of oxygen gas and masks in 1999–2000 and 2000–01; the only financial years for which data by health authority are available.

Breast Cancer

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of women aged 50 to 64 years were screened for breast cancer in (a) England and (b) each health authority in 2000–01. [44274]

Yvette Cooper: In 2000–01 70 per cent. of women aged 50–64 were screened for breast cancer. Information about the percentage of women screened in each health authority is provided in the statistical bulletin "Breast Screening Programme, England: 2000–01". Copies are available in the Library.

Premature Babies

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the clinical needs of premature babies will be addressed within the maternity services section of the planned National Service Framework on Children. [45097]

Yvette Cooper: We have established a number of External Working Groups to provide advice on standards for the Children's National Service Framework. The needs of premature babies will be considered as part of the work of any relevant External Working Groups including maternity services.

Western Sussex Primary Care Trust

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what capital allocations have been and will be made in respect of GP premises in the Western Sussex Primary Care Trust for 2001–02. [45337]

Ms Blears: The Western Sussex Primary Care Trust is an amalgamation of Regis and Chichester and Rural Primary Care Groups (PCGs). These PCGs received a share of the additional moneys for investment in primary care premises that were allocated towards the end of 2001. These were £25,000 for 2001–02 and £50,000 for 2002–03.

In addition, the PCGs have accessed the West Sussex General Medical Services discretionary fund, which included over £500,000 for cost rent and improvement grant projects. The Western Sussex share of that was £140,000 or 28 per cent. of the funding. With the agreement of all PCGs and Primary Care Trusts in West Sussex, this money has been held and managed as a shared resource for 2001–02.

Fibromyalgia

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have been diagnosed with fibromyalgia in (a) the Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) Tyne and Wear, (d) the north east and (e) the UK; what information and support is available to people diagnosed with fibromyalgia; how many multidisciplinary clinics for fibromyalgia there are in the UK; and if he plans to fund a multidisciplinary clinic for fibromyalgia in the north east. [45217]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested on the incidence of fibromyalgia is not available in the form requested, as we do not collect data on the incidence of individual conditions. We do, however, have some information on finished consultant episodes as shown in the table.

Finished consultant episodes (FCES) for fibromyalgia[1] by area of residence NHS hospitals, England 2000–01

Area of residence	Number
QDG Gateshead and South Tyneside HA	33
Northern and Yorkshire RO	227
England	1,360

The diagnosis (ICD-10) code used was M79.0—Other soft tissue disorders, not elsewhere classified; rheumatism, unspecified. This includes fibromyalgia and fibrositis.

An FCE is defined as a period of patient care under one consultant in one health care provider. The figures do not represent the number of patients, as one person may have several episodes within the year. Figures in this table have not yet been adjusted for shortfalls in data.

People with fibromyalgia can access the normal range of NHS services according to their needs. There is also information available from NHS Direct on fibromyalgia either by telephone or on their website.

We do not hold information centrally on how NHS services are configured locally. It is for NHS authorities in the north east to decide whether or not they want to fund a multidisciplinary clinic for fibromyalgia as they are responsible for commissioning local services.

Suicides

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress he has made towards his target for the reduction of suicides; and if he will make a statement. [43718]

Jacqui Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for North-East Hertfordshire (Mr. Heald) on 23 October 2001, Official Report, column 147W.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations he has received from PCGs and PCTs on their state of preparation for new PCT responsibilities. [46737]

Mr. Hutton: I have received no representations from primary care groups (PCGs) or primary care trusts (PCTs) on their state of preparation for their new PCT responsibilities. All PCTs have been established after full and open consultation locally, giving every opportunity for views and concerns to be expressed and addressed at that stage.

Ring-fenced Funding

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to what extent ring-fenced money allocated to specific services in Barnet (a) was used in 2001–02 and (b) is proposed to be used in 2002–03 for reducing deficits and for other purposes outside the ring-fence; what the original ring-fencing was proposed for in each case; and if he will make a statement. [46878]

Mr. Hutton: The main unified allocation for 2001–02 made to health authorities did not include ring-fenced allocations for specific services.

In 2001–02, some funds were hypothecated at a national level only.

In 2002–03, there is limited earmarking of funds within allocations. This is to allow HAs to be able to manage flexibly the resources available to them. The following sums are included in allocations with the intention that they are spent on the purpose for which they were allocated.

Barnet Primary Care Trust is still in the process of agreeing its financial plan for 2002–03.

York Formula Calculations

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to announce the findings of the review into the York formula calculations. [47526]

Mr. Hutton: The intention is that, following the review, the new formula will be ready for 2003–04 allocations. We plan to announce these in the autumn.

Social Workers

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many social workers have been recruited by local authorities since the Government launched its publicised recruitment drive last year. [47553]

Jacqui Smith: There was a rise of 780 whole-time equivalent social work staff working for councils between 30 September 1999 and 30 September 2000. More recent figures are not yet available. However, the main aim of the social care recruitment campaign is to raise the number of people applying for social work training by 5,000 by 2004. As the current social work training takes two years, and the earliest that someone reacting to the campaign could join a course is autumn 2002, we would not expect to see the effects of the campaign on an increase in social workers being recruited by local authorities until summer 2004 at the earliest.

Radiographers

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the vacancy rates for radiographers, broken down by health authority. [47547]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Hypothermia (Portsmouth)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pensioners in Portsmouth have died from hypothermia in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [46443]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mike Hancock, dated 10 April 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question concerning how many pensioners in Portsmouth have died from hypothermia in the last 12 months. (46443)

The most recent annual figures are for the calendar year 2000. In that year, of those resident in Portsmouth Unitary Authority at death, there were four deaths among men aged 65 and over and women aged 60 and over where hypothermia (International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision code 991.6) was mentioned on the death certificate.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which public service agreement targets scheduled to be met in 2002 will not be achieved by the due date. [44820]

Mr. Hutton: Information about progress on public service agreement targets will be published in the Department's 2002 departmental report.

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the (a) private finance initiative and (b) public private partnership projects which have been delayed. [44875]

Mr. Hutton: A delay of three months was experienced in assessing the "Retention of Employment" model at the three pilot sites. However, as announced on 18 March 2002, we are now satisfied that the model does provide value for money and that we will be proceeding on this basis for future national health service private finance initiative (PFI) projects.

No other PFI schemes are at a stage where the model has caused any delays.

Medical Negligence Claims

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total amount paid by the NHS for medical negligence claims in 2001–02. [45171]

Ms Blears: Figures for clinical negligence expenditure by the NHS can be found in the National Audit Summarised Accounts for Health Authorities, NHS Trusts and the NHS Litigation Authority.

The Figure for 2001–02 is not yet available.

Anaesthesia Services

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many community hospitals no longer carry out operations under general anaesthetic because of a shortage of consultant anaesthetists. [45108]

Mr. Hutton: The Department does not collect figures on the numbers of community hospitals which carry out operations under general anaesthetic.

At September 2001, there were 3,550 (headcount) consultant anaesthetists (whole-time equivalent 3,320) for all trusts in England. Our current projections show that by 2004, there will be an increase of around 1,070 trained specialists in anaesthetics.

Road Accidents

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average length of time was which it took the medical services to complete all their official duties at an accident site on (a) an A-road and (b) a motorway in each of the last three years. [42787]

Ms Blears: The information is not available in the form requested. Information about the proportion of emergency calls resulting in an ambulance arriving at the scene of a reported incident within our target response times for NHS ambulance trusts in England, are contained in the Department's Statistical Bulletin "Ambulance Services, England 2000–01". A copy is in the Library and available on the Department's website at www.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0115.htm.

Regulatory Impact Unit

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many members his Department employs in its regulatory impact unit; and if he will make a statement. [42937]

Ms Blears: Two officials are employed under the leadership of a branch head within my Department's regulatory impact unit. The unit works with the Department's policy officials and the Cabinet Office regulatory impact unit to prepare regulatory impact assessments and identify suitable regulatory reform measures.

Fluoride

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial support he gives to organisations which promote the use of fluoride. [43076]

Ms Blears: We have given financial support to the British Fluoridation Society since 1975. The Society has both a promotional role and an information gathering function, and produces objective, evidence based information when responding to inquiries.

Strategic Health Authorities

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will encourage strategic health authorities to establish their headquarters as close to the balance of population in the area as possible. [42095]

Mr. Hutton: The location of headquarters for new strategic health authorities is a matter for the Chief Executive (designate) and the Chair (designate) in the light of options appraisals conducted at the same time as the boundary consultation exercise. The Department does not consider it necessary to offer specific advice to the leaders of the new StHAs on the location of their headquarters.

Adolescent Mental Health Unit, Tolworth

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his estimate is of the cost of opening a new adolescent mental health unit at Tolworth. [47499]

Jacqui Smith: The estimated cost of opening a new adolescent mental health unit at Tolworth was given as £1.7 million in the outline business case.

Mental Health

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library the initial estimates of the cost of delivering a world-class mental health service referred to on page 115 of "Securing Our Future Health: Taking a Long-Term View". [47431]

Jacqui Smith: The initial estimate of the cost of delivering a world-class mental health service has already been given on page 115 of "Securing Our Future Health: Taking a Long-Term View". This estimate was £3.2 billion per year.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are (a) rough sleepers and (b) suffer from mental illness. [47435]

Jacqui Smith: The Prime Minister announced on 3 December 2001 that his target to reduce rough sleeping by two thirds had been met and that 532 people were sleeping rough in England, compared to around 1,850 in June 1998. This represents a reduction of 71 per cent.

The support needs profile identified in the Social Exclusion Unit's 1998 report into rough sleeping highlighted that 30–50 per cent. had mental health problems. The Homelessness Directorate is currently looking into the support needs of those people that remain sleeping rough to ascertain whether people are refusing offers of help to come inside as a lifestyle choice or due to other factors such as mental health or substance misuse issues.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on the promotion of mental health services (a) in the UK and (b) in target specific groups in the last three years; and if he will list the campaigns. [42392]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not available centrally. However, Standard One of the National Service Framework for Mental Health requires health and social services in England to promote mental health for all, working with individuals and communities, and to combat discrimination against individuals and groups with mental health problems, and promote their social inclusion. Local services have been asked to develop and agree evidence-based mental health promotion strategies based on local needs assessment by March 2002.

In addition, the Department has developed its "mind out for mental health" campaign to tackle the stigma and discrimination faced by peopie with mental health problems. This campaign is targeting three particular groups: employers, young people and the media as well as the public at large. In the financial year 2000–01 the Department spent £573,000 on the mind out for mental health campaign. £900,000 has been allocated to the campaign in the year 2001–2002.

NHS Concordat

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations have been carried out under the NHS Concordat since November 2000. [47522]

Mr. Hutton: Since November 2000 the Independent Healthcare Association (IHA) has collected monthly data from independent healthcare providers about the number of NHS patients treated by them. According to data made available to the Department by the IHA, between November 2000 and January 2002 (the latest month for which figures are available) at least 88,000 procedures were carried out in the independent sector in England, paid for by the NHS. This includes out-patient appointments, day cases and in-patient treatment.

NHS Patients (Overseas Treatment)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his Department's policy is for national health service patients having received treatment in French and German facilities having follow-on treatment there if equivalent treatment can be provided locally. [47452]

Mr. Hutton: The national health service commissioners involved in the pilot programme for sending NHS patients overseas have aimed to purchase complete packages of care for patients, so as to reduce as far as possible the burden on the NHS of follow-up treatment. Any subsequent care and treatment that is required is organised by the NHS locally.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to make an announcement on the cost of NHS patients being treated in continental hospitals. [47521]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Leominster (Mr. Wiggin) on 13 February 2002, Official Report, column 486W.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out the per capita spending on the NHS in 2001–02 in England; and the equivalent figures for planned expenditure in 2002–03. [R] [48253]

Mr. Hutton: Planned NHS expenditure per capita is set out in the table.

	Spend per capita
2001–02	970
2002–03	1,060

NHS Staff

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimates he has made of the cost to the NHS of investigations of NHS staff who have been suspended from work in the last two years. [46825]

Mr. Hutton: The cost of investigating suspended national health service staff is a matter for national health service employers. The Department collects quarterly information in regard to the suspension of hospital medical and dental staff and overall costs incurred. At 31 December 2001, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 29 doctors and community dentists currently suspended for more than six months.

Procurement Savings

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what level of procurement savings he expects NHS trusts to achieve in 2001–02. [47291]

Mr. Hutton: The Audit Commission and the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency have been collating information on the level of procurement savings achieved by acute NHS trusts in England in 2001–02. This information will be available from May 2002.

NHS Complaints Procedure

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to allow patients to be given the right to have a complaint heard within the NHS complaints procedure when a hospital has treated the matter as disciplinary; and if he will make a statement. [44937]

Ms Blears: A complaint can already be either investigated or recommenced under the NHS complaints procedure if it has firstly, or at some point during the complaints procedure, been referred to a NHS trust's disciplinary process. This would only happen where there were outstanding matters in the complaint that had been considered, but not resolved, by the disciplinary process. Any issues in the complaint not referred to the disciplinary process should continue to be investigated under the complaints procedure.

Appointments

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of appointees by the NHS Appointments Commission to NHS trusts, health authorities and PCTs in Somerset and Dorset since 1 April 2001 have declared political activity with the (a) Labour party, (b) Conservative party and (c) Liberal Democrats. [43852]

Ms Blears: The political activity declared by candidates appointed to national health service boards in Somerset and Dorset by the NHS Appointments Commission since the commission's establishment on 1 April 2001 has been as follows:

	Number
None declared	15
Conservative	1
Labour	3
Liberal Democrat	5
Total	24

Departmental Contracts

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by his Department from (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999, (c) May 1999 to April 2000, (d) May 2000 to April 2001 and (e) May 2001 to the latest date for which figures are available, stating in each case the values of the contracts and the companies with which the contracts were placed. [43682]

Ms Blears: The Department does not centrally hold information on individual contract values. It is not possible to provide a full answer to this question without disproportionate cost.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in Greater London had been waiting up to (a) six, (b) 12, (c) 15 and (d) 18 months for hospital treatment in each month since October 2001. [46726]

Mr. Hutton: The number of patients in Greater London waiting up to (a) six, (b) 12, (c) 15 and (d) 18 months for hospital treatment in each month from October 2001 until the end of February 2002 are shown in the table.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people were waiting in England for in-patient treatment at the latest date for which figures are available; [46695]

(2) how many people in England were waiting (a) up to 12, (b) up to 15, (c) up to 18 and (d) over 18 months for in-patient treatment in each of the last six months. [46697]

Mr. Hutton: There were 1,050,400 patients waiting for an elective admission to a NHS trust in England at 28 February 2002.

The table shows the number of patients waiting for elective admission by length of time waited in each of the last six months.

Operations

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the variation in the cost of operations in NHS hospitals and health authorities. [46732]

Mr. Hutton: The latest information on the variation in the cost of operations in NHS hospitals is provided in 'Reference Costs 2001'. (Copies of this are held in the Library. It also available at www.doh.gov.uk/nhsexec/refcosts.htm.) There is no information on the cost of operations by health authorities.

An analysis of the published information on reference costs shows there is still a significant variation in the cost of some operations. Publishing comparative information of this sort is part of a wider strategy to improve performance in the NHS, which also includes:

Investment—including 7,500 more consultants and 20,000 more nurses by 2004;

National standards—such as those set out in the National Service Frameworks;

Stronger regulation and inspection—where the Commission for Health Improvement will play a key role; and Spreading best practice—for example, by the Modernisation Agency.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the variation in the cost of a hip replacement operation in an NHS hospital. [46733]

Mr. Hutton: The reference costs provide the best source of information on the variation in the cost of hip replacement operations. (Copies of this are held in the Library and it also available at www.doh.gov.uk/nhsexec/refcosts.htm.) The information for 2000–01 includes the following for elective primary hip replacements:

Average cost for England	4,179
Inter-quartile range	3,650 to 4,702
Lowest recorded cost	566
Highest recorded cost	12,907

The extent of care delivered within this definition can vary, because of local factors such as service delivery and data recording. The best indicator of cost variation is the inter-quartile range as this contains a significantly high percentage of total activity.

NHS Professionals

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the additional costs involved in providing temporary staff with enhanced contractual terms through NHS Professionals. [41721]

Mr. Hutton: NHS Professionals charges a management fee to recoup operating costs currently set at a maximum of 7.5 per cent. This compares favourably with that of commercial agencies as highlighted in the Audit Commission report "Brief Encounters—Getting the Best from Temporary Nursing Staff". This report indicated wide variations in the commission rates charged by agencies with an averaging charge of 20.5 per cent.

NHS Properties

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the (a) estimated and (b) actual value of NHS property sales in each of the last five years; [41705]

(2) how many NHS properties are (a) for sale and (b) scheduled to be sold; and what their estimated sale value is on the open market; [41704]

(3) how many NHS properties are empty. [41702]

Ms Blears: The planned and actual receipts from sale of property from when the spending review process started is as follows.

£ million

Year	Planned	Actual
1997–98	289	471
1998–99	272	500
1999–2000	337	549
2000–01	363	647

Note:

Figures shown for Hospital and Community Health Services capital receipts.

The main reason for the disparity between planned and actual sales is due to transfers between NHS trusts or to NHS trusts from the Secretary of State for Health's ownership being recorded as a sale.

Details of how many properties are for sale or scheduled for sale is not held centrally. The planned receipts from sales of property is:

	Planned (£ million)
2001–02	351
2002–03	470
2003–04	270

Note:

Figures shown for Hospital and Community Health Services planned capital receipts.

The Department does not hold information about the numbers of properties that are vacant at any one time. There are a variety of reasons why property might be vacant, including awaiting refurbishment/development for health care purposes, or awaiting sale. The NHS seeks to make the optimum use of the estate, and to keep the number of empty properties to a minimum.

Medical Treatment

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many UK patients were treated in each overseas country (a) in and (b) outside the EEA in 2000–01; and how many patients from each country (i) in and (ii) outside the EEA were treated in the UK in each year. [40877]

Mr. Hutton: The available information has been placed in the Library.

UK residents are treated abroad in a variety of circumstances. No information is held centrally on treatment obtained abroad privately and which are the patients' own responsibility. Patients are likewise personally responsible for arranging and paying for treatments given in countries with which the UK has no reciprocal health agreements, with the exception of a few instances where special approval has been given for the NHS to pay for highly specialised treatment for serious conditions.

There are reciprocal health agreements with some non-EEA countries which provide emergency care for UK residents on temporary visits. But because these are on a cost waiver basis there is generally little information available to the UK on numbers of patients treated in the partner country.

Regulation (EEC) 1408/71 is the EC legislation which co-ordinates the health care systems of the EEA. It allows for health care to be provided abroad in a variety of circumstances. Member states pay each other for these treatments but information available is generally on treatment costs rather than patient numbers.

For patients coming to the UK, no information is held by the Department on treatments in the private sector. Neither is information held centrally on the number of patients not normally resident in the UK who have been treated by the NHS.

The bilateral health agreements with the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man, some Caribbean and Atlantic Overseas Territories, Gibraltar and Malta permit limited numbers of referrals to the UK specifically for treatment. Some information is available centrally in respect of emergency treatments provided in the UK under bilateral reciprocal health agreements and in respect of treatments provided under Regulation 1408/71.

Cataracts

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost to the NHS of (a) a cataract extraction and (b) a cataract extraction with a lens implant was in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [43499]

Ms Blears: The national average cost for a cataract extraction with lens implant varies according to how the procedure is undertaken. For 2000–01 the national unit costs are:

	Unit cost £
Phakoemulsification cataract extraction with lens implant
Elective in-patient	861
Non-elective in-patient	1,073
Day case	583
Other cataract extraction with lens implant
Elective in-patient	799
Non-elective in-patient	1,283
Day case	572

These costs exclude the cost of out-patient attendances. In 2000–01, 594,320 such attendances were reported for cataract and lenses. The unit cost is £60 per attendance.

No separate costings are available for a cataract extraction without implant.

Hearing Aids

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 833W, on hearing aids, when he expects to announce the latest wave of trusts sites to receive funding for the provision of digital hearing aids. [47539]

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has determined the additional hospital trusts which will be able to offer digital hearing aids; and when an announcement will be made. [48547]

Jacqui Smith: I am happy to announce that the sites listed will form the second wave of the Modernising Hearing Aid Services pilot project:

Barking, Havering and Redbridge NHS Trust

Bolton Hospital NHS Trust

Bournemouth Primary Care Trust

Brighton Healthcare NHS Trust

Countess of Chester NHS Trust

Croydon and Surrey Downs and Mayday University Hospitals NHS Trust

Gloucestershire Royal Infirmary NHS Trust

Great Ormond Street Hospital NHS Trust

Mid Cheshire Healthcare NHS Trust

North Hampshire Hospitals NHS Trust

George Eliot Hospital NHS Trust

The Royal Free Hospital

Rochdale NHS Trust

Royal Devon and Exeter Hospitals NHS Trust

Salford Primary Care Trust

Sherwood Forest NHS Trust

West Dorset General Hospitals NHS Trust

Southampton University Hospital NHS Trust

University Hospitals of Leicester NHS Trust

Wolverhampton Healthcare NHS Trust

Wrightington, Wigan and Leigh NHS Trust

Wirral Hospitals NHS Trust

Central Manchester and Manchester Children's University Hospital NHS Trust

Essex Rivers Healthcare NHS Trust

East Cheshire NHS Trust

Hastings and Rother NHS Trust

Royal Liverpool Hospitals

Peterborough Hospitals NHS Trust

North Devon Primary Care Trust.

In addition, Trafford Healthcare NHS Trust and the Royal National Throat Nose and Ear Hospital, which provided digital hearing aids to adults only as part of the first wave, will now be providing hearing aids to children as well. University Hospitals Birmingham will now be fitting children's hearing aids at the Birmingham Children's Hospital.

Adoption

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many representations he has received from hon. Members regarding amending the Adoption and Children Bill to extend rights of adoption to unmarried couples; [47372]

(2) how many representations he has received from outside bodies and individuals regarding amending the Adoption and Children Bill to extend rights of adoption to unmarried couples; [47371]

(3) what consultation is taking place by his Department on amending the Adoption and Children Bill to extend rights of adoption to unmarried couples; [47370]

(4) when his Department will announce his policy on amending the Adoption and Children Bill to extend rights of adoption to unmarried couples; [47369]

(5) what his assessment is of the number of unmarried couples who would apply to adopt children if the Adoption and Children Bill were amended to allow them to do so. [47451]

Jacqui Smith: We are looking thoroughly at the many and complex issues of partnership registration, rights and responsibilities. Adoption will, alongside all other relevant issues, be considered as part of that work.

Under the existing Adoption Act 1976 single people may adopt (regardless of sexual orientation), but only married couples may adopt jointly. It is open for one unmarried partner to adopt a child and for the other to obtain parental responsibility by applying for a residence order in respect of the child. The Adoption and Children Bill makes no change in this area. However the Government recognises that it is an issue for debate. We have taken a consultative approach throughout the progress of this Bill, listening to the views of a wide range of interested parties through the Special Standing Committee. A number of amendments, supported by Members from all sides of the House have been tabled for Report stage. We are giving these amendments careful consideration and they will be debated at Report.

Since the introduction of the Adoption and Children Bill on 19 October 2001, the Department has received ten letters regarding adoption by unmarried couples from hon. Members and over 350 from outside bodies and private individuals. In addition there have been five previous Parliamentary Questions answered and two meetings between Ministers and hon. Members on this topic.

A MORI poll commissioned by BAAF in September 2001, "Attitudes to Adoption", found that 41 per cent. of cohabiting couples say they have considered or would consider adopting a child in the future, compared to 25 per cent. of married couples. A copy will be placed in the Library.

Health and Race Co-ordinators

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what discussions his Department has had with the Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham health authority about the role of health and race coordinators; [47478]

(2) how many health and race coordinators are employed by his Department; [47473]

(3) what proposals he has to assess the disciplinary procedure for (a) social workers and (b) health and race coordinators employed by the Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham health authority; [47467]

(4) what the role is of health and race coordinators employed by health authorities; [47472]

(5) what rights of appeal are available to employees of Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham health authority suspended on disciplinary matters; [47468]

(6) what is the policy of his Department on referring health and race coordinators in the Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham health authority to an assessment centre; [47474]

(7) how many health and race coordinators are employed by health authorities in England, broken down by health authority. [47471]

Mr. Hutton: The Department of Health does not employ health and race coordinators and does not require organisations within the NHS to do so. However, many NHS organisations have sought to establish dedicated posts to work on issues of health, race and ethnicity, in response to the diverse needs of their local communities. Information on such posts is not collected centrally.

Similarly, although there are assessment centres for NHS staff in accessing places on a variety of courses, which are mainly linked to management schemes, there is no specific departmental policy on referring health and race coordinators to these centres. This would be a matter for the local NHS as the employer to address.

Neither has the Department had discussions with Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham health authority about health and race coordinators.

The Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham HA do not employ any social workers. They are employed for those areas by the local councils, who are responsible for all disciplinary procedures. All NHS staff have a right of appeal against a disciplinary penalty available to them. This, however, does not include suspension, which does not fall within the definition of a disciplinary penalty.

The Department of Health is committed to equality and diversity. "The NHS Plan: a plan for investment, a plan for reform", published in July 2000, recognises the need for a modern NHS to respond to the needs of our diverse, multi-cultural society.

The Department has also launched an Equalities Framework for the NHS, "The Vital Connection", in April 2000 which includes clear requirements for the NHS to promote race equality and introduces a package of standards, indicators and monitoring arrangements.

Both these documents have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Lung Consultants

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many lung consultants there were in the NHS in each year since 1997 broken down by health authority. [47551]

Mr. Hutton: The information is shown in the table.

Cardio-thoracic consultants and respiratory consultants deal with lungs as part of their wider responsibilities.

Consultants

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of how many additional consultants are needed if consultants work the European legal limit of hours each week. [46693]

Mr. Hutton: We expect that the growth in consultant numbers to deliver the NHS Plan (7,500 more by 2004) and strong continuing growth thereafter will provide sufficient numbers for all consultants to adhere to the European working time directive.

Through new ways of working, supported by pay modernisation, we expect to see increased numbers of staff working more flexibly with increased productivity and some roles currently carried out by consultants being transferred to other members of the health care team.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many consultants practising in the NHS are aged over 55 years; and how many consultants aged over 55 years were practising in (a) 2000, (b) 1998, (c) 1996, (d) 1994 and (e) 1992. [46690]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Hospital, Public Health Medicine and Community Health Services (HCHS): medical and dental consultants, England at 30 September each year

The number of consultants practising in the NHS has increased by 50 per cent. since 1992 and the age profile of the consultant workforce has become younger.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many consultant vacancies there are. [46691]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Consultant vacancies in NHS trusts, England—3 month vacancy rates[1,2] and numbers[3]

	Whole-time equivalents
3 month vacancy rates (percentage)	3.0
3 month vacancies (number)	670
Staff in post	21,630

Notes:

1. Three month vacancies are vacancies as at 31 March 2001 which trusts are actively trying to fill, which had lasted for three months or more (whole time equivalents).
2. Three month vacancy rates are three month vacancies expressed as a percentage of three month vacancies plus staff in post from the September 2000 medical and dental workforce census (whole-time equivalent).
3. Numbers are rounded to the nearest ten.
4. Percentages are rounded to one decimal place.
5. Due to rounding calculating the vacancy rates using the above data may not equal the actual vacancy rates.

Department of Health medical and dental workforce census 2000

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hours consultant physicians are contracted to work per week; how many hours were worked by consultant physicians over the contracted time, on average, in the last 12 months; and how many additional consultants would be needed to maintain levels of service if consultants worked only their contracted hours. [46694]

Mr. Hutton: Consultants hold a professional contract that does not specify particular hours of work. Whole-time and maximum part-time contract holders have a contractual commitment to devote substantially the whole of their professional time, up to 11 sessions, to their NHS duties.

The table shows the number of hospital medical consultants by contract in England as at 30 September 2001. The table gives a breakdown of contract holders on national terms and conditions of service by (a) whole time, (b) maximum part time and (c) part time. The number of honorary contract holders is also provided.

A 1999 survey by management consultants KPMG for the 28th report of the Review Body on Doctors' and Dentists' Remuneration showed that the average number of hours worked per week for whole time consultants, excluding emergency recalls, was 51.3 hours and for maximum part-timers 48.7 hours.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in consultant recruitment in the last 12 months. [46735]

Mr. Hutton: As at 30 September 2001, the date of the Department's annual work force censuses, 1,380 more consultants were working in the national health Service than there were at 30 September 2000. Overall since 1997 the number of consultants employed in the national health service has increased by 4,320 (20 per cent.).

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many consultant physicians there are; and how many there were in each year since 1992. [46692]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table.

The number of consultant physicians has increased by 47 per cent. since 1992.

NHS Staff Suspensions

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many staff within the NHS have been suspended from work as a result of allegations and complaints by whistleblowers in the last two full available years; [46826]

(2) how many whistleblowers have been suspended from work within the NHS as a result of allegations and complaints in the last two full years that figures are available. [46827]

Mr. Hutton: We expect a climate of openness and dialogue in the national health service and a culture and an environment that encourages staff to feel able to raise concerns about health care matters sensibly and responsibly without fear of victimisation.

NHS trusts routinely report suspensions lasting six months or longer to the Department. As at 31 December 2001, the latest date for which figures are available, 29 hospitals and community medical and dental staff had been suspended for more than six months. These suspensions are not as a result of individuals whistleblowing.

Information on the suspension of individuals in other staff groups is not collected within the Department.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what trend data are available to measure progress against the PSA target for a reduction in the death rate from suicide and undetermined injury. [47299]

Jacqui Smith: Data to monitor the PSA target to reduce the death rate from suicide and undetermined injury (less inquest-adjourned cases) are obtained from mortality data published by the Office for National Statistics. Data are for England.

This PSA target is the target published in 2000 in the NHS Plan and previously in 1999 in the White Paper "Saving Lives: Our Healthier Nation" for a 20 per cent. reduction against a baseline of the average age standardised mortality rate for the three years 1995–97.

The trend data are as follows:

Three-year average age standardised

Period	Mortality rate per 100,000 population
1995–96–97	9.07
1996–97–98	9.18
1997–98–99	9.33
1998–99–2000	9.44

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the PSA target for efficiency and other value for money gains in personal social services expenditure in 2001–02 will be met. [47285]

Jacqui Smith: No more figures are available since the answer I gave the hon. Member on 25 February 2002, Official Report, column 938W. The in-year estimates I quoted then are what are used to monitor efficiency gains and no further information will be available.

Information provided by councils during in-year monitoring suggests that for social services in England the estimated efficiency gain was 2.1 per cent. for 1999–2000, 2.3 per cent. for 2000–01 and 2.5 per cent. for 2001–02. This means the efficiency gains achieved in 2001–02 fell short of the 3 per cent. target, although the targets of 2 per cent. for each of the previous two years were exceeded. Over the three years the total estimated efficiency gain was 7.1 per cent, all but meeting the total of the efficiency targets over three years of 7.2 per cent.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the PSA target for all NHS trusts to achieve three per cent. procurement savings in 2000–01 was met. [47292]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 28 November 2001, Official Report, column 987W.

Diseases (Ships)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of (a) gastrointestinal disease and (b) Legionnaire's disease in passengers or crew members of ships have been notified to the UK in each of the last 10 years. [45366]

Yvette Cooper: The Public Health laboratory Service (PHLS) does not collect data on the number of cases of gastroenteritis in passengers and crew on ships.

Legionnaire's disease is not statutorily notifiable. Laboratory reports of Legionnaire's disease associated with ships, England and Wales from 1992 to 2001 are as follows:

Year	Cases of Legionnaire's disease
1992	0
1993	0
1994	2
1995	2
1996	3
1997	6
1998	3
1999	2
2000	0
2001*	0
Total	18

* provisional data

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he proposes to take in respect of the World Health Organisation guide to ship sanitation. [45365]

Yvette Cooper: The UK Government are participating in the revision of the World Health Organisation Guide to Ship Sanitation, which is due to be published in 2003.

Pneumococcal Disease

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment has been made of the impact of the introduction of the conjugate pneumococcal vaccine in (a) the USA and (b) other European countries on the incidence of pneumococcal disease in those aged under two. [45455]

Yvette Cooper: Pneumococcal conjugate vaccine has been introduced into the routine programme in the US and since the vaccine was licensed there has been little information on its national impact, other than in the population that took part in the clinical trials. Nevertheless, the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI) has been made aware of these results. Similarly, reviews of the epidemiology of pneumococcal disease in England and Wales have been presented to the JCVI, along with progress reports on UK studies to evaluate the suitability of this vaccine for this country. There are only limited data available on pneumococcal disease in those under two years from other European countries.

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the pneumococcal conjugate vaccine will be made available to all children aged under two. [45454]

Yvette Cooper: Pneumococcal conjugate vaccine has only recently been licensed for use in European Union countries. The Chief Medical Officer has already sent advice to doctors on the use of this vaccine in children less than two years, with risk factors for pneumococcal disease. Its use in all children will be dependent on the advice from the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation, the results of trials on the vaccine's suitability for inclusion in the national immunisation programme and considerations of costs and benefits.

Eye Tests

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many old age pensioners in the Harwich constituency have benefited from the introduction of free eye tests. [45118]

Ms Blears: Figures for the number of sight tests by constituency are not collected centrally.

The table shows the number of national health service (NHS) sight tests in North Essex Health Authority for the years 1998–99 to 2000–01. Eligibility to NHS sight tests was extended to those aged 60 and over from 1 April 1999. Some of those benefiting from this extension may also have qualified for free sight tests on other grounds.

General Ophthalmic Services: Number of sight tests paid for in North Essex HA for the years 1998–99 to 2000/01.

Dentistry

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of those aged under 18 were registered with a general dental service dentist in (a) each health authority and (b) England in each year since 1997. [44273]

Ms Blears: Arrangements are now in place to ensure that patients can gain access to NHS services by calling NHS Direct. This means that even if a patient chooses not to register with a dentist it will still be possible for that patient to access all forms of dentistry that are provided by the NHS.

The percentage of children registered with a General Dental Service (GDS) dentist per head of population for each health authority and England is shown in the table at 30 September 1997 to 2001.

From September 1996, the registration period was changed to 15 months; previously child registrations expired at the end of the following calendar year. As a result, data held on registration numbers after 1997 are not comparable to earlier years.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of those aged 18 years and over were registered with a general dental service dentist in (a) each health authority and (b) England in each year from 1990 to 1999, inclusive. [44272]

Mr. Blears: Arrangements are now in place to ensure that patients can gain access to NHS services by calling NHS Direct. This means that even if a patient chooses not to register with a dentist it will still be possible for that patient to access all forms of dentistry that are provided by the NHS.

The percentage of adults registered with a general dental service (GDS) dentist per head of population for each Family Health Service Authority and for England is shown in table 1 at 30 September 1992 to 1995.

The percentage of adults registered with a GDS dentist per head of population for each health authority and for England is shown in table 2 at 30 September for each year since 1996.

Comparable data for 1990 and 1991 are not available as registrations were only introduced in October 1990 and registration numbers had not yet had time to reach consistent levels.

From September 1996, the registration period for adults was shortened from 24 to 15 months. This affected registration numbers. As a result, registration numbers after 1997 are not comparable to the numbers for earlier years. The data is also affected by gradual improvements in the methods used for the removal of duplicate registration records, which were first employed by the Dental Practice Board in 1993.

Autism

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what arrangements exist for monitoring numbers of children with autism; [43607]

(2) what figures exist for the number of children diagnosed with autism since 1990. [43608]

Yvette Cooper: All local statutory authorities are responsible for ensuring that they have sufficient knowledge of local needs and priorities to inform the pattern of services in their area.

Details of the number of children diagnosed with autism since 1990 are not available. In December 2001 the Medical Research Council (MRC) published a comprehensive review of autism research, which provides an authoritative overview of the current state of knowledge on the prevalence, incidence and causes of autism. The report was commissioned by the Department and produced with the help of a wide range of experts and a "lay" group including parents and representatives of autism charities. It is available on the MRC website at "www.mrc.ac.uk".

St. James' Hospital, Portsmouth

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what correspondence he has had concerning his Department's decision to challenge the declaration of a town green in the grounds of St. James' Hospital in Portsmouth; and if he will make a statement; [43824]

(2) if he will make a statement to the House on his proposal to take action against Portsmouth City Council in respect of St. James' Hospital; [43821]

(3) what discussions he has had with the DTLR concerning city council policy on open spaces; and if he will make a statement; [43559]

(4) what consultation he has had with the DTLR concerning Portsmouth City Council's policy on open spaces and St. James' Hospital site; and if he will make a statement; [43825]

(5) what assessment has been made of the compatibility between the proposed action by his Department against Portsmouth Council in regard to St. James' Hospital and the open space in cities policy; and if he will make a statement; [43820]

(6) what action he has taken in respect of Portsmouth City Council's decision to declare a town green in the grounds of St. James' Hospital; and for what reasons. [43822]

Ms Blears: Apart from correspondence with our professional and legal advisers, the Department has received letters from Portsmouth City Council legal department and the hon. Member.

Portsmouth City Council as the registration authority received an application to register part of St. James Hospital, Portsmouth as a Town or Village Green, and appointed an inspector to conduct a non-statutory inquiry which the Department opposed. The Council subsequently determined to approve the application. Based on legal advice the Department has filed an application for a review of the Council's decision. It seems unlikely that the drafters of the Commons Registration Act 1965 intended it to apply to National Health Service (NHS) land.

Discussions have been held with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA), who are the successor to the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, making representation for guidance to make it clear that NHS land within hospitals should not be subject of future applications for registration as a Town or Village Green.

The Department has not discussed with Portsmouth City Council its policy on open spaces either generally or specifically in connection with St. James Hospital. That is a matter for local discussions in the context of a planning application for development on the land remaining in the ownership of the NHS.

The area of land in the proposed Town or Village Green is largely within an area declared surplus to NHS requirements. The site has been marketed with the benefit of outline planning permission for residential development granted by Portsmouth City Council, and with open space provided in accordance with that outline consent.

Milk

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultation will be conducted with parents about the introduction of fluoridated milk in schools. [42977]

Ms Blears: When a scheme is under consideration, health service staff visit the school and explain the objectives of the scheme both to parents and staff. Leaflets and letters are then issued to parents, which indicate that children who are taking fluoride tablets or drops do not need fluoridated milk and that milk without the addition of fluoride will remain available. A consent form is attached to the letter which parents have to sign before their child can receive fluoridated milk.

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether children drinking fluoridated milk in schools will be monitored for fluoride excess. [42979]

Ms Blears: The design of the milk fluoridation scheme is such that it is unlikely that children will consume excess fluoride and children are not being monitored on an individual basis. However, there is general monitoring in place to evaluate the scheme. The amount of fluoride excreted in a 24 hour period gives a good indication of the amount consumed. Recently published data show that a number of children in the scheme have had their fluoride excretion levels measured and no evidence was found of any problems. In addition, fluorosis levels will be monitored in four health authorities in the scheme.

Eastbourne District General Hospital

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many in-patient admissions there were to Eastbourne District General Hospital in each of the last 10 years. [44713]

Ms Blears: The information requested is collected centrally at trust level, not by individual hospital. The figures for Eastbourne Hospitals NHS Trust are as follows:

Eastbourne Hospitals NHS Trust: inpatient admissions 1991–92 to 2000–01

Year	Number
1991–92	30,259
1992–93	32,057
1993–94	34,322
1994–95	34,669
1995–96	36,752
1996–97	37,738
1997–98	38,018
1998–99	40,671
1999–00	41,878
2000–01	42,689

Hospital Beds

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money has been provided for hospital bed places since 1997 for hospitals in (a) England and (b) Coventry. [43525]

Mr. Hutton: Funding for hospital beds is not identified separately within health authority allocations.

Since 1997, total health authority allocations have risen from £20.9 billion to £41.8 billion in 2002–03. Ringfencing within allocations is kept to a minimum to allow health authorities to manage flexibly all the resources available to them. It is for health authorities in partnership with primary care organisations and other local stakeholders to determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities, modernising services and meeting NHS Plan targets.

Hospital Design

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the design and construction of (a) new hospitals, (b) hospital extensions and (c) hospital refurbishment. [43690]

Mr. Hutton: 'Achieving Excellence in Healthcare Design' is the Department's programme to deliver design excellence in national health service buildings. We are raising the profile of design, partnering with key architectural professional bodies and supporting the NHS by providing advice and guidance at key stages of the procurement process.

Each hospital embarking on a new development, however large or small, will nominate a local design champion from the Trust board to ensure that the new building provides a high quality patient-focused environment with good working conditions for staff and buildings that make a positive contribution to the local neighbourhood.

To ensure that good design is embedded within the NHS hospital building programme design proposals will be reviewed by a panel, led by NHS Estates with the Prince's Foundation, CABE (the Commission for Architecture and the Built Environment) and others. Designs will be reviewed at the earliest stages of the procurement process before a preferred bidder is chosen.

Future new projects will need to provide evidence of the involvement of staff, patients and the public in planning their design.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in drawing up the legal and financial framework within which foundation hospitals will operate. [48023]

Mr. Hutton: The full implications and details surrounding the establishment of foundation hospitals are still being explored. We are working with a broad range of interested parties including 3 star trusts to take this work forward.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assistance he plans to give to rural hospitals in the new status health authorities. [43398]

Mr. Hutton: The NHS Plan sets out our vision for a health service designed around the patient, offering a comprehensive range of services for everyone, using the guiding principle of providing as much care as possible as close to home as possible.

It will be for local primary care organisations, working in partnership with the new health authorities, to develop services that meet the needs of the community they serve, taking account of clinical standards and safety and the views of local people. Rural hospitals clearly have an important role to play in meeting patients' desire for care closer to home.

Intermediate Care

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library the number of people receiving intermediate care preventing unnecessary hospital admission for (a) Q1 1999–2000, (b) Q2 1999–2000, (c) Q3 1999–2000, (d) Q4 1999–2000, (e) Q1 2000–01, (f) Q2 2000–01, (g) Q3 2000–01, (h) Q4 2000–01, (i) Q1 2001–02, (j) Q2 2001–02 and (k) Q3 2001–02. [43461]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 15 March 2002]: Figures are collected on:

number of people referred to/receiving intermediate care in a residential setting ('rapid response'/'supported discharge') to prevent hospital admission; number of people referred to non-residential intermediate care teams to prevent hospital admission.

Data are only available on a quarterly basis for Q1, Q2 & Q3 2001–02, and have been placed in the Library.

Care Worker Training

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 6 March 2002, Official Report, column 432W, on care worker training, what funding he has made available to meet the costs of training care workers to NVQ level II (a) in respect of the draft domiciliary care standards and (b) in respect of the care home standards. [42915]

Jacqui Smith: With regard to domiciliary care workers I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 7 February 2002, Official Report, column 117W. Provision has been made in the personal social services standard spending assessment (PSS SSA) in 2002–03 and 2003–04 for the training of care workers to NVQ level 2 standard as set out in the care standards. The PSS SSA is unhypothecated, and it is for individual councils to consider how much to spend on this training in the light of local circumstances.

In April 2001 we set up a fund to help towards the implementation of the national training strategy for the social care work force. This fund is being disbursed by TOPSS (the national training organisation for social care) through their regional training forums. There was £2 million in this fund for 2001–02 and it has been used to embed induction training and it has been available to train staff working in the voluntary, private and statutory sectors.

The fund has increased to £15 million for 2002–03. This money will be used to support 26,500 staff to undertake training. Some 11,500 of these staff will be undertaking assessor, verifier or mentor training in order to strengthen NVQ frameworks, enabling staff to complete their NVQs in future years.

Care Homes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to publish for consultation the assessment tool commissioned from the Social Care Association to meet the care home regulations in respect of the staffing mix in care homes. [44771]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 21 March 2002]: We are currently considering the details of the guidance.

Nursing Care

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish the protocols that are being developed regarding funding of nursing care. [45661]

Jacqui Smith: These will be published as soon as they have been agreed. Copies will be placed on the Department's website.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of nursing homes charging extra administration costs for payment of the free nursing care contribution; and if he will make a statement. [47533]

Jacqui Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the response I gave to him today.

Nurses (Overseas Recruitment)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new NHS nurses since 1999 have been recruited from overseas; and what percentage of the total new recruitment intake they represent. [47525]

Mr. Hutton: The Department's workforce censuses do not record the nationality of the nurses working in the national health service. It is not therefore possible to calculate the number of nurses recruited from overseas or the percentage of the new recruitment intake that they represent.

The new nurses working in the national health service are made up of newly qualified staff, overseas recruits and nurses returning to work in the national health service.

In order to practise as a nurse, overseas applicants must register with the Nursing and Midwifery Council (NMC), formerly the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing Midwifery and Health Visiting. Overseas nurses registered with the NMC do not necessarily work in the national health service The number of entrants to the register in the last three years are shown in the table.

Overseas trained nurses and midwives registering with the UKCC

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Overseas nurses registered with the UKCC	3,621	5,945	8,403

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent measures have been taken and what safeguards exist to ensure the competence of locum doctors. [46741]

Mr. Hutton: We introduced a new Code of Practice for the employment of locum doctors in 1997. This remains the current guidance and requires NHS employers who use locums to conduct vigorous checks and to ensure that they are properly supervised. The Code also requires locum agencies to ensure that the doctors they supply are of the appropriate quality and have the necessary credentials and qualifications.

We are determined, however, to improve on these arrangements. We are now developing proposals to extend the existing appraisal arrangements for NHS consultants and principal GPs to locum doctors. This will ensure that these doctors have their professional development needs identified by NHS appraisers and get the same support as substantive doctors to keep their practice up-to-date. We are also working with the General Medical Council on proposals to revalidate doctors regularly. These arrangements will apply to locums who will be required to produce the same standards of evidence about their practice as all other doctors. We will then introduce a new Code of Practice through which we see NHS Professionals adopting a central role in supporting and quality assuring locums.

In primary care, non-principal Gps are now required to register on a Primary Care Trust/Health Authority supplementary list before they can work as a deputy or as an assistant in general medical services.

In order to be registered, non-principals need to satisfy certain criteria that include checks on their qualifications and criminal record. The criteria mirror that required for principal GPs applying to join a medical list and will be used by health authorities to determine the suitability of a practitioner applying to work in their area.

Trainee Doctors (Care Standards)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he plans to introduce to ensure safe standards of care when increasing numbers of trainee doctors move to shifts. [46829]

Mr. Hutton: Shifts are an established mode of working for doctors in training and recommended rest requirements already exceed those of the European Working Time Directive. Weekly hours of work and maximum shift lengths are currently subject to limits agreed with the British Medical Association, and these too will be subject to the further limitations of the Working Time Directive from August 2004.

Recent figures show that trainee doctors working full shifts are more likely to meet the rest requirements than those undertaking other patterns of work.

GP Vacancies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many GP vacancies there were at the latest available date. [46727]

Mr. Hutton: The 98 (out of 100) health authorities in England and Wales who responded to the Department's 2001 GP vacancy survey reported 2,464 vacancies as current at some time during the 12-month period from 1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001. These vacancies will reflect both staff turnover and the creation of new posts.

77 per cent. of the GP vacancies filled between April 2000 and March 2001 were filled in six months or less, and there were an average of 6.9 applications per vacancy.

Further details are available in the Department of Health publication "General Practitioner Recruitment, Retention and Vacancy Survey 2001 England and Wales". It is available as www.doh.gov.uk/stats/gprrvsurvey2001.htm or in the Library.

Doctors

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many full-time equivalent (a) hospital doctors and (b) GPs there were in the NHS in each year since 1979. [44055]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in tables which have been placed in the Library.

Whole-time equivalent data for general practitioners (GPs) was not available prior to 1990. There was no provision for GPs to work anything less than full-time, therefore whole-time equivalent data was not available.

The headcount number of hospital medical staff increased by 92 per cent. between 1979 and 2001. In the same period, the number of practitioners and unrestricted principals and equivalents increased by 33 per cent. and 31 per cent. respectively.

Midwives

Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacancies were unfilled in the NHS for qualified midwives in each of the last five years. [43867]

Mr. Hutton: The number of midwives working in the NHS increased from 22,570 to 23,080 between September 2000 and September 2001.

The Department has only collected vacancy information as at 31 March for the last three years. The information requested is in the table.

3-month vacancies for all qualified midwives

	3-month vacancy rates (%)	3-month vacancies	Staff in post
March 1999	2.1	400	18,170
March 2000	2.8	510	17,880
March 2001	2.6	470	17,660

Notes:
1. Three-month vacancies are vacancies as at 31 March each year which trusts are actively trying to fill, which had lasted for three months or more (whole-time equivalents).
2. Three-month vacancy rates are three-month vacancies expressed as a percentage of three-month vacancies plus staff in post from the previous September non-medical workforce census (whole time equivalent).
3. Numbers are rounded to the nearest ten.
4. Percentages rounded to one decimal place.

Nurses

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses are employed in accident and emergency departments in England. [43552]

Mr. Hutton: It is not possible to separately identify nurses employed in accident and emergency (A&E) departments.

On 30 September 2001, there were 241,910 nursing, midwifery and health visiting staff within the acute, elderly and general area of work.

The Reforming Emergency Care Strategy was announced in October 2001. It provides £40 million new investment between now and March 2003 to recruit 600 additional A&E nurses. This will provide sufficient staff to allow separation of services for patients with minor injury or illness from those patients with more serious conditions in all A&E departments.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many whole-time equivalent (a) health visitors, (b) school nurses, (c) district nurses and (d) community psychiatric nurses were in training in each region in September of each year since 1997 broken down by (i) gender and (ii) ethnic origin. [41700]

Mr. Hutton: Information collected by the Department does not record the gender or ethnicity of health visitors, school nurses, district nurses and community psychiatric nurses in training. Information was not collected in 1997–98. The whole-time equivalent numbers in training between 1999–2000 and 2000–01 in each region are shown in the tables.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimates he has made of the number of whole time equivalent nurses who will be performing non-clinical duties with (a) the National Institute for Clinical Excellence, (b) the Commission for Health Improvement and (c) the NHS Modernisation Agency. [24598]

Mr. Hutton [pursuant to his reply, 10 January 2002, c. 999W]: I regret that my previous reply was incorrect. It should read as follows:

The National Institute for Clinical Excellence, the Commission for Health Improvement (CHI) and the NHS Modernisation Agency are responsible for improvements in quality across the NHS. Nurses are employed within these agencies to provide the frontline perspective and to influence development.

Numbers are subject to change but in December there were two nurses employed in the National Institute for Clinical Excellence, 35 nurses employed in the Commission for Health Improvement and 51 in the Modernisation Agency.

Haemophilia Drugs

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many UK-resident patients over the age of 16 are being treated with rcFVIII. [22325]

Yvette Cooper [pursuant to her reply, 11 January 2002, c.1029W]: I regret that my previous reply was incorrect. It should read as follows:

The United Kingdom Haemophilia Doctors Organisation (UKHDCO) carried out a survey in 2001 which revealed that all haemophilia A patients in England under the age of 20 (43 per cent. of the total) and 6.5 per cent. of those over age 20 are receiving, or are entitled to receive, Recombinant Factor VIII. The UKHCDO estimates that the situation is likely to be similar in Northern Ireland, although no data are currently available. In Scotland and Wales, all patients are eligible to receive Recombinant Factor VIII.

Tobacco

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what steps are being taken to further reduce tobacco use among children and adults. [42946]

Yvette Cooper: In 1988, the Government introduced a comprehensive strategy to reduce tobacco use among children and adults, 'Smoking Kills'. Key features are:

a comprehensive mass media campaign highlighting the dangers of smoking and publicising the free NHS smoking helpline (0800 169 0 169) with additional helplines for pregnant women and ethnic minorities; specific programmes targeting manual groups, pregnant women and ethnic minorities; projects designed to provide focused support in communities such as in prisons and hospitals;

smoking cessation services across the country;

nicotine replacement therapy and Zyban on prescription;

an enforcement protocol strengthening action against illegal sales to under 16s;

a public places charter encouraging the provision of smoke-free areas; banning tobacco advertising and promotion. The Government have taken on Lord Clement-Jones' Private Member's Bill which completed its Third Reading in the House of Lords on 15 March; as well as concerted action to tackle smuggling.

Specifically aimed at reducing tobacco use among young people, the Department has commissioned 'Smokescreen', a film-making initiative developed by young people for young people. The films have been shown on cable TV and a teaching pack is being produced for schools. The Government's Healthy Schools Programme also addresses the health risks posed by smoking and substance misuse.

In England, the prevalence rate in the 11 to 15 year-old age group has fallen from 13 per cent. in 1996 to 10 per cent. in 2001. In adults (aged 16+) prevalence rates fell from 28 per cent. in 1998 to 27 per cent. in 2000. The prevalence in adult manual groups in England fell from 33 per cent. in 1998 to 31 per cent. in 2000.

Under section 75(3)(d) of the Northern Ireland Act 1998, the Secretary of State can designate "any other person". This is not a finite list and it is not, therefore, possible to list those bodies not designated under 75(3)(d).

Litigation

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases (a) his Department and (b) its agencies have defended in (i) industrial tribunals and (ii) the courts in each year since 1997; how many were concluded in their favour; and what the total cost to his Department of litigation was in each year. [41109]

Dr John Reid: The Northern Ireland Office did not defend any industrial tribunal cases in the years concerned.

The information in respect of court cases is not held in the format requested. However, between 1997 and 2002, 12 cases were defended, four of which were concluded in the Department's favour.

The return for Agencies is as follows:

Police Service

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 9 November 2001, Official Report, column 485W, in what manner the PSNI activity data collection will break down activities of the police; what the objectives and terms of reference for this exercise are; and in what way the results of such analysis will be made public. [29809]

Jane Kennedy: The PSNI activity analysis collection will break down activities in accordance with the ACPO National Police Activity Based Costing Model. This model is focused on the District/Basic Command Unit and encompasses the total cost of policing a given geographical area. It includes all of those policing services which are delivered by DCU staff, and includes contributions from Headquarters operational or organisational support units. The six core areas of policing activity to be analysed are crime, road traffic, public order, public reassurance, call management and prisoner handling. Each of these core areas are broken down into Incidents (and by association incident related activities) and Non-incident Related Activities. For example, Crime is broken down into Violence (sexual offences, robbery, violence against the person), Burglary (dwelling, other), Theft of or from a Motor Vehicle, Theft other (shoplifting), Criminal Damage, Drugs (Class A), Other Crime and Crime Desk/Telephone Investigation Bureau.

The objectives of the Activity Analysis/Activity Based Costing Project are as follows:

To provide complete, accurate and timely activity information through user friendly, on-line access to relevant systems;

To make transparent the full cost of providing policing services, including by way of activity based costing;

To assist in the delegation of operational and financial decision-making to the lowest level consistent with strategic direction and control;

To link Activity management with Corporate Planning, Performance, Best Value and Inspection and Review.

The main outputs from the Project will be as follows:

Standard classification of policing activities linked to organisational objectives;

Develop and conduct activity analysis programmes;

Carry out research into other GB Forces' activity based costing and activity sampling systems and make appropriate recommendations;

Identification of overheads;

Development of overhead apportionment rules;

Develop interfaces with other PSNI systems as required;

Activity based costing extracted from existing computer systems;

Activity sampling;

Internal and external benchmarking;

Trading accounts for Administration Departments;

Costed Service Level agreements for Administration Departments.

The analysis will be made public to enable informed decisions to be made about the allocation of scarce resources. Activity analysis will also help inform future funding debates and make explicit how resources are allocated across core police functions.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will break down the number of complaints received by the Police Ombudsman by (a) perceived community origin, (b) gender and (c) other recorded categories of complainant. [43890]

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, how many recipients there are of pensions paid (a) for their service and (b) by virtue of their husband's service in the Royal Irish constabulary including Auxiliaries. [44658]

Jane Kennedy: There are (a) no recipients of pensions paid to former officers of the Royal Irish Constabulary including Auxiliaries and (b) four recipients of pensions paid to widows by virtue of their husband's service.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prosecutions are under way against members of the Police Service in respect of activity carried out by them in the course of their duties in the period up to May 1998. [43434]

Jane Kennedy: The Chief Constable has advised that there is no record of any prosecutions underway against members of the Police Service in respect of activity carried out by them in the course of their duties from 1996 to May 1998. Records prior to 1996 are held in a form which is not readily retrieved.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) full-time and (b) reserve members of the Police Service there were in each police division in Northern Ireland in each year since 1996. [43433]

Jane Kennedy: The numbers of regular and full-time reserve members of the Police Service in each police division in Northern Ireland in each year from 1996 to 2001, are as follows:

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people identified as (a) Protestant and (b) Roman Catholic who have applied to the Police Service of Northern Ireland (i) were found to be suitably qualified and (ii) were not offered a position within the Police Service. [45756]

Jane Kennedy: In the first Police Service of Northern Ireland recruitment competition, 419 candidates identified as non-Catholic and 173 candidates identified as Catholic were found to be suitably qualified.

To date 245 candidates from the non-Catholic group have been informed that the Chief Constable cannot offer them an appointment, in accordance with Section 46 of the Police (Northern Ireland) Act 2000. No candidate in the Catholic group has to date been refused an appointment.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what expenditure has been made on the refurbishment of the police Land Rover fleet in Northern Ireland in each year since 1995; what tendering processes were held for the award of the contracts; and what the benefit to the public purse will be of using low cost substitute Land Rover components in the refurbishment work. [46032]

Jane Kennedy: The Chief Constable has advised me that expenditure made on the refurbishment of the Police Landrover fleet since 1995 is as follows:

Business Year	Expenditure & Number	Cost (New)	Saving
1995–96–97–98	0	0	0
1998–99	£1250k (50 x vehicles)	£2,250k	£1,000k
1,999–00	£1,300k (50 x vehicles)	£2,350k	£1,050k

2001–02[1]	£510k (15 x vehicles)	£900k	£390k
Totals	£4,040k (150 x vehicles)	£7145k	£3105k

[1] Phase 3 TD5 Land Rover approved power-train conversion.

The refurbishment engineering programme was originally tendered through the Government Puchasing Agency and ratified via the Support Services Committee of the Police Authority.

Later programmes have been tendered through the Government Purchasing Unit and ratified via Police Transport Policy Committee.

The refurbishment programme includes the utilisation of discounted and approved Land Rover parts, which include a warranty period of 12 months. It is not possible to quantify separately the savings arising from the use of these component parts.

Civil Servants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he expects the 2002 target for ethnic minority representation in the Home Civil Service Senior Civil Service Group will be met on time. [45988]

Dr. John Reid: In its 2001 Departmental Report, the Northern Ireland Office declared its continued commitment to progressing Home Civil Service (HCS) targets for increased ethnic minority representation in the Senior Civil Service. The aim is to have 5 per cent. ethnic minority representation by the end of 2002.

Currently, 4.3 per cent. of the Home Civil Service Senior Civil Service Group are from an ethnic minority background.

Crime

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the strategy and quantified targets for tackling crime were published by March 2001. [45999]

Jane Kennedy: Quantified targets for tackling crime were set out in the Annual Policing Plan 2001–02 published by the Police Authority for Northern Ireland in April 2001. The RUC Crime Strategy published in April 2000 remained valid for the year commencing April 2001.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many press officers there were in his Department on (a) 1 May 1997 and (b) the latest available date. [46889]

Dr. John Reid: Information is not held in the format requested.

Statistics relating to the number of Information Officers in the Northern Ireland Office is as follows:

(a) at 1 April 1997 there were 11 Information Officers; and

(b) at 27 March 2002 there were 13 Information Officers.

Secondments

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the names of staff who have been seconded to his Department from the private sector since May 1997, indicating (a) the names of the organisation from which each has come, (b) their responsibilities and Civil Service grades within his Department, (c) the organisation responsible for paying their salary and (d) the start and end dates of their secondment. [35831]

Dr. John Reid: No staff have been seconded to this Department from the private sector since May 1997.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate his Department has made of the cost to its budget since 1 May 1997 of fraud; and if he will make a statement. [27299]

Dr. John Reid: The cost of fraud to the Northern Ireland Office budget since 1 May 1997 is £51,728.65, however the Department has recovered £11,187.09 of this amount.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Departmental Functions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the functions of his Department that have been (a) market tested and (b) outsourced in each of the last five years, specifying the (i) money saving and (ii) percentage saving in each case. [42997]

Dr. Whitehead:

(a) Only those services in part (b) have been market tested in the last five years

(b)

Internal Press Cuttings Distributions	(i) 23.5k	(ii) 100 per cent.
DTLR Mailing Database	(i) 10.0k	(ii) 75 per cent.
Design Drawing and Print Services	(i) 443.8k	(ii) 47 per cent.

Justices of the Peace

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many members of staff at his Department are justices of the peace; and if he has a strategy for his Department to encourage members of staff to become justices of the peace. [44558]

Dr. Whitehead: The DTLR does not keep a centralised record of those members of staff who are justices of the peace.

My department supports members of staff who wish to become justices of the peace and provides special leave with pay in order to assist staff in their role.

Equal Opportunities

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what new data series separated by gender, race, disability and age have been commissioned by his Department since August 1997 to the Latest date for which information is available. [46494]

Dr. Whitehead [holding answer Tuesday 26 March 2002]: In DTLR, two statistical series incorporating the specified variables have been commissioned in the time period in question. These are two household surveys, the survey of English Housing and the National Travel Survey. All four variables have been collected on the Survey of English Housing since before 1997 and ethnicity was included in the National Travel Survey in 2001.

Part-time Employees

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many and what proportion of the staff of his Department are part-time employees. [47156]

Dr. Whitehead [holding answer Wednesday 10 April 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office on 10 April 2002 [Ref 47193].

Railtrack

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions pursuant to his statement of 25 March, Official Report, column 586, if he will give the reasons underlying his statement that a company limited by guarantee would be a good successor body to Railtrack plc in administration; [48166]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer Wednesday 10 April 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to my hon. Friend the Member for Preston (Mr. Hendrick) on 23*October 2001*, Official Report, columns 195W–197W.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he expects the Railtrack Plc administrator to make available a prospectus to prospective bidders. [47989]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer Wednesday 10 April 2002]: This is a matter for the Administrator.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what estimate he has made of the likely outcome of an interim review for Railtrack. [47387]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which I gave him on 6 March 2002, Official Report, column 370W.

Sony Display Screens (Swanwick)

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions in relation to the Health and Safety report of 15 March into the Display Screen Equipment Regulations 1992 of the equipment at NERC Swanwick, what he is doing to ensure that all the defects mentioned in the report are rectified and in what time scale; for what reason the Health and Safety Executive relied on information supplied by NATS in relation to the size of the characters on the Sony display screens; and if they will take their own measurements. [47654]

Mr. Jamieson: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) has asked NATS to set out in writing the action it proposes to take on each of the items raised in the report together with a proposed timetable. HSE will consider what if any further action needs to be taken once it has received those proposals and will continue to monitor the situation.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, how many safety reports have been made by planning and tactical air controllers as a result of confusion of reading alpha numeric data on the Sony screen at NERC Swanwick. [47653]

Mr. Jamieson: This is an operational matter for NATS.

Public Service Obligations (Airports)

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what representations his Department has received concerning the imposition of public service obligations on regional airports with London; and what its response to these representations has been. [47955]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer Wednesday 10 April 2002]: The Scottish Executive has requested that a Public Service Obligation should be imposed on Inverness-Gatwick air services. The government expects to announce its decision shortly.

Special Purpose Vehicles

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if it is his policy to raise private sector investment in the railways through special purpose vehicles. [47396]

Mr. Jamieson: Special purpose vehicles are expected to be an option for securing private sector investment in infrastructure projects. But private sector investment in the railways may also be secured by other means, and special purpose vehicles will not be suitable for all infrastructure projects.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the proposed transfer of special purpose vehicles to Railtrack's successor after construction. [47394]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 4 February 2002, Official Report, column 728W.

Network Rail

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) if he will make a statement on the state aid rules as they apply to Network Rail; [48188]

(2) if state aid rules will apply to the standby loans to Network Rail. [48189]

Mr. Jamieson: If Network Rail's offer for Railtrack plc's shares is successful any financial support provided to the company by Government would be notified to the European Commission as a potential state aid.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if Network Rail will be able to replace commercial debt with standby loans from the SRA at a later date. [48187]

Mr. Jamieson: No.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether his Department is statutorily obliged to meet additional costs resulting from an interim review of Railtrack's finances. [47398]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 25 January 2002, Official Report, column 783W.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions who holds responsibility for deciding whether Network Rail takes over the network. [48184]

Mr. Jamieson: It is for Railtrack Group to consider, with its shareholders, the proposal from Network Rail for the purchase of its shares in Railtrack plc. If the proposal is accepted, the Secretary of State would in due course need to consider the exercise of his powers under the change of control provisions in the existing network licence held by Railtrack plc. In addition, the Court would need to order, on an application by my right hon. Friend, that the Railways Administration Order should be discharged. It is for the Administrators to decide how to continue with their process in the light of their responsibilities and the proposal that has been made.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the funding of Network Rail or another successor to Railtrack for Control Period 3. [48183]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 26 March, Official Report, column 956W.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the directors and putative directors of Network Rail and their previous experience (a) in the railway industry and (b) in business. [47121]

Mr. Jamieson: The details of its proposals are a matter for Network Rail.

Channel Tunnel

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he last spoke to his French counterpart about rail freight carriage through the Channel Tunnel. [47512]

Mr. Jamieson: Ministers maintain regular contacts with their Friends counterparts on this issue.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent discussions he has had with (a) the EU Transport Commissioner and (b) the French Transport Minister on the indefinite suspension of the Channel Tunnel rail freight facilities; what assessment he has made of the impact on his rail freight target of the indefinite suspension of the Channel Tunnel rail freight facilities; and if he will make a statement. [47915]

Mr. Jamieson: My Department, and others, are in regular contact with both the European Commission and the French Government on this matter.

We will be producing a review of the 10 Year Plan in July this year.

South West Trains

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how the upgrades to the South West Trains routes will be transferred from a special purpose vehicle into operation when they are completed in 2004. [47397]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to my answers of 4 February, Official Report, columns 728W and 729W, as well as my right hon. Friend's answer to the hon. Member for Maidenhead (Mrs. May) on 18 March, Official Report, column 21W.

London Underground

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions for what reason the public sector comparator with the London Underground PPP includes the management costs associated with the administration of the private sector contracts. [47511]

Mr. Jamieson: The Public Sector Comparator does not include any London Underground management costs associated with managing the private sector PPP contracts. It is London Underground's view that any public sector alternative would incur similar contract management costs in aggregate. As a result, such costs have been excluded from the value for money analysis, because they would not differentiate between the options.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the draft comfort letters that he is intending to issue in respect of the London Underground PPP. [48293]

Mr. Byers: I have decided to extend the consultation period for the comfort letters laid before this House on 20 March. This will provide the customary notification period.

Brownfield Developments

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans there are to (a) cut taxes on brownfield developments and (b) introduce incentives to encourage builders away from green fields. [48589]

Ms Keeble: Budget 2001 introduced a tax relief for cleaning up contaminated land, 100 per cent. capital allowances for developing flats over shops and a number of VAT reliefs to encourage conversions and the renovation of empty property. From 30 November 2001, land and property transactions worth up to £150,000 in the UK's most deprived communities have also been exempt from stamp duty. The aim of this fiscal package is to encourage and create incentives for the re-development of brownfield land and re-use of empty property, helping to protect greenfield sites.

Any further changes to taxation policy are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor.

Housing (VAT)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans there are to (a) abolish VAT on the renovation and conversion of existing houses and (b) to introduce VAT on building new houses. [48590]

Ms Keeble: Budget 2001 reduced the rate of VAT to 5 per cent. on the renovation of dwellings empty for three years or longer and on residential conversions that result in a change in the number of dwellings. Budget 2001 also introduced an adjustment to the zero rate of VAT to provide relief for [illegible] sale of renovated houses that have been empty for 10 years or more.

Any further changes to VAT policy are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what conclusion he has drawn from the research by TRL on the effect of mobile phones on driver concentration; and if he will make a statement. [48194]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer Wednesday 10 April 2002]: The report confirms advice given in the Highway Code that drivers should never use hand-held phones while driving and that using a hand-free phone is also likely to distract a driver's attention from the road.

Airport Security

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what extra security measures his Department has taken at (a) London City Airport and (b) Gatwick Airport since 11 September 2001. [47375]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer Wednesday 10 April 2002]: Following the attacks on 11 September, heightened aviation security measures were introduced at all UK airports, including London City and Gatwick, and for all airlines operating from the UK. Security remains at an enhanced level, with the measures applying equally at all UK airports. We do not discuss the details of our aviation security requirements.

Inquiry Costs

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the cost was of the (a) inquiry into the Clapham Rail Crash on 12 December 1998, (b) Sheen Inquiry into the Herald of Free Enterprise disaster on 6 March 1997, (c) Ladbroke Grove Rail Inquiry after the collision of 5 October 1999, (d) Marchioness Inquiry, (e) Piper Alpha Inquiry and (f) Southall Rail crash Inquiry. [48031]

Mr. Jamieson: The cost of the public inquiries are as follows:

(a) Clapham Inquiry—figures could only be retrieved at disproportionate cost

(b) Herald of Free Enterprise Inquiry—figures could only be retrieved at disproportionate cost

(c) Ladbroke Grove Rail Inquiry—£7.0 million

(d) Marchioness Inquiry—£5.1 million

(e) Piper Alpha Inquiry—a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry

(f) Southall Rail Inquiry—£2.25 million.

Malicious Fires

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many malicious fires and incidents of abandoned vehicles there were in (a) London Borough of Havering and (b) Romford in (i) 1997, (ii) 2000 and (iii) 2001; and what steps he is taking to effectively tackle these problems. [47314]

Dr. Whitehead: Data on malicious fires are only available at Fire Brigade level. In 1997 the London Fire Brigade reported 6,388 malicious fires, of which 2,971 (47 per cent.) occurred in road vehicles. Provisional figures for 2000, the most recent year for which data are available, show there were 9,419 malicious fires of which 6,098 (65 per cent.) occurred in road vehicles.

Information obtained form the London Borough of Havering shows that in 2000 the Borough reported 2,995 abandoned vehicles; the number for 2001 was 4,505. No information is available for 1997.

No information on abandoned vehicles is available for Romford.

The problem of abandoned cars is one part of a more general problem—the existence of a hard core of more than a million cars in the United Kingdom that are unlicensed and for which it is difficult to trace an owner. Not only are these vehicles at the heart of the problem of abandoned vehicles: they are untaxed, uninsured, have no MOT certificate, and in many cases it is not possible to trace their current owners when they are involved in accidents, parking and motoring offences and wider crime.

Regulations made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs to reduce the notice periods after which local authorities can remove abandoned cars to 24 hours in many cases came into effect on 9 April. Furthermore, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced a package of related measures on 10 April which will enable local authorities, the police and Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency to tackle the problem of abandoned cars more effectively.

Project Sponsorship

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions which of his Department's projects have received sponsorship since 1997, including (a) details of the sponsor, (b) the nature of the project, (c) the date of the project, (d) the total cost of the project and (e) the amount of money involved in the sponsorship deal. [48399]

Mr. Raynsford: In line with the Government's commitment in its response to the Sixth Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life, details of individual amounts of sponsorship valued at more than £5,000 will be disclosed in future Departmental Annual Reports.

School Transport (Safety)

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to help local partnerships finance safe transport to school. [44492]

Ms Keeble: The Government is providing increased levels of funding through local transport plans to enable authorities, in partnership with transport operators, schools and local people to improve children's safety on the journey to and from school.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the per capita aggregate external funding is for the Sedgefield District and Durham county councils for the most recent year for which information is available. [48384]

Dr. Whitehead: Sedgefield Borough Council and Durham County Council have reported the following figures.

Aggregate External Finance (AEF per capita for Sedgefield Borough Council and Durham County Council (2000–01 Outturn)

Figures in £000s unless stated

	Durham County Council	Sedgefield Borough Council
Revenue Support Grant	163,866	3,447
Redistributed Non-Domestic Rates	126,543	3,400
Ring-fenced Grants inside AEF	30,375	303
Total AEF	320,784	7,150
Population figures (thousands)	506	89
AEF per capita (£'s)	634	80

Source:
Revenue Summary return.
Notes:
AEF is central government support towards total standard spending. It comprises of Revenue Support Grant, Redistributed Non-domestic rates, and certain Ring-fenced grants.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the per capita aggregate borrowing permission is to Sedgefield district and Durham county councils in the most recent year for which information is available. [48386]

Dr. Whitehead: In 2000–01, per capita aggregate borrowing permission to Sedgefield District Council and Durham County Council respectively was £32.27 and £35.40.

Source. Capital Outturn Return (COR4) for 2000–01. Mid-year population estimate for 2000 (ONS).

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what per capita aggregate capital grant is paid to the

Sedgefield district and Durham county councils in the most recent year for which information is available. [48385]

Dr. Whitehead: In 2000–01 the per capita aggregate capital grant from central Government sources, paid to Sedgefield District Council and Durham County Council respectively was £5.34 and £16.15.

Source: Capital Outturn Return (COR4) for 2000–01. Mid-year population estimate for 2000 (ONS).

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what Band D council tax is payable by householders in Sedgefield district to their district and county councils. [48387]

Dr. Whitehead: The average total Band D council tax payable in the area of Sedgefield Borough Council is £1,194. This is made up of:

£145 for parish and town councils;

£157 for Sedgefield Borough Council;

£828 for Durham County Council; and £64 for Durham Police Authority.

The figure of £1,194 per Band D property in Sedgefield is equivalent to £784 per dwelling. The difference is due largely to the fact that almost 90 per cent. of dwellings in the area that are liable to pay council tax are in Bands A, B or C.

Local and Unitary Development Plans

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he plans to publish a report on progress on adoption of area wide local plans and unitary development plans. [48707]

Ms Keeble: A report on the progress made by local authorities in England in preparing and reviewing their Local Plans and Unitary development plans will be published in May.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to tackle low housing demand and abandonment. [48708]

Mr. Byers: Nine areas, where streets of boarded up and abandoned homes have led to a spiral of decline and misery for thousands of local residents, will get the opportunity to work with Government to establish pathfinder projects. Their aim will be to provide lasting solutions for communities blighted by derelict homes through investment and innovation. The lessons learnt can then be applied to other areas.

Pathfinders will be formed in Greater Manchester, Merseyside, East Lancashire, Oldham and Rochdale, South Yorkshire, Humberside (Hull), Tyneside, North Staffordshire (Stoke), and Birmingham and Sandwell. The size of the pathfinders will be significant ranging from 40,000 to 120,000 properties.

I am clear that the pathfinder projects will have to make some radical decisions in order to regenerate these areas. It is not sufficient to tackle the housing problem alone. Local authorities must work closely together with their partners—the police, the health authority, the Regional Development Agency, Housing Corporation and private sector—to rejuvenate our towns and cities.

Low demand and abandoned housing is a major problem. But it also provides a unique opportunity to restructure and rebuild our cities for the twenty first century. We must now seize that opportunity. The Government will work with local people to deliver the change necessary and bring hope to those communities.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he expects to publish directions and guidance to the Strategic Rail Authority; and if he will make a statement. [49013]

Mr. Byers: I have today published directions and guidance to the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA). Copies have been placed in the Libraries of the House and are available on my department's website at: www.railways.dtlr.gov.uk.

The directions and guidance set the SRA two main objectives: to work with the rail industry to achieve substantial lasting improvements in performance; and to work within its statutory framework to deliver the key targets for rail in our Ten Year Plan. The SRA also has other objectives, especially in relation to: leadership for the rail industry; driving up standards of punctuality, safety and comfort across all franchised services; and a much clearer and focussed approach to franchising.

A response to the consultation on the draft directions and guidance has been published today and is available on my department's website.

Cullen Report

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions by what date he estimates the recommendations of Lord Cullen's report will be fully implemented. [47517]

Mr. Jamieson: Lord Cullen recommended that all his recommendations be fully implemented within three years of the publication of his final report, ie by September 2004.

The Health and Safety Commission will publish regular reviews of progress, including implementation dates.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Staff Numbers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many staff have been employed by her Department in each of the last 10 years. [42453]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 19 March (Official Report, column 295W).

Human Rights Act

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many cases have been brought against her Department under the Human Rights Act 1998; and what has been the cost to public funds to date in (a) legal fees to defend cases and (b) compensation payments. [45093]

Dr. Howells: Human rights are now integrated in the general law and are rarely the sole basis for a challenge. The department is involved in comparatively little litigation. However, it has been involved to date in three cases where proceedings have been brought which raise issues under the Human Rights Act 1998. It is often difficult to attribute costs specifically to the human rights aspects of cases, so it is not possible to give an aggregate figure for legal costs defending human rights points. The department has not to date made any compensation payment associated with a Human Rights Act case.

Independent Television Commission

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what costs the ITC has incurred in advising her Department on the creation of OFCOM. [46594]

Dr. Howells: This is a matter for the ITC.

Ofcom

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations her Department has received from the ITC on the issue of preparation for OFCOM; and what form they have taken. [46591]

Dr. Howells: The ITC has welcomed the proposals to establish OFCOM and has been closely involved, along with the other regulators who will go to make up OFCOM, in the early preparations for creating the new body.

Underspend

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the (a) capital and (b) revenue underspend in her Department is expected to be in the financial year 2001–02. [47804]

Dr. Howells [holding answer Wednesday 10 April 2002]: Estimated outturn figures for 2001–02 will be published in the Budget Report on 17 April.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many times Ministers in her Department have travelled abroad at taxpayers' expense since March 2001; what countries they visited; and what the total cost of each visit was. [47108]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer Wednesday 10 April 2002]: Since 1999 this Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. The 1999 list contained information on all such visits undertaken from 2 May 1997 to 31 March 1999. Details for travel undertaken in the period 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 will be published as soon as possible after the end of the current financial year.

Appointments

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list all the boards, committees and trustees that (a) she and (b) Ministers in her Department are wholly or partly responsible for appointing members to, listing for each one (i) the total membership of each board, committee or trustees, (ii) the procedure for making each appointment, (iii) the remuneration made and (iv) the term of office. [48376]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer Wednesday 10 April 2002]: The bodies for which I am wholly or partly responsible for the appointment of members are set out in the following table. This includes appointments made by other Ministers in the Department for Culture, Media and Sport on my behalf and appointments made by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, or through him, by Her Majesty The Queen, on which I advise. The table also includes bodies where appointments are the responsibility of others, but where I have an approving role. There are also bodies where I am responsible for making some appointments but where I have no role in others. Appointments which fall under the remit of the Commissioner for Public Appointments follow procedures which meet the requirements of her Code of Practice. For other appointments, the spirit of the Commissioner's Code is encouraged. Appointments to DCMS sponsored bodies are usually for terms of between three and five years.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list all the individuals that (a) she and her predecessors and (b) Ministers in her Department and their predecessors have appointed to boards, committees and trustees since 2 May 1997. [48378]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer Wednesday 10 April 2002]: The information you requested is being placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The list shows people who have been appointed or reappointed since 2 May 1997 by myself or by predecessor, my right hon. Friend the Member for Islington South and Finsbury (Chris Smith). This includes appointments which have been made by Ministers in my Department on my behalf. It does not include appointments made by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister or, through him, by Her Majesty The Queen, on which I advise.

Digital TV

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the methods employed by her Department to calculate the take up of (a) digital terrestrial, (b) digital satellite and (c) digital cable in the United Kingdom. [48374]

Dr. Howells [holding answer Wednesday 10 April 2002]: My Department mainly uses information on subscriber figures from platform operators to give an indication of the take up figures of digital pay television for different platforms.

The Office for National Statistics' omnibus survey has recently included a question which asks how households in Great Britain access digital television, which will enable us to assess take-up across individual platforms. We expect that this will give a more accurate figure in the light of increasing numbers of non-subscription digital viewers.

BBC Accountability

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the means by which the British Broadcasting Corporation is accountable to Parliament. [48371]

Dr. Howells [holding answer Wednesday 10 April 2002]: The BBC's accountability to Parliament is reflected primarily through the Royal Charter and Agreement. The Royal Charter is debated by Parliament before it comes into force and the Agreement is subject to formal approval by this House. In addition, the BBC's Annual Report and Accounts are laid in Parliament and Members have the opportunity to ask the BBC Chairman and Governors questions at an open event on the day of publication. The BBC is also subject to inquiry by the Culture, Media and Sport Select Committee, which in recent years has held hearings on the BBC's Annual Report, and the Secretary of State is often required to answer questions in this House concerning the BBC. Under the 1991 transfer of responsibilities agreement between the BBC and the Home Office, when the Corporation assumed responsibility for administering the television licensing system, the BBC is accountable to the National Audit Office and the Public Accounts Committee for the value for money of the collection and enforcement arrangements.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if she will list the dates on which (a) she, (b) Ministers, and (c) officials of her Department have met (i) the Director General and (ii) other members of the Executive Committee of the British Broadcasting Corporation in the last 12 months; [48383]

(2) if she will list the dates on which (a) she, (b) Ministers and (c) officials in her Department have met (i) the Chairman, (ii) the Vice Chairman and (iii) other members of the Board of Governors of the British Broadcasting Corporation. [48331]

Dr. Howells [holding answer Wednesday 10 April 2002]: I, Ministers and officials have met members of the Board of Governors and the Executive Committee regularly in the course of business both at formal meetings or at other functions.

PRIME MINISTER

Energy Policy

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the conclusions of his Performance and Innovation Unit on the existing structure of institutions involved in United Kingdom energy policy-making and delivery. [48687]

The Prime Minister: The PIU's conclusions on the existing structure of institutions involved in United Kingdom energy policy-making and delivery are set out in Chapter 8 of the Energy Review. For the status of these conclusions and future government action, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Bassetlaw (Mr. Mann) on Thursday 14 February, Official Report, column 613W.

Performance and Innovation Unit

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Prime Minister when the Performance and Innovation Unit will publish its report on privacy and data-sharing. [49043]

The Prime Minister: The Performance and Innovation Unit's report "Privacy and Data-Sharing: The Way Forward for Public Services" is being published today. The report is important in the continuing development of customer-focused public services and sets out a strategy for improving the use of personal data in the public sector, while still safeguarding individual's privacy, including:

(i) Making better use of technology to deliver more secure, more joined-up services—using technology to ensure data is secure at all times and to enable more joined-up, more personalised service delivery;

(ii) Improving data quality—ensuring that the data held for public service delivery is good quality and up-to-date;

(iii) Building public trust—ensuring that clear prinicples govern the way that personal information is used across the public sector and that there is greater oppenness in the interactions between public services and their consumers; and

(iv) Addressing legal problems—ensuring that public services are clear about how the law regulates data-sharing, together with consultation on possible options for legislative changes.

There are a number of recommendations in the report where we need a proper debate before final decisions are made. On those recommendations—set out in the report—the Government is seeking views from all interested parties. For the other recommendations, the Government wants to see early progress in taking them forward as part of the strategy in delivering the overall objectives.

Copies of the report have been placed in the Vote Office and the Libraries.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

South Middlesbrough Academy

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if a decision has been made on a funding agreement between her Department and the proposed South Middlesbrough Academy. [48638]

Mr. Timms: My Department has been supporting the development of plans for a City Academy in South Middlesbrough. I welcome the commitment of the sponsors and Middlesbrough Council to establish an Academy which will raise standards in the area and meet the needs of local pupils and the wider community. I expect soon to be in a position to consider whether to enter into a funding agreement with the Academy.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Television

Mr. Yeo: To ask the President of the Council if he will list the number of subscriptions to (a) digital terrestrial, (b) digital satellite and (c) digital cable television held by his Department for services in any departmental building from which Ministers work, stating for each subscription its (i) cost and (ii) purpose. [48361]

Robin Cook: My Department does not subscribe to (a) digital terrestrial, (b) digital satellite or (c) digital cable television. However, my Department does own a number of Sky Digiboxes to receive free-to-air digital channels.

Special Advisers

Mr. Burns: To ask the President of the Council how many times special advisers have accompanied Ministers on overseas visits in each of the last five years; which countries were visited; and what the total cost of each individual visit was. [47139]

Robin Cook: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Country	No. of special advisers	Overall cost of trip £
October 2000	Mexico	1	16,012.17
September 2000	Switzerland and Germany	1	6,697.21
January 2001	America[1]	1	48,387.01

[1] The office of the Leader of the House was then responsible for the Business Co-ordination Unit which has since been transferred to the Cabinet Office.

The cost of these visits attributed to Special Advisers is not available.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Burns: To ask the President of the Council how many times Ministers in his Department have travelled abroad at taxpayers' expense since March 2001; what countries they visited; and what the total cost of each visit was. [47114]

Robin Cook: None.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask President of the Council if he will take steps to improve the response time to parliamentary questions. [47724]

Robin Cook: In its response to the Public Administration Select Committee's Second Report of Session 2000–01 on Ministerial Accountability and parliamentary questions, the Government made clear its commitment to providing prompt and accurate answers to parliamentary questions. This continues to be the Government's position.

My Department will continue to improve on its performance. Arrangements are being made for additional training to be given to officials in my Department who provide draft replies.

WALES

Foot and Mouth

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary of the Welsh Assembly on expenditure levels in (a) Wales and (b) England on measures to alleviate FMD problems in 2001. [34911]

Mr. Murphy [holding answer given on 11 February 2002]: I have met the First Minister and the Rural Affairs Minister of the National Assembly for Wales regularly throughout 2001 and subsequently. A wide range of issues connected to FMD were discussed, including measures to alleviate FMD problems through compensation to farming businesses and measures to assist businesses (including tourism) affected by FMD.

Additionally, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State was a member of the Rural Task Force set up to examine and alleviate the effects of FMD on rural areas and rural businesses. The National Assembly for Wales was also a member of this group.

Health and Safety (Computers)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many employees in his Department who regularly use computers have taken up the provision of a free eye test; and how this service is advertised to (a) current and (b) new staff. [36692]

Mr. Murphy: The Assembly operates this scheme for the Wales Office and maintains a log of applications, which is not broken down by operational unit. Hence, an aggregate figure for Wales Office is not readily available. To date about 420 Assembly staff have received a free eye test, some of these would have been Wales Office staff.

The scheme is widely advertised through an induction questionnaire, induction course, on-line computer training package and Health and Safety bulletin board. Soon the scheme will be advertised through an intranet Health and Safety page, which is currently under development.

Civil Servants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the (a) percentage and number of rail journeys undertaken on first class tickets, (b) average cost of a first class journey by rail and (c) total cost of rail travel in each of the past four years broken down by grade of civil servant. [37503]

Mr. Murphy: My staff undertake official rail journeys in line with the guidance and principles set out in section 8 of the Civil Service Management Code and departmental staff handbook.

The information on (a) is not held centrally and collating it would involve disproportionate costs.

In case of (b) the commonest rail journey is that between Cardiff and London for which the average first class return fare is around £140.

Information on (c) is not available in the form requested. However, spending on UK travel by the Wales Office during 1999–2000 (since 1 July 1999) was £117,000, in 2000–01 £62,000 and in 2001–02 (to end of January 2002) £55,000.

Television Sets

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) analogue and (b) integrated digital television sets his Department has purchased in each of the last 24 months; and if he will make a statement. [38174]

Mr. Murphy: My Department has bought three analogue television sets in the last 24 months.

As with all procurement decisions, officials are expected to find the most cost-effective solution to meet the expressed need.

Capita Contracts

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many contracts the Department has with Capita; and how much they are worth; [38372]

(2) if he will list the contracts that have been awarded to the Capita Group by the Department. [39341]

Mr. Murphy: None.

European Union Directives

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the European Union directives and regulations relating to his Department that have been implemented in each of the last four years, specifying (a) the title and purpose of each, (b) the cost to public funds of each and (c) the cost to businesses of each. [39121]

Mr. Murphy: My Department has not had responsibility for the implementation of any European Union directives and regulations since its creation in July 1999.

Cynon Valley

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on recent discussions with the First Secretary of the National Assembly for Wales about the plans of the National Assembly for Wales for the NHS in the Cynon Valley. [40533]

Mr. Touhig: My right hon. Friend and I have not recently discussed with the First Minister or Health Minister of the National Assembly for Wales Assembly plans for the NHS specific to the Cynon Valley. However, I understand that the Assembly have reaffirmed their commitment to addressing areas of health deprivation in all parts of Wales by endorsing the Townsend report with a view to starting the implementation process in April 2003.

Gender Pay Gap

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the extent of the gender pay gap amongst staff in his Department. [40991]

Mr. Murphy: The permanent civil servants in my Department are all secondees from elsewhere and so their home departments determine their salaries. However, the Assembly who supply most of the secondees work closely wit the Equal Opportunities Commission (EOC) and has assisted in the development of an equal pay model to allow employers to carry out pay audits. It has conducted pay audits for the past two years and will be doing so again this year.

In carrying out the equal pay audit and reforming their pay system, the Assembly have taken particular note of the EOC Task Force report "Just Pay". They have developed several initiatives to close the gender pay gap including no penalty for mothers who take career breaks to raise families, that is they return to the pay scale point they would have been on had they continued working.

Working Conditions and Practices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the extent of job sharing in his Department. [41010]

Mr. Murphy: Job sharing is only one of a number of alternative and flexible working patterns that staff at the Wales Office are welcome to take up. The flexibility of the pattern is decided in consultation with management to suit an individual's need and the needs of their work.

At the present time the Wales Office has eight staff out of 40 who work a flexible pattern, none of these job-share.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many and what proportion of the staff of his Department are (a) job sharing, (b) term working and (c) engaged in another form of flexible working. [42416]

Mr. Murphy: At the present time the Wales Office does not have any job share or term working staff. However, out of the 40 staff at the Wales Office eight enjoy alternative and flexible working patterns.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many members of staff were employed by the Wales Office on secondment from non-Governmental organisations in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [45221]

Mr. Murphy: One staff member was seconded to the Wales Office from a non-Governmental organisation in the year 2001. There were none in 1999 or 2000.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases of work-related stress have been reported in his Department; how much compensation has been paid to employees; how many work days have been lost due to work-related stress, and at what cost; what procedures have been put in place to reduce work-related stress, and at what cost, in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [35936]

Mr. Murphy: Work related stress has only been separately identified as a cause of absence for the last six months. During this period there is no record of any member of Wales Office staff having been absent for work related stress.

Wales Office staff have available to them the resources of the Assembly in tackling stress. These include a new draft policy on stress and will shortly include a Health, Safety and Welfare intranet site providing guidance on stress at work, including details of stress awareness training.

Press Office

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the total cost of running the Department's press office was in (a) 1996–97 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available. [46807]

Mr. Murphy [holding answer given on 10 April 2002]: My Department's press office consists of three full-time people; its running costs are not separately identified.

The Wales Office was created in July 1999; figures for 1996–97 would therefore relate to the much larger predecessor department and would not be comparable.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the journeys made to Wales by (a) him and (b) the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State in his official capacity over the last 12 months; what the purpose of each visit was; and what mode of transport was employed. [48609]

Mr. Murphy: Both myself and my hon. Friend live in Wales and so any travel from home on official business originates in Wales. Furthermore, a substantial amount of our time is spent on official duties in Wales. Due to the very large number and routine nature of the journeys made to, from and within Wales no separate record is kept of either their frequency or mode, though all journeys are made within the terms of the ministerial code.

Project Sponsorship

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which of his Department's projects have received sponsorship since 1997, including g*(a)* details of the sponsor, (b) the nature of the project, (c) the date of the project, (d) the total cost of the project and (e) the amount of money involved in the sponsorship deal. [48396]

Mr. Murphy: No Wales Office projects have been sponsored since the Department's creation in July 1999.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Future of Europe Convention

Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will place in the Library a verbatim report of the proceedings of the European Convention on the Future of Europe. [46256]

Peter Hain: The Convention does not provide verbatim reports of each plenary session. It is, nevertheless, committed to making its proceedings transparent. Plenary sessions are open to the public and broadcast live on the Convention's website (http://european-convention.eu.int). It also contains summary records of these sessions, details of its future work programme, and all documents submitted in the course of its work.

Burma

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 13 February, Official Report, column 435W, on Burma, what assessment he has made of measures taken in partnership with the EU designed to promote human rights, national reconciliation and democracy in Burma; and if he will make a statement. [46379]

Mr. Bradshaw: I very much welcome the EU's united position and involvement in Burma. In recent weeks there has been an EU Troika delegation visit to Burma, joint action over forced labour in Burma at the International Labour Organisation, an EU demarche to press for the reinstatement of a planned visit to Burma by the UN Secretary General's Special Representative to Burma, and we are currently preparing a resolution on Burma for adoption at the United Nations Commission on Human Rights.

I remain gravely concerned about the overall situation in Burma. Although there has been some very modest political progress there in the past 16 months, we now need to see evidence of substantive change if confidence in the political process in Burma is to be maintained.

Community Agricultural Policy

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost will be to the EU in 2002 of the CAP (a) in cash terms and (b) as a percentage of the overall EU budget; how much each EU member state will receive from the CAP; and if he will make a statement. [46136]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 26 March 2002]: I have been asked to reply.

The cost to the EU budget of the CAP in 2002 is forecast to be 44,480 million euro, which is 46.5 per cent. of the budget. The following table gives CAP receipts for each member state in 2001, since there are no forecasts available for these receipts in 2002.

Member State	Euro (million)
Austria	1,052
Belgium	934
Denmark	1,112
Finland	815
France	9,221
Germany	5,858
Greece	2,612
Ireland	1,584
Italy	5,324
Luxembourg	29
Netherlands	1,104
Portugal	874
Spain	6,176
Sweden	780
United Kingdom	3,997

Gibraltar

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Spain was invited to attend the recent talks under the terms of the Brussels Process before an invitation was extended to the Government of Gibraltar. [47406]

Peter Hain: The Brussels Process, involving the UK and Spanish governments, was established in 1984 with the aim of overcoming both government's differences over Gibraltar and promoting co-operation on a mutually beneficial basis.

We informed the Chief Minster of Gibraltar in June 2001 of our intention to re-launch the Brussels Process. We and the Spanish Government made clear from the outset that Gibraltarian engagement would be an important element in carrying the process successfully forward.

The Chief Minister of Gibraltar has been invited to attend al the Brussels Process meetings since then. The offer remains open for him to participate in future meetings, having his own and distinct voice on the British side of the table: as the formula "three voices two flags".

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what basis European Union funds are not made available for the economic development of Gibraltar. [48307]

Peter Hain: Gibraltar has access to European Union Structural Funding. For the period 2000–06 Gibraltar has been allocated €8 million of Objective 2 funding (assisting regions affected by the decline of traditional industries), and €7 million of Objective 3 funding (combating long-term unemployment and promoting the integration of young people into the labour market). In addition, Gibraltar is involved in three INTERREG III programmes, with an allocation of €425,000 for each.

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the British Government will formally seek the views of the Government of Gibraltar on proposals being discussed with the Spanish Government before agreeing any such proposals with a view to these the being placed before the people of Gibraltar for referendum. [48308]

Peter Hain: The aim of the current Brussels Process talks between the UK and Spanish Governments is to produce a set of proposals offering a framework for a secure, stable and prosperous future for Gibraltar. We want Gibraltar to have a voice in the talks. That is why we and the Spanish Government have invited the Chief Minister to participate with his own voice on the British side of the table, a formula known as: "three voices two flags". The offer stands and we continue to hope the Chief Minister will take it up.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the date for the next round of talks between Britain and Spain on the future status of Gibraltar. [47317]

Peter Hain: A further Ministerial meeting under the Brussels Process will be held in the coming months. The date has not yet been fixed. Our aim remains to conclude a comprehensive agreement by the summer.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of whether Gibraltar's social tax status would be a barrier to integration into the UK. [47315]

Mr. Hain: None. The Government does not regard integration with the UK as an option for any of the British Overseas Territories.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent steps Her Majesty's Government have taken to encourage the United States Administration to ratify the comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty; and what information he has in respect of the shortfall in payments made to the CTBT organisation in Vienna. [48079]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Hayes and Harlington (Mr. John McDonnell) on 10 December 2001, (Official Report, column 711W.)

In previous years, payments to the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test Ban Treaty Organisation have averaged over 95 per cent. of the annual approved budget.

By 3 April this year, the organisation had already received over 50 per cent. of its current budget contributions. This compares favourably with this time last year, when the figure stood at 45 per cent. The US have contributed US$16.6 million for 2002, which represents more than 95 per cent. of their assessed contribution.

Mike Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the proceeds from the sale of the former Cambodian Embassy in London. [48825]

Mr. Bradshaw: The proceeds from the sale of the former Cambodian Embassy premises and subsequent interest thereon, amount in total to £2.6 million, were transferred to the Foreign Ministry of Cambodia on 21 March. We hope the Cambodian Government will use these funds to establish a permanent diplomatic presence in the UK.

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what goods subject to strategic controls have recently been approved for export to Iraq. [48826]

Mr. MacShane: Following consultation with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Ministry of Defence, the Department of Trade and Industry recently approved a licence to export laboratory equipment for use by secondary schools in Northern Iraq. The export included 6.25kg of sodium sulphide which is subject to the Dual-Use Items (Export Control) Regulations 2000 as amended. The UN Iraq Sanctions Committee approved this export to Iraq under the Oil for Food programme (OFF). Under OFF Iraq is allowed to export unlimited quantities of oil to fund the purchase of humanitarian goods. The export is consistent with the consolidated EU and national arms export licensing criteria.

Lawrie Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the (a) forthcoming business in the Council of the European Union for April and (b) major European Union events for the period between 30 April and September. [48827]

Peter Hain:

International Criminal Court

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the International Criminal Court. [48828]

Mr. Straw: This is an historic day or international justice and for the human rights of every citizen of the world. Today, at the United Nations in New York, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Cambodia, Ireland, Mongolia, Romania and Slovakia deposited their instruments of ratification to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court (ICC). These ratifications bring to 63 the number of states to have committed themselves to this landmark Convention and therefore activates the Statute, which will enter into force on 1 July 2002.

The ICC will try those individuals accused of committing war crimes, crimes against humanity and genocide, irrespective of their rank or position. In future, tyrants will know that their actions are not beyond the reach of international justice. The victims of their crimes will, for the first time, be able to look forward to the prospect of real justice. The culture of impunity, which has shrouded human rights violations for too long, will be over.

This government has always been an enthusiastic supporter of the Court. It is our belief that the global rule of law is stronger than the local rule of tyrants. We played a major part in drafting the Statute, and worked hard to secure the passage of the International Criminal Court Act through this Parliament and the Scottish Parliament, to enable us to be amongst the first 60 states to ratify. I pay tribute to my predecessor, the right hon. Member for Livingston (Mr. Cook), and to all those who have worked to see establishment of the ICC.

The ICC will be a permanent court acting as a permanent deterrent for all potential tyrants. In time, this will be the law which transcends borders and embodies global values. As ever with all institutions of the law, its practice will be as important as its founding principles. We are committed to ensuring that it does its job fairly and impartially. We hope shortly to nominate a British candidate to be one of the judges of the Court.

Project Sponsorship

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which of his Department's projects have received sponsorship since 1997, including (a) details of the sponsor, (b) the nature of the project, (c) the date of the project, (d) the total cost of the project and (e) the amount of money involved in the sponsorship deal. [48404]

Mr. MacShane: In line with the Government's commitment in its response to the Sixth Report form the Committee on Standards in Public Life, details of individual amounts of sponsorship valued at more than £5,000 will be disclosed in departmental Annual Reports.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Criminal Damage

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General what the cost has been of criminal damage to her Department's buildings in each of the last four years. [44832]

The Solicitor-General [holding reply 25 March 2002]: In relation to my own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, so far as I am aware, there have been no instances of criminal damage to the Department's building in each of the last four years.

In relation to those Departments for which the Attorney General is responsible, details are as follows:

Crown Prosecution Service

The Crown Prosecution Service does not maintain a database in respect of incidents or costs arising from criminal damage to its buildings. The Crown Prosecution Service could not obtain such information without incurring disproportionate cost.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

None of the Treasury Solicitor's Department's premises have suffered criminal damage over the last four years.

Serious Fraud Office

The Serious Fraud Office has not suffered any criminal damage over the last four years.

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor General how many people employed by her Department under the New Deal for Young People in each of the last four years have subsequently (a) found unsubsidised employment for more than 13 weeks and (b) returned to jobseekers' allowance or other benefits. [45091]

The Solicitor-General: My Own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, is a small one and the staff are all seconded from other Government Departments. It has not, therefore employed any staff under the New Deal schemes during the last four years.

In the Departments for which the Attorney General is responsible, details are as follows:

Crown Prosecution Service

The Crown Prosecution Service has not employed anyone specifically under the New Deal for Young People scheme over the last four years.

However, two people within the Young People scheme age group were employed by the Department under a general New Deal recruitment scheme. Both employees were placed on one year fixed term contracts (unsubsidised). One person was released after a couple of months, as the outcome of the pre-employment enquiries proved unsatisfactory. It is not known whether this person returned to claim jobseekers' allowance or any other benefits. The second person resigned after a year to commence a college course.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

The Treasury Solicitor's Department has never specifically allocated vacancies to be filled by New Deal applicants, although where the Department has recruited at Administrative Officer level and below, it has always circulated these vacancies on the New Deal Network, through the local Job Centre.

Two Support Grade Band 2s were recruited in May 2000, who were New Deal registered. These employees were offered permanent posts from the outset and therefore no subsidies were claimed.

Serious Fraud Office

The Serious Fraud Office has not employed any staff under the New Deal Schemes during the last four years.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor General, what recent assessment she had made of whether the PSA target to increase by March from 93 per cent. to 100 per cent. the proportion of prosecution witness expenses sent no later than 10 working days from receipt of a correctly completed claim form will be met. [47813]

The Solicitor General [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Information about progress on PSA targets will be published in the Law Officers' 2002 Departmental Report.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Contracts

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many contracts were let by her Department and agencies for which she is responsible to (a) PWC Consulting or PricewaterhouseCoopers, (b) Ernst & Young, (c) Deloitte & Touche, (d) KPMG and (e) Andersen for consultancy services for the financial years (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99, (iii) 1999–00, (iv) 2000–01 and (v) 2001 to the latest date for which figures are available, indicating the remuneration in ea. h case. [33847]

Ms Hewitt: Information from the Department's systems indicate that contracts let by core DTI to PWC Consulting or PricewaterhouseCoopers are as follows:

PricewaterhouseCoopers

	No. contracts	Total value £
1 April 1999 to 31 March 2000	9	354,657

1 April 2001 to 4 January 2002	3	92,131

Information is not held centrally for the earlier years and could only be obtained at disproportionate costs.

For contracts let to Andersen I would refer to the answer given to the hon. Member for Carmarthen East and Dinefwr on 11 February 2002, Official Report, column 62W where exceptionally information was given for earlier years.

The Department's Executive Agencies will be responding separately.

Letter from Dr. J. W. Llewellyn to Mr. Don Foster, dated 11 April 2002:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory (NWML) to your question about the number and value of consutlancy services commissioned by NWML in recent years in respect of PWC Consulting or PricewaterhouseCoopers, Ernst and Yong, Deloitte Touche, KPMG and Andersen.

NWML has not engaged any of these organisations during the period specified.

Letter from David Irwin to Mr. Don Foster, dated 11 April 2002:

I set out below details of contracts issued by the Small Business Service since its inception on 3 April 2000, together with its predecessor directorates, to two of the companies listed in your question to Mrs. Hewitt.

Company	Financial Year	Number of contracts	Value (£)
KPMG	1997–98	1	19,387
	1998–99	1	254,232
	2001–02	Secondee	35,000
Ernst & Young	1997–98	2	75,719

No contracts were issued to PWC Consulting or PricewaterhouseCoopers, Deloitte & Touche, or Andersen.

Letter from Chris de Grouchy to Mr. Don Foster, dated 11 April 2002:

In the absence of the Chief Executive, the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply on behalf of the Radiocommunications Agency to your Parliamentary Question about contracts let to various companies.

In 1999–2000 the Agency let one contract to KPMG. Remuneration for the work amounted to £1,522,460 ex-VAT.

Letter from Dr. Roger Heathcote to Mr. Don Foster, dated 11 April 2002:

You tabled a Parliamentary Question on 4 February 2002 to Patricia Hewitt, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, concerning how many contracts were let by her Department and agencies for which she is responsible to (a) PWC Consulting or PricewaterhouseCoopers, (b) Ernst & Young, (c) Deloitte & Touche, (d) KPMG and (e) Andersen for consultancy services for the financial years (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99, (iii) 1999–2000, (iv) 2000–01 and (v) 2001 to the latest date for which figures are available, indicating the remuneration made in each case.

The Employment Tribunals Service awarded one contract to Deloitte & Touche for (iv) 2000–01 and (v) 2001 to the latest date for which figures are available. The remuneration made was as follows:

Financial year 2000–01 payment of £21,319.20 was made on 22 February 2001;

Financial year 2001–02 payment of £10,184.90 was made on 12 April 2001; and Financial year 2001–02 payment of £21,576.53 was made on 19 July 2001.

The Employment Tribunals Service awarded this contract to Deloitte & Touche as a result of a competitive tender. The contract was funded from the Civil Service Reform Fund and both the work and payment spanned the financial years 2000–01 and 2001–02.

Letter from John Holden to Mr. Don Foster, dated 11 April 2002:

I refer to your written Parliamentary Question 2001/2674. I have been asked to respond for Companies House.

A contract was let to PricewaterhouseCoopers in June 1998, via a mini-competition using SCAT suppliers, for consultancy advice related to procurement of a Millennium-compliant accounting system, at a cost of £127K.

Letter from Desmond Flynn to Mr. Don Foster, dated 11 April 2002:

The Secretary of State has asked me to respond to your question as to how many contracts were let by The Insolvency Service to (a) PWC Consulting or PricewaterhouseCoopers, (b) Ernst & Young, (c) Deloitte & Touche, (d) KPMG and (e) Andersen for consultancy services for the financial years (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99, (iii) 1999–00, (iv) 2000–01 and (v) 2001 to the latest date for which figures are available, indicating the remuneration made in each case.

The Insolvency Service has had no consultancy contracts with these firms during the specified years.

Letter from Alison Brimelow to Mr. Don Foster, dated 11 April 2002:

I am replying on behalf of the Patent Office to your Parliamentary Question 2674 to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry relating to contracts let to PWC Consulting or PricewaterhouseCoopers, Ernst & Young, Deloitte & Touche, KPMG and Andersen for consultancy services for each of the financial years from 1997 to 2001.

No contracts have been let by the Patent Office to any of the above for consultancy services in any of the financial years from 1997 to 2001.

ECGD Assistance

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list by name and location, the fossil fuel power projects that have been built with the involvement of UK companies in receipt of ECGD assistance since (a) 1992 and (b) 1997; and which of those are coal-powered. [44620]

Ms Hewitt: The tables below list the project name, country and fuel type for which ECGD has provided guarantees since 1992 and 1997.

In addition, ECGD has provided Overseas Investment Insurance and other insurances for 11 fossil fuel power projects. These projects are not disclosed, since such cases are treated as commercial in confidence.

For most of the projects listed, the UK exporter is one of several contractors and ECGD is guaranteeing only part of the total project financing.

Economic Reform

Mr. David: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how she intends to pursue the Lisbon agenda of economic reform after the Barcelona Summit. [47975]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Government view the Barcelona Summit as a significant success. The conclusions registered solid progress on economic reform and, as my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister stressed in his post-Summit Press Conference, it "symbolised an important change of gear for Europe's economy and its economic policy".

The Lisbon agenda is a 10 year programme and there is still much to be done. We wait to ensure that individual Councils make a practical reality of the Barcelona conclusions on the liberalisation of energy markets, the availability of Broadband, final agreement on a Community Patent and the adoption of an EU R&D Framework. Member states will also need to work closely with the European Commission in its work on an Entrepreneurship Green Paper, reform of state aids policy and exploiting biotechnology.

In taking this work forward, both Ministers and officials will continue to be constructively engaged with the Commission, our opposite numbers in other member states and the European Parliament, as well as ensuring that the voice of UK and European business is listened to by all key EU players.

Pay (Heywood and Middleton)

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans the Government have to commission data on the gender pay gap in Heywood and Middleton constituency. [48634]

Alan Johnson: The Office for National Statistics publishes data on the gender pay gap in the New Earnings Survey. However, in the case of the Heywood and Middleton Constituency, the data is not sufficiently reliable for publication.

Current trends in women's individual incomes have been explored in two studies published last year by the Women and Equality Unit (WEU). Copies of these reports are available on the WEU website (http://www.womenandequalityunit.gov.uk/research/publications/research-and-publications.htm).

WEU Gender Briefing, which provides statistical briefing on the position of women compared with men in the labour market, is also available on the website (http://www.womenandequalityunit.gov.uk/research/gender-briefing/home.htm).

There are no plans to commission further research into the gender pay gap in Heywood and Middleton.

Oil and Gas Industry

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made on the Department's review of the oil and gas industry's code of practice dealing with the negotiations for access to oil and gas infrastructure. [48852]

Mr. Wilson: I have today placed in the Libraries of the House recommendations to industry to consider limited but worthwhile changes to its Infrastructure Code of Practice. The proposed changes are intended to improve the transparency and conduct of negotiations for third party access to UKCS pipelines and processing facilities. This is the final element of the Departmental response to its consultation on Oil and Gas Infrastructure: Access Provisions and Voluntary Arrangements, which included a review of the effectiveness of the voluntary Code. The recommendations build on views expressed and suggestions made in response to that consultation.

Mineworkers

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has for giving mineworkers a greater share of the surplus from their pension fund; and if she will make a statement. [44495]

Mr. Wilson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the Member for Barnsley Central on 17 January, Official Report, column 403W.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the wards in the South and South East of England which have EU objective 2 status, in the grouping which enabled them to qualify for objective 2 status, listing for each grouping its (a) position relative to the lowest decile of deprivation indices, (b) population, (c) unemployment according to the last census, (d) average income per head according to the most recent information available, (e) population of working age and (f) county. [48389]

Alan Johnson: Groups of wards were submitted to the European Commission for consideration for Objective 2 status according to the Council Regulation (EC) No. 1260/1999 of 21 June 1999. The table shows the groups for wards in the South West and South East of England, and shows which NUTS 3 and 4 areas the wards were in. The table shows (a) whether the ward was ranked in the tenth lowest wards according to the 1998 index of deprivation, (b) the population as estimated for 1996, (c) unemployment according to the 1991 census, (d) the population of working age according to the 1991 census.

No information is available on average income per head for wards.

Project Sponsorship

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which of her Department's projects have received sponsorship since 1997, including (a) details of the sponsor, (b) the nature of the project, (c) the date of the project, (d) the total cost of the project and (e) the amount of money involved in the sponsorship deal. [48393]

Ms Hewitt: In line with the Government's commitment in its response to the Sixth Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life, details of individual amounts of sponsorship valued at more than £5,000 will be disclosed in departmental Annual Reports.

EU Structural Funding

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer of 26 March 2002, ref. 44277/44278, what percentage of the population of (a) each NUTS 2 area and (b) each shire county, unitary authority London borough or metropolitan borough which is not terminous with a NUTS 2 area lies within an area holding EU objective 2 status. [48388]

Alan Johnson: The information requested is available for NUTS areas 1–4, and has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) amount and (b) proportion of the current overall EU Objective 2 budget for the UK has been (i) committed and (ii) spent in each of the UK Objective 2 regions. [45816]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The information requested is not held centrally.

As soon as the information has been collated I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of that letter in the Libraries of the House.

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Insolvency Service, in its corporate Plan 2001–04, includes the objective to "develop policy and legislative solutions needed to support and underpin a modern commercial and financial infrastructure and which reflect both national and global changes in economic and business dynamics, and perceptions and expectations of society".

In addition, the Insolvency Service undertakes or commissions research to inform both the development of policy and the formulation of operational strategy.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what the objectives are of the Insolvency Service; [42083]

(2) if she will make a statement on the development of the Insolvency Service's research function, including its role in (a) policy formulation and (b) operational strategy formulation. [42079]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Insolvency Service objectives are set out in its published Corporate Plan 2001–04 a copy of which has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Merchant Ships (Steel)

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if she will ban the use of grade A steel for the construction of merchant ships. [47571]

(2) if she will reappraise the use of high tensile steel in the construction of merchant vessels. [47572]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

The toughness grades of steel used in shipbuilding are regulated by the International Association of Classification Societies through their unified requirement UR S6. The current version of UR S6 permits limited use of grade A mild steel, as well as grade AH high tensile steel, in structures contributing to overall strength.

This standard limits the use of grades A and AH steels according to their rolled thickness and mean air temperatures in expected area of operation, requiring grades with a higher standard of fracture toughness for high thickness and low temperature.

There are no plans to ban the use of grade A mild steel or to reappraise the use of high tensile steels for merchant ship construction, given the fracture toughness now achieved with grades A and AH.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Human Rights Act

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many cases have been brought against his Department under the Human Rights Act 1998; and what has been the cost in (a) legal fees to defend cases and (b) compensation payments. [45057]

Mr. Wills: We do not collect central records of all cases in which the Human Rights Act 1998 is relied on. Human rights are now integrated in the general law and are rarely the sole basis for a challenge. We do monitor centrally those cases which we consider may be of particular significance to this department. We have recorded 29 cases to date.

We do not collect separate information centrally about the costs to public funds, legal fees or compensation payments in cases which include a human rights issue. In most cases it will be difficult to identify costs referable to the human rights element.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he will answer the quesion tabled by the hon. and learned Member for Harborough on 26 February regarding the closure of courts. [45686]

Mr. Wills: I am sorry that your question tabled on 26 February was not answered. You ask how many (a) county courts, (b) crown courts and (c) magistates' courts have been closed in each year since 1 May 1997. Based on the latest survey information the numbers of courts closed since that date are:

Year	Magistrates' Courts	County Courts	Crown Court Centres

Code of Practice on Access to Government Information

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what the recommended time is for departments to decide the results of an internal appeal under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. [48611]

Mr. Wills: It is for individual bodies subject to the Code to make their own arrangements for the procedure used to review cases internally where information has been refused and the applicant has made a complaint. Appendix 5 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information Monitoring Report for the year 2000, published in September 2001, sets out the target times adopted by bodies subject to the Code for deciding the results of an internal appeal. The majority have adopted a target of 20 working days or less. The target for decision on an internal appeal within this Department is 20 working days.

Freedom of Information

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will place in the Library copies of each version of the guidance distributed to officials to advise them on how to answer subject access requests under the Data Protection Act 1998. [48612]

Mr. Wills: A circular (IT Security News) was issued to staff in November 1999 about the Data Protection Act. I have placed a copy of IT Security News, Issue 6 in the House Library. No separate guidance has been issued since then. I expect to be able to make an announcement on central guidance on handling subject access requests shortly.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the Lord Chancellor will reply to the letter to him dated 18 February for the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. A. Wellings. [47768]

Mr. Wills: The Lord Chancellor wrote in reply to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton's letter of 18 February on 27 March 2002.

Project Sponsorship

Mr. Beith: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department which of his Department's projects have received sponsorship since 1997, including (a) details of the sponsor, (b) the nature of the project, (c) the date of the project, (d) the total cost of the project and (e) the amount of money involved in the sponsorship deal. [48406]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In line with the Government's commitment in its response to the Sixth Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life, details of individual amounts of sponsorship valued at more than £5,000 will be disclosed in departmental Annual Reports.

Fraud (Dentists)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many dentists have received custodian sentences since 1997 arising from a conviction for fraud against the NHS. [43813]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

Since 1997, of all National Health Service fraud and corruption cases involving dental contractors, there have been eight cases, which have been successfully prosecuted. Of these five received a custodial sentence. There are currently six cases awaiting court proceedings and 34 alleged cases of fraud and corruption under investigation by the NHS Counter Fraud Service.

SCOTLAND

Catering Services

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the cost was of (a) in-house canteen and (b) other catering services provided by her Department in each of the last four years. [38929]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999.

In buildings where the department is the sole occupier, there are no in-house canteen or catering services. In accommodation shared with the Scottish Executive, catering services are provided by that department as the major occupier.

Equipment Leasing

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the equipment leasing arrangements entered into by her Department in each of the last four years, and what the cost to public funds in each case is. [38935]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999.

No equipment leasing arrangements have been made by the Department since that date.

Accommodation Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the cost was of hotel accommodation for departmental staff working away from home in each of the last four years. [41063]

Mrs. Liddell: The information is not available in the form requested.

Accountancy Contracts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the contracts agreed by her Department with the five largest accountancy firms since May 1997; and what was the total value of contracts with each. [42110]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999.

The Department has had no contracts with accountancy firms since that date.

Energy Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will make a statement on energy costs incurred by her Department in each of the last 10 years. [42435]

Mrs. Liddell: The information is not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the (a) private finance initiative and (b) public private partnership projects which have been delayed. [44882]

Mrs. Liddell: My Department has no private finance initiative or public private partnership projects.

Criminal Damage

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the cost has been of criminal damage to her Department's buildings in each of the last four years. [44828]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999.

There have been no cases of criminal damage to the Department's buildings since that date.

Secondments

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many members of staff were employed by her Department on secondment from the private sector in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [45259]

Mrs. Liddell: No staff employed by my Department were seconded from the private sector between 1999 and 2001.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many members of staff were employed by the Scotland Office on secondment from non-Governmental organisations in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [45223]

Mrs. Liddell: One member of staff was seconded to the Scotland Office from a non-governmental organisation in 2001.

Project Sponsorship

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which of her Department's projects have received sponsorship since 1997, including (a) details of the sponsor, (b) the nature of the project, (c) the date of the project, (d) the total cost of the project and (e) the amount of money involved in the sponsorship deal. [48394]

Mrs. Liddell: In line with the Government's commitment in its response to the Sixth Report from the Committee on Standards on Public Life, details of individual amounts of sponsorship valued at more than £5,000 will be disclosed in departmental Annual Reports.

Crèche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what crèche facilities are provided by her Department; and at what cost. [44859]

Mrs. Liddell: No crèche facilities are provided by my Department.

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Advocate-General if she will list the (a) private finance initiative and (b) public private partnership projects which have been delayed. [44889]

The Advocate-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Crèche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Advocate-General what crèche facilities are provided by her Department; and at what cost. [44857]

The Advocate-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Criminal Damage

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Advocate-General what the cost has been of criminal damage to her Department's buildings in each of the last four years. [44830]

The Advocate-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Value for Money

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Advocate-General, pursuant to her answer of 19 March 2002, Official Report, column 181W, on value for money, what specific measures she has put in place to provide for efficient operation and a contribution towards securing better value for money. [45782]

The Advocate-General: My office, like the rest of the Scotland Office, has been in existence for less than three years and, in developing suitable working systems, officials have sought to ensure that the work is done in a way which makes the most efficient use of staff and other resources.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Government Agencies and Quangos

Andrew George: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 25 February 2002, Official Report, column 876W, what assessment he has made of (a) the total number of Government agencies and quangos operating in each of the regions and (b) their annual budgets. [42260]

Mr. Leslie: In respect of (a), I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Member for Hornsey and Wood Green on Wednesday 13 March 2002, Official Report, column 1070W.

In respect of (b), information on the total gross expenditure of individual non-departmental public bodies, and information on the funding of this, is set out in the annual publication "Public Bodies", copies of which can be found in the Libraries of the House. Information on annual budgets of executive agencies is set out in each Agency's Annual Report and Accounts.

Secondments

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many members of staff were employed by the Cabinet office on secondment from non-Governmental organisations in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [45235]

Mr. Leslie: The number of secondees employed in the Cabinet Office from non-governmental organisations for the period 1 April 1999 to date are as follows:

Period	Number of Staff
1 April 1999–31 March 2000	41
1 April 2000–31 March 2001	37
1 April 2001 to date	35

Note: This data only includes Governnment Offices for the Regions for 2001–02 as they joined the Cabinet Office in June 2001.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people employed by his Department under the New Deal for Young People in each of the last four years have subsequently (a) found unsubsidised employment for more than 13 weeks and (b) returned to jobseekers' allowance or other benefits. [45079]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: Cabinet Office.

Three people employed by the Cabinet Office, initially under the New Deal for Young People (one in 1998 and two in 2000), have subsequently been employed by the Cabinet Office on permanent contracts following fair and open competition. We do not hold information on people employed under the scheme who have not left the Department.

Cabinet Offices Agencies and Government Offices of the Regions

(i) Government Car and Despatch Agency

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what new initiatives his Department has taken in 2001–02 to assist in achieving its Public Service Agreement targets. [47183]

Mr. Leslie: Progress on/against PSA targets will be reported and published in the Cabinet Office's annual Departmental Report for 2002.

Special Advisers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many special advisers there were in his Department; and what their salaries were in each of the last five years. [46944]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: At 9 April 2002, there were four special advisers in my office, including two part-timers.

On salaries, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 10 April, Official Report, column 11W.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Burns: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many times Ministers in his Department have travelled abroad at taxpayers' expense since March 2001; what countries they visited; and what the total cost of each visit was. [47100]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: Since 1999 this Government has published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government has also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. The 1999 list contained information on all such visits undertaken from 2 May 1997 to 31 March 1999. Details for travel undertaken in the period 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 will be published as soon as possible after the end of the current financial year.

All travel is undertaken fully in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Project Sponsorship

Mr. Beith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which of his Department's projects have received sponsorship since 1997, including (a) details of the sponsor, (b) the nature of the project, (c) the date of the project, (d) the total cost of the project and (e) the amount of money involved in the sponsorship deal. [48405]

Mr. Leslie: In line with the Government's commitment in its response to the Sixth Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life, details of individual amounts of sponsorship valued at more than £5,000 will be disclosed in departmental Annual Reports.

Magistrates

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many serving magistrates live in (a) St. Helens, South constituency and (b) St. Helens Metropolitan Borough. [46987]

Mr. Leslie: I have been asked to reply. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, who is responsible for the appointment of magistrates in Merseyside, has provided the following information.

There are 50 magistrates serving on the St. Helens Bench who live in the St. Helens South constituency.

There are 93 magistrates serving on the St. Helens Bench who live in the Metropolitan Borough of St. Helens which covers the constituencies of St. Helens North and St. Helens South.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Pensions

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to compel pension trustee boards to appoint independent chairmen. [43953]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: We have no plans to compel pension trustee boards to appoint independent chairmen.

We believe that requiring independent chairmen for trustee boards would discourage employers from continuing to provide occupational pension schemes, would be difficult to implement in practice, and would make little difference to the way schemes are run.

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much money has been spent to date on the New Deal for Young People. [44898]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Up to March 2001 £1,063 billion was spent on the New Deal for Young People, of which £860 million was funded from the Windfall Tax and £203 million from the Department's own resources. Forecast expenditure for 2001–02 will be published in the Departmental Report in May this year.

IT Projects

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the IT Projects being undertaken by his Department; and which companies have been awarded the contracts. [46317]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding reply 26 March 2002]: Our main IT suppliers are:

EDS—for our Employment Service modernisation programme;

Affinity, (led by EDS with IBM UK, PricewaterhouseCoopers and AT Kearney)—for our Department for Work and Pensions modernisation programme (major contracts include Child Support Reform, Strategic Outsourcing and some elements of the Department's Early Office Infrastructure programme);

Arcway, (led by BT Syntegra with Bill Information Systems and Schlumberger Sema)—for the new network needed to support our modernisation programme.

Incomes

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects the latest figures on households below average incomes to be published. [49445]

Mr. Darling: Today I have published Households Below Average Income for 1994–95 to 2000–01. This is a report published under National Statistics arrangements with results that cover Great Britain. Copies have been placed in the Library.

The report shows the position during the financial year 2000–01. Consequently, it does not reflect the full impact of policies introduced part way through that year, or the changes introduced since—for instance the Children's Tax Credit or enhancements to tax credits and benefits made in 2001.

Nonetheless the report shows that this Government's policies are working. The new economic stability has delivered strong income growth since 1996–97 that is consistent across the whole income distribution. Furthermore our priority to target help to those most in need has delivered real improvements for those on the lowest incomes. There have been significant falls in the numbers of people below "absolute" low-income lines (1996–97 low-income thresholds in real terms). There are now 1.4 million fewer children and 1.1 million fewer pensioners below 60 per cent of 1996–97 median income in real terms (after housing costs).

Against this backdrop of rising prosperity across the income distribution, we are still reversing the long-term trend of rising relative income poverty for children that we inherited. There are now around half a million fewer children living in households below 60 per cent of contemporary median income.

Jobcentre-Plus Offices

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment has been made of the impact of the decision to remove screens from the pilot Pathfinder offices; and if he will make a statement. [45507]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding reply 25 March 2002]: The Pathfinder offices are delivering the new Jobcentre Plus service in a predominantly unscreened environment. In every Jobcentre Plus area there remains screened provision for dealing with those customers and transactions known to give rise to particular risk.

Fifty-six Jobcentre Plus Pathfinder offices are open and operating effectively—with positive feedback from staff and customers. For each of these offices a risk assessment has been conducted and its recommendations implemented in full. These assessments will be regularly reviewed in light of experience.

Pensioner Poverty

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to tackle pensioner poverty. [45912]

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what measures he is taking to ensure that pensioners share in the nation's prosperity. [44516]

Mr. McCartney: We are committed to tackling pensioner poverty. In 2001–02 around £5 billion extra has been spent on pensioners as a result of our policies since 1997. In 2002–03 this will rise to £6 billion a year. This includes £2.5 billion more on the poorest third of pensioners.

This government introduced the Minimum Income Guarantee and is committed to raising this in line with earnings throughout this Parliament, ensuring that pensioners share in rising prosperity. From April, around 1.8 million of the poorest pensioner households will be over £1,000 a year better off in real terms as a result of the Government's tax benefit reforms.

From 2003 the Pension Credit will ensure that it pays to have saved, with those entitled standing to gain an average of around £400 a year.

Advertising/Public Relations

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list each (a) public relations and (b) advertising firm that has been employed by his Department since 1997, indicating the (i) subject area and (ii) campaign they worked on in each case. [33628]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Department of Work and Pensions is a new department formed in June 2001. Since that time the following PR and advertising agencies have been employed in the subject areas and on the campaigns indicated:

PR company	Subject area and campaign
Geronimo	New Deal/Age Positive
Media Moguls (ethnic specialists)	New Deal

Advertising agency	Subject area and campaign
Publicis	New Deal for Disabled People
A national campaign to launch NDDP, covering press advertising in national and regional titles, supported by a help line, website and publicity material.
St Lukes	New Deal 50 Plus
A regional campaign to encourage more of the over-50s into work and to increase their awareness of the local help available.
St Lukes	New Deal 25 Plus
A national campaign to inform the public about changes to the programme through radio advertising, a video and printed materials, supported by research.
Ogilvy & Mather	Work Incentives
Advertising campaign on local radio to raise awareness of the range of financial initiatives available to those moving from benefits into employment if they meet the qualifying criteria.
Delaney Lund Knox Warren & Craik Jones Watson Mitchell Voelkel	Pension Education
A publicity campaign to encourage people to save for their retirement and understand the pension options available to them.
Ogilvy & Mather	Winter Fuel Payments
Information for people aged 60 plus and advisers about winter fuel payments and activity reminding them to claim and telling them how to claim for winter 2002 and relevant previous winters.
D'Arcy	Targeting Fraud
A national advertising campaign on television, radio, press and posters to deter dishonest behaviour, reinforced by regional press advertising showing that benefit fraudsters are regularly caught and punished.
D'Arcy	Disability Discrimination Act Awareness
A national, regional and trade press advertising campaign to raise the public's awareness of the DDA and specifically to encourage service providers to ensure that disabled people have access to their services.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the Public Service Agreement targets which have been revised and those which have been introduced since the publication of the 2001 departmental report. [43248]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Following machinery of Government changes in June 2001, the Public Service Agreement targets for the Department of Social Security were carried forward with the addition of the target shown below which was transferred from the Department for Education and Employment.

"A continued reduction in the number of unemployed people over the age of 18 over the three years to 2004, taking account of the economic cycle."

DEFENCE

Defence Medical Agencies

Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made with the quinquennial review of the defence medical agencies; and if he will make a statement. [46935]

Dr. Lewis Moonie: As indicated in my written answer on 15 December 2000, Official Report, columns 274W–275W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Mr. Coaker) the Review has covered the functions and organisation of the Ministry of Defence's four medical agencies—the Defence Secondary Care Agency (DSCA), the Defence Dental Agency (DDA), the Defence Medical Training Organisation (DMTO) and the Medical Supplies Agency (MSA)—and other aspects of medical provision. I announced the results of the initial phase of work in my written answer of 17 October 2001, Official Report, columns 1223W–1224W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Great Yarmouth (Mr. Wright).

The Review Team has now completed its work, and I am today placing a summary of its conclusions in the Library of the House. In brief, the main points are that:

There must be a clearer focus on delivery of the two key Defence medical outputs—deployable operational medical capability, and timely appropriate healthcare for Service personnel;

Accountability for the delivery of these outputs by both central and single-Service authorities must be defined unambiguously, as part of a clear tri-Service strategy and plan;

The Surgeon General (SG), working to the Vice Chief of Defence Staff, will be empowered to undertake effective oversight and direction of the DMS in meeting the key output requirements, including those elements which remain under single-Service management;

A stronger partnership will be established between the DMS and the National Health Service;

Management capabilities throughout the DMS will be strengthened, drawing on expertise from the parent Services and, where relevant, the NHS;

The Defence Medical Services will be re-aligned and restructured to focus more effectively on the two key Defence medical outputs. The DSCA will be disestablished on 31 March 2003, with its training-related functions transferring to an expanded medical training agency, and healthcare commissioning being undertaken by a new group within the Surgeon General's staff. The MSA has now transferred into the Defence Logistics Organisation as of 1 April 2002.

The review has provided an important opportunity to take stock of the progress that has been made since the announcement of the New Strategy for the DMS at the end of 1998. It is no surprise that it has concluded that while much has been done over the last three years there are further steps to be taken—and changes to be made—that will help the process of restoring DMS capability and ensuring that key Defence medical outputs are delivered. The Government is committed to achieving those aims and, subject to the normal consultative process, to implementing the outcome of the review.

Mr. Anthony D. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence What progress has been made with the quinquennial review of the medical agencies; and if he will make a statement. [8603]

Dr. Moonie: I am pleased to say that the review team have completed the first phase of its studies. As indicated in my written answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Vernon Coaker) of 15 December 2000, Official Report, column 275W, the team has covered medical arrangements for personnel in Germany and Northern Ireland; and the inter-relationships between primary and secondary care as well as the functions and organisation of the Ministry of Defence's four medical agencies—the Defence Secondary Care Agency, the Defence Dental Agency, the Defence Medical Training Organisation and the Medical Supplies Agency.

I have endorsed the broad lines of the review team's report on the first phase of its studies and have agreed a package of further work to underpin and confirm its provisional conclusions. A paper summarising the main features of the team's initial report and the phase 2 work, which will take place between now and the end of the year, is being placed in the Library of the House. As the paper indicates, this further work will result in a detailed report which will form the basis of full consultation.

Property Protection

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence What new measures his Department took in 2001–02 to protect its property from theft or damage. [47250]

Dr. Lewis Moonie [holding reply Wednesday 10 April 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 25 February 2002. (Official Report, column 682) which gave details of new and existing measures to deter and detect fraud and theft. It is a prime feature of delegated line management responsibility to operate procedures protecting assets from theft and damage. These procedures are always subject to review. They are enhanced where possible through central initiatives directed at the deterrence and detection of fraud and theft and the introduction of resource accounting arrangements. Recent developments include the promulgation of a policy statement on fraud and theft and the development of a programme of fraud and theft awareness training across the department. Key controls, such as the maintenance of asset registers requiring a physical description of assets, spot checks and random searches, authorisation to remove assets from sites and physical security are underpinned by published guidance and direction.

Joint Services Group

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the Joint Services Group was formed; what its mission is; how many soldiers are assigned to it; what ranks are represented in its leadership; and to whom its commanding officer reports. [48026]

Mr. Ingram: I am withholding this information under Exemption 1a of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information (information whose disclosure would harm national security or defence).

Warships

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his written answer of 25 March 2002, Official Report, column 562W, on warships, if the companies mentioned will be involved with nuclear material as part of their contract; and if he will make a statement. [48178]

Mr. Ingram: Babcock Naval Services Limited at the Clyde and Devonport Management Limited at Devonport will be required to provide direct support to Royal Navy nuclear powered submarines and this will involve nuclear material. Both of these companies are already engaged in work of this type.

Celebrations

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements his Department has made to celebrate (a) St. Patrick's Day, (b) St. George's Day, (c) St. Andrew's Day and (d) Her Majesty the Queen's Golden Jubilee; and how his Department celebrated St. David's Day. [42298].

Angela Eagle [holding answer 11 March 2002]: The hon. Member is referred to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Culture Media and Sport (Tessa Jowell) to the hon. Member for South Suffolk (Tim Yeo) on 11 February 2002, Official Report, column 58W, in respect of her Department's responsibility for supporting and facilitating the Queen's Golden Jubilee celebrations.

The Home Office flies the Union flag on St. George's Day and St. David's Day, and this year will also be flying the flag on Coronation Day—2 June 2002.

Staff will benefit from an additional bank holiday which will take place on Monday 3 June 2002 to mark the Queen's Golden Jubilee.

The Home Office issues a calendar of religious and cultural festivals each year and the Saints' days are included in that. Managers are encouraged to be flexible where possible and to make a reasonable accommodation for staff wishing to take leave for religious observance and festivals.

HOME DEPARTMENT

James Ashley

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the oral statement of the right hon. Member for Southampton, Itchen (Mr. Denham) of 11 February 2002, Official Report, columns 49–54, on James Ashley, what progress has been made in conducting disciplinary proceedings in relation to the police officers involved in the shooting of James Ashley. [43299]

Mr. Denham: One superintendent and two chief inspectors are facing a number of disciplinary charges. One officer has obtained leave for judicial review of his suspension. All three officers are seeking leave for judicial review of the chief constable's decision to proceed with disciplinary charges. It is unlikely that any disciplinary hearings will take place until those matters have been resolved.

Court Hearings

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the performance of contractors in delivering prisoners to magistrates courts in the West Midlands in good time for court hearings. [43425]

Beverley Hughes: Premier Prison Services, who operate the court escort contract in the west Midlands and mid Wales, are required to deliver prisoners to magistrates courts in their area 30 minutes before court start time. In the six months to February 2002 over 20,000 prisoners have been escorted by Premier Prison Services to those courts and of these approximately 82 per cent. have arrived by the time stated in their contract. A further seven per cent. have arrived before court start time.

All failures to meet the obligations placed on Premier Prison Services by the contract are examined by the Prison Service court escort monitor for the area and, where they are considered to be at fault, penalty points are imposed. If these exceed a prescribed level then financial remedies may be applied. Not all late deliveries are the direct fault of Premier Prison Services. Late discharges from prison, long journeys occasioned by the general population pressures on the prison estate and circumstances beyond the control of the parties involved may all be contributory factors in any individual case.

Sex Offender Treatment Programmes

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on availability of sex offender treatment programmes in prison. [42891]

Beverley Hughes: There are five versions of the accredited Sex Offender Treatment Programmes (SOTP) delivered in prisons: a core programme for all except those with learning difficulties and those at low risk of re-offending; an adapted programme for those with learning difficulties; an extended programme for those at high risk of re-offending; a rolling programme for those at low risk of re-offending; and a booster programme for those who have completed other versions of the programme and are preparing for release.

The Prison Service's targets for numbers of prisoners completing versions of the programme in 2002–03 and 2003–04 are 950 and 1,240 respectively. Versions of the programme are currently delivered at 25 prisons. This is planned to rise to 27 prisons in 2002–03 and 28 in 2003–04. Prisoners may need to be transferred in order to undertake the programme.

It is not possible to be precise as to whether provision exactly meets demand. For example, the programme is also delivered to those serving sentences for other offences but who have previous histories of sexual offending; and some offenders have to be excluded from treatment temporarily or permanently because clinical assessment at the start of the programme is that they are unlikely to be responsive. However, the Prison Service keeps the programme under review to ensure its availability to all eligible prisoners with sentences long enough to complete it.

Premier Prison Services, who operate the court escort contract in the West Midlands and Mid Wales, are required to deliver prisoners to magistrates'courts in their area 30 minutes before court start time. In the six months to February 2002 over 20,000 prisoners have been escorted by Premier Prison Services to those courts and of these approximately 82 per cent. have arrived by the time stated in their contract. A further seven per cent. have arrived before the court start time.

All failures to meet the obligations placed on Premier Prison Services by the contract are examined by the Prison Service Court Escort Monitor for the area and, where they are considered to be at fault, penalty points are imposed. If these exceed a prescribed level then financial remedies may be applied. Not all late deliveries are the direct fault of Premier Prison Services. Late discharges from prison, long journeys occasioned by the general population pressures on the prison estate and circumstances beyond the control of the parties involved may all be contributory factors in any individual case.

Prisons

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on overcrowding in prisons. [42893]

Beverley Hughes: At the end of February 2002, a total of 13,963 prisoners were held in overcrowded conditions. This is 20 per cent. of the prisoner population.

Most overcrowding is attributable to the numbers held two in a cell designed for one, commonly known as doubling. Within the total overcrowding figure above, 12,516 prisoners were held doubled. The average rate of doubling for the current year to the end of February is 17 per cent. which remains below the Key Performance Indicator (KPI) target for 2001–02 18 per cent or less.

Data are provisional and subject to validation by prisons.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken to address overcrowding in women's prisons. [43536]

Beverley Hughes: The female prison population on 15 March 2002 was 4,229. This was 146 below the total certified operational capacity of 4,375 for the same day. The Government sets no target for the prison population as it is for the courts to determine who is sent to prison. The Government will provide the places necessary to accommodate safely and securely those sentenced by the courts. New prison capacity is opening this year for female prisoners. Buckley Hall, a 350 place prison near Rochdale, will change function shortly from male to female use. Female capacity will increase by 80 places later this year when two ready use units are opened at Morton Hall in Lincolnshire. A further 810 places will be provided by 2004, in new prisons at Ashford (near Heathrow) and at Peterborough.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what aftercare is made available to women prisoners with mental health problems after they have been released. [43558]

Jacqui Smith: The Care Programme Approach (CPA), which is intended to address the health and social care needs of individual service users, applies to those women with mental health problems who leave prison in the same way that it applies to other mental health service users. It is intended to deliver care through a care plan to meet the individual needs of the service user, and is an effective co-ordination process. Most women prisoners with a serious mental illness should leave prison on enhanced CPA.

Women prisoners with mental health problems should be able to access a full range of the community supports they need in order to promote their recovery and integration back into society through their CPA care co-ordinator or general practitioner. This should include housing, education, employment and leisure and the establishment of appropriate links with the benefits agency and probation service.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what ratio of prison officers to inmates is provided for (a) female and (b) male prisoners. [43539]

Beverley Hughes: On 31 January 2002, the ratio of prison officer grades to prisoner was—within public sector prisons:

1:2.54—female prisoners;

1:2.73—male prisoners, within privately managed prisons:

1:2.18—male prisoners only.

The definition of prison officer grades differs within the public and private sector. On 31 January 2002, no privately managed prison accommodated female prisoners.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if they Pay Review Board's recommendations for pay increases for prison offices will be met in full. [44420]

Beverley Hughes: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend (Huw Edwards) on 21 March 2002, Official Report, column 480W.

Timber

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the companies from which his Department has obtained timber and wood products and the total spent with each firm over the last five years. [43407]

Angela Eagle: Current data capture systems do not enable the information to be reported in the format requested. From April 2001 the Department has instructed procurement staff to record information on timber and timber-based purchases by volume per species but there have been difficulties in obtaining the data. The Department proposes to review its capture of information on timber and wood purchases once cross government guidelines have been agreed.

Knife Crime

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what statistics his Department has collated on the incidence of knife crimes in Falmouth and Camborne. [43419]

Mr. Denham: The requested information is not collected centrally.

Wandsworth Prison

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prison workshops are in use at Wandsworth Prison. [44633]

Beverley Hughes: Workshops currently in use at Wandsworth prison are a Laundry, Data Entry Shop, Brush Manufacturing Shop, Textile Shop, Tailoring Shop and Contract Services Workshop.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inmates at Wandsworth Prison are working gin prison workshops (a) full-time and (b) part-time, as at 15 March 2002. [44622]

Beverley Hughes: 263 prisoners were employed in prison workshops at Wandsworth prison on 15 March 2002. Of these, 121 were employed full-time and 142 part-time.

Arrest Statistics

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests were made, broken down by police force area, in each year since 1997. [44460]

Mr. Denham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for South East Cambridgeshire (James Paice) on 26 February 2002, Official Report, column 1246W.

Golden Jubilee

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 14 February, Official Report, column 622W, if his Department is planning to apply for a special grant to pay for additional police officers and other exceptional additional costs which could not be met from within existing budgets for the Queen's Golden Jubilee; what the procedure is for applying for such a grant; how much money the Department anticipates requesting; and if he will make a statement. [44570]

Mr. Denham: Where it can be demonstrated that exceptional additional costs could not be met from existing police authority budgets or reserves it is open to forces to apply for a special grant. Any such application would be considered within existing Departmental provision for special grants.

In general terms we would expect police authorities to meet the additional costs of policing Golden Jubilee events from within their existing budgets or reserves. Criteria for consideration of a special grant application were agreed in 2000 between the Home Office, Association of Chief Police Officers and Association of Police Authorities. Under those criteria police authorities are normally expected to meet additional costs up to 1 per cent. of the force budget set by the policy authority. Grant would be considered in relation to the balance of cost above that 1 per cent.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much the Department has spent on the Queen's Jubilee in each of the past three years; how it has been allocated; and if he will make a statement. [44571]

Angela Eagle: There was no Home Office expenditure in connection with the Golden Jubilee in 1999–2000. In 2000–01, £72,375.15 was spent on the administrative costs of setting up the Golden Jubilee Unit, which is co-ordinating the arrangements for the Jubilee celebrations

Responsibility for the Golden Jubilee Unit was transferred to the Department of Culture, Media and Sport following the General Election. Funding had passed through the Home Office accounts in February 2002: up to that point £721,861.53 was spent by the Golden Jubilee Unit. This comprised £594,824 on the Unit's work in co-ordinating arrangements for the celebrations, £95,110 in grants and £31,927 on providing information about how to stage the jubilee events. Of the grant expenditure, the majority £50,000 was given to the "London String of Pearls" (as a contribution to the costs in opening up buildings to the public during Jubilee) and the rest to the Commonwealth Institute (to help towards the cost of its role in the planned national parade).

Yarl's Wood

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if prison officers were called to attend at Yarl's Wood during the recent riot. [44418]

Beverley Hughes: Yes. At the request of Group 4 and in accordance with the Prison Service's protocol with the Immigration and Nationality Department, prison officers were deployed to assist in restoring order at Yarl's Wood Immigration Removal Centre on 14 and 15 February 2002.

Wellingborough Prison

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change the number of prison officers at Wellingborough Prison attending prison visits. [44417]

Beverley Hughes: Management Consultancy Services (MCS) carried out a staffing and regimes review of Wellingborough Prison during October 2001. The MCS report contained recommendations about staffing levels required to supervise domestic visits. The report will now be discussed by MCS, management of the prison and the relevant staff associations.

Greater Manchester Police

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many community police officers there are in Greater Manchester, broken down by constituency. [42844]

Mr. John Denham [Holding answer 19 March 2002]: The information in the table has been provided by the Chief Constable of Greater Manchester Police (David Wilmot). The number of community police officers is shown for each police division. A breakdown by Parliamentary constituency is not available.

Division	Community Police Officers [1]
North Manchester Division	54
South Manchester Division	100
The City of Salford Division	75
Tamside Metropolitan Borough Division	34
Stockport Metropolitan Borough Division	53
Bolton Metropolitan Borough Division	66
Wigan Metropolitan Borough Division	53
Tafford Metropolitan Borough Division	38
Bury Metropolitan Borough Division	32
Rochdale Metropolitan Borough Division	47
Oldham Metropolitan Borough Division	36
Total	588

[1] Greater Manchester police have defined a 'community police officer' as an officer who dedicates their duties to working within the community in partnership with other agencies, examples are school liaison officers and youth offender officers.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many requests for review of notification of determination by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority there have been in each of the last three years; and what percentage of these requests subsequently result in a changed decision. [43990]

Mr. Keith Bradley [holding answer 19 March 2002]: The Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority have provided the following information:

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Review requests	19,891	20,521	18,002
% Decision changed	16	15	12

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many requests for review of determination by the Criminal Injury Compensation Authority there have been in the current financial year; what the waiting time is for allocation of review requests; and what the average time is for completion of the review. [43991]

Mr. Keith Bradley [holding answer 19 March 2002]: The Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority advise that 15,792 review requests were received in the period 1 April 2001 to 14 March 2002. The waiting time for allocation of review requests is currently 14 weeks and falling, and the average time for a completed review in the 2001–02 financial year is 439 days.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many determinations by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority on which the application for compensation is declined due to the applicant refusing to give evidence in court there have been in each of the last three years; and what percentage of the total number of determinations were (a) approved and (b) declined. [43989]

Mr. Keith Bradley [holding answer 19 March 2002]: The Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority advice that the number of applications rejected on account of the applicant's failure to give evidence in court was 236 in 1998–99, 158 in 1999–2000 and 274 in 2000–01. In the same three years, the percentages of all determinations approved were 54, 52 and 53, and of those rejected were 46, 48 and 47.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 22 January 2002, Official Report, column 834—5W, on stolen equipment, whether the computer equipment stolen from his Department was (a) new and unused and (b) used; and what was the nature of the data stored on such items in each case. [42642]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 20 March 2002]: The information requested is not held centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the target time will be in 2002–03 for (a) Ministers to reply to letters from hon. Members and (b) officials in his Department to reply to letters received directly from members of the public. [44956]

Angela Eagle: For 2002–03 the Home Office targets for replying to letters will continue as follows:

(a) Ministers to reply to 95 per cent. of MPs correspondence about the Prison Service within 20 working days, and within 15 working days on all other matters.

(b) Officials to reply to 95 per cent. of correspondence from the public within 20 working days.

Drug Use (Prisoners)

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Deparment what (1) the rate of testing for cannabis use among prisoners has been in each of the past five years. [45076]

(2) what estimates his department has made of the use of (a) cannabis, (b) heroin, (c) crack cocaine, (d) all drugs, including alcohol among prisoners in each of the past five years. [45077]

Beverley Hughes: The most reliable indicator of drug misuse in prisons is data from the random mandatory drug testing (MDT) programme. National figures are given in the table.

Percentage of positive tests from random MDT

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02[1]
Cannabis	17.2%	14.5%	10.2%	7.5%	6%
Opiates (including heroin)	4.3%	4.5%	4.3%	4.7%	4.7%
Cocaine (including crack)	0.2%	0.3%	0.2%	0.2%	0.2%
All drugs	20.8%	18.3%	14.2%	12.4%	11.4%

[1] Figures are based on the year to date—to 31 January 2002.

No central record is kept of the amount of alcohol use in prisons. However, the best available indicator is the number of punishments handed down to prisoners for knowingly consuming alcohol. Between 1997 and 2000 these were:

1997—297
1998—524
1999—632
2000—547

Alcohol-related Crime

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces in England and Wales keep records of alcohol-related crime. [44001]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 21 March 2002]: The term alcohol-related crime potentially covers any criminal act where the perpetrator may have been drinking alcohol prior to, or at the time of, the offence. While the relevant offence may be recorded, there is at present no requirement on police forces to record whether or not the offender had been drinking. Many forces do, however make their own assessment of alcohol-related crime problems, to inform their operational policing decisions.

The suite of Best Value Performance Indicators for the police for 2002–03 include both a measure of violent offences committed in connection with licensed premises and a measure of violent offences under the influence of an intoxicating substance. This will provide a consistent measure of alcohol-related violence across all police forces in England and Wales.

Special Urgency Provisions

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 13 March 2002, Official Report, column 1100W, if he will list the occasions on which his Department has applied the special urgency provisions of circular 18/84 (Development by Government Departments), stating (a) the date, (b) the nature of the development and (c) a description of local consultations conducted. [45560]

Angela Eagle: Crown land is exempt from statutory planning control. Under the provisions of Circular 18/84 Government Departments instead must consult with local planning authorities before proceeding with Crown developments. In the event of an objection to the proposed development the matter may be referred to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (Stephen Byers), who may arrange for a non-statutory public local inquiry to be held. A decision will then be issued to all interested parties.

Paragraph 22 of the Circular permits Departments to seek responses from local planning authorities within just 14 days, instead of the normal eight weeks. Unlike the normal procedure there is no obligation on the local planning authority to seek third party views. If no response is received after 14 days the Department can proceed with the development by the service of notice on the authority.

The special urgency provisions of circular 18/84 have been applied in the following cases:

Globe House, 89 Eccleston Square, London SW1;

Date: January 1999;

Nature of development: New London Passport Office—removal of asbestos and stripping of the interior (Phase 1), redevelopment of the building, change of use and construction of a two-storey side extension (Phase 2);

Description of consultations: Consultations took the form of meetings between retained consultants and Westminster City Council.

Yarl's Wood Immigration Detention Centre;

Date: May 2000;

Nature of development: Redevelopment and use of the site for an immigration detention centre;

Description of consultations: Consultations included public meetings in Clapham and Milton Ernest village halls on 6 and 8 June 2000 respectively.

Harmondsworth Immigration Detention Centre;

Date: May 2000

Nature of development: Redevelopment of the site to provide an immigration detention centre, with associated hearing centre, administration building, visitors centre and car parking.

Description of consultations: An application letter and drawings were sent to the local planning authority and subsequent consultations were undertaken on an informal basis.

Formerly Her Majesty's Prison Aldington (Immigration Detention Centre);

Date: June 2000

Nature of development: Construction of a 300-place immigration detention centre

Description of consultations: Consultations took place with the local planning authority and three public meetings and an exhibition were held. This scheme has not been implemented.

Logford House Removal Centre (Harmondsworth 2);

Date: December 2001

Nature of development: Development and use of the site as a second immigration detention centre.

Description of consultations: An application letter and drawings were sent to the local planning authority and subsequent consultations were undertaken on an informal basis.

Langhurst House, Horsham;

Date: February 1999

Nature of development: Construction of single-storey laboratory facility

Description of consultations: An application letter and drawings were sent to the local planning authority and subsequent consultations were undertaken on an informal basis.

The special urgency provisions have also been used for 120-place blocks at the following prisons:

Her Majesty's Prison Garth, Chorley (June–July 1996)

Her Majesty's Prison Holme House, Stockton-on-Tees (July 1996)

Her Majesty's Prison New Hall, Wakefield (June–October 1996)

Her Majesty's Prison Bullingdon, Bicester (June–July 1996)

Her Majesty's Prison Wetherby, Leeds (November 1996)

Her Majesty's Prison Moorland, Doncaster (June 1996)

Her Majesty's Prison Styal, Macclesfield (June 1996)

Her Majesty's Prison Wymott, Chorley (July–August 1996)

Her Majesty's Prison Onley, Daventry (June 1996)

Her Majesty's Prison Guys March, Dorset (June 1996)

Her Majesty's Prison Rangy, Ranby (August–October 1996).

The special urgency provisions were also used for 40-place living units at the following prisons:

Her Majesty's Prison Stocken, Rutland (November 1996)

Her Majesty's Prison Norwich (November 1996)

Her Majesty's Prison Downview, Banstead (November–December 1996)

Her Majesty's Prison Kirklevington, Stockton-on-Tees (November–December 1996)

Her Majesty's Prison Wayland, Thetford (November–December 1996)

Her Majesty's Prison Haverigg, Millom (October–November 1996)

Her Majesty's Prison Kirkham, Fylde (October 1996)

Her Majesty's Prison Littlehey, Huntington (November 1996)

Her Majesty's Prison Ashwell, Rutland (November 1996)

In the period since the answer of 13 March 2002 special urgency provisions were applied in respect of 40-place rapid modular units at the following prisons:

Her Majesty's Prison Acklington, Morpeth

Her Majesty's Prison Eventhorpe, Brough

Her Majesty's Young Offender Institution Hatfield, Hatfield

Her Majesty's Prison Haverigg, Millom

Her Majesty's Prison Highpoint, Stradishall

Her Majesty's Prison Hollesley Bay, Woodbridge

Her Majesty's Prison Leyhill, Wotton-Under-Edge

Her Majesty's Prison Lindholme, Hatfield Woodhouse

Her Majesty's Prison North Sea Camp, Boston

Her Majesty's Prison Prescoed, Usk

Her Majesty's Prison Ranby, Ranby

Her Majesty's Prison Standford, Eastchurch

Her Majesty's Prison Stocken, Stretton

Her Majesty's Prison Spring Hill, Grendon Underwood

Her Majesty's Prison Wayland, Thetford

Her Majesty's Prison Wealstun, near Weatherby (clearance received in April 2002)

Finally, special urgency provisions were applied in March 2002 in respect of a 40-place ready-to-use unit at the following prison:

Her Majesty's Prison (HMP) Morton Hall, Swinderby (clearance received in March 2002)

In the case of all prison developments an application letter and drawings were sent to the local planning authority and subsequent consultations were undertaken on an informal basis.

Animal Experiments

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on animal experiments. [45920]

Angela Eagle: The use of animals in experiments and other scientific procedures is strictly regulated by the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 which is widely regarded as the most rigorous piece of legislation of its type in the world. It offers a high level of protection to animals whilst recognising the need to use animals in research. It also requires the latest ideas and technology to be taken into account when deciding whether the use of animals is justified.

We are working to ensure that the highest possible standards of animal welfare are applied and that animals are used only where it is fully justified. To this end, the Home Office has developed and put in place a strategy to ensure that policy is reviewed continuously as scientific and ethical considerations evolve; checking that the costs to animals are minimised and remain outweighed by the potential benefits of the work; compliance and high standards are reinforced through consistently applied inspection, training, guidance and (if necessary) infringement procedures; the advice of the Inspectorate, other welfare and scientific expertise, and the products of local ethical review processes is harnessed in ensuring that there are no alternatives which either replace animal use entirely, reduce the number of animals needed or refine the procedures to minimise suffering (the 3Rs). It also ensures that these are rigorously applied in every case and that the highest standards of animal welfare are implemented.

It is also our strategy to encourage the development and use of alternatives and relevant databases through research funding and education, and through support for the European Centre for the Validation of Alternative Methods (ECVAM); to take a lead in formulating European policies, standards and targets which neither disadvantage the United Kingdom nor drive work abroad to countries where lower standards apply; to liaise actively with legitimate interest groups and encourage the Animal Procedures Committee to take a more public role and offer broadly based and independent advice to Ministers; and to seek to make the administration of the 1986 Act as transparent as possible.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will estimate the cost of converting the Centrex Site at High Ercall, Shropshire, to a centre for housing asylum seekers; [45165]

(2) what discussions he has had with (a) Angel Development Corporation and (b) other interested parties on the suitability of the Centrex site at High Ercall, Shropshire, for housing asylum seekers since 27 November 2001. [45164]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The Angel Group is under contract to the National Asylum Support Service to provide accommodation for asylum seekers. I can confirm that no discussions have taken place with the Group or other interested parties into the possibility of using the Centrex site at High Ercall as a centre for housing asylum seekers. Since no discussions have taken place I am unable to estimate the cost of converting the site.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent changes have been made to the asylum support system. [49015]

Angela Eagle: Amendments to the Asylum Support Regulations 2000 came into effect on 8 April 2002. From that date levels of support provided to asylum seekers and their dependants under Section 95 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 have been increased. Also from 8 April all payments will be paid in cash.

In addition, the Regulations have been amended to extend the prescribed period for discontinuing the support of asylum seekers whose claims have been fully determined. From 8 April when the Secretary of State notifies the claimant that he accepts the asylum claim, or notifies the claimant that the asylum claim is rejected but at the same time gives him limited leave to enter or remain in the United Kingdom, or where an appeal by the claimant against the Secretary of State's decision has been disposed of (within the meaning of Section 94(4) of the Act) by being allowed, the period is increased from 14 days to 28 days. In any other case, the period is increased from 14 days to 21 days.

Amendments to the Asylum Support (Interim Provisions) Regulations 1999 have also been made. These extend the duration of the Regulations until 5 April 2004; amend the prescribed period for asylum seekers supported by local authorities in the same way as for those supported under Section 95 of the 1999 Act and remove the restrictions on the payment of subsistence support in cash.

The new rates of support for the National Asylum Support Service (NASS) supported asylum seekers are shown in the table:

Levels of cash subsistence support for NASS supported asylum seekers and any dependants from 8 April 2002

	Rates
Qualifying couple	£59.26
Lone parent aged Qualifying couple 18 or over	£37.77
Single person aged 25 or over	£37.77
Single person aged at least 18 but under 25	£29.89
Person aged at least 16 but under 18 (except a member of a qualifying couple)	£32.50
Person aged under 16	£33.50

Criminal Justice System Annual Report

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to publish the criminal justice system annual report for 2000–01. [49014]

Mr. Blunkett: My noble and learned Friends the Attorney General, the Lord Chancellor and I will today be publishing jointly an annual report for the criminal justice system for England and Wales.

The document is a formal report back on the criminal justice system strategic and business plan, which was published in May 2000.

Copies of the Report will be placed in the Library.

TREASURY

Euro

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by what date he expects to complete his five economic tests for determining whether the UK should adopt the euro. [44499]

Mr. Gordon Brown: I have made clear on a number of occasions to this House that the Treasury will complete the assessment of the five economic tests within two years of the start of this Parliament.

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to present to Parliament regular progress reports on the preliminary technical work on the assessment of the five economic tests on the euro. [44519]

Ruth Kelly: The Government has said that it will complete the assessment within two years of the start of this Parliament. Once the assessment is complete, the Government will publish the conclusions and the report.

Tourism Exports

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate his Department has made of the level of tourism exports in the last five years from each region of the country. [44518]

Ruth Kelly: Figures on incoming tourists by UK region, alongside estimates of their expenditure, are contained in Table 4.11 of the Office for National Statistics 2001 Travel Trends publication (ISBN 0 11 621477 55). This covers years up to and including 2000. Figures for 2001 will be published in the Autumn.

Child Poverty

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on what action his Department is taking to reach its goal on lifting children out of poverty in this Parliament. [44521]

Dawn Primarolo: This Government is committed to abolishing child poverty within a generation and halving it by 2010. As part of this commitment, we recently published a strategy document entitled "Tackling child poverty: giving every child the best possible start in life" which will inform the Budget and Spending Review 2002. As a result of tax and benefit changes announced in the last Parliament, there are now 1.2 million fewer children in poverty than there would otherwise have been.

As part of the next stage of tax and benefit reform, a new tax credit for families with children—the Child Tax Credit—will be introduced from 2003, building on the foundation of universal Child Benefit. It will bring together the strands of support for children in Children's Tax Credit, Working Families Tax Credit, Disabled Person's Tax Credit and Income Support/Job Seekers' Allowance, and will be a seamless and transparent system of support for children, paid to the main carer, whether the family is in or out of work. Decisions on rates and thresholds will be set out in Budget 2002.

National Insurance

Bob Spink: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the revenue implications of aligning the national insurance upper earnings limit with the higher rate of tax threshold. [44522]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 31 October 2001, Official Report, column 742W.

NHS Funding

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with Derek Wanless regarding the contents of the final Wanless report. [44524]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given today by the Chancellor of the Exchequer to the hon. Member for New Forest West (Mr. Swayne).

Sports Clubs

Gillian Merron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received to implement separate tax proposals for community amateur sports clubs in the 2002 Budget. [44525]

Mr. Boateng: A range of responses to the "Promoting Sport in the Community" consultation document has been received. Decisions on the best way forward will be made with regard to these responses and in the context of subsequent meetings with sports' representative bodies and the Charity Commission. A summary of responses will be made publicly available at the time of any announcement.

Manufacturing

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of trends in tax receipts from manufacturing industry in the south-west since January 2001. [44526]

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the changes in tax receipts from the manufacturing sector in the south-east of England during 2001. [44534]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The information requested is not available. This is because the difficulties involved in apportioning taxes between different regions and sectors mean that the estimates would not be robust.

Climate Change Levy

Andrew Selous: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received from industry on the climate change levy. [44527]

Mr. Boateng: As part of the normal process of contact with business, the Chancellor and the Treasury Ministerial team have met with a variety of business organisations and individual companies, and have heard a variety of representations on Climate Change Levy, and on other matters.

Privy Council Silverware

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for the Privy Council silverware. [44528]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 18 March, Official Report, column 46W.

Oil Prices

Alan Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact on the economy of the recent rise in oil prices. [44529]

Ruth Kelly: The Government will publish updated forecasts for the UK economy in the Budget on 17 April, taking into account all recent developments and risks.

Unemployment (North-East)

Mr. Kevan Jones (North Durham): To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on measures being taken to reduce unemployment in the north-east. [44530]

Ruth Kelly: Figures recently announced show that the employment level is at 28,232 million, and the claimant unemployment level stands at 951,000. Claimant unemployment stands at 5.3 per cent in the North East and in North Durham it is down by 44 per cent. since 1997. The New Deal has been a contributing factor to these reductions in unemployment.

In particular New Deal for young people has been successful in its four years of operation; it has placed over 340,000 18–24 year olds into work. 27,858 individuals have been placed into work in the North East. The New Deal for 25 plus and the enhanced programme (since April 2001) has helped a further 92,000 long-term unemployed people into work. For the North East region, 4,934 individuals have moved into employment and since the enhanced programme 1,616 individuals.

Action teams are in place to help individuals into employment, as well as Employment zones. For instance, within the North East region these have been launched in Stockton and Middlesbrough RC.

To build on this performance, the Government has introduced further measures to increase the effectiveness of the New Deal and other employment programmes, including:

Piloting greater flexibility in the Options section of NDYP from November 2001 to give personal advisers more freedom to tailor the provision of support to meet the needs of the individuals, local employers and local labour markets;

Establishing a pilot mentoring scheme from January 2002 to assess how mentoring can best be used to improve employment chances and job retention under the New Deal;

Step-up a new programme of transitional employment pilots will, from April 2002 target our hardest to help clients who have not been able to find a job through the New Deal are going to be in place for instance in, Knowsley and Lambeth areas. People who take up these jobs will receive individual support so that they can eventually make the transition to unsupported jobs in the open labour market;

To support those communities affected by large-scale redundancies, the Government is allocating additional resources to strengthen the Job Transition Service over the next two years; and

The Working Families' Tax Credit (WFTC) is helping to make work pay for low to middle income families' with children. Nearly 1.3 million families with children are currently receiving the WFTC, around 400,000 more than received its predecessor, Family Credit. On average these families are receiving £35 a week more on WFTC than under Family Credit.

Welfare to Work

Mr. Lammy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the results of his welfare to work proposals in deprived areas. [44531]

Ruth Kelly: Figures recently announced show that the employment level is at 28,232 million, and the claimant unemployment level stands at 951,000. Claimant unemployment in Tottenham is down by 44 per cent. since 1997. The New Deal has been a contributing factor to these reductions in unemployment.

In particular New Deal for young people has been successful in its four years of operation; it has placed over 340,000 18–24 year olds into work. The New Deal for 25 plus and the enhanced programme (since April 2001) has helped a further 92,000 long-term unemployed people into work.

To build on this performance, the Government has introduced further measures to increase the effectiveness of employment programmes in deprived areas, which include:

Tackling the obstacles to employment in some of the worst affected regions in Britain. the Government has established 63 Action Teams in England, Scotland and Wales that suffer from particularly high levels of inactivity and long-term unemployment. Action Teams are a dynamic and innovative resource to tackle some of the UK's most deep-seated and protracted employment problems. So far 6,934 people have moved to work through Action Teams;

The Government has PSAs targets for increasing employment in the most deprived areas within the UK. The employment rate for these 30 areas currently stands at 63.2 per cent. (Autumn 2001) up from 60.2 per cent. in Spring 1997;

Step-up a new programme of transitional employment pilots will, in deprive areas such as Knowsley and Lambeth from April 2002 target our hardest to help clients who have not been able to find a job through the New Deal. People who participate in Step-Up will receive individual support so that they can eventually make the transition to unsupported jobs in the open labour market;

The Working Families' Tax Credit (WFTC) helps to make-work pay for low to middle income families' with children. Nearly 1.3 million families with children are currently receiving the WFTC, around 400,000 more than received its predecessor, Family Credit. On average these families are receiving £35 a week more on WFTC than under Family Credit.

Heavily Indebted Poor Countries

Ms Drown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what preparations his Department has made to call for the acceleration of debt cancellation under the HIPC process to the level required to help achieve international development targets set at the bank April meetings of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank. [44532]

Mr. Boateng: The Government continues to press for rapid implementation of the HIPC debt relief initiative to ensure that all eligible countries benefit and achieve sustainable debt levels.

The cost of achieving the International Development Targets has been estimated at an additional US$50 billion per annum, equivalent to a doubling of current global aid. Debt reduction under the HIPC initiative can therefore be only one element of the additional finance required. For this reason the Government has been calling for substantial increases in aid and has welcomed recent commitments by the US and EU, announced in advance of the UN Financing for Development Conference in Monterrey, of an US$12 billion per annum increase in aid levels.

Ms Drown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if his Department plans new bilateral loans to (a) the heavily indebted poor countries and (b) other countries. [45188]

Hilary Benn: I have been asked to reply.

All DFID bilateral assistance to heavily indebted poor countries and to other developing countries is in the form of grants.

Employment Tax Credit

Miss Begg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his proposals for an employment tax credit. [44533]

Dawn Primarolo: In April 2003 the Government are planning to introduce the Working Tax Credit to help make work pay and tackle in-work poverty. The Working Tax Credit will replace the adult elements of the Working Families' Tax Credit, Disabled Person's Tax Credit and the Employment Credit 50+. It will also extend the principle of Working Families Tax Credit to workers aged over 25 without children or a disability. The Working Tax Credit will be complemented by the Child Tax Credit. The rates and tapers of the Working Tax Credit and the Child Tax Credit will be announced in Budget 2002.

VAT

Brian Cotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate his Department has made of the costs to small businesses of administering VAT. [44535]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given to the hon. Member for Kingston and Surbiton (Mr. Davey) on 26 November 2001, Official Report, columns 630W and 631W.

Project Sponsorship

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which of his Department's projects have received sponsorship since 1997, including (a) details of the sponsor, (b) the nature of the project, (c) the date of the project, (d) the total cost of the project and (e) the amount of money involved in the sponsorship deal. [48407]

Ruth Kelly: This information is not held centrally, and could only be assembled at disproportionate cost.

Exports

Paul Holmes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate his Department has made of the level of UK exports if the pound fell 10 per cent. against the euro; and if he will make a statement. [44536]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Fareham (Mr. Hoban) on 4 February 2002, Official Report, column 696W.

Health Expenditure

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent steps have been taken by the Treasury concerning the planning and control of health expenditure. [44517]

Mr. Andrew Smith: These are matters for consideration by the Chancellor prior to the Budget and Spending Review.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the Secretary of State for Health to discuss planned levels of health spending after 2003–04. [44520]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Chancellor meets with ministerial colleagues in the Department of Health to discuss a variety of issues on a regular basis.

Arthur Andersen

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 25 February 2002, Ref. 37050, with reference to Clause 19 of the Cabinet Office Guidance to Departments on Sponsorship of Government Activities, if he will place the written agreement between his Department and Andersen in the Library; and if he will make a statement. [39615]

Ruth Kelly: The commercial arrangements for the "Creating Knowledge: Creating Wealth" conference on 14 April 1999 were as follows. The Treasury paid £15,500.85 (including VAT) for the hire of the conference facility, catering, staging and audio/visual equipment. Arthur Andersen incurred costs of £5,499.15 for the preparation of conference packs and for graphic design.

Arthur Andersen's role was to help identify speakers and with the administration of the event. I have placed in the Library of the House a copy of a letter from my officials dated 25 November 1998 setting out these arrangements.

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the (a) private finance initiative and (b) public private partnership projects which have been delayed. [44880]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The information is as follows:

(a) PFI Projects Delayed

Inland Revenue—Archer House project, Stockport. The delay was due to a proposed site change and an interim change of specification.

(b) There have been no delayed PPP projects.

Scottish Transport Group

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what date his Department was first informed of the level of Scottish Transport Group pension scheme's surplus. [48168]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The wind up of the STG pension scheme is being taken forward by the Scottish Executive following privatisation. The Scottish Executive announced in December 2000 how the surplus was being distributed following agreement with Treasury Ministers.

Scottish Bus Group

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what rules in respect of double taxation are applicable to the Scottish Bus Group employee pension fund. [48284]

Mr. Andrew Smith: A surplus from a pension fund scheme can carry a tax liability. A tax charge is provided for under section 601 of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988. It applies to all payments to an employer from the funds of an exempt approved pension scheme, as the Scottish Transport Group schemes are. The current rate at which the tax is charged is 35 per cent. in accordance with Section 74 of the Finance Act 2001. The tax payable on payments to pensioners will depend on the personal tax circumstances of the individual. Payments have yet to be finalised.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what legal advice his Department has obtained in relation to the distribution of the Scottish Bus Group employee pension funds; under what statutory provisions these funds are liable to public general taxation; to what extent ex-gratia payments made to former members of the fund are liable to tax; to what extent this applies in respect of payments in excess of £30,000; and at what rate. [48282]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Scottish Executive is taking forward the wind up of the STG pension schemes. The tax position is set out in the answer I am today giving to another question of the hon. Lady's ref. 48284.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what new initiatives his Department has taken in 2001–02 to assist in achieving its Public Service Agreements targets. [47186]

Ruth Kelly: Information about the measures put in place to achieve the Treasury's PSA targets will be published in the Treasury's 2002 Departmental Report.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list his overseas visits since 7 June 2001. [46173]

Ruth Kelly: I refer my hon. Friend the answer given by the Deputy Prime Minister on 4 February, Official Report, column 707W.

Tax Credits

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer of 7 February 2002, to my hon. Friend the Member for Hertsmere (Mr. Clappison), Official Report, columns 1142–43W, on tax credits, what the average penalty imposed on each person who has been subjected to a penalty as a result of an investigation into a WFTC or DPTC claim is, broken down into each financial year. [40509]

Dawn Primarolo: The average penalty imposed as a result of an investigation into a WFTC/DPTC claim is as follows:

	October 1999–March 2000	April 2000–March 2001	April 2001–December 2001
Average penalty	£481	£521	£593

Widows' Pensions

David Burnside: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the difference in the treatment for tax purposes of the attributable pension awarded to war widows and widows of disabled service personnel. [46410]

Dawn Primarolo*[holding answer 26 March 2002]*: Specific rules mean that pensions paid under the War Pensions Scheme to widows or widowers in respect of the death of their spouses are exempt from tax. Pensions paid to widows or widowers of service personnel under the Armed Forces Pension Scheme are taxable in the normal way.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent estimate he has made of the cost to the Treasury of collecting capital gains tax. [47635]

Dawn Primarolo: The cost of collecting Capital Gains Tax in 2000–01 was £43 million. This equates to 1.33 pence for every pound of Capital Gains Tax collected.

The figure relates mainly to costs arising from gains to individuals and trustees but some other costs (mainly of land valuations for companies) that cannot be separately identified are included in the collection costs of capital gains tax.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the income from capital gains tax was in each of the last five years. [47655]

Dawn Primarolo: Receipt of capital gains tax in each of the last five years are given on the Inland Revenue website at: http://www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/tax—receipts/g—t02—1.htm.

Research and Development

Rob Marris: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what financial measures the Government have implemented since 1997 to stimulate research and development, and production, in the sectors of medical technology and of pollution control. [44493]

Mr. Boateng: In Budget 2000 the Government introduced the R&D tax credit for small and medium sized companies. In Budget 2001 consultation was announced on two further measures supporting R&D:

- extending R&D tax credits to all companies; and
- a tax credit for research into drug and vaccines for killer diseases—TB, malaria and some strains of HIV/AIDS—primarily affecting people living in developing nations.

The Chancellor confirmed on 25 March that a wider volume based R&D tax credit, applying to spending on or after 1 April 2002, would be introduced.

Budget 2001 introduced enhanced capital allowances for investment in energy efficient technologies, allowing companies to immediately write off the full cost of qualifying investments against taxable profit. In Pre-Budget Report 2001 the Government announced proposals under the Green Technology Challenge to introduce further enhanced capital allowances to tackle climate change and improve air quality, and to reduce water use and improve water quality.

Small Landlords

Margaret Moran: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will amend the tax system to assist small landlords. [44494]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government keeps all taxes under review and any changes will be announced in the Budget Report.

Vocational Training

Mr. Willis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 14 February 2002, Official Report, column 578W, on vocational training, if he will provide a breakdown of the courses being followed by the claimants of vocational training relief in 1998–99. [48639]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available.

Family Incomes

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he is taking to increase the take-home pay of families of those in low paid work. [44504]

Dawn Primarolo: Over the last Parliament this Government introduced the following measures to make work pay:

National Minimum Wage

Working Families Tax Credit and Childcare Tax Credit

The 10 pence and 22 pence rates of income tax; and Reforms to National Insurance Contributions.

As a result of these measures families with children in the poorest fifth of the population are on average £1,700 a year better off in real terms.

In April 2003 the Government is planning to replace Working Families Tax Credit with the Working Tax Credit and the Child Tax Credit. The Child Tax Credit will provide a seamless stream of support for families, paid direct to the main carer, building on the foundations of universal Child Benefit.

Parliamentary Questions

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to raise the advisory cost limit of £550 for answering written parliamentary questions; and if he will make a statement. [49257]

Ruth Kelly: The advisory cost limit was last increased in 2000, Official Record, 15 May 2000, column 47W and is to be further increased to £600 from today.

The purpose and application of the advisory cost limit remains unchanged. It is intended to act as a threshold for disproportionate cost parliamentary questions (PQs). Any written PQ where the marginal cost of preparing the answer is considered likely to exceed the threshold may be refused in whole or in part on the grounds of disproportionate cost. Alternatively the Minister may decide that the PQ is to be answered irrespective of cost. There is no advisory limit for oral PQs.

The advisory limit continues to be based on eight times the average marginal cost for written PQs, which is now £75, rounded down to the nearest £50 for convenience of application.

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the cost of answering (a) a written parliamentary question and (b) an oral parliamentary question. [49258]

Mr. Boateng: As at April 2001, the average cost of answering a written parliamentary question and an oral parliamentary question was £129 and £299 respectively.

Monterey Conference

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions took place at the Financing for Development Conference in Mexico on the reform of Poverty Reduction Strategy Papers to take into account the financial resources required to reach the 2015 development targets. [46657]

Hilary Benn: I have been asked to reply.

The UK delegation to the Conference was not aware of any specific discussions at Monterrey about the need to reform the PRSP process to take into account the financial resources required to reach the 2015 development targets. UK policy is to support improvements to poor countries' public expenditure management systems so that poverty reduction policies and programmes can be clearly costed and prioritised in PRSPs. We also support the work of the World Bank and UNDP which looks at the costs for individual countries to reach the Millennium Development Goals.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

BSE

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make available the latest progress report prepared by her Department on bovine spongiform encephalopathy. [49671]

Mr. Morley: A further Progress Report on BSE in Great Britain was placed in the Library of the House today.

The report outlines the measures which have been taken to protect public health since June 2001 and includes the latest EU requirements for testing and surveillance.

There is also a section on the protection of animal health which covers controls on animal feed.

The epidemiology section shows that the epidemic of BSE in Great Britain continues to decline.

The report is also published on the DEFRA website: http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/bse/index.html.

Livestock Movements

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Government will end the 20-day standstill rule for livestock. [48193]

Mr. Morley: The interim rules for livestock movements, which we announced on 5 February, allow greater flexibility for farmers to move their animals. The 20 day standstill rule has been waived for some types of movement, subject to conditions and we will continue to keep these arrangements under review. However, veterinary advice is that the 20 day standstill needs to remain in place for the time being as a disease control measure. A copy of a document explaining the Veterinary basis for the Interim movement rules has been placed in the Library of the House and is available on the DEFRA website.

Oil Seed Rape Contamination

James Purnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the report being prepared by the Canadian seed authorities on the possible causes of the GM contamination of hybrid oil seed rape exported to the UK in the spring of 2000 has been received. [49672]

Mr. Meacher: The report to which my hon. Friend refers has recently been issued by the Canadian Food Inspection Agency. I have arranged for copies to be placed in the House Libraries.

Risk Transfer

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how her Department intends transferring forms of risks associated with farm businesses to farmers. [46748]

Mr. Morley: My officials are currently discussing with the livestock and insurance industries a number of options on the transfer, to farmers, of some of the costs of animal diseases.

Regulations

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how her Department plans to help farmers rationalise regulations. [46746]

Mr. Morley: My plans were set out at paragraph 4.61 of "Sustainable Food and Farming: Working Together", published on 26 March, which reads:

"The Government accepts that there is a need to find better ways for farmers, DEFRA and the regulatory bodies to work together to achieve improvements in standards without imposing unnecessary burdens. This need arises on a wide range of issues—including animal health and welfare, food safety, employee health and safety and nature conservation as well as environmental regulation. On 26 March my right hon. Friends, the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State announced that DEFRA would give high priority to work on new approaches to regulation, including the need for DEFRA and the regulators to consider the cumulative effects of regulatory requirements on the farm business as a whole. These commitments reflected a new approach to regulation in which DEFRA promised to:

be open with industry—consulting early and often;

minimise the bureaucracy of regulation using Regulatory Impact Assessments in a joined up way to assess impacts in the round (across regulatory regimes), and to cut duplication of effort; provide advice and information easily and up front—to help farmers comply, not just punish them for failure;

join up government and join up the regulators—provide business advice and regulatory advice as a package; ensure regulations are risk-based and proportionate.

My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, also said that she will press hard for better integration between the agricultural and environmental agendas at the European level, and called on the farming industry to play a bigger role in helping to devise environmental legislation within the EU."

LGC

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 29 January 2002, Official Report, column 240W, on genotype test errors, if she will list the contracts that her Department and its predecessor Department has had in the last five years with LGC. [33776]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 6 February 2002]: The following are the contracts undertaken by LGC in the last five years:

Speciation, bioavailability, biopotency and functional markers for D vitamers;

Development of methods to detect protein standardisation of cows' drinking milk;

Methods for the detection of rectified grape and apple juice in fruit juices;

The immunological determination of meat content;

Evaluation of a DNA Method for Meat Species Identification;

A novel method for the detection of neuronal tissue from beef by the identification of tissue specific DNA modification;

Differentiation of species of meat in particular cooked products by DNA methods;

Evaluation of a suite of methods to distinguish cheese analogues from genuine cheese;

Optimisation and validation of DNA assay for detection of select non-muscle tissues in meat products using tissue specific DNA modification;

Vitamin B6 improvements in extraction and determination—Resolving inaccuracy and bias from its measurement;

Development and validation of two analytical procedures for the quantitative determination of fatty acids;

Further studies on the determination of heme and non-heme iron;

Develop and validate a routine HPLC method for the determination of folates and folic acid in foods; development and validation of rapid viable pathogen testing and enumeration by a simple and low cost new method;

An improved analytical method for gellan gum;

Development and validation of procedures to detect and quantify the use of dimethyl dicarbonate in non-alcoholic drinks;

Biomarker assessment of benzoate consumption;

A regiospecific immunoassay screening test for contaminants from food contact plastics;

Develop a novel molecular typing method for comparison of foodbourne pathogens using VTEC as a model organism;

Efficacy testing of disinfectants used in the food industry against a range of pathogens including E-coli 0157;

Processing LINK Offers of Grant;

Organochlorine residue in poultry resulting from the use of hyperchlorinated water in poultry washes;

Chain of custody audit at Institute of Animal Health;

Development of a Sensitive and Specific Molecular Typing Method for the Epidemiological Study of Salmonella;

Investigation of glufosinate residue analysis in potatoes, soya products, legume and maize;

Development of methods for the determination of thyreostats in poultry and bovine livers;

BSE Testing in Cattle: Analytical Work on Veterinary Residues in Foodstuffs of Animal Origin;

National Scrapie Plan "Blood Sampling";

Feasibility Study of the Determination of Oestrone, etc. in Drinking Waters;

Analysis of Oestrone, Oestradiol and Ethynyl Oestradiol—Supervision of Performance Tests;

Investigation of Solvent Contamination Incidents and Provision of Scientific Advice on Drinking Water Quality and Health Issues;

Leaching of Lead from Approved u-PVC Water Supply Pipes;

Consolidate two GCMS methods for the determination of three oestrogen steroids in water and review of the potential for determining the same steroids using LCMSMS;

Exposure to chloropropanol isomers via polyamines.

Correspondence

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria she uses to decide which letters from (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public will receive an answer signed by herself. [7562]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 October 2001]: A range of criteria—including the position held by the individual concerned, the subject matter and the background to the correspondence—is used to determine whether my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State responds to letters from hon. Members or asks one of her Ministerial team to reply on her behalf. By convention, Privy Councillors only receive replies from fellow Privy Councillors, unless they have expressly written to another Minister.

Similarly, whether or not my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State replies in person to letters from members of the public depends on whether the letter-writer holds a particular position in public life, or if he or she is known personally to the Secretary of State and on the nature and content of the letter.

The hon. Member may be interested to know that since the beginning of January 2002, DEFRA Ministers have received over 4,200 letters from hon. and right hon. Members, and in excess of 45,000 letters from members of the public. The majority of these were addressed to my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the correspondence from the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed dated 20 June 2001 relating to the future prospects of livestock auctions. [33877]

Mr. Morley: A reply was sent on 8 April to the right hon. Member.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the letter of 6 August from the hon. Member for North Shropshire concerning his constituent Ms J. Vernon. [12632]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 6 November 2001]: I am sorry for the delay in replying to the hon. Member's letter. A reply was sent on 26 March.

Ministerial Meetings

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Prime Minister regarding (a) the future of farming and (b) the future prospects of small family farms; and if she will publish the record of those discussions. [16394]

Margaret Beckett: On 9 August the Prime Minister announced the setting up of the Independent Policy Commission on farming and food. Government asked it to advise on how we create a sustainable, competitive and diverse farming and food sector within a thriving rural economy which advances environmental, health and animal welfare goals and is consistent with the Government's aim for CAP reform, enlargement of the EU and increased trade liberalisation.

Following the publication of the Policy Commission's Report on 29 January, my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister and I met leaders of farming, food, rural, environmental and consumer bodies to discuss how to take the recommendations forward. The outcome of that meeting was published in a News Release (No 117/02), issued by my Department on 26 March.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list, for 1997–98 and for each subsequent financial year, the amount spent (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) abroad by (i) her Department, (ii) its agencies and (iii) its non-departmental public bodies on (1) providing mobile telephone equipment, including handsets and other associated equipment, (2) telephone calls made using such equipment and (3) telephone calls made using privately owned mobile telephones but subsequently reclaimed by (x) Ministers and (y) staff. [34413]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA came into being on 8 June 2001. The information requested can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Illegal Meat Imports

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures the Government are introducing to curb the importation of illegal meats. [35710]

Mr. Morley: On 28 March the Government published an action plan which commits it to a range of measures to reduce disease risks presented by illicit imports of animal products. A copy of the plan is being placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what progress has been made with investigations into the feasibility of using x-ray machines to detect illegal meat imports; and if she will make a statement; [47912]

(2) what progress has been made with the pilot scheme for dogs to sniff out meat which is being brought into the country illegally; and if she will make a statement; [47913]

(3) what plans she has to make the Products of Animal Origin (Import and Export) Regulations 1996 more effective; and if she will make a statement; [47914]

(4) what material is issued to inform people travelling to the UK of the regulations regarding personal imports of meat and tne penalties for importing meat illegally. [48390]

Mr. Morley: The Government has published an action plan, the aim of which is to reduce the risk of exotic animal and plant diseases entering the country. The plan takes account of recent discussions the Government has had with stakeholder interests on the priorities and actions for the coming year to tackle the issue of illegal imports. A copy of the plan has been placed in the library of the House. It contains a range of measures, including those listed in these questions.

We are gathering information to help examine the potential benefits of using x-ray equipment to scan containers and personal baggage to detect illegal imports, leading if successful to a trial. On the use of dogs, we are working towards commencing a pilot this summer.

Enforcement officers will be given new powers (already available to customs officers) in April to search baggage, etc for illegal imports of animal products. The central and local government agencies involved in importation of food and other goods are working closely together to achieve effective inter-agency co-ordination of checks, and which will include discussions about how these search powers will be used.

Information about our import rules has been provided to Embassies to publicise locally through travel agents and when visas are issued. Posters have been put on display in the arrival baggage halls at UK airports advising of the penalties for smuggling animal and plant products. Information on restricted produce is also contained in HM Customs' Guide for travellers entering the UK, and which can be viewed on-line at http://www.hmce.gov.uk/forms/notices. Further publicity measures will be developed.

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what outbreaks of disease in animals in Britain have been linked to the import of illegal meat products in the past five years. [46789]

Mr. Morley: We cannot be certain as to the precise origin of the Classical Swine Fever and Foot and Mouth Disease outbreaks in 2000 and 2001. However, absence of any evidence that these diseases were introduced through the import of live animals suggests infected meat or meat products are the source. The precise route for introducing infection is likely to remain unknown, though the controls in place for legal imports point to an illegal or inadvertent introduction.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the role of her Department has been in checks on illegal meat imports at airports in the last two years; and if she will make a statement. [46383]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA has lead responsibility for animal health controls on imports of meat, working with the Food Standards Agency which has responsibility for public health aspects, and HM Customs, the devolved administrations, and Local and Port Health Authorities. The last two years has seen greater co-operation between these authorities.

The Department held a meeting on 21 March with all the public enforcement authorities, the ports, airports, airlines, agriculture and food industry to intensify efforts to reduce illegal meat imports.

Refrigerators (Disposal)

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which Ministers and officials attached to her Department were directly involved in discussions with the European Commission concerning the implementation of EU regulation 2037/2000 in the UK; and if she will make a statement. [40365]

Mr. Meacher: I negotiated the draft Regulation at the EC Environment Council meeting in December 1998, and the Council adopted a common position at the meeting in February 1999. Negotiations at official level took place in the Environment Working Group of the Council and the Committee of Permanent Representatives. At official level, further discussions with the European Commission and other Member States on introduction and implementation took place at regular Management Committee meetings on both the previous legislation, EC Regulation 3093/94, and EC Regulation 2037/2000.

Animal Medicines

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what steps the Government are taking to ensure that animal owners are not limited to buying animal medicines from veterinary surgeons under EU directive 2001/82/EC; [39300]

(2) what assessment she has made of likely employment effects of the implementation of EU directive 2001/82/EC. [39299]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 1 March 2002]: Directive 2001/82/EC consolidated a number of Directives concerning veterinary medicinal products into a single text. Its purpose was not to introduce any substantive changes to the controls on veterinary medicines that previously existed. Therefore there are no likely effects on employment as a consequence of its implementation. Nor is there anything in Directive 2001/82/EC that would limit animal owners to buying veterinary medicines from veterinary surgeons.

However, the European commission has proposed amendments to Directive 2001/82/EC, one of which would require medicines for food-producing animals to be supplied only in accordance with a veterinary prescription. Under UK legislation veterinary medicines for which a prescription is required may be supplied by veterinary surgeons or registered pharmacists. In its present form this particular proposal could result in UK farmers having to pay more by incurring veterinary surgeons' fees when obtaining those medicines that are currently available without veterinary intervention. Furthermore, it could restrict the number and types of veterinary medicines that may be supplied by registered agricultural merchants and saddlers, to a limited range of products for dogs and cats. This could have significant adverse effects on those businesses.

In considering this proposal the Government has taken account of its likely impact on the supply of veterinary medicines and has agreed that, during negotiations, UK officials should seek to modify the proposal to enable a flexible approach to the distribution of veterinary medicinal products that takes advantage of existing national practices, so long as consumer protection and animal welfare can be demonstrably assured.

The proposed amendments to Directive 2001/82 do not change the current arrangements for selling medicines for companion animals.

Ministerial Private Offices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the running costs were of (a) her Ministers' private offices, separately identifying expenditure on staff and (b) her Department for each year from May 1997 to the nearest date for which the information is available. [41036]

Mr. Morley: The Department has only been in existence since June 2001. Forecast running cost expenditure on Ministers' private offices for 2001–02 is £2.2 million. This includes £1.5 million for staff costs. The 2001–02 Administrative Cost budget for the whole Department is £653.6 million.

Manpower

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many staff have been employed by her Department in each of the last 10 years. [42455]

Mr. Morley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office (Mr. Christopher Leslie) on 19 March, Official Report, column 295W.

Celebrations

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what arrangements her Department has made to celebrate (a) St. Patrick's Day, (b) St. George's Day, (c) St. Andrew's Day and (d) Her Majesty the Queen's Golden Jubilee; and how her Department celebrated St. David's Day. [42197]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 11 March 2002]: In connection with celebrations to mark Her Majesty the Queen's Golden Jubilee, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport to the hon. Member for South Suffolk (Mr. Tim Yeo) on 11 February, Official Report, column 58W/59W.

On flag flying, the Department and its Executive Agencies routinely follow central guidance from the Department of Culture, Media and Sport on flying the Union flag from its buildings on "named days". They will similarly observe any agreed Union flag flying protocol for the Golden Jubilee but the flag will fly routinely on Coronation Day (2 June) as this is a "named day".

Staff in the Department and its Agencies will benefit from the additional public holiday granted on 3 June to celebrate the Golden Jubilee.

Pig Farms

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what advice the Department has issued to farmers regarding the legality of continued use of the stall and tether pig housing system in the UK. [45155]

Magaret Beckett [holding answer 21 March 2002]: Legislation originally introduced in 1991 to ban close-confinement stalls for breeding sows came into full effect from January 1999. During the eight year phase-out period advisory material was issued and a video showing alternative systems produced.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what reports the Chief Veterinary Officer has received from (a) animal welfare organisations, (b) members of the public, (c) Farm Assurance scheme inspectors, (d) other Government officials and (e) other persons that animal welfare had been compromised in pig units at (i) Oldlands Farm, Wiltshire and (ii) Shoddesden, Hampshire. [45149]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 21 March 2002]: No complaints were received about either unit before allegations made by Sky News in June 2001.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what investigations have been made by the Government into use of sow stall and tether housing systems on the pig units of (a) Oldlands Pig Unit, Wiltshire and (b) Shoddesden Pig Unit, Hampshire since 1999. [45154]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 21 March 2002]: There have been veterinary inspections of both of these units. Allegations that illegal stall and tether systems were in use on these units after the ban was not substantiated.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to investigate the treatment of pigs at (a) Oldlands Pig Unit, Wiltshire and (b) Shoddesden Pig Unit, Hampshire. [45156]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 21 March 2002]: There are no plans to investigate the treatment of pigs at these units as there are currently no pigs on either unit. Previous complaints were investigated and no breach of welfare regulations were found.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when (a) Government ministers and (b) Government officials were first informed of the possibility that animal welfare had been compromised on pig units in (i) Oldlands Farm, Wiltshire and (ii) Shoddesden, Hampshire since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [45148]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 21 March 2002]: Sky News first made allegations of poor welfare conditions on both units in June 2001. Allegations made in the media were fully investigated at the time and various claims made could not be substantiated by veterinary inspection.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) unannounced and (b) pre-arranged welfare inspections have taken place at the pig units of (i) Oldlands Farm, Wiltshire and (ii) Shoddesden, Hampshire since 1996. [45151]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 21 March 2002]: There have been six welfare inspections of these units since April 1996. Whether the visits were pre-arranged or unannounced was not recorded in all cases, but the most recent visits in June 2001 and January 2002 were pre-arranged in order to have a responsible person on site to facilitate inspection and respond to enquiries.

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assistance she will give to pig farmers following the ban on feeding swill. [45386]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The Government does not consider that financial assistance is appropriate for producers who have been required to change the feeding regimes of their animals. However, assistance was provided at the time of the introduction of the swill ban in the form of advice on alternative methods of feeding and alternative feeds that would be acceptable.

Pollution (Irish Sea)

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on co-operation between the UK Government and the Irish Government on monitoring pollution in the Irish Sea. [44005]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 21 March 2002]: There has been extensive co-operation in recent years, including shared research programmes, between the UK and the Irish Government on the pollution of the Irish Sea, particularly in the production of the Quality Status Report (QSR) for the Celtic Seas in 2000.

This report, which is available in the Library, forms part of a wider assessment made within OSPAR, the Convention for the Protection of the Marine Environment of the North East Atlantic. It concluded that ecosystem effects due to pollution are generally confined to urbanised estuaries and that environmental effects of most contaminants routinely monitored appear to be either stable, or decreasing, with the main problem being caused by tributyl tin.

Co-operation continues through the joint work undertaken in the OSPAR Monitoring and Assessment Committee.

Although there is no specific co-operation on monitoring of radioactivity in the Irish Sea, officials from the UK and the Irish Government meet on a bi-annual basis in the form of the UK/Irish Contact Group on Radioactivity where information on monitoring of the Irish Sea is passed to the Irish side.

Brucellosis

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what checks are made by the State Veterinary Service on imports of cattle from France as part of re-stocking schemes following foot and mouth disease; how many cattle have been found to be carrying the disease brucellosis; when the last case of brucellosis was reported in the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement. [46384]

Mr. Morley: Post import checks for the following diseases are carried out by the State Veterinary Service on cattle imported from France:

Enzootic bovine leukosis
Brucellosis
Warble fly

Since imports were allowed to restart following foot and mouth disease, no imported cattle have been confirmed as carrying brucellosis. Although initial blood tests on a consignment of cattle imported in February gave a single positive and four inconclusive results, subsequent tests have proved negative and brucellosis was not confirmed.

The last case of brucellosis reported in Great Britain was in Anglesey in 1993.

Nitrates

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the regulations governing the spreading of farms' (a) own manure and (b) brought-in manure on set aside land under the Nitrate Vulnerable Zones Directive. [46389]

Mr. Meacher: Under the Nitrates Directive 1991, Action Programme measures operate in existing Nitrate Vulnerable Zones (NVZs) which were designated in 1996 and currently cover around 8 per cent. of England's land area.

The Action Programme measures for spreading organic manure currently apply to all land within an NVZ, irrespective of whether the manure is a farm's own or imported from another farm. Spreading organic manure is prohibited when:

Soil is waterlogged, flooded, frozen hard or snow-covered.
Fields are steeply sloping.
Applying slurry, poultry manures or liquid digested sewage sludge on sandy or shallow soils between:
1 August–1 November (arable land)
1 September to 1 November (grassland or arable land with an Autumn-sown crop).

Certain other detailed requirements also apply, described in the DEFRA booklet PB5505 "Guidelines for Farmers in NVZs", available through DEFRA publications (08459 556000) or the internet (via a web link at http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/water/quality/nitrate).

Under the Arable Area Payments Scheme Regulations, the storage and application of manure on set-aside land is restricted to manure produced on the farmer's own holding between 15 January and 31 August each year. DEFRA is currently considering whether any change to this set-aside rule could be justified.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effect on ground phase hydrological cycle water quality of the four specific months during which manure is not to be spread as defined in the Nitrate Vulnerable Zones Directive in those areas to which the Directive is applied. [46387]

Mr. Meacher: Scientific studies such as "Strategies to Encourage Better Use of Nitrogen in Animal Manures" contained in MAFF Booklet PB4401 "Tackling Nitrate from Agriculture—Strategy from Science", available from DEFRA publications (08459 556000), demonstrate that autumn months are the most crucial ones for reducing the risk of nitrate pollution.

Under the Nitrates Directive 1991, farmers inside Nitrate Vulnerable Zones (NVZs) follow Action Programme measures detailing closed periods which prohibit the spreading of slurry, poultry manures or liquid digested sewage sludge on sandy or shallow soils between 1 August to 1 November (arable land) or 1 September to 1 November (grassland or arable land with an autumn-sown crop).

These closed application periods are carefully targeted at those manures containing a higher proportion of available nitrogen when applied to soils which are prone to nitrate leaching.

On uncropped land there is no crop uptake of nitrate in the autumn so the closed period during August, September and October aims to prevent applications of slurry, poultry manures or liquid digested sewage sludge on sandy or shallow soils between harvest and 1 November. August application of these manures on grassland and land sown with autumn sown crops allows time for uptake of nitrate by growing crops; the closed period is limited to September and October where the risk of nitrate leaching remains high. Applications after 1 November entail a lower risk of nitrate leaching because conversion of manure nitrogen to nitrate in the soil is limited by lower soil temperatures in most winters.

Details of Action Programme measures are described in DEFRA booklet PB5505 "Guidelines for Farmers in NVZs".

River Aire

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action she will take to address pollution in the River Aire at Skipton. [45793]

Mr. Meacher: The Environment Agency received a report of pollution entering the River Aire from a closed landfill site in March 2000. The incident was investigated and was categorised as a minor incident which has a limited effect on water quality. Their enquiries showed the cause of the incident to be a malfunctioning pump carrying leachate from a decommissioned landfill site to the public foul water sewer. North Yorkshire County Council is responsible for maintaining the pump and is taking steps to gain access to the land, which is controlled by a tenant farmer, in order to carry out the necessary work.

The River Aire at Skipton is routinely monitored for chemistry and biology at two sampling points—Carleton and Cononley. The most recent results recorded for Carleton are class B (good) for both chemistry and biology.

At Cononley the chemistry has improved from D (poor) to B (good) over the last 10 years. Biology has improved from E (poor) to C (fairly good) in the same period.

Overall, there has been a continuing trend of improving quality to this stretch of the Aire in response to improvements at Snaygill (Skipton) sewage treatment works. Results for 2001 are not yet available.

Traffic Noise

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what information she has collated on the (a) health consequences and (b) public nuisance arising from traffic noise pollution; and if she will make a statement. [45943]

Mr. Meacher: The government has supported a number of studies into the health effects of various sources of noise. A number of these consider road traffic noise including: "Health Effects based Noise Assessment Methods: A Review and Feasibility Study", which is available on the DEFRA website (www.defra.gov.uk), and "The effects of relieving traffic congestion on noise exposure, noise annoyance, well-being and psychiatric morbitdity: annex to the by-pass study" which is available from the Department of Health. The government is also contributing to the European study: "Road traffic and Aircraft Noise exposure and Children's cognition and Health" (RANCH).

Road traffic noise does not generally fall within the legal definition of a public nuisance and, as such, there are no figures available relating to this. The government does, however, take the issue of noise seriously and periodically records people's attitudes to noise. This exercise established that in 1991 29 per cent. of respondents who reported hearing road traffic noise stated that they were adversely affected by it. This survey has recently been repeated and the results are expected to be published in May.

The repeated survey and the development of the Ambient Noise Strategy, which includes establishing the number of people exposed to road traffic noise, will build on the work already carried out to address noise from this source.

Energy Efficiency

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the percentage improvement of energy efficiency is of each Governmental department from 1990 levels; and whether these improvements are in line with the objectives laid out in the Model Policy Statement for Greening Government Operations. [45790]

Mr. Meacher: Details of the improvements in departmental energy efficiency for Government Departments for the years between 1990–91 and 1999–2000 can be found in Tables 1 to 4 of Part 2 of the Greening Government Third Annual Report 2001. Copies are available via: http://www.sustainable-development.gov.uk/gm2001/part2/search.asp?chooseSection=5.1 or in the Library of the House. For convenience the relevant data, without the footnotes, are reproduced in Tables 1 to 3. Positive figures represent an improvement in performance.

Data for 2000–01 will be published in the next Green Ministers Report in Autumn 2002.

The Government's targets to achieve a 20 per cent. improvement in energy efficiency over 1990 levels by 31 March 2000 was included within Objective 7(a) of the Model Policy Statement for Greening Government Operations. Until 1998–99, steady progress had been made towards meeting the targets with an overall improvement of around 19 per cent. compared with 1990. In 1999–2000, however, performance slipped back to an overall improvement of around 17 per cent. compared with 1990. Paragraphs 5.7 and 5.8 of the Greening Government Third Annual Report 2001 give a fuller explanation of this situation. Copies are available via http://www.sustainable-development.gov.uk/gm2001/part1/05a.htm or in the Library of the House.

Environmentally and Socially Responsible Investment

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps (a) her Department and (b) the Government have taken to encourage environmentally and socially responsible investments in least developed countries. [46561]

Mr. Meacher: There is an increasing understanding by institutional investors and financial service providers of the benefits of environmentally and socially responsible investment. The demand for more disclosure by investors on social and environmental policy has been stimulated by the disclosure requirements of the 2000 amendment to the Pension Act, and the debate about replicating these requirements in other areas.

The Department has taken the lead in working with the UK financial services sector on the "London Principles—finance and insurance for sustainable development". The Principles encompass three key areas: pricing asset and exercising ownership; providing new finance; and risk management. The Principles will be launched later this year as part of the UK's contribution to the World Summit on Sustainable Development. We hope that they will serve as a model for resolutions on financial sustainability at the World Summit.

We and the Department for International Development are also working with the FORGE consortium of banks and insurance companies to develop management and reporting guidelines on corporate social responsibility for the sector, to follow up on their environmental management guidelines published last year.

The Department for International Development has also undertaken several studies and consultations to identify those tools which most effectively encourage equitable and sustainable investment in developing countries, and the best ways to mainstream them in the investment community. An example is the Just Pensions project which is concerned with encouraging trustees to use their influence to persuade fund managers to invest in socially responsible investment.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the diseases and infections for which imported livestock is checked; and how many (a) positive results, (b) negative results and (c) dangerous contacts were identified through livestock tests in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [45841]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 25 March 2002]: Livestock are inspected by an official veterinarian of the exporting country immediately prior to export in order to certify that the animals are free of the diseases mentioned in the export health certificate.

Post import checks on livestock are carried out for the following diseases and exposure to infections:

Cattle

Foot and Mouth Disease;
Enzootic bovine leucosis;
Brucellosis;
Warble fly; and
Contagious bovine pleuropneumonia.

Sheep and goats

Contagious agalactia;
Brucella ovis;
Brucella melitensis;
Bluetongue.

Pigs

Aujeszky's disease;
Swine vesicular disease;
Classical swine fever.

Other ungulates

Trypanosoma;
Caprine arthritis-encephalitis syndrome;
Internal and external parasites;
Leptospirosis;
Johnes's disease;
Malignant catarrhal fever;
Piroplasmosis;
Yersiniosis.

Tests for other diseases may additionally be made if the veterinarian carrying out the post-import check suspects the presence of other diseases.

The total number of positive test results on livestock imported into Great Britain for the period 22 March 2001 to 21 March 2002 was 14.

The total number of negative test results on livestock imported into Great Britain for the period 22 March 2001 to 21 March 2002 was 11,207.

No figures are available for dangerous contacts but all suspicious animals are isolated and placed under movement restriction.

All figures are provisional and subject to change.

Unpaid Advisers

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the names of the unpaid advisers appointed by her and her predecessors since June 1997, stating in each case (a) the date of their appointment, (b) the duration of their appointment and (c) the project or projects on which they have been engaged. [43385]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 25 March 2002]: For details of unpaid appointments made by this Department to task forces, review groups and other ad hoc advisory groups, I refer the right hon. Member to the Answer given by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Christopher Leslie) on 16 November 2001, Official Report, column 958W.

Genetically Modified Crops

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the interested parties with whom she discussed the measures necessary to allow for practical co-existence of GM and non-GM crops. [46623]

Mr. Meacher: DEFRA officials have had preliminary discussions on this issue with the National Farmers Union, the Soil Association, the National Consumers Council, the British Retail Consortium, national bee-keeping groups, Organic Farmers and Growers Limited, the Food and Drink Federation and the Supply Chain Initiative on Modified Agricultural Crops.

Organic Farming

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will estimate the change in the external costs of agriculture which would be achieved if 30 per cent. of all agricultural land in the UK was converted to organic. [46625]

Mr. Morley: It is not possible to make reliable estimates of the reduction in the external costs of agriculture arising from organic farming, however, the Department has commissioned the University of Cambridge to carry out an evaluation of the "Organic Farming Scheme" which will provide information on the environmental impacts of the scheme. We expect this to be completed in April 2002 and it will be published on the Department's website.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what powers the proposed new advisory body on organic standards will have; [48056]

(2) what plans she has to disband the UK register of organic standards; what it will be replaced by; with whom she has held discussions on her proposals; and what representations she has received from the Food Standards Agency on the UK register of organic standards; [48054]

(3) what powers the proposed new UK accreditation service will have in respect of organic standards; [48057]

(4) what representations she has received from organic producers on her proposals to disband the UK register of organic standards. [48055]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The consultation period on the Quinquennial Review of the UK Register of Organic Food Standards (UKROFS) ended on 31 March. A summary of responses will be available shortly and will be placed on the Department's website www.defra.gov.uk. The Government has made no proposals on whether the Review's conclusions should be accepted, and no decisions have been taken.

Farm Incomes

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average dairy farm income was for each of the last 10 years in (a) the parliamentary constituency of the Ribble Valley, (b) Lancashire, (c) the North West of England and (d) England. [48606]

Mr. Morley: The average net farm income for full-time dairy farms in England is given in the table.

	Average net farm income (£ per farm)
1992–93	29,300
1993–94	34,900
1994–95	30,300
1995–96	36,200
1996–97	30,400
1997–98	19,800
1998–99	11,700
1999–2000	9,400
2000–01	14,000
2000–02 (prov.)	32,000

Agricultural Subsidies

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what average payments per hectare from the Common Agricultural Policy's production subsidies are received by (a) non-organic farmers and (b) organic farmers. [46627]

Mr. Morley: Subsidies to production are available, either as direct payments per hectare or per head of livestock, or as support to prices through market support mechanisms. No distinction is made between organic and non-organic production for determining the eligibility of these subsidies.

Data is not available to calculate the average payment per hectare for organic and non-organic farmers.

Environmental Protection

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what role her Department has played in discussions relating to (a) the Meeting of the Parties to the Convention on Environment Impact Assessment in a Transboundary Context and (b) the Kiev Ministerial Conference in 2003; and if she will make a statement. [46571]

Mr. Meacher: Responsibility for matters relating to the UNECE Convention on Environmental Impact Assessment in a Transboundary Context (The "Espoo" Convention) rests with the Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions. The Department has participated in two preparatory meetings for the Kiev Environment for Europe conference where discussion has focussed on the identification of possible themes and the likely agenda. This includes the possibility of reaching agreement on several protocols under discussion by their respective Conventions, one of which is the proposed protocol on strategic environmental assessment currently being negotiated under Espoo.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what role her Department has played in developing and implementing (a) the United Nations Secretary-General's Global Compact Initiative, (b) the UNEP Global reporting Initiative and (c) the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises. [46562]

Mr. Meacher: (a) The Global Compact was a special initiative by the Secretary-General which is implemented directly with companies. However, officials from my Department remain in touch with the Compact Secretariat in New York.

(b) The Global Reporting Initiative (GRI) was launched by the Coalition of Environmentally Responsible Economies (CERES). It is now affiliated to the Global Compact. The GRI is a welcome initiative but is most suited to larger companies already experienced in environmental reporting. My Department has, therefore, developed and published jointly with the Department for Trade and Industry simpler guidance which is very similar to the environmental elements of the GRI. These guidelines should help any business to report on their environmental impacts, and have been endorsed by the CBI, which has sent copies to all of its members including all of the FTSE 350 leading companies.

(c) The Department played a full role in formulating the UK position during negotiations on the revised OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises which were concluded in June 2000. Since then officials from my Department have worked with the UK National Contact Point for the OECD Guidelines, based in the Department of Trade and Industry, to help ensure that the Guidelines are taken into account in relevant parts of my Department's work, for example the promotion of the Guidelines to the UK water industry and in preparations for the World Summit on Sustainable Development.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department has taken in response to the UNEP Governing Council Decision 21/21; and if she will make a statement. [46566]

Mr. Meacher: Decision 21/21 of the UNEP Governing Council in February 2001 established a Working Group to review international environmental governance. The UK funded a meeting of international experts in Cambridge in May 2001 to contribute to the debate. I represented the UK at two meetings of the working Group, and the other three were attended by DEFRA senior officials, I chaired the contact group which agreed the final report of the working group at the Global Ministerial Environment Forum in Cartagena in February.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent steps have been taken to strengthen UK commitments to multilateral environmental agreements; and if she will make a statement. [46557]

Mr. Meacher: Along with other EU Member States the UK is committed to early ratification of international instruments on climate change, biosafety, persistent organic pollutants and prior informed consent. The UK is fully committed to meeting its global environmental responsibilities.

Forests

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent steps have been taken to (a) promote sustainable management and (b) strengthen conservation of use of forests. [46558]

Mr. Morley: The sustainable management of forests, including conservation, is a cornerstone of our forestry policy, and it was then the main issue discussed at the United Nations Forum on Forests which I attended in New York last month. This event provided an international stage to promote sustainable forest management, and in my speech to the Forum I highlighted the lead being taken by the UK, including our joint work with industry and NGOs, the development of a forest business sectoral sustainability strategy, and the introduction of a UK Standard for independent certification of forests.

It was, of course, this work on certification which led to the Forestry Commission recently being awarded the World Wide Fund for Nature's Gift to the Earth Award. The UK is, in fact, the only country where the entire state forest area has achieved creditable certification to an independent Standard recognised by the Forestry Stewardship Council. Many private owners are now following suit.

Sustainable forest management will feature prominently at the World Summit for Sustainable Development later this year in Johannesburg. We are currently working in partnership between government, business and NGOs in the forestry sector to ensure that we demonstrate the progress being made in this country and also press for more action to be taken globally. As part of our preparations for the Summit, we will be publishing a new Statement on Sustainable Forestry. This will be one part of our National Forest Programme, drawing together the actions we have taken since Rio and addressing the challenges for Johannesburg and the future.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what steps have been taken by the Government since the Rio Earth Summit in 1992 to (a) set goals on environmental protection and (b) improve eco-efficiency and resource productivity relating to forestry issues; and what these (i) goals and (ii) improvements have been. [44382]

Mr. Meacher: The management, conservation and sustainable development of forests was one of the key issues at the 1992 Earth Summit in Rio. The main outcome for forests was the adoption of a Statement of Forest Principles which included a commitment by countries to publish national forest programmes. In 1994 the UK set out its aims for forestry in Sustainable Forestry—the UK Programme. In 1999, we published our strategy for sustainable development for the UK, A Better Quality of Life. This includes a section on forests and woodlands setting out the contribution that forestry can make to meeting sustainable management of forests in the UK. We also facilitated the development of the UK Woodland Assurance Standard for forest certification and environmental labelling of wood products. About 40 per cent. of the UK's woodlands have now been certified, including the entire public forest estate.

The UK has made considerable progress on forestry issues by increasing timber production and the environmental and social outputs from forests. These outputs are reported in British Timber Statistics and Forestry Commission Facts and Figures, which are in the Library of the House. Following consultation with stakeholder groups and the public, the Forestry Commission will be publishing a new set of indicators of sustainable forestry in the UK. These will make an important contribution to the monitoring processes set out in A Better Quality of Life and the UK Forestry Standard.

Television Licences

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the (a) number and (b) total cost of television licences paid for by her Department. [48340]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Department does not hold centrally a record of its television licences. Records are, though, held centrally for televisions in the Department's London buildings. For these my Department holds three television licences each of which are priced at £104.00 per annum, totalling £312.00.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the number of subscriptions to (a) digital terrestrial, (b) digital satellite and (c) digital cable television held by her Department for services in any departmental building from which Ministers work stating for each subscription its (i) cost and (ii) purpose. [48341]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: DEFRA Ministers and their private offices operate solely from Nobel House, Smith Square, London. There are currently no subscriptions to any digital services into the building. All cable services are currently provided as analogue.

Warden Bay, Kent

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures her Department has taken to protect the cliffs at Warden Bay, Kent, from disintegration; and what plans she has to use concrete structures to protect the cliffs at Warden Bay. [48551]

Mr. Morley: This Department provides funding for capital flood and coastal defence works which meet set criteria but operational responsibility rests with the local operating authorities, normally the Environment Agency and local councils, who decide which projects to promote and their timing. I understand that Swale Borough Council is currently undertaking a scoping study at Warden Bay but at present has no plans for works to protect the cliffs there.

Departmental Policy

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how her Department will ensure that the interests of the food and farming industries are taken into account across the range of Government policy. [46739]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA's Ministerial team and officials already take full account of the interests of the food and farming industries in developing and delivering Government policy, in liaison and co-operation with others in Government. The creation of DEFRA signalled our intention to deal with and balance the needs of these industries, the wider rural economy and communities, and the urban and rural environment in the round. The Prime Minister and Secretary of State's seminar on 26 March with leaders of farming, food, rural, environmental and consumer bodies exemplified this approach. The seminar served to initiate a comprehensive process of engagement with a wide range of stakeholders. This process will help inform the construction of a new strategy for sustainable food and farming to be launched this autumn.

Consultants

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many management consultants have been used by her Department since its creation; and how much they have cost. [34354]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 7 February 2002]: The information can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total cost to her Department was of the use of external consultants in each of the last four years. [35024]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA came into being on 8 June 2001. The information requested can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what has been the value of all payments made under each project heading to (a) Arthur Andersen, (b) Ernst and Young, (c) Deloitte and Touche and (d) PricewaterhouseCoopers in each financial year since 1996–97. [44032]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA came into being on 8 June 2001. The information requested can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many contracts were let by her Department and agencies for which she is responsible to (a) PWC Consulting or PricewaterhouseCoopers, (b) Ernst & Young, (c) Deloitte & Touche, (d) KPMG and (e) Andersen for consultancy services for the financial years (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99, (iii) 1999–2000, (iv) 2000–01 and (v) 2001 to the latest date for which figures are available, indicating the remuneration in each case. [33845]

Mr. Morley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Christopher Leslie) on 14 February, Official Report, column 564W.

Accountancy Contracts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the contracts agreed by her Department with the five largest accountancy firms since May 1997; and what was the total value of contracts with each. [42104]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA came into being on 8 June 2001. The information requested can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Stakeholders

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list her Department's stakeholders, as referred to in "Waiting for the Essentials of Life". [46731]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA has many stakeholders, indeed our work embraces issues that have a direct affect on the lives of everyone in Britain and many overseas too. In producing "Working for the Essentials of Life" we wanted to produce a statement of our work that was accessible to many people. The document was circulated to over 4,800 businesses, public interest, community, representational and other groups who constitute DEFRA's organisational stakeholders. I have deposited a list of these in the Library of the House.

Beef Exports

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the French Government to remove its illegal ban on beef produced in the United Kingdom. [48302]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, has repeatedly raised this issue with her French counterparts at Agriculture Councils. The Prime Minister also raised the issue at the highest level at the recent EU summit in Barcelona.

Action to enforce the Judgment of the European Court of Justice (ECJ) lies with the Commission which wrote to the French Government on 20 March seeking observations on France's failure to comply with the ruling. This is the first stage in a process which may lead to a further ECJ case against France.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if the PSA target for the level of UK beef exports in 2001 will be met in 2002. [47907]

Mr. Morley: The target will not be met for several reasons including that progress towards re-establishing beef export markets has been severely hindered by the Foot and Mouth Disease epidemic and the continuing illegal French import ban. The conditions of the Date-based Export Scheme have also discouraged potential exporters which is why we are pressing for a relaxation of the Scheme requirements to permit establishments to be dedicated to export on certain days rather than full time.

Climate Change

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many of the parties involved in the Kyoto agreement on climate change have ratified the protocol; and when the remaining parties will complete the ratification process. [47048]

Mr. Meacher: As at 19 March 2002, 50 Parties to the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change had ratified the Kyoto Protocol.

The UK and other EU Member States intend to complete ratification of the Protocol by early June in time for entry into force by the World Summit on Sustainable Development.

It is not possible at this stage to say for certain which other Parties will ratify the Protocol and when they will complete the necessary procedures. However, for the Protocol to enter into force, 55 countries accounting for at least 55 per cent. of greenhouse gas emissions by industrialised countries in 1990, must ratify. To secure this, both Japan and Russia need to ratify as well as the EU.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Government will ratify the Kyoto protocol on climate change. [47046]

Mr. Meacher: The UK intends to ratify the Kyoto Protocol in time for it to enter into force by the World Summit on Sustainable Development in September. A European Community decision to ratify Kyoto was adopted on 4 March. This paved the way for the UK and the other EU Member States to complete their own ratification procedures. On 7 March, the Secretary of State for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs made a statement to the House setting in motion the process of UK ratification. Once the Parliamentary process is complete, the Foreign Secretary will be in a position to sign the ratification instrument. For legal and presentational reasons, the European Community and each of its Member States have agreed to deposit their instruments of ratification with the UN Depository simultaneously. Since entry into force of the Protocol will occur only 90 days after the prescribed number of ratification instruments have been deposited, the aim is to do this by early June at the latest.

Horticultural Labour

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the availability of labour to pick and pack horticultural crops. [47594]

Mr. Morley: Growers and packers of horticultural crops have access to labour within the domestic and EU labour markets. In addition growers and on farm packers have access to labour through the Seasonal Agricultural Workers Scheme (SAWS) which is operated by the Home Office. Under SAWS students from outside the EU are allowed to come to the UK to undertake seasonal agricultural work between March and November.

The number of students allowed to enter the UK is governed by a work card quota. The quota for 2001 was 15,200 work cards. However on 29 January my right hon. Friend Lord Rooker announced that the quota would increase to 18,700 in 2002 and to 20,200 in 2003.

In addition the Government's nationality, asylum and immigration White Paper Secure Borders, Safe Haven: Integration with Diversity in Modern Britain, published on 7 February, acknowledges that there is a need for short term labour in the UK and in respect to agriculture and horticulture it makes a commitment to review the operation of SAWS to see how the scheme might better meet the needs of those sectors. This review is being taken forward by officials at the Home Office and it will involve consultation with the principal stakeholders in the agricultural and horticultural industries.

Rural Payment Claims

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will take steps to accelerate payment of IACS claims. [48018]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I am very mindful of the effects that delays in IACS payments have on the farming community and can assure you that RPA is doing all that it reasonably can to make payments as quickly as possible.

By the payment deadline of 31 January, 94 per cent. of claims had been paid and by 18 March all processible claims had been paid.

Agri-environment and livestock payments have also been affected but, although RPA has had to upgrade computer software to reflect regulatory changes on the bovine schemes and to carry out cross-checks on claims where holdings were affected by FMD, we expect to make all the payments within the regulatory timescales. Some advance payments have however been made rather slower than normal.

Looking ahead the Rural Payments Agency is in the process of modernising the way in which CAP schemes are administered by taking full advantage of more modern information systems and the benefits of electronic service delivery.

However, this is a major Change Programme and it will be 2004 before most of the new systems and structures are in place, and the benefits can be fully realised.

Animal Health

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the adequacy of the number of trading standards officers for monitoring the washing of lorries used for the transport of farm animals. [46792]

Mr. Morley: The Department has not made any such assessment of the numbers of local authority inspectors. The level of resourcing to meet Local Authorities' duty in enforcing animal health legislation is a matter for the individual authorities.

Nevertheless, my department has in place procedures for the monitoring of cleansing and disinfection of vehicles at markets and slaughterhouses using the services of the Meat and Livestock Commission and the Meat Hygiene Service who will inform local authorities of any breaches of vehicle biosecurity discovered.

As we are aware of the need to monitor cleansing and disinfection of vehicles, the department is about to undertake a survey of cleansing and disinfection at markets and slaughterhouses.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations her Department will make at the Convention on Biodiversity in the Hague on 7 to 19 April about trade in bushmeat. [48143]

Mr. Meacher: At the previous Conference of the Parties (COP) to the Convention on Biodiversity in May 2000, the United Kingdom secured agreement for the inclusion of bushmeat in a COP Decision on forest biological diversity (Decision V/4). This requested a subsidiary body of the Convention to consider the impact of, and propose sustainable practices for, the harvesting of non-timber forest resources, including bushmeat.

The forthcoming COP in The Hague will consider the adoption of the forest biological diversity work programme. This takes forward the issue of bushmeat under the objective of "Preventing losses caused by unsustainable harvesting of timber and non-timber forest products." The United Kingdom will be pressing for action on this objective and for continuing collaboration on the issue between the Biodiversity Convention, Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES) and other relevant members of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the progress of trials to establish the links between badgers and bovine tuberculosis in (a) Worcestershire, (b) Herefordshire, (c) Gloucestershire and (d) Shropshire. [47592]

Mr. Morley: Three "triplets", namely A, D and I, of the badger field trial are located in parts of Worcestershire, Herefordshire and Gloucestershire. Trial operations which included surveying for badger activity and, in some trial areas, badger culling were suspended during the foot and mouth disease emergency. Surveying for badger activity recommenced in January this year. Further details of progress in all "triplets" are available on DEFRA's website on http://defraweb/animalh/tb/. No badger field trial operations are being undertaken in Shropshire.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her Department's policy on badger culling. [48588]

Mr. Morley: All badger culling which once formed part of the strategy for controlling TB in cattle has been suspended. The only culling presently undertaken is that conducted in connection with the "Krebs" field trial.

TB in cattle is one of the most difficult animal health problems that we face and the Government is determined to look at the full range of factors, including the role of badgers, that might be involved. The Government has put in place a wide-ranging research programme of which the field trial is part. It is designed to determine once and for all the role of badgers in cattle TB and whether culling them is an effective way of reducing the disease. The trial will provide much other data including the spatial relationship between TB in cattle and badgers.

By ensuring that future policies to control cattle TB are underpinned by sound science the Government is seeking to ensure that healthy cattle and badgers can live side by side in the countryside.

Biological Diversity

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the members of the UK's delegation to the Convention on Biological Diversity at the Hague on 7 April and indicate who will be leading the delegation. [48159]

Mr. Meacher: The United Kingdom delegation to the Sixth Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity on 7–19 April at The Hague will be led by myself. Officials from my Department will stand in to lead the delegation when I am absent from the meeting. The United Kingdom delegation is also comprised of officials and advisers from a wide range of government departments and biodiversity organisations, reflecting both our commitment to the Convention and the breadth of issues covered by the Convention and the agenda to this meeting.

Office Relocation (Scotland)

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to relocate executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies under the remit of her Department to Scotland. [48046]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: There are no plans to relocate any executive agencies or non-departmental public bodies to Scotland.

Fish Farming

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will seek a meeting with officials of the European Commission to discuss the future of the Scottish aquaculture industry and measures which the EC might take to promote the sustainable development of the industry. [48045]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The future of the Scottish aquaculture industry is principally a matter for the Scottish Executive. The Executive has not asked Officials from This Department to arrange discussions with officials from the European Commission on Scottish aquaculture, and no such discussions are in prospect.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what investment her Department has made in fish farming in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02, broken down into expenditure headings. [48047]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Departmental expenditure on fish and shellfish farming for the three years in question was as follows:

1999–2000—£1.9 million;

2000–01—£1.5 million; and

2001–02—£1.2 million.

The bulk of this expenditure relates to research and development work but it also includes relatively small sums paid out under the Agriculture Development Scheme and FIFG Structural Funds.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures her Department (a) has taken and (b) plans to take to promote the fish farming industry. [48049]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: In March 2000 the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food hosted a seminar entitled "Future Strategies for the Farmed Trout Industry" involving all sectors of the industry in England. That seminar and a subsequent study considered ideas for improving competitiveness including generic promotion. In the light of this, the industry is considering its strategy for future development and we expect to be involved in discussions on this and on how this Department might help the industry to achieve its developmental goals.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with other European countries which operate national compensation schemes for losses incurred by fish farmers as a result of the compulsory slaughter of farmed fish; and what information she collates about such schemes. [48044]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: To date this Department has had no such discussions; no information has been collated about the operation of national compensation schemes by other European countries.

Agricultural Competition

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether she will (a) grant and (b) seek aid under article 4 of the EEC Council Regulation No. 26 of 1962 on rules of competition in agricultural products in respect of potatoes. [48069]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: No. The UK potato industry has not sought assistance under this Regulation and we have no plans to offer financial aid to an industry which has traditionally been self-sufficient.

Land Management

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what education and information on land management is given to farmers participating in (a) the Farm Biodiversity Action Plan programme and (b) the Countryside Stewardship Scheme. [48543]

Mr. Morley: Farm Biodiversity Action Plans are provided commercially by the Farming and Wildlife Advisory Group (FWAG) and are not implemented by the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs.

Education and information about the land management required under the Countryside Stewardship Scheme is provided to farmers through the comprehensive Scheme Handbook and through advice and visits by technical staff from DEFRA's Rural Development Service. Similar advice and guidance is also available from FWAG and other partner organisations.

To ensure farmers achieve the environmental objectives of the Scheme, very detailed specifications for the different types of land management required are set out in Stewardship agreements.

General Agreement on Trade in Services

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent contributions her Department has made to negotiations on the General Agreement on Trade in Services. [47969]

Mr. Morley: Negotiations under the General Agreement on Trade in Services are for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry. The Department has not played a part in those negotiations, although we have contributed to the UK Government's general position and my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Environment, was present during WTO trade negotiations in Doha last November.

Underspend

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the (a) capital and (b) revenue underspend in her Department is expected to be in the financial year 2001–02. [47809]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Estimated outturn figures for 2001–02 will be published in the Budget Report on 17 April.

User Consultation

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what new steps her Department took in 2001–02 to consult the users of its services about their wishes and expectations; and if she will publish the findings. [47309]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: In 2001–02 DEFRA consulted widely on the development of its new aim and objectives. The Department also consulted on a range of issues related to policy development.

The responses to all these consultations have been published on the DEFRA website at: www.defra.gov.uk/corporate/consult/default.asp.

Service Reviews

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of whether the target to review 60 per cent. of departmental services by March 2003 will be met. [47909]

Mr. Morley: The Department has reviewed around £200 million of departmental services to date but has reported some slippage, due to the impact of Foot and Mouth Disease and the creation of a new Department. The target will be reviewed as part of the 2002 Spending Review process.

Poultry Welfare

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of changes in the mortality rates which would be achieved by a move from conventional to enriched cages. [48078]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: We have commissioned research to improve our scientific and practical knowledge of "enriched" cages; mortality rate is being evaluated as part of this research project.

Property Protection

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what new measures her Department took in 2001–02 to protect its property from theft or damage. [47325]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Further to the reply I gave the hon. Member on 5 February 2002, I can confirm that during 2001–02 the Department continued to ensure that adequate security measures were in place at all its sites. Every effort is made to introduce measures which are proportionate to the degree of risk and the value of assets (ie staff, equipment, information and property) on site. Site security is checked by means of a programme of audits and in the event of an incident, measures would be reviewed and updated as necessary.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people from ethnic minorities are employed in (a) her Department, (b) the Countryside Agency and (c) the Environment Agency. [48204]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: In common with all other Government Departments, DEFRA is currently conducting a re-survey of all staff. As at 15 March 4,889 (70 per cent.) of the core Department's workforce had declared their ethnic origin. Of these 384 are from ethnic minorities. This is equivalent to 7.9 per cent. of those who have declared their ethnic origin, or 5 per cent. of all staff in the Department.

The Countryside Agency do not at present compile this information, although they are planning to introduce a personnel database in the near future that will hold such information.

As at 28 March 2002, all bar 109 of the Environment Agency's 10,824 employees had declared their ethnic origin. Of these, 178 (1.64 per cent.) are from ethnic minorities. The Agency has in place a Diversity policy, with action plans being developed to improve the attractiveness of the Agency to members of the ethnic minority communities.

Rural Payments Agency

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to change the levels of pay within the Rural Payments Agency. [48198]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Pay increases to staff within the Rural Payments Agency are subject to an annual yearly review and negotiations with the representing Trade Union body.

For the forthcoming pay settlements in 2002 and 2003 the Rural Payments Agency will adopt the pay settlements agreed by its parent department, the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA).

Project Sponsorship

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which of her Department's projects have received sponsorship since 1997, including (a) details of the sponsor, (b) the nature of the project, (c) the date of the project, (d) the total cost of the project and (e) the amount of money involved in the sponsorship deal. [48402]

Mr. Morley: In line with the Government's commitment in its response to the Sixth Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life, details of individual amounts of sponsorship valued at more than 5,000 will be disclosed in departmental Annual Reports.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what lessons have been learnt and incorporated into her Department's standard operating procedures based upon the outbreak of foot and mouth. [46750]

Mr. Morley: The independent inquiries put in place by the Government will make recommendations on lessons learned for the future. However, the Department has already taken on board some lessons learned in order to be better prepared should there be any recurrence of FMD before the outcome of the inquiry process. Details are set out in the FMD interim Contingency Plan published on 12 March and in part 3 of the Government Memorandum to the Lessons Learned Inquiry.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost is of the claims, broken down by company, which remain to be paid by her Department arising from work in connection with foot and mouth. [44295]

Mr. Morley: The information cannot be provided at this time for reasons of legal and commercial confidentiality.

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent talks she has had with (a) farmers and (b) the insurance industry about farmers obtaining insurance against future outbreak of foot and mouth disease. [46785]

Mr. Morley: My officials lead the animal disease insurance working group which includes representatives from both the insurance and farming industries. The group has met on 6 March and is meeting again on 9 April and 8 May.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to review the application of the 20 day standstill period introduced following the foot and mouth disease outbreak; and if she will make a statement. [48077]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The interim rules for livestock movements, which we announced on 5 February, allow greater flexibility for farmers to move their animals. The 20 day standstill rule has been waived for some types of movement, subject to conditions and we will continue to keep these arrangements under review. However, veterinary advice is that the 20 day standstill needs to remain in place for the time being as a disease control measure. A copy of a document explaining the Veterinary basis for the Interim movement rules has been placed in the Library of the House and is available on the DEFRA website.

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the (a) private finance initiative and (b) public private partnership projects which have been delayed. [44885]

Mr. Morley: The Private Finance Initiative projects which have been delayed are:

Pevensey Bay Sea Defences;

Broadland Flood Alleviation Scheme,

Brooklands Avenue Cambridge—Redevelopment of office accommodation.

The Public Private Partnership projects which have been delayed are:

British Waterways P4;

British Waterways Water Grid.

Environmental Impact Assessment

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will conduct an environmental impact assessment across the supply chain to assess whether the aggregates levy meets the Government's sustainable development objectives; and if she will publish the results of this assessment in the Library. [46428]

Mr. Paul Boateng: I have been asked to reply.

The aggregates levy will be subject to environmental evaluation in due course, as part of the Budget process. Given that the levy was only introduced on 1 April 2002 it is currently too early to assess its impact.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Aggregates Levy

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the effect the aggregates levy will have on the ability of SME type quarry operators to compete with large vertically integrated companies. [46477]

Mr. Boateng: I have been asked to reply.

A Regulatory Impact Assessment for the aggregates levy was published at the time of Budget 2000. A copy is available in the Library and can be accessed from the Customs and Excise website.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

World Poverty

Dr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress has been made towards the 2015 targets for reducing world poverty. [44496]

Hilary Benn: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Richmond Park on 4 July 2001.

In addition at the UN conference on Financing for Development in Mexico, the European Union announced a commitment to increase average Official Development Assistance as a proportion of gross national income to 0.39 per cent. by 2006 an increase of $7 billion.

Project Sponsorship

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which of her Department's projects have received sponsorship since 1997, including (a) details of the sponsor, (b) the nature of the project,

(c) the date of the project, (d) the total cost of the project and (e) the amount of money involved in the sponsorship deal. [48401]

Hilary Benn: In line with the Government's commitment in its response to the Sixth Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life, details of individual amounts of sponsorship valued at more than £5,000 will be disclosed in departmental Annual Reports.

DFID projects do not receive sponsorship. We do, however, support other organisation's projects, which may in turn have received sponsorship from other sources.

British Overseas Territories

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on how much aid has been given to the British Overseas Territories in each year since 1997. [46985]

Hilary Benn: The Government's assistance to the Overseas Territories has declined gradually from £52.6 million in 1997–98, when the Montserrat volcanic crisis was at its height, to £39.6 million in 2000–01. The British Virgin Islands graduated last year from the need for our support; and programmes in Anguilla and Turks and Caicos Islands are now limited to technical assistance. Financial aid, however, continues to be provided for both St Helena and Montserrat. Our ultimate goal, which is shared by the Overseas Territories, is to increase local self-sufficiency to levels where our assistance is no longer required.

Montserrat

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the progress of the aid programme in Montserrat; and what potential threats there are from further volcanic eruptions. [46986]

Hilary Benn: Substantial progress has been made, since the onset of the volcanic crisis, in returning normality to life in the northern half of the island. Basic infrastructure and essential public services have been restored; housing has been provided for those in need; and a range of expertise has been supplied in support of Montserrat's efforts to recover from the crisis. The focus now is upon sustainable development and eventual return to self-sufficiency for the island. With this in mind, a new airstrip and measures to attract specialist tourism and private sector investment are under consideration. A new volcano monitoring facility, incorporating special viewing areas for visitors, will be commissioned later this year. The volcano, now scientifically classifed as "persistently active", continues to pose a threat to the southern half of the island, including the former capital town of Plymouth. These areas remain uninhabitable. The risk to northern areas of the island is presently judged to be negligible.

Israel

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to her answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 684W, on Israel, if she will list the projects in the area administered by the Palestinian Authority that have been funded by the (a) UK on a bilateral basis and (b) European Union, stating in each case the (i) nature of the project, (ii) funding to date, (iii) funding in each of the last five years, (iv) provisional assessment made against that project of structural and financial damage by Israeli action in the Occupied Territories and (v) amount of financial compensation to be sought; and if she will make a statement. [46679]

Hilary Benn: An assessment of UK-funded projects has shown only two projects sustaining direct damage. The vehicle provided through our support to the Primary Health Care management-training course at Bir Zeit University was damaged during an aerial attack on Ramallah. The project is the second phase of post-graduate training for primary healthcare managers at Bir Zeit University. The project began in 2000 and to date has spent approximately £1.1 million. In 2000 it spent £0.7 million, £0.3 million in 2001 and £0.1 million so far this financial year. An initial estimate of the damage is approximately £28,000.

Our project with Save the Children Fund (SCF) in Rafah also sustained direct damage when a community centre funded by the project was hit by Israeli Defence Force (IDF) fire. The aim of the project, and its sister initiatives in Jabalia, Anabta and Dura, is to improve access to potable water, sanitation and environmental health. The project in Rafah began in 1999 and to date has spent approximately £2 million. In 1999 it spent £0.4 million, in 2000 £0.7 million, £0.6 million in 2001, and £0.3 million so far in 2002. The final cost of the damage has not yet been confirmed.

For information on projects funded by the European Commission I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 26 March 2002 to Parliamentary Question 46308.

The conflict and closures have had a major impact on all development projects. The matter of financial compensation has not yet been determined. The local Task Force on Project Implementation (EC, USAID, office of the United Nations Special Co-ordinator, and the World Bank) wrote to the Benjamin Ben Eliezer, Israeli Minister of Defense (25 March 2002) conveying the international donor community's concern in relation to the adverse affects of IDF activities upon project implementation. A meeting is to take place in the near future between the Task Force and Minister Eliezer.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the projects in Israel that have been funded by the (a) UK on a bilateral basis and (b) European Union, stating in each case the (i) nature of the project and (ii) funding to date, in each of the last five years; what assessment she has made of structural and financial damage by Palestinian action to such projects; and if she will make a statement. [46660]

Hilary Benn: Israel's level of economic development is relatively high. For this reason Israel is not a recipient of UK or EC development assistance.

Malawi

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support she has provided to agencies working in Malawi to tackle the food shortages there. [47611]

Hilary Benn: We have provided £1.9 million since January for direct food relief in Malawi, including grants to non-Governmental organisations which are providing support to 180,000 beneficiaries, mainly children and pregnant and breast-feeding mothers, in the Districts of Balaka, Machinga, Dedza and Mchinji. In addition, in November we provided £3.5 million for nation-wide cash for work programmes and £3.75 million for free distribution of agricultural inputs. Both programmes were targeted at vulnerable households. To help prevent future food shortages, we are working with Government to help prepare a National Food Security Strategy.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the food shortages in Malawi; and if she will make a statement. [48070]

Hilary Benn: There are severe localised food shortages in parts of Malawi. At this time of year most households depend on the market for basic foods, but grain prices have risen enormously, reducing access by the poor. The maize crop to be harvested from April onwards will provide some relief, but consumption of green maize may have had a significant impact on overall yields and therefore on household food security. Shortages can be expected throughout the 2002–03 agricultural season.

Sub-Saharan Africa

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether her Department employs independent auditors to audit the effectiveness of her aid spending in countries in sub-Saharan Africa; and if she will list the countries. [47329]

Hilary Benn: My Department employs an Internal Audit function which is organisationally independent from the rest of DFID and is staffed by professionally qualified internal auditors. Internal Audit Department's remit includes reviews of DFID's operations and funding in sub-Saharan Africa. Reviews of effectiveness of aid funding are also carried out by DFID's Evaluation Department and by the National Audit Office.

The following is a list of sub-Saharan Africa countries in which development funds were used in 2000–01: Angola, Benin, Botswana, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Chad, Democratic Republic of Congo, Cote d'Ivoire, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Gambia, Ghana, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Kenya, Lesotho, Liberia, Madagascar, Malawi, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mozambique, Namibia, Niger, Nigeria, Rwanda, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Somalia, South Africa, Sudan, Swaziland, Tanzania, Togo, Uganda, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether she employs independent organisations to measure the level of corruption in Government to Government aid programmes granted to countries in sub-Saharan Africa. [47330]

Hilary Benn: No. The Department has strong programme management systems, supported by Internal Audit and National Audit Office scrutiny, to verify that funds are used for the purposes intended and to prevent or detect misuse or corruption in our programmes.

We fund independent organisations to conduct national corruption perception surveys in African countries which are used to inform governments' anti-corruption strategies.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development in which country in sub-Saharan Africa she estimates her Department's aid policy to have been (a) most and (b) least effective; and for what reasons. [47334]

Hilary Benn: DFID's aim is the elimination of poverty. The UN Millennium Development Goals are the main yardsticks against which we measure progress towards this aim. At country level progress towards development goals is principally the responsibility of African governments, in partnership with the donor community. The international community is working with developing countries, including in sub-Saharan Africa, to promote country-led and participatory Poverty Reduction Strategy processes. These processes are intended to develop national policy strategies, agree priorities, and help to develop an institutional framework in which governments can be held to account by their own citizens. The role of donors is to provide financial and technical support to enhance governments' capacity to develop and implement these strategies.

Aid effectiveness has improved in recent years, partly as a result of increasing international agreement on how aid can be most effective in reducing poverty and building capacity in the poorest countries. The evidence shows that aid is effective particularly in those countries with good policy environments and where there are large numbers of poor people, and in such situations has been effective in promoting economic development and poverty reduction. In Uganda aid has supported growth (averaging around 7 per cent. over the past decade) with extreme poverty reduced by over 20 per cent. since 1992, to 35 per cent. of the population. In Tanzania, where GDP growth has more than doubled between 1988 and 2001, HIPC benefits, World Bank and donor aid have helped finance primary education, with net enrolment in primary schools increased from 57 per cent. in 1999 to 65 per cent. in 2001.

DFID's performance against its global objectives, set out in the DFID Public Service Agreement and Service Delivery Agreement, is published in the Departmental Report. DFID assesses its work in each country through an established system of annual performance reviews. However, given our broad approach to development, and the diverse nature of our partnerships, there are considerable technical difficulties in attempting to quantify the impact of particular levels and types of assistance provided by a particular donor on the overall progress towards development in a particular country.

DFID will publish a Development Effectiveness Report this summer. It will discuss how DFID's strategic, long-term poverty-focused approach can be evaluated, recognising the problems of attributing impact to particular interventions in a context of a broad partnership which is working towards our shared goals of the Millennium Development Goals.

Egypt, Poland and China

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list her Department's total spending in (a) Egypt, (b) Poland and (c) China in each of the last five years and her forecast total spending in each for the next three years. [47335]

Hilary Benn: The information requested is set out in the tables below:

DfID Programme by country

	£ thousands
	China	Egypt	Poland
1996–97	30,956	6,299	12,718
1997–98	38,616	7,246	13,337
1998–99	39,189	4,947	7,916
1999–2000	26,260	3,546	4,442

HIV/AIDS

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list her Department's total spending on HIV/AIDS for each of the last five years and her forecast total spending on HIV/AIDS in each of the next three years. [47336]

Hilary Benn: There is often no clear distinction between assisting with work on HIV/AIDS and other sexual and reproductive health issues. However, the following is my Department's total bilateral expenditure on reproductive health activities, including HIV/AIDS, from financial years 1997–98—2001–02:

1997–98 to £38.4 million

1998–99 to £45.0 million

1999–00 to £75.7 million

2000–01 to £124.9 million

2001–02 to £206.6 million.

We have also in this period provided funding to support the HIV/AIDS programmes of a number of multilateral organisations, including the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Children Fund (UNICEF), the European Community (EC) and the World Bank. However, with the exception of UNAIDS it is not possible to determine the portion of our contributions used for HIV/AIDS work as opposed to the other work of these agencies.

We would expect that over the next three years our HIV/AIDS expenditure will increase above the present level.

Overseas Aid Budget

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much of her Department's overseas aid budget was provided to charities and other NGOs for each of the last five years (a) as a percentage of her Department's overseas aid budget and (b) in real terms. [47332]

Hilary Benn: We do not compile statistics for aid to charities and other NGOs as such. The following table shows estimated figures for the last five financial years, calculated using the nearest equivalents within the bilateral programme. These figures do not include support to in-country civil society organisations or UK groups receiving funds channelled through multilateral organisations.

£ Million	Total	Constant Prices 2000–01	Proportion of total DfID expenditure

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much of her Department's overseas aid budget is provided in the form of Government to Government aid grants for each of the last five years (a) as a percentage of her Department's overseas aid budget and (b) in real terms. [47331]

Hilary Benn: We do not compile statistics for government to government aid grants as such. The following table shows estimated figures for the last five financial years, calculated using the nearest equivalents within the bilateral programme. These figures do not include support given through mulilateral organisations.

Burundi

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is being done to improve the co-ordination of humanitarian relief for internally displaced people in Burundi. [47638]

Hilary Benn: I think that current co-ordination arrangements are working reasonably in exceptionally difficult operating circumstances. The UN is seeking to strengthen the staffing of its operations and of the joint UN/Government of Burundi working arrangements for addressing the needs of displaced people. We continue to encourage non-governmental organisations and UN agencies to co-ordinate closely together under the Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs.

Bushmeat

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions her Department has had with countries in Central and West Africa about the sustainability of the trade in bushmeat. [48148]

Hilary Benn: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply of 9 January 2002, Official Report, column 837W. DFID has been funding two bilateral projects in Cameroon with significant elements relating to bushmeat. From 1995–2002, the Mount Cameroon Project team worked closely with the Cameroon Ministry of Environment and Forests to establish field level community management of timber and wildlife resources. The Community Forestry Development Project in Cameroon continues to work up these and other field projects into ways for communities to manage their wildlife resources under the Forest Law.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if her Department intends to undertake researach on the relationship between wildlife and poor people's livelihoods. [48145]

Hilary Benn: DfID is concerned with reducing poverty. We fund and will continue to fund projects and studies that addresss sustainable forest management and bushmeat production where this is key to tackling poverty. Annex 1 lists the main current DfiD activities that have direct impact on wildlife and their habitats.

Annex 1: Examples of DfID-supported bilateral projects, and research and studies, that have a strong focus on wildlife/bushmeat species

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what analysis her Department has made of the effectiveness of participatory poverty assessments in analysing the importance of bushmeat in people's livelihoods. [48153]

Hilary Benn: DFID routinely assesses the effectiveness of the methodologies used in poverty reduction initiatives. Participatory poverty assessments (PPAs) are an important tool used widely in poverty reduction programmes to ensure that decision-makers are aware of poor people's views. DFID is funding research into the linkages between poverty and environmental issues in PPAs. The research to date has focused on the broad management issues relating to livelihoods of the poor, bushmeat included.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to raise the subject of the trade in bushmeat with Governments in Central and West Africa. [48147]

Hilary Benn: Neither myself, nor the Secretary of State for International Development have any current plans to discuss this issue with governments in Central and West Africa, but my Department will continue to raise these matters where they are relevant to our poverty objectives.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what account has been taken of the bushmeat trade in her Department's Cameroon Country Strategy Paper. [48144]

Hilary Benn: Our Country Strategy Paper is focused on encouraging the sustainable management of forestry resources, of which bushmeat forms a part. The Community Forestry Development Project is working within the Government of Cameroon to establish community wildlife protocols for sustainable bushmeat harvesting. We are supporting the development of a Forestry and Environment Sector programme, one of the conditions for which is enhanced provision for poaching control campaigns. The programme will include a substantial community natural resource management component.

Wildlife and Poverty Study

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the Phase 1 report produced for her Department by Joanna Elliot entitled "Wildlife and Poverty Study". [48146]

Hilary Benn: DFID has undertaken a Wildlife and Poverty Study to identify how best to ensure that poor people's wildlife resources are used for effective poverty reduction. We are pleased with the initial Phase One report and the public interest it has attracted.

The initial report documents anecdotal evidence of poor people's dependence on bushmeat. It highlights the lack of reliable aggregate data as to the extent of this dependence, the difficulty and expense of collecting that data, given that so much of the bushmeat trade is illegal, and the lack of proven instruments to enable poor people to manage bushmeat resources sustainably.

Phase Two of the study will focus particularly on the Policy and institutional environment that will improve poor peoples' access to the benefits flowing from the sustainable management of wildlife resources.

Commonwealth Development Corporation

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the required rate of return on investments is from public-private partnerships with the Commonwealth Development Corporation; and what plans she has to reduce this rate. [46706]

Hilary Benn: The Government does not set CDC a required rate of return.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target that 75 per cent. of bilateral country programme resources should be allocated to low income countries by 2002 will be met. [47905]

Hilary Benn: A report on progress against this particular Public Service Agreement (PSA) target, and against all other PSA targets set by my Department between April 1999 and March 2002, will appear in DFID's 2002 Departmental Report to be published later this month.

Pakistan

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) if she will make a statement on the flow of refugees from Afghanistan into Pakistan; [46596]

(2) what assessment she has made of the flow of refugees from Afghanistan into the camps in the Balochistan area of Pakistan fleeing economic hardship and tribal instability; and how these problems are being addressed by (a) her Department and (b) the international community; [46595]

(3) what support (a) the UK Government and (b) the international community are providing to the Government of Pakistan (i) to address overcrowding in and (ii) to provide adequate resources for refugee camps in the Balochistan area. [46598]

Hilary Benn: Pakistan has been shouldering the burden of some two million refugees from Afghanistan for many years. In the light of the stabilising situation in Afghanistan, since 1 March 2002, 150,000 Afghan refugees have been able to return home from Pakistan through the joint voluntary repatriation programme established by the Pakistani and Afghan Governments with UNHCR. However, significant numbers continue to cross into Pakistan from Afghanistan, particularly into Balochistan province, with 10,000 Afghans crossing in the past week. UNHCR reports the majority are fleeing drought conditions in Afghanistan; some are now discussing returning to Afghanistan.

DFID has provided £3 million to UNHCR's operations, in response to the current crisis, to support its operations for refugees in the region, including in Balochistan province. This has included technical personnel, material and financial support. At the request of UNHCR, we have provided three relief flights to Iran and Pakistan transporting tents, shelter material and communications equipment. We have also provided a specialist site planner to UNHCR in Pakistan to assist with the setting up of new refugee camp sites. UNHCR and its partners are working to improve the conditions in all refugee camps, including the water supply, sanitation and health facilities in the waiting area at the border. We have also provided £7 million to the World Food Programme's regional programme, which includes food aid support to refugees in Pakistan—7,000 families waiting to enter Pakistan have been provided food rations. In addition we have provided £6 million to NGOs, much of which has been directed towards Afghans in neighbouring countries, including Pakistan, and £11 million to support communities in Pakistan most affected by the influx of refugees. We have also provided £15 million to support the Government of Pakistan in its economic reforms.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on relations between refugees and the local communities in the Balochistan area of Pakistan. [46597]

Hilary Benn: Relations between Afghan refugees and local communities in Balochistan are reported by agencies in the region to be reasonable in areas where refugee communities are established. The current influx of 40,000 new refugees is reported to have increased tensions somewhat in the Chaman border area, particularly over water supplies, but no major incidents have occurred.

Financing for Development Conference

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment her Department has made of the outcome of the UN Financing for Development Conference in Mexico. [46659]

Hilary Benn: Donors and developing countries committed themselves to a new partnership in the "Monterrey Consensus". Developing countries recognised that they need to set in place the right policies to create an enabling environment for foreign direct investment and for the mobilisation of domestic resources through promoting good governance and pro-poor economic policies. In return donor countries agreed to provide better support for developing country efforts to achieve the Millennium Development Goals by: giving more official development assistance; enhancing aid effectiveness; ensuring better market access for developing countries; providing support to strengthen the capacity of developing countries to negotiate in international trade fora; ensuring that the HIPC process provides heavily indebted poor countries with a genuine exit from unsustainable debt; and taking steps to strengthen the voice of developing countries in the international financial institutions.

At the Barcelona Council on 15 March, the European Union agreed a package of measures to support the Monterrey Consensus. This included a commitment to increase EU development assistance. The EU average oda/GNI ratio is currently 0.33 per cent., and the EU has committed itself to raise this average to 0.39 per cent. by 2006. The implication of this is that the EU will provide an additional $20 billion of oda between now and 2006, and an additional $7 billion a year from 2006. The Americans followed the EU lead on aid volume by announcing that they would provide an additional $10 billion between 2004 and 2006 and $5 billion a year thereafter. This represents a 50 per cent. increase in US aid. Financing for Development is the first UN Conference that has delivered a concrete increase in oda, and the additional $12 billion a year from the EU and the USA represents a historic reverse in the decline in global oda levels over the 12 years.

New Partnership for Africa's Development

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what financial commitments have been made to the New Economic Partnership for African Development by (a) the UK, (b) the EU and (c) other OECD donors in financial year 2001–02. [46882]

Hilary Benn: The New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) is not a financing mechanism or an institution that runs projects. Rather, it is an African-owned and led process which encourages African nations to share best practice, undertake peer review and learn from successful experience in building effective states and reducing poverty. It has not yet sought direct funding. Proposals are currently being developed by NEPAD with the assistance of different African institutions in the areas of economic and corporate governance, infrastructure, agriculture and market access, financial and banking standards, and peace and security.

Developing Countries

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much her Department intends to spend in developing countries in each of the next three years (a) as a percentage of her aid budget and (b) in real terms, in the form of (i) Government to Government aid and (ii) aid to charities and NGOs. [47333]

Hilary Benn: Revised programme allocations for 2002–03 and 2003–04 have recently been agreed—details will appear in DFID's Departmental Report for 2002. Allocations for 2004–05 have not been agreed pending the outcome of the current Spending Review. I cannot however provide the information requested, as most programme allocations are not made by type of spending.

Written Answers to Questions

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Congestion Charging (London)

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what studies his Department has conducted into the effects on the environment of the London area of the proposed introduction of congestion charging by the GLA. [39846]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 4 March 2002]: The Government commissioned and published early in 2000 a report by an independent group of experts called Road Charging Options for London—A Technical Assessment (known as the ROCOL report). Copies are available in the library. The report covers environmental effects. It says that there could be environmental and amenity benefits from the reduced traffic volumes but much would depend on the how the benefits of reduced traffic were allocated. Emissions of CO_2 would be reduced, but there would be no significant improvement in local air quality.

Rail Investment

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what proportion of the private sector rail investment in the 10 year plan is expected ultimately to be on the balance sheet of Railtrack's successor. [47395]

Mr. Jamieson: This will be determined through the SRA's development of Special Purpose Vehicles (SPVs) and through negotiations with Network Rail and other possible bidders for Railtrack Plc on their proposed Business and Financing plans.

Housing (South-east)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what proportion of the Government's total targets for new housing in the south-east has been provided for in the strategic plans of local authorities; and what proportion remains to be allocated provisional sites. [47519]

Ms Keeble: Regional Planning Guidance for the South East (RPG9), issued in March 2001, sets out the level of housing provision to be made in the region. Housing provision in existing strategic plans—namely county structure plans—is broadly in line with guidance in RPG9 for the Government Office South East area, although usually only for the period up to 2011 and in some cases only up to 2006. Some County Councils have started the process of reviewing their structure plans. At the same time, about a third of all local plans have already expired and half are due to expire by 2006. District authorities need to update their local plans in order to allocate sufficient land for housing.

Housing Transfers

Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the cost is to the Department of writing off the over-hanging debt for local authorities transferring their housing stock to RSLs in (a) the current year and (b) each of the past five years; and what the projected cost is in (i) 2002–03 and (ii) 2003–04. [46363]

Ms Keeble [holding answer 26 March 2002]: The overhanging debt payments made to date are £21 million in 1999–2000 and £256 million in 2000–01. No payments were made in 2001–02. The projected costs are £500 million in 2002–03 and £800 million in 2003–04. These are estimates and are likely to change as details of transfer proposals are finalised.

Brownfield Developments

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how close the house-building industry is to meeting the Government's target of brownfield site development. [48592]

Ms Keeble: The Government's target is that by 2008, 60 per cent of additional housing should be provided on previously developed land and through conversions of existing buildings. The latest statistics (for 2000) show that achievement against target is 57 per cent.

Finance (Liverpool)

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much funding he has made available for social services and community care in Liverpool through (a) the local authority, (b) the Health Service and (c) the voluntary sector in each of the last five years; and what funding he has indicated will be made available in 2002–03. [44394]

Jacqui Smith: I have been asked to reply.

The table provides details of funding which the Department has made available for social services and community care to Liverpool Health Authority and Liverpool City Council, in each of the last five years and for 2002–03.

	1997–98 £000s	1998–99 £000s	1999–00 £000s	2000–01 £000s	2001–02 £000s	2002–03 £000s

Liverpool City Council	5,262	7,005	8,098	8,698	12,882	25,417

Note:

[1]1999–2000 was the first year of unified allocations covering hospital and community health services, prescribing and general practitioner infrastructure. Therefore they are not comparable to earlier years' allocations.

The section 64 general scheme of grants is the Department's main avenue of support for national voluntary organisations in England. Grants are not awarded on a geographical or regional basis.

Children's Homes

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many local authority children's homes there were in (a) 1990, (b) 1995 and (c) on the latest date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [43233]

Jacqui Smith: I have been asked to reply.

Information for the years ending 31 March 1995 and 31 March 2000, latest information available, is shown in the table. Information for 1990 is not available.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Smallpox

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance has been issued to law enforcement agencies in the event of a large-scale smallpox outbreak. [33336]

Mr. John Denham [holding answer 5 February 2002]: I apologise for the delay in replying. Smallpox has been eradicated world-wide and no specific guidance has been issued to law enforcement agencies. Guidance on smallpox, accessible both to public and professionals is available from the Public Health Laboratory Service.

A major outbreak of non-terrorist origin would be co-ordinated at the national level through the Civil Contingencies Committee; a terrorist incident would be handled through Cabinet Office Briefing Rooms (COBR).

Secondments (Energy Industry)

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff were seconded between (a) BP, (b) Shell, (c) Enron, (d) Exxon-Mobil, (e) Conoco, (f) Texaco and (g) TotalFinaElf and his Department in (i) 1999–2000, (ii) 2000–01 and (iii) April 2001 to the latest date for which figures are available. [33198]

Angela Eagle: No staff were seconded between the Home Department and the companies identified for the periods in question.

Animal Experiments

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans his Department has to improve the care standards for non-human primates in the Code of Practice for the Housing and Care of Animals Used in Scientific Puposes; and if he will make a statement. [47998]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Standards for the housing and care of laboratory animals, including non-human primates, are currently the subject of review under the auspices of the Council of Europe. This work is scheduled to be completed by the end of 2002. We will review the relevant codes of practice applicable in the United Kingdom in the light of the outcome of the Council of Europe review and any consequential changes to European directive 86/609/EEC.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many breeding establishments in Mauritius are authorised as sources of non-human primates under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement. [47997]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 10 April 2002]: There is currently authority for non-human primates from one breeding establishment in Mauritius to be used in programmes of work licensed under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986.

Prisoner Escapes

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the target for the rate of escapes from contracted-out escorts expressed as a ratio of prisoners handled was met by March 2001. [47234]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Prison Service met this key performance indicator target in the 2000–01 year. There was one escape for every 21,649 prisoners handled during the year. This was better than the target not to exceed one per 20,000 prisoners handled.

Nationality Applications

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many nationality applications were completed in the year to March 2001; and how many he expects to be completed in the year to March 2002. [47236]

Angela Eagle*[holding answer 10 April 2002]:* In the year to March 2001 94,090 nationality applications were completed, exceeding the target of 91,000.

The target for the year to March 2002 remained at 91,000 and indications are that the target will again be exceeded and the final total will be higher than that achieved in the year to March 2001.

Drug Misusing Offenders

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the PSA target of a reduction in the level of reoffending by drug misusing offenders (a) was met by March 2001 and (b) has since been exceeded. [47233]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Public Service Agreement target currently is: to reduce levels of repeat offending amongst drug misusing offenders by 25 per cent by 2005 (and by 50 per cent by 2008). There is no interim target set for 2001.

We are currently reviewing the drugs strategy targets and progress against them to ensure we still have the right balance and focus.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of decisions on asylum cases will have been made within two months in the year ending 31 March. [47228]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The target for the year ending 31 March 2002 is to decide and serve 60 per cent of new substantive asylum claims made in that same year within two months. The latest provisional data, published on 28 February 2002, indicate that nearly half (48 per cent) of applications received in the period April to September 2001 inclusive had initial decisions served within two months. Information on the percentage of asylum cases in the year ending 31 March 2002 with decisions made and served within two months is not yet available.

The data are published in the quarterly asylum statistics. The next publication will be available from 31 May 2002 on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many failed asylum seekers were removed in the year to March 2001; and how many he expects to be removed in the year to March 2002. [47238]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The number of failed asylum seekers removed in the year to March 2001 was 8,930. The current Service Delivery Agreement target relating to the removal of failed asylum seekers from the United Kingdom is to remove 30,000 in 2001–02; 33,000 in 2002–03; and 37,000 in 2003–04. The totals include dependants.

The precise number removed in March will be available in about two months.

The 30,000 target for this year has always been ambitious and high risk. To enable us to reach and exceed 30,000 removals per year by 2003, we need to remove about 2,500 people per month. It is our aim to achieve this monthly total as soon as possible.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum decisions were made in the year to March 2001; and how many he expects to be made in the year to March 2002. [47237]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 10 April 2002]: 132,840 initial decisions were made in the period 1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001, inclusive.

Information on the number of initial decisions made in the year to 31 March 2002 is not yet available. However, in line with plans, the number of cases awaiting an initial decision has continued to fall, 71,320 initial decisions were made during the period April 2001 to December 2001, compared with 85,960 in the same period a year previously.

Information on initial decisions is published quarterly. The next publication will cover the period up to March 2002, and will be available from 31 May 2002 on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of the impact on the policy of detaining children who are seeking asylum of the (a) provisions of the Children Act 1989 and (b) provisions of the Human Rights Act 1998; [48280]

(2) what risk assessments are undertaken before a child seeking asylum is detained; [48278]

(3) whether the rights and needs of the child must be considered before any decision to detain a child seeking asylum is taken. [48279]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Children Act 1989 places a duty on local social services departments to provide for unaccompanied asylum seeking children. As a matter of policy and practice all those accepted as being unaccompanied asylum seeking children are referred to the local social services department. Unaccompanied asylum seeking children are not routinely detained under immigration powers. But detention may occasionally be necessary in exceptional circumstances whilst alternative arrangements for their care are made. Where detention is in such circumstances necessary, this is normally limited to overnight, with appropriate care.

The decision to detain a family is always taken with due regard to Article 8 of the European Court of Human Rights (ECHR).

Families may be detained at the Oakington Reception Centre whilst their claim for asylum is processed. In other cases a family would be detained in line with the general detention criteria, which include consideration of the likelihood of removal, evidence of previous absconding and previous history of complying with the requirements of immigration control. There is however, as in any other case, a presumption in favour of granting temporary admission or temporary release.

Any case where it is proposed to detain a family will be risk-assessed by the Immigration Service. Checks are made to see if any child is on the "At Risk" register. In addition the family protection team at the local police station will be contacted. If there has been any involvement by the Social Services in any particular family case, they will also be consulted before an operation leading to the detention of children is undertaken.

Criminal Justice

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) financial and (b) other criteria are to be used for measurement of the PSA target on efficiency in the criminal justice system. [47410]

Mr. Keith Bradley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The 2000 Criminal Justice System Public Service Agreement (PSA) committed the criminal justice departments in defining a measure for value for money (rather than efficiency) in the system. Work is continuing on this, but it has not yet proved possible to devise a satisfactory single measure of system-wide performance. Meanwhile, however, each component part of the system has an efficiency or value for money target, and has plans in place to meet its target.

Immigration (Detainees)

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people detained under immigration law have died in each of the past five years; and of those how many are believed to have committed suicide. [48626]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 10 April 2002]: There was one incident of a death in immigration detention in the last five years. The incident occurred in January 2000 and is believed to have been a suicide although the inquest returned an open verdict.

Correspondence

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department will reply to the letter dated 18 September 2001 from the hon. Member for Epsom and Ewell relating to an inquiry by Mr. C Barfield of 2 Cuddington Avenue, Worcester Park, Surrey. [48211]

Angela Eagle: A reply to the hon. Member was sent on 27 March 2002.

Prison Officers

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison officers there were in each year since 1997; and how many retired due to long-term illness. [47376]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The information is provided in the table.

	Officers in Post 31 March	Ill Health Retirements per Calendar Year
1997	23,058	451
1998	23,444	220
1999	23,875	199
2000	24,090	165
2001	23,777	152
2002 (to 25/03/02)	23,067	18

Figures include prison officers, senior officers and principal officers.

Illegal Immigrants

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what extra security measures his Department has taken at Shoreham Port to help combat entry by illegal immigrants; [47374]

(2) how many illegal immigrants have been caught trying to enter this country at Shoreham Port, listed by country of origin; and how many of these have claimed political asylum since 1997. [47373]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 10 April 2002]: It is not possible to provide statistics for the total number of illegal entrants detected having entered the United Kingdom via Shoreham seaport. This is because illegal entrants are frequently detected inland and will not identify, or cannot be attributed to, any particular port of entry.

Shoreham seaport does not receive any passenger vessels and so has no permanent immigration presence. However, for the purposes of immigration control the port is covered by Immigration Service staff based at Newhaven who may be deployed there should a need be identified. Remote coverage is also provided by officers from Her Majesty's Customs and Excise and Sussex Police, Special Branch.

The Immigration Service views very seriously any potential breach of immigration controls, as well as the risks that migrants take by seeking to enter the United Kingdom clandestinely. Whilst there is currently no evidence to suggest that Shoreham seaport is being targeted for such activity, should such information be received, it would be passed to the District Intelligence Unit at Gatwick. They would assess the risk and ensure that appropriate measures were taken to combat any threat to the integrity of the immigration control.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to improve the response time to parliamentary questions. [47721]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 9 April 2002]: In its response to the Public Administration Select Committee's Second Report of Session 2000–2001 on Ministerial Accountability and Parliamentary Questions, the Government made clear their commitment to providing prompt and accurate answers to Parliamentary Questions. This continues to be the Government's position. I am committed to improving the performance of the Home Office and am working with the Department on practical steps to achieve this.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

PSA Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what new initiatives her Department has taken in 2001–02 to assist in achieving its Public Service Agreement targets. [47189]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Details of new initiatives and policies designed to assist in achieving the Public Service Agreement targets for 1999–2002 were set out in my previous parliamentary answers to the hon. Member for Buckingham on 19 December (Official Report, columns 310–15W), 8 January (Official Report, columns 543–45W), and 10 January (Official Report, columns 971–72W).

The main initiatives undertaken to help achieve the Public Service Agreement targets for 2001–2004 are as follows: the setting-up of Creative Partnerships in 16 deprived areas; the introduction of the School Sports Co-ordinator and Spaces for Sport and the Arts programmes; and the introduction of free access for all to national museums and galleries on 1 December 2001.

Digital Television

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the level of take up of digital television services has been from 1998 to the date for which the most recent figures are available. [46916]

Dr. Howells: These are the figures from December 1998 to December 2001 for digital television uptake, based on subscriber figures supplied by platform operators.

Date	per cent TV Households which are digital
31 December 98	0.9 per cent
31 March 99	2.2 per cent
30 June 99	3.9 per cent
30 September 99	7.0 per cent
31 December 99	11.1 per cent
30 March 00	18.0 per cent
30 June 00	19.4 per cent
30 September 00	22.5 per cent
31 December 00	26.8 per cent
31 March 01	30.0 per cent
30 June 01	32.5 per cent
30 September 01	34.7 per cent
31 December 01	36.6 per cent

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Information

Mrs. Roe: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, if the Commission will make further information about its work available to hon. Members. [50505]

Archy Kirkwood: Pages on the Parliamentary Intranet, accessed through "House Administration" give information about the Commission's role, responsibilities and membership, together with contact details. The pages provide links to the Commission's Annual Reports, and to Questions answered on behalf of the Commission. We have now decided to supplement this with periodic reports on Commission business: subjects considered, decisions taken, and work in progress. The first such report, covering Commission meetings between December 2001 and March 2002, will be posted on the Intranet today.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

SME Industrial Trends

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on SME industrial trends. [37652]

Nigel Griffiths: The last year for which figures are available (2000) shows an increase in the number of SME manufacturers.

Small and Medium Sized Enterprises continue to play an important role in the UK economy accounting for over 99 per cent of businesses, 44 per cent of non-government employment and 37 per cent of turnover. They employ 12 million people and contribute £1 trillion to the economy pa.

Company Auditing Policy

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will name the members of the group she has set up to review company auditing policy and practices, together with relevant interests or employment. [42615]

Ms Melanie Johnson: My right hon. Friends, the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry and the Chancellor of the Exchequer have invited the Economic Secretary, HM Treasury and myself, to lead a co-ordinating group on accounting and audit issues, which will ensure that there is a comprehensive work programme, to be undertaken by individual regulators, and avoiding unnecessary overlap; provide a progress report by the summer, with a final report at a later stage; commission additional work or reviews, if that is judged appropriate;

reach a view on the adequacy of the proposals, and, if appropriate, make specific recommendations.

The members of the co-ordinating group are as follows:

Melanie Johnson MP, Minister for Competition, Consumers & Markets, DTI;

Ruth Kelly MP, Economic Secretary to the Treasury;

Sir John Bourn, Comptroller and Auditor General. Chairman, Accountancy Foundation's Review Board;

Michael Foot, Managing Director, Deposit Takers and Markets Directorate, Financial Services Authority;

Mary Keegan, Chairman, Accounting Standards Board;

Professor Ian Percy, formerly Chairman, Accounts Commission for Scotland. Former Deputy Chairman, Auditing Practices Board;

Rosemary Radcliffe, formerly a member of the Company Law Review Steering Group and Chief Economist, Pricewaterhouse Coopers. Complaints Commissioner, Financial Services Authority.

The co-ordinating group at its first meeting discussed the work the regulators have in hand to address the key regulatory issues for audit and accounting raised in the wake of the Enron collapse. This focused on audit quality and auditor independence, financial reporting and auditing requirements, and corporate governance, in particular the role of the Audit Committee. The group will ensure that there is a comprehensive and co-ordinated work programme to be taken forward by regulators over the coming months.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the group she has set up to review company auditing policy and practices will take evidence from outside Government; which organisations have been asked to give evidence to it; and whether its report will be published. [42616]

Ms Melanie Johnson: The purpose of the Group is to ensure that the accounting and audit issues raised following the collapse in the US of Enron are addressed by individual regulators in the UK in a comprehensive and coordinated way.

At the first meeting of the group, it was agreed to invite comments from outside Government in relation to the group's coordinating role on the issues for audit and accountancy raised by the collapse of Enron. Further details will appear shortly on the DTI website (www.dti.gov.uk/cld). The group will provide a progress report by the summer, with a final report at a later stage. These will be published.

Small Businesses (Administrative Burden)

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress is being made in reducing the administrative burden on small businesses. [46431]

Nigel Griffiths: The Government have put in place a number of measures to reduce the administrative burden of regulations on small businesses, including:

Announced in January 2000 that employers with 4 or fewer employees will be exempt from the requirements to provide access to stakeholder pensions and deduct pension contributions.

Announced in April 2000 an increase in the statutory audit threshold for companies from £350,000 to £1 million. This measure will relieve up to 150,000 small firms from the burden of statutory audit, saving small companies up to £180 million a year.

We have exempted small shops from the new EU unit pricing requirements.

We have exempted employers with twenty or fewer employees from the trade union recognition procedures in the Employment Relations Act.

Small Business Service has produced clear guidance on a number of complex regulations.

The Business Link Website is now attracting 80,000 users per month—and businesses can register to receive alerts about regulations automatically.

A 12 weeks period between regulations being agreed and implemented has been actioned, allowing owner managers time to adapt to the new regulations.

Assisted and supported 6000 individuals wanting to start and grow a business and helped a further 6000 with mentoring advice.

The Patrick Carter review of payroll administration.

General Agreement on Trade in Services

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which services the United Kingdom will (a) as part of the European Union and (b) unilaterally be offering for liberalisation under the World Trade Organisation's General Agreement on Trade in Services. [47416]

Ms Hewitt: The United Kingdom negotiates in the World Trade Organisation as part of the European Union. Offers of liberalisation of services will be considered in the light of requests received from other WTO Members. The Doha Ministerial Declaration set June 2002 as the date for the submission of initial requests. The Government will consult on any offer they are minded to make as part of the EU's offer. Liberalisation is, however, a matter of domestic policy choice. The current negotiations under the General Agreement on Trade in Services cannot force liberalisation where we do not wish it.

Unsolicited Faxes

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action her Department recommend people take if they are the target of unsolicited faxes. [48585]

Mr. Alexander: There are safeguards for both individual and corporate subscribers who do not wish to receive unsolicited direct marketing faxes. Under the Telecommunications (Data Protection and Privacy) Regulations 1999, no one may send unsolicited direct marketing faxes to individual subscribers without their prior consent. These Regulations are enforced by the Information Commissioner, and any breaches should be reported to her office.

Corporate subscribers have opt-out rights under the same Regulations; no-one may send unsolicited direct marketing faxes to any subscriber who has registered with the Fax Preference Service, or who has told the direct marketer concerned not to send any further faxes. The Fax Preference Service is also open to individual subscribers who may find it useful to register in order to reinforce their rights. Subscribers should report any breaches of these regulations to the Information Commissioner's Office, or to the Fax Preference Service if they have registered with it.

Television Licences

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the (a) number and (b) total cost of television licences paid for by her Department. [48338]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 10 April 2002]: No licence is required for equipment use for official purposes. A detailed answer would involve disproportionate cost.

Digital Services

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the number of subscriptions to (a) digital terrestrial, (b) digital satellite and (c) digital cable television held by her Department for services in any departmental building from which Ministers work, stating for each subscription its (i) cost and (i) purpose. [48339]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 10 April 2002]: No data are held centrally and providing an answer would involve disproportionate cost.

Post Offices Capital Scheme

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been paid out each month since its inception under the Start-Up Capital Scheme for Post Offices. [47316]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I have been informed by Post Office Limited that to the end of March 2002, applications totalling £375,431 have been approved under the Scheme and that the following amounts have been paid:

December 2001	13,230
January 2002	11,699
February 2002	10,365
March 2002	43,778
Total	£79,072

Employment Relations

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she will publish a consultation document on the use of section 23 of the Employment Relations Act 1999 to extend rights contained in employment legislation to individuals of a specified description. [48743]

Alan Johnson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable) on 13 February 2002, Official Report, column 443W.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Bereavement Allowance

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Minister for Women what plans she has to make representations to the Department for Work and Pensions to secure a review of the operation and level of payment of bereavement allowance. [31276]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 29 January 2002]: I have no plans at present to make representations to the Department for Work and Pensions in order to secure a review of the operation and level of bereavement allowance.

DEFENCE

Gulf War Veterans

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Gulf war veterans have been diagnosed as suffering from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis; and how many of those diagnosed have subsequently died. [32331]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 12 February 2002]: In the United Kingdom, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis is classified as motor neurone disease (MND). As at 22 March 2002, the Ministry of Defence's Gulf Veterans' Illnesses Unit was aware of four of the 53,462 members of the United Kingdom armed forces identified as having deployed to a state in the Gulf region at some time between 1 September 1990 and 30 June 1991 who have been diagnosed as suffering from MND. We do not however hold complete morbidity data for all veterans of the Gulf conflict so it is possible that MND may have been diagnosed in other veterans without our knowledge.

According to formal notification to my Department by the Office of National Statistics NHS Central Register, and the Register Generals of Gulf veterans whose deaths have been recorded in England, Wales and Scotland, all four of the UK Gulf veterans diagnosed with MND referred to above have died.

Explosives

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many high explosive bombs the RAF purchased in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02. [43395]

Dr. Moonie: No high explosive bombs were purchased by the RAF during these years. Although some purchases to support training and development were made during this time, these were not classified as high explosive.

Special Advisers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many special advisers there were at 10 Downing Street; and what their salaries were in each of the last five years. [47058]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Two Special Advisers were in post on 9 April 2002. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 10 April 2002 (Official Report, column 11W) by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister.

Imber

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what expenditure has been incurred on the maintenance of the parish church at Imber for each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement. [48624]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Although the parish church of St Giles at Imber is the property of Salisbury Diocese, the Ministry of Defence has always voluntarily maintained the building in a wind and weatherproof condition and has incurred the following expenditure in each of the last five years:

Year	Amount £
1997	Details not available
1998	1,256.49
1999	2,747.15
2000	Nil
2001	158.63

Note:
Although general administrative costs are not available, the services of an Establishment Works Consultant has been provided at £210.00 per year—an additional £1,050 over the five year period.

I am, of course, unable to provide details of any expenditure that may have been incurred by Salisbury Diocese.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many days in each of the past five years the roads on Imber Ranges and in Imber village have been open to the public. [48539]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The metalled roads from Gore Cross to Warminster via Imber, and Heytesbury to Bratton via Imber are open for up to 50 days annually depending on operational training commitments. In each of the last five years these roads were open as follows:

Year	Number of Days
1997	21
1998	23
1999	26
2000	25
2001	24

QinetiQ

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if (a) UK, (b) EU and (c) foreign defence contractors will be considered as strategic partners of QinetiQ. [47645]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon Member to the announcement I made in the House on 6 March 2002, (Official Report, columns 313–14W). We have always made it clear that we will not consider any defence manufacturers as strategic partners of QinetiQ, nor any parties which would pose a risk to the defence and security interests of the United Kingdom. However, a large number of organisations which provide a wide range of services to Ministry of Defence could be regarded as defence contractors. As long as they do not fall into either of the two categories above, they will not be excluded from the QinetiQ transaction.

Dimbleby Interview

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a transcript of his interview on the Jonathan Dimbleby programme on 24 March. [47664]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence does not routinely hold full transcripts of interviews given by Ministers on radio or television programmes. I suggest that the hon. Member approaches LWT if he requires a full transcript of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence's interview on the Jonathan Dimbleby programme broadcast on ITV on 24 March.

Apprentice Training (Aberporth)

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he had with the First Secretary of the National Assembly regarding apprentice training at Aberporth, Ceredigion. [47754]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I have had no discussions with the First Minister for Wales about apprentice training at Aberporth. I wrote to him however on 25 March explaining the situation once the decision had been taken. There was no previous correspondence on the issue.

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he met representatives of the Learning and Skills Council for Wales to discuss apprentice training at Aberporth, Ceredigion. [47755]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I have had no discussions on apprentice training at Aberporth with representatives of the Learning and Skills Council for Wales.

MOD and Military Police (Retirement)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many personnel have retired from (a) the Military Police and (b) the MoD police in each of the last five years. [15166]

Dr. Moonie: Pursuant to the written answer given by my right hon. Friend Adam Ingram of 8 January 2002, (Official Report, column 556W). The number of MOD Police retirements during Financial Year 1999-2000, should read 25, not 24.

NORTHERN IRELAND

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been employed by his Department in each of the last three years under (a) the New Deal for Young People, (b) the New Deal for the Over 50s and (c) the New Deal for Lone Parents; and at what cost, listed by category, to public funds. [44916]

Dr. John Reid: In the last three years the NIO (and its agencies) have employed seven people under the New Deal for Young People, one under the New Deal for Over 50s and no-one under the New Deal for Lone Parents.

Of the seven employed under the New Deal for Young People six were recruited in 1999 and one in 2000.

The one person employed under the New deal for Over 50s was recruited in 1999.

New dealers are recruited to the NIO on a subsidised basis and take up existing vacancies. Therefore extra costs are limited to the subsidy and any additional training and development which may be needed. The cost of the latter cannot be readily identified.

Government Procurement Card

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of the procurement transactions were made with the Government procurement card by 31 March 2001. [45990]

Dr. John Reid: No procurement transactions using the Government Procurement Card were made by the Northern Ireland Office by the 31 March 2001. The Northern Ireland Prison Service has however commenced a pilot scheme since that date.

Terrorism

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (i) how many political parties in Northern Ireland have informed him that they (a) support and (b) oppose an amnesty for all terrorist-related offences committed in Northern Ireland before 10 April 1998; and if he will list them; [44323]

(2) what representations he has received from individuals and organisations in Northern Ireland in support of a general amnesty for all terrorist-related offences before 10 April 1998; and if he will list them. [44324]

Dr. John Reid: It is not Government practice to make private discussions or submissions a matter of public record. It would of course be open to the hon. Member to seek the views of the political parties in Northern Ireland directly.

Scheduled Offences

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those people subject to extradition proceedings in connection with scheduled offences committed in Northern Ireland before 10 April 1998; and for what offences extradition is being sought. [44335]

Dr. John Reid: There are currently no people subject to extradition proceedings in connection with scheduled offences committed in Northern Ireland before 10 April 1998. In addition, the Attorney General informs me that there are currently no people subject to the Backing of Warrants arrangements with the Republic of Ireland in connection with scheduled offences committed in Northern Ireland before 10 April 1998.

Lost/Stolen Property

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those items valued at less than £50 each which have been stolen or lost from his Department in each of the last four years. [34221]

Dr. John Reid: As there are no records kept centrally of items valued at less than £50 each, either stolen or lost from the Northern Ireland Office, I could only answer this question at disproportionate cost.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many people have been employed by his Department in each of the last three years under (a) the New Deal for Young People, (b) the New Deal for the Over 50s and (c) the New Deal for Lone Parents; and at what cost, listed by category, to public funds. [44914]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The attached table gives the numbers employed by my Department and its agencies under the New Deal Programme for (a) Young People; (b) the Over 50s; and (c) Lone parents.

New Deal recruits take up existing vacancies so extra costs to public funds are limited to the subsidy, where appropriate, and any additional training and development which may be needed. The cost of the latter cannot be readily identified.

2001	19	Young People
2001	1	Over 50

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many people employed by his Department under the New Deal for Young People in each of the last four years have subsequently (a) found unsubsidised employment for more than 13 weeks and (b) returned to jobseekers' allowance or other benefits. [45085]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is not held centrally on the number of New Dealers who have found unsubsidised employment for more than 13 weeks or who have returned to jobseekers' allowance or other benefits. However, New Dealers who have left my Department will have acquired skills making them more marketable for employment.

Illegal Agreements

Andy King: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what assessment he has made of the policy of the Legal Services Commission in supporting actions to enforce illegal agreements; and if he will make a statement; [48065]

(2) whether it is his Department's policy that the Legal Services Commission should grant funding to individuals seeking to enforce illegal agreements; and if he will make a statement. [48066]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Legal Services Commission (LSC) would not grant public funding to an applicant seeking to enforce an agreement that was clearly illegal from the contents of the application for funding. Where the legality of an agreement is the issue, funding could only be granted if the type of case fell within the scope of the Commission's Funding Code and the prospects of the applicant succeeding in the case were sufficient to satisfy the rigorous requirements of the Code.

Applications for civil legal aid funding are considered under the Commission's Funding Code. The Code sets out the criteria for deciding whether to fund or continue to fund services. The Code has been approved by the Lord Chancellor and by each House of Parliament.

Marriage and Relationship Support

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what organisations his Department supports under its Marriage and Relationship Support programme. [47610]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Marriage and Relationship Support (MARS) Branch of the Lord Chancellor's Department provides primary support to MARS organisations through its annual grant programme. The grant for the financial year 2001–02 was £4.5 million, and for 2002–03 it is £5 million.

As well as financial support, MARS officials also offer advice, guidance and information to all providers of MARS services, whether funding recipients or not.

Information on the organisations that have received, or are to receive funding for the financial years April 2001–March 2002 and April 2002–March 2003 and the amounts awarded is in the tables.

Malcolm Robert Ross

Andy King: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what sums have been paid out in each of the last 10 financial years to solicitors acting for Mr. Malcolm Robert Ross in litigation related to Mr. Ross's bankruptcy and involving disputes with Stonewood Securities Limited and its shareholders; and what sums have been received back from other parties to the litigation in costs recovery; [48064]

(2) if he will request a report from the Legal Services Commission on the handling of the request for funding by Mr. Malcolm Robert Ross. [48067]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I have requested a report from the Legal Services Commission (LSC). According to their records, Mr. Ross has been granted a number of civil legal aid certificates. These cases relate either to Mr. Ross's bankruptcy or involve disputes with Stonewood Securities Limited. One case has been concluded; the others are ongoing. As all the certificates are material to ongoing litigation, the LSC cannot provide details of payments made to the solicitors in connection with the closed case.

In respect of the ongoing litigation, the Commission has not yet received final bills from the solicitors involved and so, in any event, is not in a position to provide information about sums paid out. Normally, only when the actions have been concluded and the solicitor's bills assessed would meaningful figures be available on the costs of the proceedings. If the cases are successful, an order for costs in the individual's favour could be made and the Commission reimbursed.

Most of the certificates predate the implementation of the Access to Justice Act 1999 which significantly reduced the scope for funding cases which arise out of the carrying on of a business.

Public Record Office

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much revenue the Public Record Office has received from pre-payment revenues for the Public Record Office on-line-service; and how much has been refunded. [48678]

Ms Rosie Winterton: QinetiQ Ltd has received a total to date of £278,019 from pre-payment vouchers. The refunds requested and paid by the Public Record Office and QinetiQ is £1,287.

Census 1901

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the 1901 Census on-line in-house facilities will be reinstated at designated service centres; and when the full 1901 Census Internet Service will resume. [48679]

Ms Rosie Winterton: QinetiQ Ltd. is continuing to work on the technical enhancements. Once configuring of the technical enhancements is complete, rigorous testing will be undertaken on all aspects of the system. These enhancements are intended to make the site sufficiently robust to permit general Internet access, and are being done with a sense of urgency. However, the most important consideration is to ensure that the service is re-launched successfully. The system will again be made available to designated service centres as part of the general re-introduction of the site. General on-line searches will be available as soon as practicable following testing and availability at the service centres.

Child Killings

Ms Walley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps the Government are taking to end child abuse deaths; and if he will make a statement. [45883]

Jacqui Smith: I have been asked to reply. We are committed to reducing the number of deaths of children through abuse and neglect. That is why over the last few years we have introduced new legislation, new guidance, new structures and new policy initiatives to make children safer and to ensure that there is a proper focus on children at the very heart of Government. These measures include:

The Care Standards Act 2000 to improve the inspection and regulation of children's care services, and the Protection of Children Act 1999 which makes it much more difficult for unsuitable people to work with children;

Revised core interagency child protection guidance: Working Together to Safeguard Children (1999) and the new Framework for the Assessment of Children in Need and Their Families (2000);

New guidance focusing on Safeguarding Children Involved in Prostitution (2000) and a National Plan for Safeguarding Children from Commercial Sexual Exploitation (2001);

A Minister for Young People, John Denham, and a new Cabinet Committee focusing on Children and Young People's issues;

The first ever national Children's Rights Director for England—Roger Morgan—to act as a powerful champion for some of the most vulnerable children in our country;

The establishment of the Children and Young People's Unit, which is responsible for ensuring the coherence of Government policies that affect all children and young people under 19; and Radical new initiatives such as the £885 million Quality Protects programme, Sure Start and Connexions.

In addition, the Department will shortly be publishing the first of a series of biennial overview reports drawing out the key findings of a sample of serious case reviews following child deaths or other cases of serious abuse in recent years. These reports will draw out common themes and trends and their implications for policy and practice. We will disseminate these findings widely to enable practitioners and managers to learn from them. It will be important for professionals to consider how their own practice might be developed or improved as a result of these findings to help prevent avoidable injuries to, and deaths of, children.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Catering Services

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost was of (a) in-house canteen and (b) other catering services provided by his Department in each of the last four years. [38919]

Mr. MacShane: In-house canteen services are provided by an external contractor. Staff pay for their own refreshments, although the FCO has provided a subsidy to the contractor as follows:

Financial Year	Amount Paid
1997–98	£210,696.31
1998–99	£132,604.26
1999–2000	£99,275.37
2000–01	£200,433.96
2001–02	£179,000.00 (Forecast only)

The information requested on part (b) of the question is not centrally maintained and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Special Advisers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many special advisers there were in his Department; and what their salaries were in each of the last five years. [46959]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Two. I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 11W.

Yasser Arafat

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made since 18 March to the (a) Israeli Government and (b) US Administration about Yasser Arafat's attendance at and return from the forthcoming Arab Summit in Beirut. [46645]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 10 April 2002]: In the months leading up to the Arab League Summit in Beirut, we repeatedly called on the Israeli government to release the restrictions on Arafat's freedom of movement. We were also in close contact with our US colleagues who were working to achieve the same goal.

Gibraltar

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the report by the International Monetary Fund on 19 March. [48309]

Peter Hain: We welcome the report, which recognises progress that Gibraltar has made in the regulation and supervision of its developing financial services industry.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the legal basis of his claim that the integration of Gibraltar into the UK would contravene the Treaty of Utrecht. [47565]

Peter Hain: I did not say that the integration of Gibraltar into the UK would contravene the Treaty of Utrecht. I said that it was not this Government's policy to integrate Gibraltar. I reminded the Committee that the Treaty of Utrecht gave Spain first refusal in the event that Britain ever relinquished sovereignty over Gibraltar; and that the position of Gibraltar was therefore different from that of Ceuta and Melilla.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Refrigerators

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the risk of food being stored in ineffective refrigeration systems because refurbishment has been delayed because of the inability to recycle redundant refrigerators. [25702]

Mr. Meacher There is no reason why refurbishment should be delayed. Ineffective refrigeration systems can already be disposed of in the UK via mobile fridge recycling plant or high temperature incineration, they can be exported for recycling in other Member States, or they are stored pending treatment in the UK. There is sufficient capacity in the UK to store waste refrigeration equipment for up to one year. The risk of food being stored in ineffective systems for this reason is therefore negligible.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the proportion of waste sent to landfill which could be converted to biofuel through the anaerobic digestion process; and if she will make a statement. [37702]

Mr. Meacher: We have not carried out such an assessment. Experience has shown that although anaerobic digestion is an appropriate treatment for a wide range of biodegradable wastes there are doubts about its commercial viability.

The Government support the development of anaerobic digestion through mechanisms such as eligibility for the Renewable Obligation Certificates. The waste management industry is reviewing the role of anaerobic digestion, along with other treatment options, to achieve the reduction in the biodegradable content of MSW sent to landfill as required by the Landfill Directive.

In these circumstances it is considered to be premature to make a realistic assessment of the quantities of wastes that will be treated by this option.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which Government Departments participated in the waste strategy summit. [46791]

Mr. Meacher: The Waste Summit was held on 21 November 2001 and was hosted by the Secretary of State. Government officials who attended represented the Departments for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, Trade and Industry and Transport, Local Government and the Regions and Her Majesty's Treasury. Other officials represented No. 10's Policy Unit, the Cabinet Office Performance and Innovation Unit and the Devolved Administrations.

EU Directives

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the action she took in response to the formal notice and the reasoned opinion on UK compliance with EU law relating to the (a) Drinking Water Directive, (b) Hazardous Waste Directive, and (c) Waste Framework Directive. [40647]

Mr. Meacher: Cabinet Office rules require that details of relations between the Commission and Member States on inspection proceedings are confidential. However, I can confirm that the Government is dealing with the points made by the Commission in its letters of formal notice and reasoned opinions addressed to the United Kingdom in relation to the implementation of the three Directives.

Manure

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proposals she has to permit the spreading of organic manure on light to sandy soils in August, September and October under licence under the regulations contained in the Nitrate Vulnerable Zone Directive; and what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of (a) cover crops and (b) catch crops in reducing nitrate leaching during autumn and winter months. [46388]

Mr. Meacher: The Action Programme measures required by the Nitrates Directive 1991 which apply in Nitrate Vulnerable Zones (NVZs) detail closed periods prohibiting the application of manures containing a higher proportion of available nitrogen (slurries, poultry manures and liquid digested sewage sludges) on to sandy or shallow soils which are more prone to nitrate leaching. Relaxation of these measures would entail a high risk of increased nitrate leaching so there are no plans to allow exemptions under licence.

The Action Programme measures take account of information produced by the Government funded research programme on nitrates and experiences gained during operation of the Nitrate Sensitive Areas Scheme. For further information about cover and catch crops please refer to MAFF Booklet PB3578 "The Pilot Nitrate Sensitive Areas Scheme: Final Report" available from DEFRA publications (08459 556000).

Cover crops and also catch crops, used late in the year, can help to reduce nitrate loss compared with both uncropped land and land sown with autumn sown cereals. This benefit is recognised in the Action Programme measures with the shorter closed period for manure applications for land sown with a cover crop before 1 October and not removed before 1 December of the same year.

Advice on using cover or catch crops to reduce nitrate leaching in fields that would otherwise be bare over the autumn and winter months is also given in the DEFRA Booklet PB5505 "Guidelines for Farmers in NVZs".

Environmental Impact Assessment

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 28 January, Official Report, columns 92–3W, which FTSE companies reported upon their environmental impacts; which mentioned environmental issues; and which did not submit an environmental response to the Government. [46263]

Mr. Meacher: Since my answer of 28 January we have been reviewing the response to the Prime Minister's challenge to FTSE350 companies to report on their environmental performance.

Not all companies have yet published their reports for 2001, but at present we estimate 76 of the top 350 companies have produced a stand alone environmental report, including quantified environmental performance data, or otherwise published this information.

A further 88 have also taken at least one step towards meeting the Prime Minister's challenge such as publishing an environmental policy or environmental performance targets. We are writing to FTSE350 companies to check our estimates and will make the final tally public as soon as possible.

A list of FTSE 350 companies with our latest estimates of their respective reporting performance has been made available in the Library of the House.

Water and Industrial Accidents Conventions

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what role her Department has played in discussions relating to the UNECE Water and Industrial Accidents Conventions. [46555]

Mr. Meacher: These Conventions were adopted in 1992 and the UK is a signatory to both of them. My department has been involved in discussions in the past year on a possible liability protocol under both Conventions in a United Nations Economic Commission for Europe working group.

The protocol would provide compensation for damage to transboundary waters from accidents covered by the industrial accidents Convention. The aim is for the protocol to be adopted at the conference of European Environment Ministers next year.

Environmental Protocols

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department has taken in response to the LRTAP Protocols on (a) heavy metals, (b) persistent organic pollutants and (c) abatement of acidification, eutrophication and ground level ozone. [46567]

Mr. Meacher: Since becoming Party to the 1979 Convention on Long Range Transboundary Air Pollution (LRTAP) the UK has worked at an international level to abate transboundary air pollutants. The UK is preparing to ratify these three Protocols.

I issued a consultation paper on 20 March 2002 outlining the steps necessary to ratify the 1998 Protocol on Heavy Metals; comments are invited by 12 June 2002. I have arranged for a copy of the consultation paper to be placed in the Library. The consultation paper sets out a draft strategy for the UK to meet its commitments under the Protocol. The main requirements are the reduction of annual emissions to air of cadmium, lead and mercury to below 1990 levels. We already meet these requirements as annual emissions in the UK in 1999 were 30 per cent, or less, of 1990 levels for the three metals. Subject to the results of the consultation exercise, I hope to ratify the Protocol by the end of 2002.

The Department is also looking at what measures need to be in place for the UK to ratify the 1998 Protocol on Persistent Organic Pollutants, although the basic obligation to reduce emissions of POPs below their 1990 levels has already been achieved.

The UK signed the Protocol to abate acidification, eutrophication and ground level ozone (the "Gothenburg Protocol") in December 1999. The main requirement of the Protocol is to reduce emissions of sulphur dioxide, nitrogen dioxide, volatile organic compounds and ammonia to meet individual national ceilings from 2010. The Protocol covers the same four pollutants as the European Union National Emission Ceilings Directive, adopted last November, and ratification of the Protocol and and implementation of the Directive will be done jointly. I hope to issue a consultation paper later in the year on our proposals. Projections suggest that the UK is on course to meet the emission ceilings from 2010. Subject to consultations I hope that the UK will be able to ratify the Gothenburg Protocol by the end of 2002.

Water Pollution

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost of removing pesticide and fertiliser contamination from water in water catchment and other areas that affect drinking water supplies was in (a) areas of standard farming procedures and (b) areas where farming is carried out to Soil Association organic standards in the last year for which figures are available. [46638]

Mr. Meacher: The Environment Agency, which is responsible for monitoring ground and surface waters for pesticides, does not distinguish between compounds used in conventional and organic farming. Similarly, the costs to water companies of treatment to remove traces of pesticides before water can be put into supply are not quantified and apportioned according to the different farming methods, which may vary within any single water catchment area.

GM Crops

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which EU member states have been notified of the action taken by the National Assembly for Wales under the safeguard clause of the EU Deliberate Release Directive in respect of GM maize being grown in the UK; and when they were informed. [46640]

Mr. Meacher: The European Commission was informed of the action taken by the Assembly on 13 July 2001, as required under Directive 90/220/EEC. At the same time, copies of the notification were sent to the Permanent Representations of all other Member States.

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects the European Commission to respond to the action taken by the National Assembly of Wales under the safeguard clause of the EU Deliberate Release Directive in respect of GM maize being grown in the United Kingdom. [46639]

Mr. Meacher: It is not known when the Commission will respond.

Biodiversity

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many of the biodiversity action plans for species and habitats at risk have been implemented. [46749]

Mr. Meacher: There are 391 species action plans and 45 habitat action plans. All are being implemented in partnership with a wide range of statutory, voluntary and private sector organisations. A progress report on implementation was made in "Sustaining the variety of life: 5 years of the UK Biodiversity Action Plan", published in March 2001. The report can be viewed on www.ukbap.org.uk.

Water Sports

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will respond to the University of Brighton report on water based sports and recreation. [47971]

Alun Michael: The report was published in December, since when a number of discussions have taken place. Recently officials met British Waterways, the Countryside Agency, the Countryside Council for Wales, the Environment Agency and Sport England as the other sponsors of the research along with other interested Government Departments. Last month I met representatives of the British Canoe Union with my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, West (Mr. Thomas). In the light of these and other discussions we are considering what action to take in the light of the report's findings.

Countryside and Rights of Way Act

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 24 January 2002, Official Report, column 1032W, when she expects to publish the consultation paper on the closure or diversion of rights of way. [47612]

Alun Michael: I have set high priority on implementing the measures in the CROW Act to enable the closure or diversion of rights of way where this is needed for crime prevention but I also want to make sure that the processes are kept as straightforward as possible. The same applies for the provisions in relation to locations where the safety of school pupils is the issue. With this in mind, I am currently refining our proposals and intend to issue a consultation paper very soon.

CERRIE

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 20 March 2002 to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Llew Smith), Official Report, column 372W, on CERRIE, what the terms of reference are for the Consultative Exercise on Radiation Risk from Internal Emitters, including the responsibilities of individual members of the Committee, what reports are to be placed in the public domain from the proceedings of CERRIE; and what guidelines individual members of CERRIE have been given on (a) disclosing proceedings and (b) publishing material subsequently that relate to CERRIE. [47527]

Mr. Meacher: The Committee Examining Radiation Risks of Internal Emitters (CERRIE) is a working group of the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment (COMARE). CERRIE has been given the remit

> "To consider the present risk models for radiation and health that apply to exposure to radiation from internal radionuclides in the light of recent studies and any further research that might be needed".

CERRIE will prepare a report for COMARE, which will be published. COMARE will then advise Ministers on the need for changes to the existing risk models and for further work. Each of the members of CERRIE has been appointed because of their knowledge and experience of the issues under discussion. They have joint responsibility to evaluate thoroughly the existing evidence and make recommendations, in line with the Committee's remit.

In order to facilitate the free flow of views during Committee meetings, CERRIE has decided that its work would be best carried out under the "Chatham House Rule". This approach will allow ideas/information raised in meetings to be discussed outside them, but the anonymity of their authors would be retained so that they will not be inhibited from developing and changing their views later on. In order to be transparent about their discussions, CERRIE are preparing their own website which will include, among other things, summary minutes of their meetings. During and after the period of the Committee's deliberations and preparation of its report, members will be free to publish technical papers that they have prepared to inform the Committee, but the views expressed in them should be clearly attributable to the individual and should not imply that they reflect the views of the Committee collectively.

Climate Change

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions the Government will have with the administration in the United States of America regarding the need to ratify the Kyoto protocol on climate change. [47047]

Mr. Meacher: The UK Government maintain regular contact on climate change with the US Administration, both at ministerial and official levels. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs held discussions on climate change with a range of representatives of the Administration in Washington in December and intends to do so again when she visits Washington in April. Other Government Ministers take every opportunity to raise the issue with our American counterparts.

The UK Government firmly believes that the Kyoto Protocol remains the best way to take forward international action on climate change and will continue to emphasise this point in discussions with the US Administration.

Environmental Protection

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what steps her Department has taken to promote the implementation of Principle 10 of the 1992 Rio Declaration; [46563]

(2) if she will make a statement on action taken by her Department with regards to (a) the Aarhus Convention and (b) the ECE Sofia Guidelines on Access to Environmental Information and Public Participation in Environmental decision-making. [46564]

Mr. Meacher: Whilst not formally revoked, the ECE Sofia Guidelines are effectively superseded by the Aarhus Convention. The Aarhus Convention is the primary vehicle for the promotion of Principle 10 of the 1992 Rio Declaration. The Government strongly support this Convention and signed the treaty when it opened for signature in 1998.

The majority of the Convention is already implemented in the UK. This Department is responsible for some of the necessary legislative amendments, in particular to the Environmental Information Regulations 1992. These will be made as soon as possible after the EU draft Directive on Public Access to Environmental Information is adopted to replace Directive 90/313/EEC. The Government intend to ratify the Convention as soon as all of the necessary legal provisions are in place. This date will depend on the legislative timetables of the devolved administrations.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Young People's Services

Phil Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how the implementation of the Children and Young People's Unit Core Principles for Government will be evaluated. [46328]

Mr. Denham: Departments will be encouraged to develop an evaluation strategy as part of their implementation of the Core Principles over the coming year. The Unit will monitor action across Government, including on evaluation and will publish reports on the progress made. The Unit will be in an excellent position to identify and disseminate: (a) real innovation in how Departments consult and engage with children and young people in the formulation and delivery of their policies, and (b) mainstreaming strategies through which engaging children and young people becomes part of Central Government's wider work in consulting with the public.

School Playing Fields

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many school playing fields were sold in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02; and what acreage this involved. [44447]

John Healey: In the financial year April 2000 to March 2001, the Department approved 38 applications to sell areas of school playing field larger than a small sports pitch for the under 10s, that is greater than 2,000m^2. The total area involved was 540,000m^2, or about 131 acres. Of this total, 40 acres were at closed or closing school sites.

In the financial year from April 2001 to date, the Department has approved 18 applications to sell areas larger than a school sports pitch for the under 10s. The total area involved amounts to some 280,000m^2, or about 69 acres, of which 39 acres are at closed or closing school sites. The Department does not know how many of these approved applications have resulted in actual sales. In all cases, we have ensured that the remaining playing fields would meet the full needs of the schools involved and of other schools in the local area.

Some of the proceeds from these approved applications are earmarked to provide 13 new sports halls and to improve other sports facilities at schools, such as new all-weather pitches and to bring other, poorly drained, pitches back into use. In other cases, the proceeds are to be used to improve educational facilities—for example, by providing modern, up to date, teaching accommodation, such as science and technology classrooms. In a number of cases, the proceeds are to be used to help build new schools or to enable multi-site schools to consolidate on to one site.

Higher Education Funding

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what planned expenditure on higher education was in 1996–97 and each of the subsequent five financial years; and what the total outturn spending on higher education was in each of those years excluding proceeds of tuition fees. [45256]

Margaret Hodge: Publicly planned expenditure for higher education in England is set out in the annual Grant letter issued to the Higher Education Funding Council for England. The data set used in calculating the out-turn for public and student contributions to fees differ from that used in calculating publicly planned expenditure on fees. The tuition fee data for planned expenditure are for all students, including students from Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, at English HE institutions, while for out-turn the figures are based on students from England at English HE institutions. The two sets of data are not therefore directly comparable. The figures, excluding all planned tuition fee income, are:

	Publicly planned expenditure excluding fees[1]	Out-turn excluding fees[2]
1996–97	3646	3678
1997–98	3702	3743
1998–99	3757	3791
1999–2000	4422	4423
2000–2001	4643	4811

[1]Figures reflect Grant Letter announcements and include ear-marked capital, allocations for access and widening participation paid via institutions, HE expenditure for the British Academy and directly funded DfES small programmes. They exclude public and student contributions to tuition fees and funds paid to students for their maintenance support.

[2]The differences between planned and actual expenditure are explained in part by the different coverage used for tuition fees and by in year adjustments.

School Sixth Forms

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many representations she has received from schools which will lose sixth-form funding as a result of the transition to Learning and Skills Council funding; [45406]

(2) how many schools have sixth-forms which will receive a lower budget after the transition to Learning and Skills Council funding. [45407]

Margaret Hodge: My right hon. Friend has received representations from a number of headteachers, deputy headteachers and chairs of school governors. However, through our Real Terms Guarantee, we are ensuring that no school sixth form can lose compared with its 2000–01 funding levels, provided pupil numbers are maintained. For sixth forms that are reducing in size, the guarantee will be maintained but at a proportionately reduced level.

The Learning and Skills Council has calculated two figures for each sixth form—its RTG and its LSC formula allocation—and they will receive the higher of these two. The Financing of Maintained School Regulations 2002 have been amended to ensure that sixth forms funded through the LSC formula see some benefit. Schools should gain at least one third of the potential benefit from the LSC's allocations for 2002–03. We intend to amend the regulations further for 2003–04 to ensure that such schools have a minimum two-thirds gain in that year.

Lecturers

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the (a) age profile of university lecturers in engineering departments and (b) likely future teaching capacity of those departments. [45831]

Margaret Hodge: The latest provisional data, as collated by the Higher Education Statistics Agency, show the age profile of academic staff in engineering disciplines to be:

Age:	0:20	21:25	26:30	31:35	36:40	41:45	46:50	51:55	56:60	61:65	66:95	other	total

Special Advisers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many special advisers there were in her Department; and what their salaries were in each of the last five years. [46952]

Estelle Morris [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Department has two special advisers in post as at 9 April 2002.

In relation to special adviser salaries I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 11W).

Departmental Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what proportion of the staff of her Department are part-time employees. [47170]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office on 10 April.

Faith Schools

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) primary, (b) secondary and (c) both primary and secondary schools that select some or all of their pupils on the basis of faith have (i) opened and (ii) closed in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority. [47749]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The information requested is not readily available. I will write to the hon. Member shortly and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

University Funding

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to her answer of 19 March 2002, Official Report, column 251W, on university funding, if she will list the low participation postcodes which entail additional costs in student recruitment. [47757]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 10 April 2002]: This is a matter for the Higher Education Funding Council for England. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive of the Funding Council to reply to the hon. Gentleman's question and to place a copy of his reply in the Commons library.

Higher Education Funding

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what decision has been taken on the future of funding students in higher education; and if she will make a statement. [48257]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Government have announced a review of student finance. We are considering a number of options and no decisions have been made.

Higher Education Entrants

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of each year group between 18 and 30 entered higher education for the first time in 1999–2000. [47758]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 18 March, Official Report, cols 114W, which gave the entry rates to higher education for each individual age from 18 to 30.

University Applications

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many university applications there were in England, broken down by (a) local authority area and (b) local government ward in the last year for which figures are available. [47759]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The latest available information from the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS), showing the number of English domiciled applicants to full-time and sandwich undergraduate courses by their area of permanent residence, is shown in the table. UCAS does not hold data on applicants from each local government ward.

Through the Excellence Challenge, which began in 2001, we are hoping to raise the aspirations and attainment among young people in Excellence in Cities areas and Education Action Zones, to encourage them to enter higher education.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of whether the 2001–02 target of 280 secondary subject and 51 primary inspections meeting HM Chief Inspector's standard will be achieved. [47896]

Mr. Timms: This is a matter for HM Chief Inspector of Schools. I have therefore asked Mike Tomlinson to write to the hon. Member and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if the target to develop a target for satisfaction for childcare providers by December 2001 was met on time. [47904]

Margaret Hodge: This is a matter for the Office for Standards in Education (OFSTED) and I have asked HM Chief Inspector for Schools, Mike Tomlinson, to write to the hon. Gentleman and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if the target to develop targets for dealing with complaints from childcare providers by December 2001 was met on time. [47903]

Margaret Hodge: This is a matter for the Office for Standards in Education (OFSTED) and I have asked HM Chief Inspector for Schools, Mike Tomlinson, to write to the hon. Gentleman and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of whether the performance target to establish integrated inspections of childcare and nursery education by April 2003 will be met. [47901]

Margaret Hodge: The Office for Standards in Education (OFSTED) has developed an inspection framework for combined care and nusery education inspections which is currently being piloted. The pilot will be evaluated by the end of April 2002 and OFSTED are on course to meet the target of 1,200 inspections per year for those providers which are not schools but offer a service that includes both childcare and Government funded nursery education.

Pre-school Education

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how (1) many three year olds in Lincolnshire are in pre-school education; and how many were in pre-school education in (a) 1997 and (b) 1992; [48164]

(2) how many three year olds are in pre-school education; and how many were attending pre schools in (a) 1997 and (b) 1992. [48165]

Margaret Hodge: The information is not available in the form requested.

The available information on numbers of free early years education places taken up by three year olds in England and Lincolnshire Local Education Authority area is shown in the table.

The information was derived from the table published alongside Statistical Bulletin 11/2001 "Provision For Children Under Five Years Of Age in England—January 2001" on the Department's statistical web site www.dfes.gov.uk/statistics/.

The Department is planning to publish information for January 2002 in May.

Undergraduates

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what proportion of undergraduates failed to complete a course at a higher education institution, broken down by institution and course title, in each year since 1997. [48246]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Nationally, the non-completion rate has remained broadly the same at 17–18 per cent since 1991–92. In 2000, the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) published a table comparing estimates of non-completion rates in member countries. They showed an average of around a third of university students did not complete their course in OECD countries. The UK boasts the second lowest non-completion rate among the OECD countries.

The available information on non-completion rates is contained in "Performance Indicators in Higher Education in the UK" published by the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE), copies of which are available from the House library. The figures cover full-time first degree courses only, and show, for each individual HE institution in the UK, the proportion of entrants who failed to complete their course. Copies of the HEFCE publication are available for students starting courses in 1996–97, 1997–98 and 1998–99. The next edition, covering students starting courses in 1999–2000, is scheduled for publication in autumn 2002.

Local Education Authority Spending

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what checks are made to ensure that local education authorities do not transfer education funds to non-educational activities. [48566]

Mr. Timms: Most of the funding made available to local education authorities by the Government is unhypothecated. In recent years, however, LEAs have been strongly encouraged by the Secretary of State to increase their education budgets annually by an amount at least equal to the increase in their Education Standard Spending Assessments, and the Department monitors the extent to which this target has been achieved. The Education Bill currently before Parliament contains a provision, intended for exceptional use only, empowering my right hon. Friend to set a minimum level for an LEA's schools budget where she considers that the budget proposed by the LEA for a particular year is seriously inadequate.

Specific and special grants from the Government are subject to appropriate audit arrangements, the nature of which varies from grant to grant.

Education Funding (Essex)

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what representations she has received about the allocation of funds for education made by Essex County Council; and if she will make a statement. [48567]

Mr. Timms: My right hon. Friend has received one letter from a school in Essex about the decision by Essex County Council not to increase its education budget by as much as the increase in its Education Standard Spending Assessment. Authorities are strongly encouraged to achieve such an increase and the Department publishes annually a table showing which authorities have not done so.

Skills Base (Coastal Towns)

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what analysis has been carried out by the Learning and Skills Council on how the skills base in seaside and coastal towns compares to the national average. [48594]

Margaret Hodge: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council. I have therefore asked John Harwood, the Council's Chief Executive, to write to my hon. Friend with the information requested and to place a copy of his reply in the Library.

Vacant Teaching Posts

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many vacant deputy head teacher posts existed in (a) primary schools, (b) secondary schools, (c) special schools and (d) all schools, expressed as percentage of the total number of head teachers, for each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority. [47508]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many vacant teacher posts existed in (a) primary schools, (b) secondary schools, (c) special schools and (d) all schools, expressed as percentage of the total number of teachers, in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority; [47507]

(2) how many teacher vacancies in (a) primary schools, (b) secondary schools, (c) special schools and (d) all schools there were in each year since 1997 (i) expressed as a percentage of all teachers broken down by local education authority and (ii) broken down by health authority. [47744]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries.

Child Care

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if the target to set targets for the registration and inspection of childcare providers by December 2001 was met on time. [47902]

Margaret Hodge: This is a matter for the Office for Standards in Education (OFSTED) and I have asked HM Chief Inspector for Schools, Mike Tomlinson, to write to the hon. Gentleman and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the work of the Early Years Directorate in implementing a national system of regulation of childcare. [47899]

Margaret Hodge: The Department receives regular reports about the work of the Early Years Directorate in the Office for Standards in Education (OFSTED). We are aware of the good work that has been done to establish a new national system of childcare regulation, and the considerable progress that has been made during the current transitional period. We understand that OFSTED is on target to achieve the inspection of all childcare providers by the end of March 2003.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how the National Register of Childminders and Day Care Providers can be viewed. [47900]

Margaret Hodge: This is a matter for the Office for Standards in Education (OFSTED) and I have asked HM Chief Inspector for Schools, Mike Tomlinson, to write to the hon. Gentleman and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Nursing Diploma

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many students were recruited into nursing diploma courses in the academic year 2001–02; and what evidence she has collected on the impact of the cost of studying on numbers of nursing students; [43335]

(2) what plans she has to allow nurses on diploma courses access to student loans; [43334]

(3) what assessment has been made of the level of debt incurred by nurses on diploma courses; [43336]

(4) what assessment she has made of the number of nurses on diploma courses who have dependents. [43332]

Mr. Hutton: I have been asked to reply

Consistent with our aim of encouraging wider access to the health professions, a significant (and growing) number of student nurses are mature entrants, single parents and others with dependants.

Approximately 13 per cent of diploma level nursing and midwifery students receive the additional dependants' allowances available to those who have financial responsibility for dependants (including adult dependants). Other sources of information available to the Department, including a recent survey from the Royal College of Nursing, indicate that up to 35 per cent of nursing and midwifery students have children living with them.

NHS Bursaries were introduced in recognition of the demands of health professional training and the need to guarantee the supply of staff to the service. The Government are increasing the number of health professional training places at both diploma and degree level, and already during the current academic year 15,000 students have embarked on diploma level nursing and midwifery programmes. The number of individuals applying for these courses is now running at a buoyant level with the number of applicants having more than doubled since the 1997–98 academic year. There are now on average more than two applicants for every training place.

There are no plans to move diploma level nursing and midwifery students (or any other health professional trainees) to a loan-based system of support.

The Department does not routinely monitor the level of debt amongst diploma level nursing and midwifery students. These students are not reliant on student loans and instead receive a flat-rate basic maintenance grant with no contribution required from the student's income or their family's. In addition, the NHS meets students' liability for a tuition fee contribution (currently £1,075 a year) in full and without means testing. This package of support is, in many circumstances, more favourable that the loan-based system of support available to most other students.

HEALTH

RSV

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost in the last 12 months of treating infants suffering from RSV infection in terms of (a) hospital stays and (b) intensive care unit stays. [41474]

Yvette Cooper: Most children who contract Respiratory Syncytial Virus (RSV) do so by the age of three. In the latest year for which figures are available, 2000–01, there were 182 admissions to NHS hospitals in England for respiratory diseases, with a subsidiary classification of RSV, for children under 4 years. Costs associated with admission vary significantly with severe cases requiring paediatric intensive care, assisted ventilation and specialised interventions. Information on the cost of these admissions is not collected centrally.

Press Officers

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many press officers there were in each health authority in each year since 1997. [41712]

Mr. Hutton: This information has never been collected centrally.

Celebrations

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements his Department has made to celebrate (a) St Patrick's Day, (b) St Georges's Day, (c) St Andrew's Day, and (d) Her Majesty the Queen's Golden Jubilee; and how his Department celebrated St David's Day. [42...]

Ms Blears [holding answer 11 March 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport gave to the hon. Member for South Suffolk (Mr. Yeo) on 11 February, Official Report, columns 58–59W.

My Department is represented on the Steering Group on Eligibility Criteria for The Queen's Golden Jubilee Medal. The Medal will be awarded to serving members of the frontline emergency services including the ambulance service in England. No special arrangements have been made to celebrate St Patrick's Day, St George's Day, St Andrew's Day, or St David's Day.

Hospital-acquired Infection

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to improve the prioritisation of resources for dealing with hospital acquired infection in response to the report of the National Audit Office entitled "The Management and Control of Hospital-Acquired Infection in Acute NHS Trusts in England" (HC 230). [43120]

Ms Blears: Since the publication of the National Audit Office report in February 2000 we have made it clear that tackling healthcare associated infection is a high priority. It was recognised in the National Plan implementation programme, published in November 2000, as a core requirement underpinning other priorities. We have made it clear to the National Health Service that trusts and health authorities should put infection control and basic hygiene at the heart of good management and clinical practice with appropriate resources.

Special Advisers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number and expected cost to his Department of special advisers in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [43278]

Ms Blears: There are currently 2 special advisers.[1]

Under the terms of the Ministerial Code, Cabinet Ministers may each appoint up to two Special Advisers.[1]

[1]Details of costs for Special Advisers within the individual departments are not given, in order to protect the privacy of the small number of individuals concerned.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the public service agreement targets which have been revised and those which have been introduced since the publication of the 2001 departmental report. [43252]

Ms Blears: The following table sets out revised public service agreement targets since the publication of the Department's 2001 Departmental report.

Old target	Revised target	Reason
Our objective is to narrow the health gap in childhood and throughout life between socio-economic groups and between the most deprived areas and the rest of the country.	Our objective is to narrow the health gap in childhood and throughout life between socio-economic groups and between the most deprived areas and the rest of the country.	The original wording of the Department's PSA target concerning health inequalities stated that "Specific national targets will be developed in consultation with external stakeholders and experts early in 2001." The first two of these specific national targets (concerning infant mortality and life expectancy) were shown in the 2001 departmental report:
Starting with children under one year, by 2010 to reduce by at least 10 per cent the gap in mortality between manual groups and the population as a whole.	Starting with children under one year, by 2010 to reduce by at least 10 per cent the gap in mortality between manual groups and the population as a whole.	A third specific national target (concerning teenage pregnancy) has now been developed and will be shown in the next departmental report (due Spring 2002).
Starting with health authorities, by 2010 to reduce by at least 10 per cent the gap between the quintile of areas with the lowest life expectancy at birth and the population as a whole.	Starting with health authorities, by 2010 to reduce by at least 10 per cent the gap between the quintile of areas with the lowest life expectancy at birth and the population as a whole.
	By achieving agreed local conception reduction targets, to reduce the national under 18 conception rate by 15 per cent by 2004 and 50 per cent by 2010, while reducing the level of inequality in rates between the worst fifth of wards and the average by at least a quarter.

Prevention of Admission Scheme

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding allocation was provided to the prevention of admission scheme in the last five years by (a) region and (b) local authority; how many people were assisted as part of the scheme; and how many people were subsequently admitted to hospital after receiving care on the scheme. [42600]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 13 March 2002]: The NHS Plan announced an extra £900 million annually by 2003–04 for new intermediate care and related services to promote independence and improve quality of care for older people. Further details are in HSC 2001–01, LAC (2001) 01, published in January 2001 [which is in the Library of the House].

The NHS funding earmarked for intermediate care which commenced in 2000–01 forms part of unified allocations to health authorities. Unified allocations are based on a weighted capitation formula that determines every health authority's fair share of available resources. The Government's policy is not to hypothecate resources made available to councils unless it is essential to do so. Deployment of resources made available through the Standard Spending Assessment remains a decision for councils to make in the light of local circumstances.

The results of the survey of NHS intermediate care in England carried out last Summer show that, by the end of this year there will be, compared to the baseline of 1999–2000, around an additional 126,000 people in receipt of intermediate care services. The full results of the survey, giving data by Region and by health authority, are in the Library. Information on the number of people admitted to hospital after receiving intermediate care is not available.

Plasticised Cadavers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what implications there are for public health arising from the exhibition of plasticised cadavers; and if he will make a statement. [43234]

Yvette Cooper: The representatives of Professor von Hagens have been informed that his proposed exhibition would require a licence under the Anatomy Act. Any public health considerations would be addressed when determining whether to grant a licence.

Speech and Language Therapists

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacancies there were for speech and language therapists in each English primary care group trust at the latest date for which figures are available. [43027]

Mr. Hutton: Between 1997 and 2001 the number of speech and language therapists employed in the NHS increased by 810 (17 per cent).

At 31 September 2000 only one of the seventeen Primary Care Trusts (South Peterborough PCT) then existing employed speech and language therapists. The national vacancy rate and information for South Peterborough Primary Care Trust is in the table below.

Notes:
1. Three month vacancies are vacancies as at 31 March 2001 which trusts are actively trying to fill, which had lasted for three months or more (whole time equivalents)
2. Three month vacancy rates are three month vacancies expressed as a percentage of three month vacancies plus staff in post from the September 2000 non-medical workforce census (whole time equivalent)
3. At 3 September 2000 Non-medical workforce census, 17 PCTs were in existence, of which only one, 4LA06, had Speech Language Therapy staff. As SIP figures from the census are required for the calculation of vacancy rates, no rates are available for the PCTs formed on 1 October 2000.
4. Data will be available from the March 2002 Vacancy survey in July 2002.
5. Numbers are rounded to the nearest ten
6. Percentages rounded to one decimal place

Abortion

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action his Department has taken in response to the audit of abortion services in 1999 by the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists; and if he will make a statement. [43329]

Yvette Cooper: The audit of abortion services funded by the Department provided valuable baseline data on abortion services prior to the publication of the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists' (RCOG) Evidence Based Guideline The Care of Women Requesting Induced Abortion.

The audit found good awareness of and compliance with the RCOG guidelines available at the time and the report informed the development of the our sexual health and HIV strategy, which was issued for consultation in July 2001. The strategy recommends that services should be developed in line with the Royal College's guidelines ensuring that women meeting the legal requirements for an abortion are referred without delay. In addition, we have set a target in the strategy that from 2005, commissioners should ensure that women who meet the legal requirements have access to an abortion within 3 weeks of their first appointment with their general practioner or other referring doctor.

An action plan setting out how the strategy will be implemented will be published in the spring. The audit data will help us monitor progress in improving services.

Suicide

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the research commissioned by him in the last five years on (a) suicide, (b) assisted suicide and (c) voluntary euthanasia, with special reference to practice in European jurisdictions. [43321]

Ms Blears: The Department commissioned a research project on suicide in high risk occupational groups, conducted by Professor Keith Hawton and colleagues at the centre for suicide research, University of Oxford. The project was funded over the period 1 December 1993 to 30 June 2000.

In addition, the Department funds the national confidential inquiry into suicides and homicides by people with mental illness to ensure that everyone involved with mental health services learns and implements lessons from the factors associated with serious incidents. The inquiry, led by Professor Louis Appleby, is crucial to gaining a better understanding of the circumstances surrounding homicides and suicides committed by people with mental illness.

Safety First, the 5 year report on suicide and homicide by psychiatric patients, builds on Professor Appleby's earlier report "Safer Services" published in 1999. The Department is committed to taking necessary action in response to the findings of the Inquiry. We have already published the national service framework for mental health and national plan which specifically address a number of the recommendations out lined in the earlier report. The key findings and further recommendations outlined in Safety First will be given full consideration and will help to inform the national suicide prevention strategy that we are currently developing.

In addition, the Department has funded:

A trial of social work interventions for adolescents who have attempted suicide.

A pilot study of mental health crisis cards.

Factors underlying and maintaining nurses' positive therapeutic attitudes to patients with severe personality disorder.

A study "Does dialectical behaviour therapy (DBT) reduce deliberate self-harm in female patients with borderline personality disorder?"

In addition the NHS funds the following projects:

Suicides and open verdicts on the Railway Network

An investigation into recent temporal trends and geographic patterns of suicide.

Lay understandings of suicide, its aetiology and preventibility: a qualitative analysis of interviews with bereaved relatives.

A case control study of suicide among persons not known to mental health services.

The role of primary care in suicide prevention

Psychosocial characteristics of attempted suicide patients in Oxford

Evaluation of the effects of legislation about the availability of paracetamol and asprin on suicide and attempted suicide

A study to determine the psychological distress experienced by parents bereaved by suicide or by other uncertain causes.

There are currently no directly funded research projects, funded by the Department into assisted suicide or voluntary euthanasia.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital bed places have been created in (a) England and (b) Coventry since 1997. [43526]

Mr. Hutton: Annual information on the average daily number of available and occupied beds for England, regional office areas and each NHS trust is on the Department of Health web site www.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity.

NHS Hospitals

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many applications to register parts of NHS hospitals as town or village greens there have been; when these applications were made; how many applications were successful; how many have been refused by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [43823]

Ms Blears: Applications for the registration of land as a town or village green are made to the appropriate registration authority who would advise Department officials, or the National Health Service trust owner if appropriate, about the application. The Department is aware of seven applications made between 1992 and 2000, three of which were refused by the registration authority concerned, two have been successful and two are outstanding.

These applications are handled by the relevant registration authority. They make the decisions whether they are successful or not.

Care Resources

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what increased resources have been spent in the last year on (a) primary care and (b) secondary care in (i) each English health authority and (ii) England. [43609]

Mr. Hutton: The increase in primary care and secondary care expenditure for each English health authority and for England, between 1999–2000 and 2000–2001, is shown in the table.

Notes:

1. In many health authorities there are factors which distort the expenditure. These include:

the health authority acting in a lead capacity to commission healthcare on behalf of other health bodies;

asset revaluations in NHS Trusts being funded through health authorities;

some double counting of expenditure between health authorities and primary care trusts within the health authority area; and the calculation is not precise as relevant expenditure in primary care trusts is not analysed completely into the purchase of primary and secondary healthcare. Prescribing services expenditure has been added in to primary health care expenditure but there may be other elements of expenditure which cannot be identified which should be incorporated within the answer.

Expenditure cannot therefore be reliably compared between health authorities.

Allocations provide a much more reliable measure to identify differences between funding of health authorities.

2. Source: Health authority audited summarisation forms 1999–2000 and 2000–2001 Primary care trust audited summarisation schedules 2000–2001

3. Expenditure is taken from health authority and primary care trust summarisation forms which are prepared on a resource basis and therefore differ from cash allocations in the year. The expenditure is the total spent on primary and secondary healthcare by the health authority and by the primary care trusts within each health authority area. The majority of General Dental Services expenditure is not included in the health authority or primary care trust accounts and is separately accounted for by the Dental Practice Board. An element of expenditure on pharmaceutical services is accounted for by the Prescription Pricing Authority and not by health authorities.

4. Health authorities and primary care trusts should account for their expenditure on a gross basis. This results in an element of double counting where one body acts as the main commissioner and is then reimbursed by other bodies. The effect of this double counting within the answer cannot be identified.

5. Major increases in expenditure and reductions in individual cases can be explained as follows:

The increase in Dorset health authority is due to the majority of expenditure being double counted between the health authority and primary care trusts (£38,408,000 primary, £133,761,000 secondary).

The £87,121,000 increase in secondary care expenditure in Sefton health authority is due mainly to an extra £63million included in its accounts as it was the lead body in the region for mental health secure commissioning in 2000–01.

The reduction in secondary care in Herefordshire is caused by Herefordshire PCT taking over the commissioning of community health services in 2000–01 from the health authority and netting off the expenditure against income, resulting in a £14,484,000 apparent reduction in 2000–01.

The apparent decrease in secondary care expenditure in Merton, Sutton & Wandsworth health authority of £20,754,000 is caused by the treatment of asset revaluations in NHS trusts. The reduction is solely a result of accounting practice agreed with their auditors.

Decreases in secondary care expenditure in Brent and Harrow, East Sussex, Brighton and Hove, Hillingdon, South Humber and West Kent health authorities are also caused by the treatment of asset revaluations in NHS trusts.

Decreases in primary care expenditure in Northumberland and Shropshire health authorities in principally due to lower drug costs in 2000–01.

Refugee Doctors Steering Group

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding has been disbursed by the refugee doctors steering group since its establishment; and how much of its funds are still to be disbursed. [43417]

Mr. Hutton: The refugee health professionals' steering group has disbursed all £500,000 allocated for the year 2001–2. This has been given to projects targeting all health professionals, not just doctors. The funded projects provide services to help refugee health professionals prepare to take up work in the UK. A further £500,000 has been provided for 2002–03 and bids will be invited in April.

New Status Health Authorities

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what role PCTs will play in the new status health authorities. [43397]

Mr. Hutton: From 1 April 2002, primary care trusts have taken on the majority of functions previously undertaken by health authorities. Subject to progress with the NHS Reform and Health Care Professions Bill, the new health authorities that were established on 1 April 2002 will be re-designated as strategic health authorities, from around October 2002, with further functions devolved at that stage to primary care trusts.

The new health authorities have assumed some of the functions previously exercised by NHS Regional Offices. They are responsible for creating a strategic framework for the delivery of the NHS Plan locally; securing annual performance agreements with, and performance managing, local NHS bodies, including primary care trusts and NHS Trusts; and building capacity and supporting performance improvement locally.

Primary care trusts are responsible for improving the health and well-being of the community, developing primary care, securing the provision of high quality services and integrating health and social care locally. Subject to legislation, primary care trusts will be given new powers and control over resources to shape and secure the provision of services across hospital, community and primary services and from the whole range of possible providers in public, private and voluntary sectors.

Primary care trusts will also be responsible for the delivery of the public health service at a local level. All primary care trusts will have a Director of Public Health appointed to their Boards who will lead a multi-disciplinary public health team. The style and approach of public health at a primary care trust level will be an operational one with a focus on community engagement and empowering frontline clinicians.

Clinicians (Overspends)

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the level of unnecessary overspends by individual clinicians; and what measures are in place to reduce them. [44013]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Social Care Workers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who is responsible for outlining the new code of practice for the National Register of Social Care Workers; and if he will make a statement. [44636]

Jacqui Smith: The general social care council (GSCC) is required, under section 62 of the Care Standards Act 2000, to publish codes setting down standards of conduct and practice for social care workers and their employers. The GSCC issued draft codes for consultation on 9 January 2002.

General Practitioners

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many whole-time-equivalent general practitioners per 100,000 population there were in (a) 1997, (b) 1998 and (c) 2001. [44276]

Mr. Hutton: The number of whole-time equivalent general practitioners (GPs) excluding GP retainers and GP registrars (the NHS Plan group) per 100,000 population were (a) 53.5 in 1997, (b) 53.5 in 1998, and (c) 53.0 in 2001.

The total number of whole-time equivalent general practitioners (excluding GP Retainers) per 100,000 population for these years were (a) 56.1 in 1997, (b) 56.3 in 1998, and (c) 56.6 in 2001.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average annual increase of whole time equivalent general practitioners was in percentage terms in England in each year since 1996, including the latest year for which figures are available. [45717]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 25 March 2002]: Information is shown in the table, a copy of which is in the Library. Between 1996 and 2001 there was an average annual increase of whole time equivalent general practitioner's (excluding GP Retainers) of 0.6 per cent and an average annual increase of whole time equivalent unrestricted principals and equivalents (UPEs) of 0.3 per cent.

Domiciliary Oxygen Therapy

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish the consultation document on the Review of Domiciliary Oxygen Services. [44303]

Ms Blears: We expect to consider possible options arising from the review of the domiciliary oxygen service shortly.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the different forms of domiciliary oxygen therapy available on the NHS drugs tariff for prescription to people who are on longterm oxygen therapy. [44300]

Ms Blears: Long term oxygen therapy should, wherever possible, be provided by an oxygen concentrator installed in the patient's home. Gaseous oxygen in cylinders is also available, but is primarily intended for patients needing intermittent therapy.

Cardiac Services

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals used by the NHS for cardiac services meet the 400 CABGs standard identified by the NSF for coronary heart disease; and if he will list those that do not. [44284]

Yvette Cooper: According to Hospital Episode Statistics for 2000–1, 28 National Health Service (NHS) Trusts meet the national service framework standard. One trust, the Royal Free Hampstead Hospitals NHS Trust, has fewer than 400 coronary artery bypass graft (CABG) procedures recorded. However, that trust stopped performing CABGs early in the year. Other trusts do not carry out CABGs.

Figures for operations carried out by hospitals in the independent sector used by the NHS are not collected centrally at the present time.

Hepatitis B Vaccines

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the criteria to be met for people to receive Hepatitis B vaccines free of charge. [44657]

Yvette Cooper: Hepatitis B immunisation is provided free of charge, if in a general practitioner's clinical opinion, the procedure is medically necessary. Some groups typically at risk from infection are health care workers, medical students, injecting drug misusers, haemophiliacs and patients with chronic renal failure.

Criminal Damage

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost has been of criminal damage to his Department's buildings in each of the last four years. [44846]

Ms Blears: The recorded costs of repair to the Department's buildings attributable to criminal damage within the last four financial years are:

1997–98	£3,698
1998–99	£5,908
1999–00	£1,650
2000–01	£3,289

Care Homes

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) residential and (b) nursing care homes and their beds there were in the borough of Bournemouth from 1997 to 2001. [45952]

Jacqui Smith: Information on the total number of residential care homes and places in Bournemouth for the years 1997 to 2001 is shown in Table 1. Information on the number of nursing homes and places is collected by health authority only. Figures for Dorset Health Authority are in Table 2.

Table 1: Residential care homes and places Bournemouth at 31 March 1997 to 2001

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to publish the guidance on the decision to admit someone to a care home; and if he will make a statement. [41604]

Jacqui Smith: It is anticipated that guidance on eligibility criteria for adult social care will be published shortly.

Hospitals (Shropshire)

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice NHS bodies in Shropshire have received about (a) the urgency and (b) the scope of a merger between hospital trusts in the county. [45730]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 25 March 2002]: I am not aware that NHS bodies in Shropshire received advice concerning any urgent need to prepare an Expression of Interest document to put before the Secretary of State.

The full scope of the proposal cannot be determined at this early stage, although all concerned parties are to be engaged whilst preparing the Expression of Interest document.

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice was sought by or given to NHS bodies in Shropshire about the timing of the launch of its consultation on a prospective expression of interest in the merger of hospital trusts in the county in relation to the abolition of the local health authority and the establishment of primary care trusts. [45731]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The Princess Royal Hospital NHS Trust and the Royal Shrewsbury Hospital NHS Trust made a decision that preparing the Expression of Interest document should wait until the uncertainty around the future roles of the NHS bodies in Shropshire were resolved to ensure their full involvement in the process.

I understand that the roles have been made clear, and the new Strategic Health Authority and Primary Care Trusts although physically not in place when the Trusts made their intentions public, had been included in discussions affecting the future of healthcare services within the locality.

Audiologists

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many audiologists are employed in the NHS; and how many vacancies there are. [45979]

Mr. Hutton: Workforce and vacancy information collected annually by the Department does not identify audiologists. The Department is working with the professional bodies and National Health Service employers to develop an accurate picture of the entire healthcare scientist workforce.

Hospital Construction

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new hospitals construction started in 2001–02. [46118]

Mr. Hutton: The following hospital schemes with a capital value of £10 million or greater began construction in 2001–02.

NHS Trust	Capital Cost £m	Start on site date	Funding method
Thames Gateway NHS Trust	13.5	May 2001	Public capital

Adoption

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many children were placed for adoption by each local authority with (a) a married couple and (b) a single person in each of the last three years; [46409]

(2) how many applications for adoption were made to each local authority by (a) a married couple and (b) a single person in each of the last three years. [46408]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Information on the total number of adoption orders granted to married couples and single people in England in each of the last three years is shown in the table. The figures include domestic, inter-country and stepparent adoptions and adopters assessed through local authorities and voluntary adoption agencies.

Year ending 31 December	Total number of adoption orders	Number of adoption orders to married couples	Number of adoption orders to single people

Nurses

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of the Key Worker Scheme on recruitment and retention of nursing staff in the South East. [46434]

Ms Blears: The Starter Home Initiative scheme, announced on 6 September 2001, is still in its early stages and will eventually enable around 5,000 nurses and other essential health workers to be assisted in buying homes.

Information on the number of key workers who have purchased homes in the South East under the Starter Home Initiative during the financial year 2001–2002 will be available towards the end of April 2002.

It is proposed that the DTLR will conduct an evaluation of the scheme later this year, or early in 2003.

Cancer Plan

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average wait was for urgent GP referral to treatment for (a) children's cancers, (b) testicular cancers, (c) acute leukaemia, (d) breast cancers and (e) all cancers at the latest date for which figures are available. [45783]

Yvette Cooper: We do not currently hold data on waiting times from urgent general practitioner (GP) referral to treatment for all cancer patients. Standards of a maximum wait of one month from diagnosis to first treatment for breast cancer and one month from urgent GP referral to treatment for children's and testicular cancers and acute leukaemia came into effect at the end of December 2001. Central monitoring of these standards began on 1 January 2002 and data will be published on a quarterly basis. Data collection on waiting times to treatment for other tumour types will be introduced as we rollout the Cancer Plan waiting times targets.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress he has made in developing services to improve genetic risk assessment for cancer under the Cancer Plan. [45775]

Yvette Cooper: In April 2001, the Secretary of State announced a £30 million package of investment in genetic services pver the next three years. Part of this money has been allocated to boost capacity in counselling and testing genetic services around the regions.

The National Institute for Clinical Excellent (NICE) are developing a clinical guideline on the classification of risk in, and management of, patients presenting with a familial risk of breast cancer.

The National Screening Committee (NSC) organised three workshops in autumn 2000 to investigate population genetic screening for colorectal cancer, breast and ovarian cancer and heritable thrombophilia. The outcomes of the workshops and the subsequent advice of the NSC was that at present there was no case for population screening for any of these late onset genetic diseases, however this will be kept under review.

Work on common datasets is being developed as part of the development of the National Cancer Dataset.

Dentists

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists worked in the UK in 2001; and what was the comparable figure for 1997. [46180]

Ms Blears: The number of NHS dentists working in the UK is shown in the table for 30 September in the years 1997 and 2001 for each NHS dental service.

These figures are on a headcount basis rather than whole time equivalent (wte) and take no account of part-time working. Dentists working in more than one dental service are included in each service apart from dentists working in both PDS and GDS who are counted in the GDS only.

Dentists working solely in private dentistry are not covered in these figures.

Number of dentists working at 30 September in 1997 and 2001 United Kingdom

30 September	General Dental Service[1]	Salaried service of GDS	Personal Dental Service[2]	Community Dental Service	Hospital Dental Service	Total
1997	20,270	220		1,850	2,772	25,114
2001	22,220	130	467	1,832[3]	2,783[3]	27,432

Notes:
1. The General Dental Service (GDS) cover principals on a HA list, assistants and vocational dental practitioners.
2. The Personal Dental Service (PDS) began in October 1998. The data covers dentists working in the PDS who are not working in the GDS.
3. For Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, September 2000 figures are used.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists in each health authority are practising in the NHS. [46179]

Ms Blears: The number of NHS dentists working in England at 30 September 2001 is shown in the table for each Health Authority for each NHS dental service.

These figures are on a headcount basis rather than whole time equivalent (wte) and take no account of part-time working. Dentists working in more than one dental service are included in each service apart from dentists working in both PDS and GDS who are counted in the GDS only.

Cystic Fibrosis

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the Department has spent on research into cystic fibrosis since 1997; and which organisations the Government have met to discuss raising awareness of the disease. [46167]

Jacqui Smith: The Department funds research to support policy and the delivery of effective practice in health and social care. Since 1997 the Department's expenditure on directly commissioned research projects relating to cystic fibrosis is approximately £394 thousand.

In addition to specific projects, the Department also provides support funding for research commissioned by charities and the research councils that takes place in the National Health Service. Management of much of the research supported by NHS research and development funding is devolved and expenditure at project level is not held centrally by the Department but the total investment is considerably greater than just the spend on directly commissioned projects.

The Medical Research Council (MRC) is the main Government agency for research into the causes of and treatments for disease and receives its funding via the Department of Trade and Industry. The MRC has spent an estimated £8.4 million on cystic fibrosis research since 1997.

The Government met with the Cystic Fibrosis Trust in 2001. Discussions included raising awareness of the disease.

Children at Risk

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children classified as at risk have been killed in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [46440]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not currently collected centrally. However, we are developing a comprehensive database of all serious case reviews, carried out in accordance with Chapter 8 of Working Together to Safeguard Children—the Government's guide to inter-agency working to safeguard and promote the welfare of children, to improve the national recording of serious incidents, including deaths and serious injuries. This will enable us to identify the numbers and types of a range of serious cases, where the children concerned are known to social services Departments.

Correspondence

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the letter of 5 December 2001 from the hon. Member for Fareham, concerning his constituent Mr. Fred Johnson. [45807]

Yvette Cooper: A reply was sent to the hon. Member on 25 March.

Deep Vein Thrombosis

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the link between air travel and deep vein thrombosis. [47043]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: We take the health of aircraft passengers and aircrew members very seriously. Although further research needs to be carried out into the links between deep vein thrombosis (DVT) and long distance travel, blood clots can occur when people remain immobile and seated for long periods of time and therefore could occur in a range of travel situations.

On 30 November 2001 the Department issued information and advice to the airlines and the public about minimising the risk of DVT during long journeys. This included practical advice for air passengers on long haul flights. It also identified certain groups who may be at a higher risk of DVT and advised them to seek medical advice before travelling and described simple in-seat exercises that should be recommended to all air passengers.

To maximise access for the public to this information and advice it is available through health services, the internet, the airlines and NHS Direct and will be kept under review in the light of new research information.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of whether the PSA target to increase the proportion of departmental business undertaken electronically to 25 per cent by 2002 will be met. [47363]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Information about progress on PSA targets will be published in the Department's 2002 Departmental Report.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of whether the PSA target for the payment of all undisputed invoices within 30 days or the agreed contractual terms will be met. [47280]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Information about progress on PSA targets will be published in the Department's 2002 Departmental Report.

National Institute for Clinical Excellence

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the independence of NICE. [46828]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: It has always been our intention that the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) should have a large measure of independence from Government and from other interests while remaining visibly a part of the National Health Service. In particular, NICE decides on its own processes for developing its guidance. We have announced in our recently published response to the Kennedy report, that we intend to further strengthen NICE's independence. We will bring forward measures to remove the requirement for approval from the Secretary of State for Health and the National Assembly for Wales for disseminating NICE guidance and for appointments to NICE committees.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the funding of NICE. [46738]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Department has allocated £14.8 million for the National Institute for Clinical Excellence in 2002–2003.

Entertainment Costs

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list for each of the last five years the total amount of money spent by Ministers in his Department on food, alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks for entertainment purposes; [47209]

(2) how much was spent by departmental special advisers on food, alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks for entertainment purposes in each of the last five years. [46845]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Expenditure arises on hospitality and entertainment only in the context of promoting the Department's business objectives. Departmental information systems do not classify expenditure by Ministers, special advisers or other employment category, nor do information systems provide a detailed breakdown of food and drink.

In the last five years the total amount spent by the Department on hospitality has been as follows:

1997–98	£90,883
1998–99	£67,953
1999–00	£50,114
2000–01	£93,091
2001–02	£80,077 to 31 December 2001

To identify expenditure by Ministers or special advisers on food, alcohol and non-alcoholic drinks would involve disproportionate cost.

Hospices

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what meetings he and his Ministers have had with representatives of hospices providing palliative care to children since 7 June 2001. [47023]

Yvette Cooper: Last month I was pleased to meet the management and supporters of the Richard House Children's Hospice in London, on the occasion of the launch of the New Opportunities Fund application process for funding palliative care projects in support of both children and adults. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State previously visited this hospice for its official opening. Last November my noble Friend Lord Hunt met the representatives of two other children's hospices.

Foreign Nurses (English Tests)

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will support moves by the UKCC to introduce English tests for foreign nursing recruits. [47871]

Mr. Hutton: The UKCC was replaced on 1 April by the Nursing and Midwifery Council. It will be for the new Council to consult widely on how it proposes to exercise its functions, which include assessing the knowledge of English of overseas-qualified practitioners, other than nationals of European Economic Area States. In the meantime it will inherit existing policies and procedures, which already provide for such assessments.

Mental Health

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the use of sport in the treatment of depressive illness. [47434]

Jacqui Smith: No formal assessment has been made of the use of sport in the treatment of depressive illness. However, regular physical activity reduces the risk of depression and has positive benefits for mental health including reduced anxiety, enhanced mood and self esteem.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to ensure that health and social workers dealing with children and adolescents are trained to recognise mental health problems. [47437]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The national service framework for children, which includes child and adolescent mental health and psychological well being, will consider the training and competencies of health and social care workers and the early recognition of mental health problems.

In September 2003 we are replacing the diploma in social work with a three-year degree level qualification. The qualification will be based on a prescribed curriculum, which will include key areas which students must undertake as part of their learning and assessment. One of these will be human growth and development, which will incorporate mental health matters.

Asthma

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the (a) adult population and (b) population under 16 use (i) puffer inhalers and (ii) spacer inhalers in the treatment of asthma. [47466]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Broomfield Hospital, Essex

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) nurse and (b) consultant vacancies there are at Broomfield Hospital, Essex at the latest available date. [46709]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 10 April]: Broomfield Hospital is a hospital within Mid Essex Hospital Services NHS Trust. Data is collected at Trust level only.

Mid Essex Hospital Services NHS Trust	2.1 per cent	2	100	98	2.6 per cent	21	776	1,005

Notes:
1. Three month vacancies are vacancies as at 31 March 2001 which trusts are actively trying to fill, which had lasted for three months or more (whole time equivalents)
2. Three month vacancy rates are three month vacancies expressed as a percentage of three month vacancies plus staff in post from the September 2000 medical & dental and non medical workforce censuses (whole time equivalents)
3. Vacancy and staff in post numbers are rounded to the nearest ten
4. Percentages are rounded to one decimal place
5. * = figures based on less than ten posts
6. Totals may not equal sum of component parts due to rounding
7. HA figures are based on Trusts, and do not necessarily reflect the geographical provision of healthcare
8. Figures may not match previously published data due to
(i) a different method of rounding used on the staff in post data ii) NHS Trusts "mapped" into different
(ii) NHS Trusts "mapped" into different HA Areas/Regions to be consistents with Vacancies data (as at 31 March 2001)

Tobacco Advertising And Promotion Bill

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to notify the Tobacco Advertising and Promotion Bill to the European Commission as a technical regulation under Directive 98/34/EC. [50050]

Yvette Cooper: We notified the Bill on 28 March 2002. The notification is without prejudice to the Government's view that the Bill does not contain any technical regulations.

Drug-resistant Micro-organisms

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what collections of drug resistant micro organisms are known to the Health Protection Agency; and what steps are being taken to maintain and support such collections. [45751]

Yvette Cooper: Currently, the National Collection of Type Cultures (NCTC) and National Collection of Pathogenic Fungi (NCPF), are comprehensive collections of pathogenic micro-organisms, including strains known to be drug resistant. Both NCTC and NCPF are maintained by the Public Health Laboratory Service in the NCTC laboratory and supported by the funding provided to the Public Health Laboratory Service by the Department of Health and the Welsh Assembly Government.

The Chief Medical Officer's strategy, Getting Ahead of the Curve, proposes the creation of a Health Protection Agency which will take over functions currently performed by the PHLS and other bodies. We aim to establish the new agency by 1 April 2003.

Health Services (Barnet)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of waiting times at (a) Barnet and (b) Northwick Park Hospitals' accident and emergency departments; and if he will make a statement. [45820]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 25 March 2002]: Waiting times at Barnet and Chase Farm NHS Trusts and North West London Hospitals NHS Trust are monitored via the NHS regional office. Information on numbers of patients waiting over 2 hours, between 2–4 hours and over 4 hours for admission is published every quarter. Latest information is available via www.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity

Scoliosis

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations for Scoliosis correction were carried out by the NHS in each of the last three years; and what plans he has to increase this number. [45872]

Ms Blears: The numbers of Finished Consultant Episodes for patients with a primary diagnosis of scoliosis* who underwent a procedure in the National Health Service for each of the last three years are outlined in shown in the table. It is for health authorities in partnership with primary care groups/trusts and other local stakeholders to decide what services to provide for their populations including those who require operations for scoliosis. There are no plans to introduce national targets specifically for this service.

Retirement Health Checks

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) women and (b) men pensioners in 2000–01 broken down by regional health authority completed a free health check on retirement through the pilot scheme announced in the NHS Plan; and if he will make a statement. [46282]

Yvette Cooper: None. The first pre retirement health check pilots began in 2001–2. They are focused on the health needs of people who have not yet retired, in the 50–65 age group, many still in active employment, although some retired people are also involved in them.

NHS Publications

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what publications were published by NHSplus in 2000–01; how many of each publication were printed and distributed; and what the cost was of each publication. [46347]

Yvette Cooper: There were no publications by NHS Plus in 2000–01. (NHS Plus was launched in November 2001. In 2001–2 its only publication was a "flyer" leaflet, "Bringing Good Health To Your Business", the total cost of which was £3,335 for 15,000 leaflets. Generally, NHS Plus provides information via its website (www.nhsplus.nhs.uk).

Doctors (Suspensions)

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors were on suspension at the most recent date for which figures are available. [45729]

Mr. Hutton: As at 31 December 2001, the latest date for which figures are available, 29 hospital and community medical and dental staff had been suspended for more than six months.

NHS Procurement

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department ensured (a) that all NHS trusts set a target of at least three per cent in 2000–01 for procurement savings and (b) that delivery of these savings was monitored. [45727]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 25 March 2002]: All National Health Service trusts were set a target of 3 per cent purchasing savings by the Department of Health for the year 2000–01.

These savings were monitored by National Health Service trusts and by Department of Health regional offices.

NHS Finance

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the transfer of a liability to a PCT from a health authority or trust has an impact on the level of resources available to that PCT for spending on patient care; and if he will make a statement. [45851]

Mr. Hutton: The level of resources available to primary care trusts for spending on patient care in year will be unaffected by the transfer of assets and liabilities.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much money by way of liabilities each PCT (a) has taken responsibility for and (b) is expected to take responsibility for; and from whom the responsibility is transferred; [45844]

(2) if he will list the liabilities by value of trusts and health authorities which (a) have been and (b) are to be transferred to PCTs. [45843]

Mr. Hutton: The transfer of liabilities from health authorities and National Health Service trusts to primary care trusts in 2000–2001 is shown in the table. Information on liabilities transferring for the 2001–02 financial year will be available until the autumn.

Health authority audited summarisation forms 2000–01
PCT audited summarisation schedules 2000–01
The table shows only liabilities of over £150,000.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the amount was of NHS trust deficits in each trust in each of the last five years; [45850]

(2) how many NHS trusts have an in-year deficit position; and what is the deficit. [45849]

Mr. Hutton: Information relating to National Health Service trust deficits for the financial years 1996–7 to 2000–01 has been placed in the Library. Changes (in line with best accounting practice) in the accounting and financial reporting arrangements for NHS trusts mean that the figures provided for 1996–97 are not directly comparable with 1997–98 or thereafter.

We are in discussions with NHS trusts, health authorities and primary care trusts about managing their end-of-year positions. The information requested for the current year will be available when the annual audited accounts are completed and published.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the underlying deficits are (a) in each NHS trust and/or body and (b) in England. [45848]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested for National Health Service trusts has been placed in the Library. A change in the format of the annual accounts from 2000–01 means health authorities are no longer required to account on an income and expenditure basis.

Cancer Treatment

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his assessment is of the likelihood of his new target for treatment of urgent cancers being met in Oxfordshire in 2002–03. [45931]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The Oxfordshire health economy recognises the importance of the cancer targets in 2002–03 and will invest extra resources this year to support their achievement of targets in this area. In support of this, the Four Counties Cancer Network is working to improve cancer services to deliver better quality services to patients.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Child Support Agency

3. Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the Child Support Agency's achievement against performance targets in the last five years. [45013]

Mr. Darling: Over the years 1997 to 2001 taken together, the Child Support Agency has met the majority of its targets. It is on course to meet all of its targets this year.

Final Salary Pension Schemes

16. Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to encourage companies to retain existing final salaries pension schemes and to make them available to new employees; and if he will make a statement. [45027]

Mr. McCartney: We welcome the fact that many employers continue to provide occupational pensions on a voluntary basis to their employees. Final salary and money purchase schemes can both provide good incomes in retirement as long as sufficient contributions are made. When deciding what type of scheme to offer, an employer must take into account the costs of doing so and the long-term impact on their business. The Government want to create an environment in which employers can continue to provide occupational pension schemes. We want to remove unnecessary burdens on schemes. As part of this we have announced the replacement of the Minimum Funding Requirement. We have already introduced interim changes to the MFR designed to enable it to operate more effectively. We have commissioned Alan Pickering to report in summer 2002 on ways to simplify the overall burden of regulation on schemes and will be publishing proposals later this year.

Housing Benefit

19. Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on his plans to reform the housing benefit system. [45030]

Malcolm Wicks: We have a comprehensive long-term strategy for reforming housing benefit and dealing with the legacy of neglect we have inherited.

Work is already well under way to radically improve HB administration and bear down on fraud. Many of the key measures set out in our response to consultation on the Housing Green Paper have already been implemented. For example, we have launched comprehensive new performance standards, reformed the extended payments scheme to provide better work incentives, reformed the single room rent, and are making housing benefit easier to administer.

These form a firm foundation on which we can build more fundamental reform in the longer term.

New Deal

20. Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of new deal leavers have entered sustained unsubsidised jobs. [45031]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Up to January 2002, 56 per cent. of young people leaving the new deal for known destinations entered sustained, unsubsidised jobs. In addition, research shows that an equivalent proportion of those leaving for unknown destinations also move into work.

31. Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the New Deal for Lone Parents. [45045]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The New Deal for Lone Parents is a long-term investment, making a real difference to the lives of lone parents and their children. Over 300,000 lone parents have benefited from the help and support offered through the new deal, and over 130,000 of these have found work.

Stakeholder Pensions

21. Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many of the Government's target group have taken out stakeholder pensions. [45032]

Mr. McCartney: Comprehensive information is not yet available (and will not be until the end of the current tax year). However, early figures from the Association of British Insurers (ABI), based on a limited sample of information from pension providers, show that in cases where earnings of purchasers are known to providers, then the majority of them have earnings of between £10,000 and £30,000 a year. ABI figures also show that 320,000 employers have designated a stakeholder pension scheme for their workforces as at the end of February 2002; representing a compliance rate of over 85 per cent., and over 750,000 people have bought a stakeholder pension.

Pensioner Poverty

22. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the number of pensioners living in poverty in (a) 1997 and (b) at the latest date for which figures are available. [45033]

Mr. McCartney: Poverty and social exclusion are complex concepts, affecting many aspects of people's lives; including their living standards, health, housing and quality of environment. The third "Opportunity for all" report sets out the Governments strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and presents the latest information on the indicators used to monitor progress against this strategy.

The Government's first priority was to address the immediate problem of pensioner poverty today. That is why we introduced the Minimum Income Guarantee (MIG) in April 1999 to provide money for the poorest pensioners as quickly as possible. 2,200 pensioners in the Cotswold constituency are receiving the MIG and over 2 million pensioners nationally benefit from the MIG.

This Government has also introduced measures to ensure that all pensioners share in rising prosperity. From this April the basic state pension has risen by £3 a week for single pensioners and £4.80 for couples above inflation increases last year.

This is in addition to the introduction of winter fuel payments, currently £200, made to over 11 million pensioners and free TV licences for the over 75s which benefit some 3 million pensioners.

From 2003 the pension credit will reward those who have worked hard and saved hard.

We are also committed to tackling the longer term issues by helping people build up good second pensions. To this end we have introduced stakeholder pensions and improved the state earnings related pension scheme through the introduction of the state second pension. This will boost the additional state pension entitlement of £14 million low and moderate earners. Additionally, for the first time, 3 million carers and 2 million people whose working lives are disrupted by long-term illness or disability will also be able to build up entitlement to the state second pension.

Basic Pension

23. Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to restore the link between the basic pension and earnings. [45035]

Mr. McCartney: Restoring the earnings link does nothing to help poorer pensioners. We will be spending an extra £6 billion a year in real terms on pensioners as a result of policies introduced since 1997. This includes £2.5 billion more on the poorest third of pensioners. This is three times more than an earnings link since 1998 would have given them.

Increases in the basic state pension over the last two years have given single pensioners £2.10 a week more than an earnings link would have given them and £3.35 more for couples.

Older People

24. Tony Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to develop his Department's strategy to help older people. [45036]

Mr. McCartney: The Government is committed to improving the position of older people in our society. This is an issue that is relevant not only to my Department but also to others across Government.

The Government's strategy is co-ordinated by a Cabinet sub-committee of Ministers from several Departments, chaired by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. The strategy consists of five main strands: encouraging and enabling active aging, promoting age diversity, tackling pensioner poverty for today's and future pensioners, maintaining and supporting independence in later life and working in partnership with older people to provide better services focused on the needs of individuals.

We will publish a report later this year that will show how the Government's strategy is helping to ensure that later life is a time of opportunity for older people.

Jobcentre Plus

25. Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people are receiving services from Jobcentre Plus. [45037]

36. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the progress made in implementing the Jobcentre Plus programme. [45050]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Jobcentre Plus was launched as a national organisation on 1 April, replacing the former Employment Service and the working age functions of the Benefits Agency, and providing services to around 5 million people. The agency's business plan for 2002–03, a copy of which is available in the Library, sets out the organisation's aims and priorities for its first 12 months, including opening around a further 225 fully integrated offices by April 2003.

Unemployment Statistics

26. Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the number of people of working age who are neither working nor registered as seeking work or as benefit claimants. [45038]

Malcolm Wicks: About 4.1 million people of working age are not working, registered for work or claiming benefits themselves.

People With Disabilities

27. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress has been made in helping people with disabilities to get and keep employment. [45039]

Maria Eagle: We have introduced a wide range of measures to help people with disabilities secure work where they are ready and able to do so.

We have improved the permitted work rules in incapacity benefit to make it easier for people to make the first moves into work. Over 8,200 people have already been helped into work through the new deal for disabled people pilots. Building on that success we now have a national network of job brokers from the public, private and voluntary sectors who work closely with employers, voluntary groups and health services to help people with health conditions and disabilities move into work. Later this year we are also introducing the job retention and rehabilitation pilots to test the effectiveness of making co-ordinated, earlier health and/or employment interventions to help people who become sick or disabled to stay in work.

Disability employment advisers continue to provide specialist support to disabled jobseekers, and disabled employees and their employers. Disability employment advisers can draw on the expertise of occupational psychologists to help disabled people find and retain work.

The roll-out of integrated Jobcentre Plus offices will provide disabled people with work-focused meetings with a personal adviser to ensure they are aware of all the help and opportunities available to them.

We established the Disability Rights Commission to help disabled people secure their rights under the Disability Discrimination Act, and to provide information and advice to employers and service providers.

Pension Credit

28. Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate how many pensioners will not receive their entitlement to pension credit in this financial year. [45042]

Mr. McCartney: Over 5 million pensioners will be eligible for pension credit when it is introduced in October 2003. Those receiving pension credit stand to gain £400 a year on average.

Benefit Fraud

29. Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many cases of fraud there were in 2000–01 in income support. [45043]

Malcolm Wicks: It is not possible to state the exact number. We estimate, extrapolating from the results of the Area Benefit Reviews, that there were 204,000 cases of fraud in income support in 2000–01.

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his targets are for the reduction of benefit fraud. [45025]

Malcolm Wicks: We have a target to reduce losses from fraud and error in income support and jobseeker's allowance by 25 per cent. by 2004 and by 50 per cent. by 2006. We have already achieved an 18 per cent. reduction.

From this month we are beginning to use new powers in the Fraud Act 2001 that make it easier to catch fraudsters and give greater punishments to those who persistently abuse the system.

Also from this month, all local authorities are now operating within the new incentive scheme, focusing on the full range of anti-fraud measures as well as customer error; 77 per cent. of local authorities have now signed up to participate in our verification framework that stops fraud from getting into the system in the first place. So far, net savings from the verification framework are estimated at about £100 million.

We have introduced the Housing Benefit review to provide a continuous measure of fraud and error in Housing Benefit. This will enable us to gauge the success of the range of initiatives we have put in place to tackle Housing Benefit fraud.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much benefit fraud cost his Department in each of the last five years; and how many people have been prosecuted for benefit fraud in the last year; and what range of penalties have been imposed. [47450]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Our latest estimate is that £2 billion is lost each year through benefit fraud in the system. Latest results show that in the 2½ years to March 2001 we have reduced the level of fraud and error in income support and jobseeker's allowance by 18 per cent. In 2000–01 we imposed 26,958 sanctions, 11,403 of which involved prosecutions and 15,555 of which were cautions or other penalties.

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much money was paid in error owing to benefit fraud in Weston-Super-Mare in each of the last five years. [47761]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on the level of benefit fraud at constituency level is not available.

Deprived Areas (Unemployment)

30. Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to help people back into work in areas of acute social deprivation. [45044]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Our policies, built on a foundation of a strong and stable economy, are helping people into work in all parts of the country. The New Deals have already helped well over 600,000 people into jobs.

We have introduced Action Teams for Jobs to tackle joblessness in the most employment deprived areas in the country. They are performing well, and by the end of February had helped over 23,700 people into work. Since October 2001 we have increased the number of action teams from 40 to 63. At the same time, we expanded the Stockton action team to cover six new wards, all in my hon. Friend's constituency. This expanded team has already helped over 100 people into work.

Employment Zones are helping long-term unemployed people in deprived areas into work. By the end of December, the 15 zones had helped over 20,800 people into work. We are in the process of extending the existing zones' contracts until March 2004, and are currently fully evaluating zone performance before deciding how to take the initiative further.

This month we have established Jobcentre Plus which will deliver a single, integrated service to benefit claimants of working age right across the country. Jobcentre Plus will provide a responsive, work-focused service, helping people to find jobs and the support to which they are entitled.

Disabled People (Poverty)

32. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his Department is doing to tackle poverty among disabled people. [45046]

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department is taking to tackle poverty among disabled people. [45040]

Maria Eagle: We are committed to the principle of work for those who can and security for those who are unable to work. We are promoting the rights of disabled people, making work pay and helping more disabled people to get and keep jobs.

This month we have established Jobcentre Plus which will deliver a single, integrated, work-focused service to people of working age claiming benefits. Those making new or repeat claims to incapacity benefit in integrated Jobcentre Plus offices are required to attend a work-focused meeting. These meetings provide disabled people with the opportunity to discuss with their personal adviser the help, benefits and opportunities available to them, including the opportunity to participate in the New Deal programmes.

A disabled person working a minimum of 35 hours a week who claims the disabled person's tax credit is now guaranteed an income of at least £172 a week. By the end of October 2001 disabled person's tax credit was boosting the incomes of over 32,000 working people. From this month we have abolished the earnings limits in the independent living funds—both for these severely disabled people and their partners. At the same time we have extended help to people with savings of up to £18,500 by increasing capital limits in the funds.

We are also providing security for those who cannot work. The disability income guarantee helps around 130,000 of the poorest severely disabled people under 60 and some 34,000 families with severely disabled children. We have extended the higher rate mobility component of disability living allowance to severely disabled three and three-year-olds benefiting an estimated 6,000 severely disabled children every year. And from this month we have raised the disabled child premium in the income-related benefits to £35.50 a week giving an additional £5 on top of normal uprating. This will benefit around 80,000 children in the neediest families.

Action Teams for Jobs

33. Paul Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the work of action teams for jobs. [45047]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Action Teams for Jobs are helping the most disadvantaged jobless people in the most employment deprived areas into work. They are performing well, developing innovative and individually tailored solutions to the problems people face when looking for work.

By the end of February, Action Teams had helped over 23,700 jobless people into work. In the first six months of the new South Manchester Action Team, which covers my hon. Friend's constituency, the team has engaged with 304 people and already helped 51 of these move into work.

Pensions

34. Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he plans to take to increase public awareness of the state second pension; and if he will make a statement. [45048]

Mr. McCartney: The state second pension reformed the state earnings-related pension scheme (SERPS) on 6 April 2002. It will boost the additional state pension entitlement of 14 million low and moderate earners. Additionally, for the first time two million carers and two million people whose working lives are disrupted by long-term illness or disability will also benefit as a result of the reforms in that they will be able to build up entitlement to the state second pension.

Most people will benefit automatically from the state second pension without having to do anything new or different. Our publicity activity therefore focuses on the group who may not automatically start building up state second pension and may need to take appropriate action. We aim to encourage carers to check their circumstances now. We have produced a new leaflet and started a programme of activity to inform relevant groups, which includes press advertising. In addition, we included a message in the child benefit uprating letter, are revising existing leaflets, and we are sending copies of the new leaflet to advisers.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the additional cost of the basic state pension would be in (a) 2010, (b) 2020, (c) 2030, (d) 2040 and (e) 2050 if the inflation rate were (i) 2 per cent. and (ii) 1.5 per cent. in one year out of every two, and (A) 2.5 per cent. or more in the other years and (B) 2.5 per cent. each year. [41195]

Malcolm Wicks: Additional cost to basic state pension if in one year out of every two the inflation rate were:

(i) 2 per cent.

(ii) 1.5 per cent.

£ billion

	2 per cent. inflation	1.5 per cent. inflation
2010	0.4	0.8
2020	1.5	3.05
2030	3.2	6.55
2040	5	10.5
2050	6.55	13.85

Note:

1. Figures are gross cost for GB rounded to the nearest £50 million.

The basic state pension is to be uprated by the greater of 2.5 per cent. or RPI, and so (A) and (B) would not affect expenditure in real terms.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people he expects to contract back into SERPS/the state second pension over the next 10 years from (a) personal pension schemes and (b) final salary occupational pension schemes. [44684]

Maria Eagle: No such estimate has been made. The decision to contract out of SERPS/state second pension is a matter of personal choice.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has for the future of the basic state pension. [45910]

Mr. McCartney: The Government believe that the basic retirement pension should remain the essential foundation of income in retirement.

We increased rates last April by £5 a week for single people and £8 a week for couples and from April 2002 there will be further increases of £3 a week for single people and £4.80 for couples. In future, the state pension will rise by at least 2.5 per cent, or the September rate of RPI, whichever is the higher.

Poverty Initiatives (Westminster)

35. Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many area-based city of Westminster poverty initiatives are administered by his Department. [45049]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department believes that employment is the best way out of poverty and our Welfare to Work initiatives are helping people move into work in all parts of the country. The new deals have already helped over 600,000 people into jobs, including over 700 in the hon. Member's constituency.

We do recognise that there are some geographical areas that lag significantly behind the national average in terms of work outcomes. The departmental neighbourhood renewal strategy aims to improve the aggregate employment rate for the 30 local authorities with the poorest initial labour market position. The City of Westminster is not one of these 30 areas and so we are not currently administering any area-based poverty initiatives in this area. However, these constituents still have access to our range of national welfare to work initiatives available through Jobcentre Plus.

Winter Fuel Payment

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to extend the winter heating allowance to people with disabilities. [45015]

Maria Eagle: We are mindful of the needs of people with disabilities, that is why the Government have taken steps to provide help towards the extra costs that people with disabilities may have, through Disability Living Allowance and the disability premiums in income-related benefits. This could include heating costs. Most people over 60, including many who are disabled, are entitled to winter fuel payments.

Age Discrimination

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to introduce legislative proposals to tackle age discrimination. [45028]

Mr. McCartney: Ageist employment practices are bad for employers, older workers and society. The cost of the fall in employment of the over 50s is estimated to be in the range of £16 billion to £31 billion per year in lost gross domestic product. The Department for Work and Pensions is promoting the business case for non-ageist employment practices to all employers and individuals across Great Britain through our Age Positive campaign.

The introduction of the employment-related age discrimination legislation, and the consultations on its development, are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry. It is proposed that age discrimination legislation will be introduced in 2006.

Pension-sharing

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the number of people who have benefited from his Department's legislation on pension-sharing after divorce; and what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of this legislation. [32622]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I have been asked to reply.

My Department has been monitoring pension sharing orders made by the courts. Our records show that 367 such orders have been made since December 2000. My Department is currently evaluating the effectiveness of this legislation as it applies to divorce proceedings. I hope to be able to announce the results of this in the autumn.

Refurbishment

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer of 30 January 2002, Official Report, column 420W, what the cost of refurbishing each ministerial private office was in each year since May 1997. [37896]

Mr. McCartney: Since May 1997 no refurbishment work has been carried out in ministerial private office outside of the routine programme of maintenance, repair and renewal.

Travel to Work Costs

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for what reasons high travel to work costs as a ground of variation have been abolished; and what factors underlay setting the judgment rate at 8 per cent. [44432]

Malcolm Wicks: We believe that support for children must come first. None the less we recognise that there are many calls on the finances of non-resident parents. The standard percentage rates for child support maintenance in the new scheme reflect those other demands. Any attempt to reflect the specific costs of each person would lead to the reintroduction of an overly complex scheme.

The judgment rate is the statutory interest rate. It is set in England and Wales by the Lord Chancellor and in Scotland by the Lord President of the Court of Session.

Advertising

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the pensions awareness advertising campaign. [46461]

Mr. McCartney: The Government are committed to ensuring people are properly informed in order to make decisions about saving for their retirement and the "Pensions Education" publicity campaign is a major part of this strategy. Results so far are encouraging—since the campaign started in January 2001 it has provoked more than 1.1 million responses and almost 1.4 million information guides have been sent out. Changing attitudes towards planning for retirement will inevitably take time.

Overseas Pensioners

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of Spanish presidency proposals for an EU wide pension fund solvency test; what impact he estimates such a test would have on UK final salary pension schemes; and if he will make a statement. [48554]

Mr. McCartney: The issue of EU level solvency requirements for pension funds is being considered as part of the proposed directive on occupational pension schemes. Any impact on UK schemes would depend on the details of the requirements. We are working to ensure that the final version of the directive is consistent with UK pension arrangements.

Vocational Rehabilitation

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Daventry on 10 December 2001, Official Report, column 617W, if he can now publish the findings of his literature and good practice reviews on vocational rehabilitation; and what progress has been made in developing conjunction with the Department of Health and national strategy for vocational rehabilitation. [48295]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The report "Employment Programmes for Disabled People: Lessons from Research Evaluations" was published on 30 January 2002 as Report No. 90 in the departmental in-house report series. A copy is available in the Library.

Ministers from this Department and the Department of Health intend to meet in the near future to discuss possible arrangements for joint working on vocational rehabilitation.

Post Office Card Account

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to delay the introduction of the post office card account. [47423]

Malcolm Wicks: The implementation of the card account is a matter for the Post Office. They hope to have accounts available from 2003 and have recently signed contracts with DWP, IR and NISSA to make these accounts available from this date.

Community Care

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what has been the (a) budget and (b) outturn of (i) the community care grant budget and (ii) the loans budget, in (1) cash and (2) real terms in each year since 1997. [48642]

Malcolm Wicks: The available information is in the tables:

Table 1: Cash terms

Recruitment

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Benefit Office employees recruited within the last 12 months have been over 55. [48706]

Mr. McCartney: The Department of Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001 from the former Department of Social Security (DSS) and parts of the Department for Education and Employment. The vast majority of Benefit paying employees were employed by the DSS, therefore the data supplied below has been taken from their legacy systems.

There have been 277 people over the age of 55 recruited into benefit paying offices between 1 April 2001 and 31 March 2002.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether those entitled to disability living allowance lower rate mobility component, but not the care component, who are also in receipt of disability premium in income support, will lose the latter entitlement if no longer eligible for the lower rate mobility component; and how many people are in receipt of the disability premium in income support solely as a result of entitlement to lower rate mobility component of DLA. [48640]

Malcolm Wicks: People receiving disability living allowance qualify for the disability premium within income support regardless of whether they receive the higher, middle or lower rate of either the care or mobility component, as any of these elements allows entitlement to the disability premium.

Information on the number of people in receipt of the disability premium in income support solely as a result of being entitled to the lower rate mobility component of disability living allowance is not available.

Social Fund

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many applications for Social Fund loans have been (a) refused, (b) fully awarded and (c) partially awarded yearly since 1997. [48644]

Malcolm Wicks: The available information is in the tables.

Social fund

Thousands

Year	Total number of awards	Partial awards included in previous column	Refusals
Budgeting loans
1997–98	916	319	494
1998–99	935	315	442
1999–2000	1,017	533	647
2000–01	1,145	661	531
Crisis loans
1997–98	803	628	230
1998–99	866	690	247
1999–2000	939	746	336
2000–01	930	746	342

Notes:

1. The figures are rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. The figures do not include awards on review.
3. Comparison of the award figures should only be used as a guide as the award figures and partial award figures are taken from different tables in the Social Fund Policy, Budget and Management Information System and are counted different stages during the claim process.
4. Following the introduction of the new Budgeting Loan scheme in April 1999 there has been an increase in the number of partial awards as individual applicants are limited to a maximum available amount.

DEFENCE

Underspends

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) capital and (b) revenue underspend in his Department is expected to be in the financial year 2001–02. [47795]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Ministry of Defence's estimated outturn figures for 2001–02 will be published in the Budget report on 17 April 2002.

Training Estates Division

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what overseas facilities are run by the British Army's Training Estates Division; and in which countries the facilities are located; [47617]

(2) which military and security forces have received training within the British Army's Training Estates Division overseas facilities since 2 May 1997; which countries were involved; what types of training were provided; and how many personnel were trained; [47616]

(3) what human rights criteria are used to assess which military and security personnel are eligible to receive training within the British Army's Training Estates Division overseas facilities. [47618]

Mr. Ingram: The Army Estates's Division is responsible for managing UK training areas only. Part of the Army's Land Warfare Centre (LWC) (formerly Training Support Command (Land)) has responsibility for the conduct of some overseas training. The LWC conducts training at four overseas facilities. These are in Germany, Canada, Belize and Kenya. In addition, the Field Army maintains a facility in Brunei, though this is not part of the LWC training estate. I should point out that the arrangements under which we use these facilities are different in every country and we are not responsible for the "running" of all the facilities in question.

Since 1997 large numbers of British units have trained at these facilities but details are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Foreign military personnel on attachment to British units and foreign observers have also participated in British exercises, but once again, details are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The LWC does offer jungle warfare training to members of foreign forces at its facilities in Belize. Since 1997 a total of 18 students have participated in this training, 12 from the Netherlands and six from the Ukraine.

In terms of formed foreign units that use the overseas facilities, certain NATO countries are permitted to conduct training at the facilities that the LWC operate in Germany under arrangements contained within the NATO Status of Forces Agreement (SOFA). This agreement in itself authorises the UK to manage facilities which are owned by the German Federal Government. In summary, the countries whose forces are permitted to train at these UK managed facilities are Belgium, Canada, France, the Netherlands, the USA and of course Germany itself. Since 1997, the formed foreign units that have trained here are Bundeswehr Units (31 Airborne Brigade, 313 Infantry Parachute Battalion, 272 Airborne Attack Defence Battalion, Seven Armoured Recognisance Battalion, 270 Airborne Supplies Company); German Specialist Units (GSG and SEK (German Civil Police Special Operations)); Belgian Units (two (BE) Commando Battalion, Regiment Beveijing—five Linie, Regiment De Chasseurs Ardennais and one BE Parachute); Dutch Units (108 Company (Special Forces) and HQ 11 Air Mobile Brigade); United States Units (75th Rangers) and multinational formations conducting Allied Rapid Reaction Corps training.

Because of the different arrangements that prevail, if forces from foreign nations wish to use the facilities that LWC use in Canada, Belize and Kenya, that would be matter for agreement between that country and the respective host nation. This would also apply if a country other than those specified in the SOFA wished to train on the British managed facilities in Germany.

The Ministry of Defence continues to play a role in fostering human rights through the Defence Diplomacy Mission which aims to dispel hostility, build and maintain trust and assist in the development of democratically accountable armed forces thereby making a significant contribution to conflict prevention. A key contribution to the fulfilment of this mission is provided by military training. Details of the Defence Diplomacy Mission including its objectives and scope is published in the MOD Policy Paper No 1; Defence Diplomacy (2001) a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Imber

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many uniformed staff were on duty in the village of Imber on Sunday on 31 March; for what purpose; and what equipment they used. [48625]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 10 April 2002]: On 31 March, four uniformed Land Wardens were on duty in Imber in order to ensure the safety of members of the general public. All the Land Wardens drive quarter tonne Land Rovers with radio communication equipment.

Medical Discharges

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many persons have been discharged from the (a) Royal Navy, (b) Army and (c) Royal Air Force for medical reasons in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [46667]

Dr. Moonie: There have been 10,067 medical discharges from the Naval Services (Royal Navy and Royal Marines), the Army and the Royal Air Force between 1 January 1996 and 31 December 2001. These are broken down by service and year in the table.

Year	Army	Navy	RAF	Total
1996	1,189	339	200	1,728
1997	1,067	354	223	1,644
1998	1,060	448	155	1,663
1999	1,099	456	189	1,744
2000	1,023	484	201	1,708
2001	973	413	194	1,580
Total	6,411	2,494	1,162	10,067

Further information on medical discharges can be found in the National Statistics publication entitled "Medical Discharges in the Armed Forces 2001" which was published on 27 March 2002. This publication can be found on the world wide web at http://www.dasa.mod.uk/medstats/discharge/ns—initframe.htm.

United Nations Missions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many UK service personnel have been deployed working on UN missions in each of the last five years; what the missions are; how many personnel have been involved in each mission; what the cost has been to the MOD; and if he will make a statement. [46674]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence does not hold information centrally in the form requested and this could be provided only at disproportionate cost. I can, however, provide details of involvement by service personnel in current UN missions, these details being a snapshot only, as numbers vary during the course of a year. The details, including estimated costs for financial year 2001–02, are set out in the table. Costs for UN missions are reimbursed to the MOD from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, who in turn are allocated funds from the Global Conflict Prevention Fund.

£ million

Mission	Country	Number of UK personnel	Cost
UNOMIG	Georgia	7	0.5
UNAMSIL	Sierra Leone	22	2
MONUC	D. R. Congo	6	0.6
UNIFICYP	Cyprus	[1]12	15.9
UNIKOM	Kuwait	[2]26	1
UNTAET	East Timor	[3]382	0.4

Deployments

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what personnel in (a) Royal Navy, (b) Army and (c) RAF have been involved in deployments to the Falkland Islands in the last five years; how many of those deployments have been for six months; what the total cost has been to the MOD for the Falkland Islands garrison in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [46666]

(2) what (a) Royal Navy, (b) Army and (c) RAF personnel have been involved in deployments to (i) Gibraltar, (ii) Cyprus, (iii) Bosnia and (iv) Kosovo in the last five years; how many of those deployments have been for six months; what the cost has been to the MOD; and if he will make a statement. [46665]

Mr. Ingram: Information regarding the number of deployments undertaken by UK regular forces is not available in the format requested.

As regards lengths of tours, tours in Bosnia, Kosovo and the Falkland Islands are considered as operational deployments. In the main, Royal Air Force operational deployments are four months in duration, whereas Army and Navy operational deployments are usually for six months. There are exceptions, however, such as those posts identified as continuity posts that require a deployment of 12 months duration. For service personnel posted to Cyprus and Gibraltar, which are garrison deployments, a tour length of 24 months is the norm.

The costs for operational deployments are recorded differently from those for garrison deployments. For costing purposes, the Falkland Islands are treated as a garrison.

The additional expenditure incurred by the Ministry of Defence in Bosnia and Kosovo, beyond normal defence activity, over the last five years is shown in the following table.

£ million

Financial year	Bosnia	Kosovo
1996–97	247	—
1997–98	196	—
1998–99	147	14
1999–2000	108	325
2000–01	120	220

The costs incurred by the Commanders British Forces Cyprus, Gibraltar and the Falkland Islands over the same period are as follows:

£ million

Financial year	Cyprus	Gibraltar	Falklands garrison
1996–97	170	63	81
1997–98	165	61	76
1998–99	170	52	72
1999–2000	159	54	71
2000–01	160	60	64

Senior Armed Forces

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 25 March 2002, Official Report, column 552W, on senior armed forces, how many officers there are of the rank of General and equivalent or above for each service; what steps the Ministry of Defence takes to ensure that its objective of reflecting the diversity of British society is monitored and implemented; and if he will make a statement on how the Government plan to ensure that senior officers are drawn from the whole range of society. [48701]

Mr. Ingram: There are 12 officers of the rank of full General or equivalent and above currently appointed in the armed forces (Naval Service five; Army four; RAF three). The armed forces are committed to creating an organisational culture that welcomes diversity in which all have equal opportunity and encouragement to realise their full potential, regardless of race, ethnic origin, religion, gender, sexual orientation, or social/educational background. Promotion in the armed forces is based on merit.

Saville Inquiry

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has received on instances of information on the identities of British soldiers or former soldiers who may be called upon to testify to the Saville Inquiry falling into unauthorised hands; and if he will make a statement. [47059]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 11 April 2002]: I understand that the names of 76 soldiers (some of whom are deceased) have been disclosed in advertently by the Bloody Sunday Inquiry, mainly in historical documents passed by the inquiry to the interested parties. Two names have been disclosed inadvertently by the team of lawyers representing the majority of soldiers. The name of one soldier has been compromised as a result of a security breach in the Treasury Solicitor's Department; this is the subject of a continuing investigation.

Many soldiers' names have become publicly associated with Bloody Sunday. Senior officers were not granted anonymity in 1972, while other soldiers have made statements or given interviews in which they name themselves or colleagues.

The soldiers whose names have been compromised have been, or will be, provided with security advice and additional protective measures where appropriate.

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has recently reviewed the security arrangements for the handling of information relating to British soldiers and former soldiers by Treasury Counsel and others concerned with the Saville Inquiry; and if he will make a statement. [47125]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 11 April 2002]: Security arrangements in Government Departments, and for those acting on their behalf, are reviewed regularly.

The Bloody Sunday Inquiry is independent of government and its security arrangements are a matter for the inquiry itself. My understanding is that in safeguarding sensitive or personal information the inquiry aims to follows normal public sector procedures and standards.

Strategic Defence Review

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what establishment strength of the Army was set under the Strategic Defence Review. [49746]

Mr. Ingram: The Strategic Defence Review did not set a figure for the size of the Army. A decision was made, however, to increase the Army's manpower requirement by some 3,300 posts to reflect the inclusion of a sixth deployable brigade and a second line of communication. It remains our intention to man the Army to achieve this, although the overall manpower requirement is dynamic and subject to continuing review in light of evolving doctrine, new technology and equipment and possible changes to the operating environment.

Nimrod

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what savings in terms of equipment acquisition will be made from the decision to purchase 18 Nimrod MRA4s. [49764]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 28 February 2002, Official Report, columns 1452–53W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Broxtowe (Dr. Palmer), on the basis of current assumptions, savings in support costs are likely to be some £360 million over the in-service life of the aircraft. The savings in procurement costs arising from the current contract have yet to be finally negotiated with BAE Systems and its principal suppliers, and is a commercial in confidence matter between the relevant parties.

However, as my announcement made clear, we are working closely with BAE Systems to maximise the benefits brought about by this decision.

Unexploded Ordnance (Kenya)

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what dates talks (a) have been and (b) will be held between his Department and the lawyers representing Kenyan tribespeople who have been injured as a result of unexploded British Army ordnance. [48934]

Mr. Ingram: Meetings between the Ministry of Defence and the lawyers representing Kenyan tribespeople were held on 28 November 2001, 11 January and 8 April 2002. One further meeting has been planned for end of June before mediation talks are held over the period 17 to 19 July 2002.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the policy of the Government are on liability for death and injury caused by unexploded ordnance left behind after British military exercises in Kenya; and if he will make a statement. [49795]

Mr. Ingram: When compensation claims are submitted, they are considered on the basis of whether or not the Ministry of Defence has a legal liability to pay compensation. Where there is a legal liability to pay compensation we do so.

Performance Targets

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what performance targets have been set for the Defence Vetting Agency for the financial year 2002–03. [49905]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Vetting Agency is the largest government organisation carrying out national security checks on people to allow them to be employed in jobs involving access to sensitive information or assets. These jobs range throughout the Ministry of Defence and armed services, a number of other Government Departments, and defence contractor companies. This year will see the Agency emerge from a challenging modernisation and rationalisation programme that started soon after it was created in 1997. The completion of the programme will create a much more responsive, integrated organisation, able to exploit the capabilities of modern information technology to the benefit of its customers. The chief executive has been set the following key targets.

Quality

Key Target 1:

To achieve, through external validation, at least a 95 per cent. success rating with specially selected cases, and zero serious errors that could have been identified at the time of vetting.

Key Target 2:

To address the diversity imbalance in the agency and achieve by 2002:

Women (at Band D): 12 per cent.

Women (Field Force): 10 per cent.

Ethnic Minorities (Field Force): 1.8 per cent.

Disabled (at Band D and Field Force): 1.5 per cent.

Timeliness

Key Target 3:

To achieve agreed completion times for priority requests for security clearances:

40 per cent. of counter terrorist and security checks completed within 10 days, and 90 per cent. of developed vetting completed within 30 days.

Key Target 4:

To achieve agreed completion times for routine requests for security clearances:

60 per cent. of counter terrorist and security checks completed within 30 days,

40 per cent. of developed vetting completed within 100 days and 90 per cent. within 182 days.

Key Target 5:

To achieve average completion times of 30 days for counter terrorist checks and for security checks, and 100 days for developed vetting.

Efficiency

Key Target 6:

To reduce the 2001–02 unit cost of output by 2 per cent.

I will arrange for advance copies of the Corporate Plan to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what performance targets have been set for the Naval Manning Agency for the financial year 2002–03. [49906]

Mr. Ingram: The key targets that have been set for the chief executive of the Naval Manning Agency for the financial year 2002–03 are as listed. The targets build upon progress made by the agency since it formed on 1 July 1996.

Key Target 1. Deployment:

The percentage of filled officer billets to be: 94 per cent. or greater.

The percentage of filled rating billets to be: 90 per cent. or greater.

The percentage of filled other rank billets to be: 90 per cent or greater.

Key Target 2. Manpower Planning:

The variation of strength to requirement to be: Better than −4 per cent.

Key Target 3. Career Management:

The percentage of officers receiving the required notice of change to be: 60 per cent. or greater.

The percentage of ratings receiving the required notice of change to be: 98 per cent. or greater.

The number of occurrences where minimum time ashore criteria are met to be: 99 per cent. or greater.

Key Target 4. NMA Corporate Efficiency:

To achieve strict control of NMA manpower overheads to within plus or minus 2 per cent. of the baseline established for manpower overheads as at 1 April 2002.

To carry out two benchmarking exercises.

To achieve a customer confidence score of 63.

Key Target 5. Financial:

To operate the NMA within 0 to -1 per cent. of its 2001–02 net cash allocation for operating activities.

Production of annual accrual accounts to be completed by July 2003.

Harrier GR7

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the Royal Air Force's total inventory of Harrier GR7s is; and how many are operationally available. [43632]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 15 March 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 15 March 2002, Official Report, column 552W.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer of 21 March 2002, Official Report, column 450W to the hon. Member for Leyton and Wanstead (Harry Cohen), when he will place a letter in the Library detailing his Department's contracts for which Israeli companies are bidding as (a) prime contractors and (b) teaming partners; and in the case of the latter, with which companies they are teamed. [49793]

Dr. Moonie: I replied to the hon. Member today.

Navy Vessels

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects HMS Albion to be fully operational; what refit would be necessary to keep HMS Fearless in operation for one more year; how much it would cost; whether he has considered recommissioning HMS Intrepid; whether he foresees any need for CPD capability in the next 12 months; and what contingency plans he has in place. [46971]

Mr. Ingram: On current plans, HMS Albion will be available for operational tasking early in 2003, and she is expected to be fully operational by mid 2003. HMS Fearless would have needed to undergo and assisted maintenance period at an estimated cost of about £1.5 million to allow her to continue in service for a year beyond her decommissioning date. The assisted maintenance period represented the minimum package of work required to keep HMS Fearless in service. Given the age of the vessel, the possibility of additional unplanned repair during this period could not be ruled out. The cost of re-commissioning HMS Intrepid, the sister ship of HMS Fearless, which last put to sea in 1994, would greatly exceed the cost of HMS Fearless's foregone assisted maintenance period. It would not therefore make financial sense to re-commission HMS Intrepid.

The requirement for a docking and heavy lift capability needs to be considered in the prevailing operational context at any particular time. Our assessment is that until HMS Albion enters service, the circumstances in which it is most likely that the UK wold be involved in an operation requiring a dedicated amphibious assault capability would be where we were acting as part of a coalition force. In such a scenario, depending on the requirements of the operation, a docking and heavy lift capability could be provided from within the forces of our coalition partners to enhance the UK's specialist amphibious capabilities of HMS Ocean and the five landing ships logistic. HMS Ocean is available for amphibious force tasking until October this year when she is due, on current plans, to commence a docking period before she again becomes available for tasking early in 2003. However until HMS Albion enters service, the amphibious assault capability will, if operational imperatives dictate, be filled in part by other platforms.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 326W, on strategic lift transport ships, what the date is for the keel lay of HMS 'Beach Head'; and when she is to be delivered. [47391]

Dr. Moonie: I assume that the question refers to the answer that appeared on 6 March 2002, Official Report, columns 325–26W. I refer the hon. Member to my pursuant answer of 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 32W. The delivery date is 30 April 2003. Beachy Head will be a commercial ship with the designation motor vessel (mv) not HMS.

PRIVY COUNCIL

Congestion Charging

Mr. Tyler: To ask the President of the Council what representations he has received on the exemption of hon. Members from the proposed congestion charge for vehicles entering central London. [48799]

Mr. Robin Cook: I am aware that this is a matter of some concern for Members, but I have received no direct representations.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Terrorism

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the policy of the Government is on an amnesty for those convicted of terrorist offences. [44402]

Dr. John Reid: At the talks at Weston Park last summer, both the Irish and UK Governments recognised that there is an issue to be addressed, with the completion of the early release scheme, about supporters of organisations now on ceasefire against whom there are outstanding prosecutions, and in some cases extradition proceedings, for offences committed before 10 April 1998. Such people would, if convicted, stand to benefit from the early release scheme. The Governments accept that it would be a natural development of the scheme for such prosecutions not to be pursued. Consideration continues of the best way to discharge this commitment.

Murder Inquiries

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 16 November 2001, Official Report, column 938W, if he will name the judge who has been appointed to investigate the cases of Chief Superintendent Breen, Superintendent Buchanan, Lord Justice and Lady Gibson and Billy Wright; and if he will make a statement. [35229]

Dr. John Reid: The Government stand by the commitment made at Weston Park to appoint a judge of international standing to investigate allegations of collusion in the cases of the murders of Chief Superintendent Breen and Superintendent Buchanan, Pat Finucane, Lord Justice and Lady Gibson, Robert Hamill, Rosemary Nelson and Billy Wright. It is intended that the investigation of each individual case will begin no later than April 2002 unless this is clearly prejudicial to a forthcoming prosecution at that time. The British and Irish Governments will make an announcement as soon as an appointment is made.

Scheduled Offences

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people convicted of scheduled offences committed before 10 April 1998 are in prison in Northern Ireland. [44325]

Dr. John Reid: There are 11 such prisoners.

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland of those people who remain in prison for scheduled offences committed before 10 April 1998 how many belong to (a) Republican groups and (b) Loyalist groups. [44330]

Dr. John Reid: In total there are 11 such prisoners. Information is held for management purposes in relation to the perceived affiliation of prisoners: nine are or were at one time perceived to be associated with Loyalist groups and two with Republican groups.

Released Prisoners

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prisoners have been released from prison in Northern Ireland under the terms of the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act; and of those how many belong to (a) Republican groups and (b) Loyalist groups. [44329]

Dr. John Reid: As at 15 March 2002, 445 individuals had been released from prison under the terms of the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act. Information is held, for management purposes, in relation to the perceived paramilitary association of prisoners. 240 individuals were perceived to be associated with Republican groups, 193 were perceived to be associated with Loyalist groups and 12 had no perceived association.

Television Sets

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) integrated digital and (b) analogue television sets have been bought by his Department in each of the last 24 months; and if he will publish the guidance given to officials making decisions on television purchases. [33234]

Dr. John Reid: My Department does not hold centrally or separately the number of television sets purchased. Officials, when purchasing television sets follow general guidance and procedures for all procurement.

Flexible Working

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many and what proportion of the staff of his Department are (a) job sharing, (b) term working and (c) engaged in another form of flexible working. [42417]

Dr. John Reid: Information is not held in the format requested.

The number of people job sharing in the Department is 25, and there are a further 10 in the Northern Ireland Prison Service. This is 2 per cent. of the staff in post.

The number of people engaged in part-time working in the Department is 116, and there are a further 27 in the Northern Ireland Prison Service. This is 8 per cent. of the staff in post.

Manpower

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff have been employed by his Department in each of the last 10 years. [42464]

Dr. John Reid: Full time equivalent staff numbers in the Northern Ireland Office, for the last 10 years, including civil servants, special advisers and Prison Governor and uniformed Prison Officer grades are as follows:

	Staff numbers
1991–92	5,752
1992–93	5,683
1993–94	5,747
1994–95	5,705
1995–96	4,779
1996–97	4,590
1997–98	4,446
1998–99	4,232
1999–2000	3,929
2000–01	3,306

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the public service agreement targets which have been revised and those which have been introduced since the publication of the 2001 departmental report. [43255]

Dr. John Reid: I can confirm that none of my Department's existing PSA targets have been revised and no new targets introduced for the public service agreement since the publication of the 2001 departmental report.

Creche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what creche facilities are provided by his Department; and at what cost. [44862]

Dr. John Reid: Although the Northern Ireland Office does not provide creche facilities for its staff, it does provide assistance with the cost of child care to staff with pre-school aged children. In the last financial year the Department and its agencies have assisted 154 staff at a total cost of £114,000.

Parental Leave Directive

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the (a) financial costs and (b) benefits to his Department of the Parental Leave Directive. [42481]

Dr. John Reid: The information is as follows:

(a) There are no financial costs as parental leave is unpaid.

(b) The benefits include meeting staff needs, raising staff morale and ensuring the retention of experienced and trained staff.

Consultants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total cost to his Department was of the use of external consultants in each of the last four years. [35020]

Jane Kennedy: Details of the Department's (including it's agencies) total expenditure on the use of external consultants in each of the last four financial years are:

1998–99: £254,080

1999–2000: £486,622

2000–01: £361,971

2001–02: £1,955,910 (to date. There is substantial increase in this financial year due to numerous new IT projects).

Golden Jubilee

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what events (a) he is and (b) other Ministers in his Department are planning to attend as part of the Golden Jubilee celebrations; and what events his Department is planning to arrange to celebrate the Golden Jubilee. [33252]

Dr. John Reid: I refer the hon. Member to the answer provided by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on 11 February 2002, Official Report, column 59W.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list, for 1997–98 and for each subsequent financial year, the amount spent (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) abroad by (i) his Department, (ii) its agencies and (iii) its non-departmental public bodies on (1) providing mobile telephone equipment, including handsets and other associated equipment, (2) telephone calls made using such equipment and (3) telephone calls made using privately owned mobile telephones but subsequently reclaimed by (x) Ministers and (y) staff. [34395]

Dr. John Reid: Details of the Department's (including it's agencies, but excluding NDPBs as we do not have access to breakdown of their expenditure) total expenditure on mobile telephones and calls in each of the last five financial years are:

	Line rental	Call charges	Mobiles and equipment	Total
1997–98	36,498	38,293	14,275	89,065
1998–99	33,882	69,224	4,431	107,537
1999–2000	43,175	45,519	5,652	94,346
2000–01	64,297	29,172	3,314	96,783
2001–02	49,457	22,726	2,587	[1]74,770

[1] To 31 January 2002.

Note:
Estimate for full year equals £89,724

It is not possible to provide a breakdown of costs for UK/abroad. We do not hold any information on reimbursement for business calls made on private phones.

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the target time will be in 2002–03 for (a) Ministers to reply to letters from hon. Members and (b) officials in his Department to reply to letters received directly from members of the public. [44947]

Dr. John Reid: The target time in 2002–03 for Ministers to reply to letters from hon. Members is 10 working days.

The target time in 2002–03 for officials in his Department to reply to letters received directly from members of the public is 15 working days, except in the Compensation Agency where it is 10 working days.

Energy Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on energy costs incurred by his Department in each of the last 10 years. [42445]

Dr. John Reid: Financial information for the years prior to 1996–97 is not readily available.

Details of the Department's (including its agencies, but excluding NDPBs) total expenditure on energy costs for the last six years are:

Year	£
1996–97	3,156,147
1997–98	2,981,720
1998–99	2,616,093
1999–2000	2,684,527
2000–01	2,762,408
2001–02	[1]2,762,408

[1] To end February 2002. Total year estimate £2,259,857

Special Advisers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many special advisers there were in his Department; and what their salaries were in each of the last five years. [46940]

Dr. John Reid: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 11W.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Entry Clearance

David Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions in the last two years applications for visitors' entry clearances have been given on the basis of the constituency hon. Members where the sponsor resides giving their word that the person would leave the UK at the end of the time permitted. [48798]

Mr. Bradshaw: We do not keep records of the reasons behind the issue of entry clearance; it is granted where the applicant meets the requirements of the immigration rules.

Nuclear Materials Transportation

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received on the Hazards of Nuclear Materials Transported from Europe to Japan by (a) CARICOM, (b) the Rio Group and (c) the Pacific Island Forum in the last 12 months. [49494]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Secretary of State received a representation from CARICOM on the movement of nuclear waste through the Caribbean sea while at the UK-Caribbean Forum in Guyana (3–5 April 2002). The Rio Group Heads of State and Government expressed their concern about the risks related to the transit of radioactive materials in the Santiago Declaration of 17 August 2001. We have not received a representation on this from the Pacific Island Forum.

Gibraltar

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when a decision will be made on offering the people of Gibraltar a referendum on their future; who will write the referendum question; in what way the UK Government will be bound by the decision of Gibraltarians; what the UK Government policy will be on a referendum for the people of Gibraltar; if he will publish the full text of the Anglo-Spanish accord on the issue of Gibraltar; and whether the referendum question will be put before Parliament for approval before it is put to the people of Gibraltar. [47964]

Peter Hain: No decisions have been made on the timing or modalities of any referendum other than because it could trigger primary legislation in the UK. HMG will expect to oversee the organisation and timing of any such referendum in consultation with the Government of Gibraltar. The Government have also made clear that any proposals affecting the sovereignty of Gibraltar will be put to the people of Gibraltar and implemented only if they approve them.

Israel

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) pursuant to his answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 689W, to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Kelvin (Mr. Galloway), what changes have been made to the evaluation of end-use undertakings issued by the Israeli Government with reference to Israel's assurances on 29 November 2000 on the use of UK originated equipment and systems; and if he will make a statement; [46418]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 689W, to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Kelvin (Mr. Galloway), what steps the Government are taking to clarify whether UK-controlled goods have been used by the Israel defence force activities in the Occupied Territories; and if he will make a statement. [46419]

Mr. Straw: The written reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Glasgow, Kelvin (Mr. Galloway) on 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 689W, informed Parliament of information that had come to light about UK-supplied equipment licensed for export under a previous Administration and a different export control regime being used in the occupied territories. I undertook to inform my hon. Friend and the House of the response from the Israeli Government to our request for an explanation.

Following parallel action taken in London—on 12 March—and by our embassy in Tel Aviv—on 13 March—the Israeli Foreign Ministry formally responded on 26 March.

The Israeli Foreign Ministry has said that the assurances given on 29 November 2000 were in good faith, and offered an explanation based on operational need about the use of the armoured personnel carriers in the occupied territories. They did not however accept that this was a breach of the assurances given and they have not committed to stop using the armoured personnel carriers in the occupied territories. In the light of this response we will (a) continue to assess export licence applications for the proposed export of controlled goods to Israel on a case-by-case basis against the consolidated EU and national arms export licensing criteria; but (b) in so doing, we will no longer take the Israeli assurances given on 29 November 2000 into account.

We also have questions about other possible breaches of the assurances with regard to equipment supplied under previous Administrations, which we are taking up with the Israeli authorities. I will report the results of our inquiries to the House once they are complete.

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes have been made to the advice given to travellers to Israel since the outbreak of recent fighting; and what further changes to this advice are planned. [49040]

Mr. Bradshaw: All travel advice notices are kept under constant review and updated to reflect the latest security situation.

Since the most recent invasion of the occupied territories on 28–29 March, the travel advice for Israel and the Palestinian Authority has been updated twice to reflect the developments in the security situation and the risks to British nationals in Israel and the Palestinian Authority.

Our key message

"We strongly advise against travel to the west bank and Gaza, the Israel/Gaza border area and the area long Israel's border with Lebanon" has not changed during this period.

On 4 April the travel advice was updated to state that Ramallah and Bethlehem had been declared closed military zones by the Israeli army. This meant that no one can travel in or out. British nationals in the west bank and Gaza were advised to leave when the situation permitted.

Iraq

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence Her Majesty's Government have that Iraq (a) has provided and (b) is planning to provide (i) information and (ii) materials for weapons of mass destruction to the al-Qaeda network. [49484]

Mr. Bradshaw: As we have previously made clear, we have no evidence of links between the Iraqi regime and al-Qaeda. But we are keeping an open mind about Iraqi connections to al-Qaeda and are investigating all reports of links.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what actions his Department has taken in relation to Zimbabwe since the inauguration of Robert Mugabe as President in March. [48786]

Mr. Straw: EU Foreign Ministers will consider further action on Zimbabwe at the General Affairs Council in Luxembourg on 15 April. I will give a substantive reply after the meeting. We also have been in close touch with the Commonwealth Secretariat and individual members of the Commonwealth. The right hon. Member will be aware that, following the election, the Commonwealth "Troika" decided upon the suspension of Zimbabwe from the Councils of the Commonwealth.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the leaders of countries bordering Zimbabwe since the elections in that country last month; and what the results of those talks were. [48785]

Mr. Straw: Ministers and officials continue to be in close touch with key countries in the region and with other international partners about the situation in Zimbabwe.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will list those individuals who have had sanctions imposed on them by the European Union and the United States as a result of political violence and intimidation in Zimbabwe; [48790]

(2) if he will list the occasions on which those individuals against whom targeted sanction have been imposed by the European Union have visited the EU since the 2000 parliamentary elections in Zimbabwe, broken down by (a) country visited and (b) the date of those visits; [48788]

(3) if he will list the individuals who have had applications to visit the European Union turned down by member states and of the EU since the Union imposed targeted sanctions on Zimbabwe. [48791]

Mr. Straw: On 18 February 2002 the European Union imposed a travel ban (and assets freeze) on the following 20 senior members of the Government of Zimbabwe:

President Robert Gabriel Mugabe
Cabinet Secretary Charles Utete
Parliamentary Speaker Emmerson Mnangagwa
Home Affairs Minister John Nkomo
Security Minister Nicholas Goche
Youth Minister Elliot Manyika
Information Minister Jonathan Moyo
Information Minister's Permanent Secretary and Spokesman George Charamba
Justice Minister Patrick Chinamasa
Agricultural Minister Joseph Made
Local Government Minister Ignatius Chombo
Foreign Minister Stan Mudenge
Senior Secretary MFA Willard Chiwewe
General Vitalis Zvinavashe (CDS)
Lieutenant General Constantine Chiwenga (army)
Air Marshal Perence Shiri (air force)
Commissioner Augustine Chihuri (police)
Brigadier Elisha Muzonzini (intelligence)
Prisons chief Paradzai Zimondi
Defence Minister Sidney Sekeramayi.

None of the above mentioned Zimbabweans have attempted to visit the European Union since imposition of the travel ban on 18 February.

We have no access to records of other EU member states. All were entitled to visit the UK prior to 18 February, as Zimbabweans are not required to obtain visas to travel to the UK. No consolidated record will be available for any such visits.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports his Department has received concerning (a) food shortages, (b) politically motivated murders, (c) suppression of the media and (d) political intimidation and oppression in Zimbabwe since the elections. [48787]

Mr. Straw: We and the Department for International Development receive regular reports from a variety of governmental, non-governmental, media and other sources.

(a) Food shortages—UNDP's Humanitarian Assistance and Recovery Programme is providing supplementary feeding to 558,000 people in Zimbabwe. In addition, the Department for International Development is providing supplementary feeding to 300,000 people.

(b) Politically motivated murders—at least 10 opposition supporters, mostly election monitors, are reported to have been killed since the election and many more to have been injured.

(c) Media suppression—the Access to Information Act requires Zimbabwean journalists to be licensed by the Zimbabwean Government, and effectively bans foreign journalists. A report for the Daily Telegraph (a Zimbabwean national) was detained, and subsequently released, over the Easter weekend.

(c) Political intimidation and oppression—see (b) and (c) above.

Civil Servants

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 25 March 2002, Official Report, column 611W, on civil servants, if he will list the type of information held by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's manpower system, whether it provides information on the type of school that staff attended; and what steps his Department takes to ensure that its stated objective of reflecting the diversity of British society is monitored and implemented. [48698]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office's manpower system holds data on personal details, which include marital status, gender, date of birth, number of children, home address, next of kin. Other data held include entry and leaving details, promotion details, staff whereabouts and history, previous Foreign and Commonwealth Office service, appraisal history, skills details, language details, qualification details, employment details and training course details. Historical information on the type of school staff attended is held only in some cases, hence the data are incomplete. The recruitment section monitors ethnicity, gender and disability statistics at each stage of the recruitment process. Since 1995, the recruitment section records have identified the type of school attended for those candidates at policy and operational entry points who successfully gain entrance to the diplomatic service. Before 1995, recruitment data on the type of school were collected only on policy entrants. These figures are published annually in the departmental report. A copy of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office diversity strategy has been placed in the Library of the House.

Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the non-diplomatic service appointments he has made since 7 June 2001. [46226]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 4 December 2001, Official Report, column 210W.

The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has made nine appointments to FCO non-departmental public bodies since 7 June 2001. As well as those included in my answer of 4 December 2001, three appointments have been made to Wilton Park Academic Council (the new appointment of Mr. David Heath MP, and the reappointment of Lady Suzanne Warner and Mr. Nik Gowing).

There have also been a number of non-diplomatic service appointments made by several departments within the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, records of which are not held centrally. These would include members of home civil service staff, 225 having taken up their appointment through open competition, 14 through transfer from other Government Departments; and five reinstated staff.

Timber

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the companies from which his Department has obtained timber and wood products and the total spent with each firm over the last five years. [43406]

Mr. MacShane: Detailed information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, it is FCO policy to buy timber and wood products from sustainable and legal sources.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Egypt

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to increase the provision of overseas aid to Egypt; and if she will make a statement. [48778]

Clare Short: We have no plans to increase direct development assistance to Egypt. The country already receives high levels of assistance from the EC of which the UK contribution was £17.5 million in 1999. Our bilateral allocations to Egypt are £4 million and £3.5 million in 2002–03 and 2003–04 respectively. New commitments will be focused on improving the effectiveness of EC assistance.

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much overseas aid has been provided by her Department to Egypt in each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [48777]

Clare Short: Since 1997 my Department has provided the following amounts of direct assistance to Egypt:

	£000
1996–97	6,229
1997–98	7,246
1998–99	4,947
1999–2000	3,546
2000–01	2,661

We also provide significant indirect assistance via multilateral institutions in particular the EC. In 1999 our share of the EC programme was £17.5 million

India

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions her Department has had with the Andhra Pradesh Government on ensuring that the impact on food security for the population of Andhra Pradesh of strategies developed under the Government's Vision 2020 strategy is taken into account; and if she will make a statement. [48764]

Clare Short: Enhanced livelihood security for the poor is one of the five priorities for DFID support for Andhra Pradesh. We are in on-going dialogue with the Departments of the Government of Andhra Pradesh responsible for policy in the areas of agriculture production and productivity of natural resources. We are providing £45.4 million for the Andhra Pradesh Rural Livelihoods Project which seeks to help 1.5 million people, directly or indirectly, by reducing poverty and vulnerability to drought through land rehabilitation, productive and sustainable farming methods, social mobilisation, employment and non-land based income generation. All these elements have an important contribution to make in enhancing the food security of the poor.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions her Department has had with the Andhra Pradesh Government regarding the consolidation of farms and the impact of the reduction in number of farms on the population of Andhra Pradesh; and if she will make a statement. [48765]

Clare Short: Improving the livelihoods of people in rural areas is a major theme of our dialogue with the Government of Andhra Pradesh. There has been no discussion of any reduction in the number of farms in the state.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions her Department has had with the Andhra Pradesh Government on ensuring that the poorest citizens of Andhra Pradesh benefit from the strategies developed under the Government's Vision 2020 strategy; and if she will make a statement. [48767]

Clare Short: Our partnership with the Government of Andhra Pradesh is entirely focused on the reduction of poverty. As part of our on-going dialogue, DFID representatives participate in discussions of the Government's Poverty Eradication Mission, which the Chief Minister chairs. The Government are establishing a Technical Support Unit in the Mission, in order to strengthen capacity for social and poverty analysis and monitoring. We are currently discussing with the Government possible ways of supporting the Technical Support Unit.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions her Department has had with the Andhra Pradesh Government on ensuring that the environmental impact of strategies developed under the Government's Vision 2020 strategy are taken into account; and if she will make a statement. [48763]

Clare Short: Vision 2020 is a draft document, which was published by the Government of Andhra Pradesh in 1999 setting out a series of goals, including the eradication of poverty in the state in 20 years. In 2000, we initiated a discussion with the Government of Andhra Pradesh and others, including civil society, about how best to deploy our resources so that they contributed most effectively to poverty reduction in the state. This resulted in a DFID strategy paper for Andhra Pradesh, which sets out our approach to assisting in the elimination of poverty in the state by working towards five priorities. A copy of the strategy in the Library of both Houses.

Improved human development outcomes are one of the five priorities for DFID support for Andhra Pradesh. We are in on-going dialogue with the Departments of the Government of Andhra Pradesh responsible for policies affecting the environment about the linkages between environment and poverty. The Government of India are currently considering a proposal from the Government of Andhra Pradesh for DFID to provide support for additional strategic environmental assessment of Vision 2020.

Palestine

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what assessment has been made of the recent damage to the water supply pipelines in (a) Ramallah, (b) Qalqilya, (c) Bethlehem, (d) Tulkarm and (e) Nablus; [48800]

(2) what assessment has been made of the damage to the emergency water and sanitation programme in the West Bank by recent Israeli action; and what is the (a) estimated cost of this damage and (b) estimated number of beneficiaries affected. [48773]

Clare Short: Water is a critical issue with the WBGS, and since the Intifada began, the international community has collaborated with the Palestinian institutions to help address both urgent short term needs and the longer term institutional and physical infrastructure.

Water and sanitation, along with other basic services, has been dramatically affected by the recent escalation of violence. The international community, together with the Palestinian authorities, is gathering data on areas where there is no direct access to water supplies. But it has not yet been possible to make a comprehensive assessment of the damage incurred. Access to many areas is still denied.

Israel

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations have been made to the Israeli Government to allow entry of relief consignments and facilitate their transport into the Occupied Territories. [48793]

Clare Short: The Government has called for an immediate and full Israeli withdrawal from Palestinian towns, which would facilitate human relief access, in accordance with UN Security Council Resolution 1402.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) how much UK aid to Israel and the Palestinian territories has been obstructed by (a) Israel and (b) Palestinians during the recent violence in the Middle East; [48967]

(2) what guidance she issues to UK air workers in Israel and the occupied territories; [48971]

(3) what representations she has made to the Government of Israel regarding the obstruction of humanitarian aid to Palestinians; [48969]

(4) to what extent the humanitarian needs of the Palestinians have increased during the recent violence between Israel and the Palestinians; and if she intends to change her aid policy to Palestinian territories; [48965]

(5) if she will make a statement on her assessment of the security of UK aid workers in each country in the Middle East; [48973]

(6) when she last had discussions with the Palestinian Authority regarding the humanitarian consequences of terrorist attacks on Israel; and when she next intends to do so; [48968]

(7) what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of UK aid to the occupied territories; and how she intends to increase the effectiveness of her Department's spending in the occupied territories; [48972]

(8) what assurances she has received from the Government of Israel regarding the safety of UK aid workers in the occupied territories; [48970]

(9) if she will make a statement on the humanitarian situation within Palestinian refugee camps; what assistance her Department provides to the refugee camps; and if she intends to increase aid to the refugee camps; [48966]

(10) if she has made an assessment of the water shortage problems in the Palestinian refugee camps. [48974]

Clare Short: There are approximately three million Palestinians living in the West Bank Gaza Strip, nearly half of whom are registered refugees. Following three consecutive years of rising real per capita income from 1997 to 2000, the Palestinian economy has been hit hard by the conflict. Surveys have barely been able to keep up with the level of damage inflicted on the Palestinian economy since the start of the Intifada in 2000. Damage to infrastructure, loss of life and strict closure activities has led to a dramatic decline in economic activity, particularly as Palestinians have been denied access to their jobs over the Israeli border. During 2001, it is estimated that GNI had declined by 12–15 per cent., unemployment risen by up to 50 per cent., and the numbers of people living below of the poverty (US$2 a day) increased to 50 per cent..

The damage inflicted during the recent escalation of violence, in terms of destruction of infrastructure (including basic services), damage to private property and government buildings will take some time to quantify. But it has further desecrated livelihoods, disrupted the delivery of water and sanitation, health and education services, and undermined the institutions of government.

We are working with others to try to determine the full extent of the damage and the humanitarian consequences. But international efforts remain hampered by restricted access. It is clear that there will be no improvements in the situation without an end to violence and a return to negotiations.

I have kept our programme of development assistance under close review. The long-term goal remains unchanged—the establishment of a viable Palestinian State, which can co-exist peacefully with Israel. The strategy also remains valid: to provide help for immediate and emergency needs while at the same time working for longer-term sustainable and institutional development.

The economic and social decline over the past 18 months has required a review of the balance between longer-term goals and urgent needs. We have sought to provide emergency assistance in ways that can contribute to sustainable development. As soon as possible we will work for a rapid assessment of the current situation and set priorities for action so that all agencies can respond in a co-ordinated and effective manner.

DFID is committed to support the United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNWRA) in meeting the needs of Palestinian refugees. We have steadily increased our financial and technical support to UNRWA, from £6 million in 1997 to £35 million in 2001, in response to the rising needs. I am in contact with Commissioner General Peter Hansen about the impact of the Israeli Defence Force incursions to many UNRWA camps, and what additional support is required for urgent actions. We have provided £5 million for the 2002 Emergency Appeal and will consider urgently what further support we can give, on top of our planned contribution for this year to UNRWA's core activities.

It is hard to quantify the impact of violence on UK development assistance. Closures and violence have adversely affected all programmes. It has proved difficult for international staff to travel to the region. In addition, closures and violence have hindered the movement of project staff. Prior to the recent incursions, we were confident that projects would meet their goals, albeit in a longer time period. We will need to look afresh at the impact on our programmes of recent intense incursions.

The UK does not provide any development assistance to Israel.

The Government has serious concerns for the safety of civilians and the access of medical, humanitarian and consular aid. We have made clear to Israel at the highest level that we expect them to ensure that medical and humanitarian organisations and Consular staff have uninterrupted access to those in need. The Foreign Secretary stressed these concerns to Israeli Foreign Minister Peres in a telephone call on 10 April.

The Government has repeatedly called on the Palestinian authority to take determined action to prevent terrorist attacks against Israeli citizens.

We have called on both Israel and the Palestinian Authority to implement UN Security Council Resolution 1402, including the establishment of a meaningful ceasefire, the withdrawal of Israeli troops from palestinian towns and the implementation of the Tenet plan and Mitchell recommendations, with the aim of resuming negotiations on a political settlement.

We have tried and trusted mechanisms in place to provide security requirements for UK aid workers. DFID currently employs three people in the Consulate General in Jerusalem, and one secondee to the local EC office. UK and other nationals are also contracted under DFID-funded projects.

Those who work in the West Bank and Gaza Strip are aware they are operating in an unstable environment. All who travel to the area are fully briefed on the security situation and travel restrictions. UK nationals based permanently in the WBGS appear on the Consulate General Register, and the Consulate General is in regular contact, especially in times of crisis.

There are no aid-funded workers in Israel.

We judge that the risks posed to aid personnel in other Middle Eastern countries—Jordan, Egypt, Yemen and Iraq in DFID's context—are less acute. However, we, and the Foreign Office, continue to monitor the safety of people in the region closely.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Amy Gehring

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if her Department has received a similar letter to that received from the Police about Amy Gehring in the last 12 months. [45857]

Mr. Timms: The police report any conviction, except for minor road traffic offences, of a teacher (including a former teacher or a student teacher), or ancillary worker in a school or further education institution, to my officials. They also report any conviction of a proprietor of an independent school or a youth worker.

The police write to the Department about a range of issues relating to individuals connected with schools. We do not record these reports centrally in a way that allows us to compare them to the report received in respect of Amy Gehring.

Graduate Unemployment

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the rate of unemployment of newly graduated students has been for each of the last 10 years. [46335]

Margaret Hodge: The latest available information, which shows the unemployment rates for newly qualified graduates six months after graduation, is shown in the table. Information for students graduating in 2001 will be available in June 2002. As at spring 2001, the unemployment rate for all graduates in the population, at 2.4 per cent., was around half that for the workforce as a whole, at 4.6 per cent.

Destinations of full-time first degree students from higher education institutions in England

Year of graduation	Total graduates with known destination	of which, those who were unemployed[1]:
		Numbers	Percentage
1990	83,340	7,280	8.7
1991	87,380	11,070	12.7
1992	96,660	13,750	14.2
1993	108,360	14,040	13.0
1994	121,390	12,870	10.6

2. Covers UK domiciled and EU students only; figures for previous years cover UK domiciled, EU and other overseas students.

Selective Schools

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of selective schools by category are located (a) within five, (b) five to 10, (c) 10 to 15 and (d) more than 15 kilometres from settlements with under 3,000 people. [46508]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is not readily available and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

School Spending

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what expenditure in real terms per pupil was in (a) maintained secondary schools and (b) primary schools in each local education authority each year between 1979 and 1989. [47044]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is not held in this form by the Department and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Some information is provided in the CIPFA 'Handbook of Education unit costs' for the years from 1984–85.

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average spend per pupil has been in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in each year since 1995 in (i) England, (ii) York, (iii) the highest spending local education authority and (iv) the lowest spending local education authority in England. [46767]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is contained in the following tables:

Adult Education

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding has been made available to education authorities in inner London boroughs to promote services for adult education in the last three years. [48681]

Mr. Timms: 2001–02 is the latest year for which specific funding figures on adult education are available: the LSC made available £17.8 million in grant to inner London education authorities in that year. Prior to this, it was for each authority to decide how much of its education SSA it wished to spend to promote services for adult education: total education SSA for the inner London authorities was £1,187 million for 1999–2000 and £1,248 million for 2000–01. 'Adult Education' is interpreted as the local education authority secured adult education sector.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Starter Homes Initiative

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 26 March 2022, Official Report, column 979W, if he will publish a list of the organisations and local authorities which have or are due to receive funding under the Starter Homes Initiative. [49888]

Mr. Byers: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (Sally Keeble) to the hon. Member for East Worthing and Shoreham (Tim Loughton) on 29 October 2001, Official Report, columns 484W-88W.

Rough Sleeping

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to reduce the incidence of rough sleeping in rural settlements with populations under 3,000; and if he will make a statement. [46454]

Ms Keeble: Recorded levels of rough sleeping in small rural settlements are not high. On 3 December 2001 the Prime Minister announced that the Rough Sleepers Unit had achieved its target of reducing rough sleeping by at least two-thirds by 2002.

The latest published rough sleeping figures for England show that all local authority areas containing rural settlements with populations under 3,000 returned either a count of less than 10 rough sleepers or an estimate of 0–10.

On 13 March the DTLR launched "More than a roof", the Government's new approach to tackling homelessness, which has sustaining the two-thirds reduction in rough sleeping as one of its key objectives.

Many former rough sleepers have now moved into shelters, hostels and their own homes as part of their move to an independent lifestyle, but many still need help to rebuild their lives away from the streets. It is also vital that we continue to prevent those vulnerable to rough sleeping from hitting the streets in the first place and that those still on the streets receive the help they need to come inside.

The DTLR will invest over £30 million during 2002–03 to support local strategies around the country to ensure the two thirds reduction is sustained—the same level of revenue funding that led to the Rough Sleepers Unit meeting its target.

The new Homelessness Act will also bring about radical change in the way that central and local government, and all other partners, work together to tackle homelessness in all parts of the country including rural areas. For the first time ever, local authorities will be required to carry out a review and develop a strategy for their area that prevents homelessness and provides solutions for people who are, or who may become, homeless.

Planning

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions in the last three years, how many developments have been referred for his determination, pursuant to the arrangements set out in Part IV of the memorandum attached to DOE circular 18/84; and in respect of these referrals, how many he has decided (a), pursuant to written representations and (b) following a non-statutory public inquiry. [48938]

Ms Keeble: The Department does not maintain a central record of these cases and the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how often in the last three years, and for what purpose, his Department has applied the special urgency provisions in paragraph 22 of Circular 18/84 (Development by Government Departments). [48947]

Ms Keeble: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Mid-Worcestershire (Mr. Luff) on Friday 1 March 2002, Official Report, columns 1590–591W.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what matters he takes into consideration when deciding whether to rely on written representations or to institute a non-statutory public inquiry when determining a referral to his Department, pursuant to the arrangements set out in Part IV of the memorandum attached to DOE circular 18/84; [48937]

(2) when instituting a non-statutory public inquiry, pursuant to the arrangements set out in Part IV of the memorandum attached to DOE circular 18/84, what format he would expect such an inquiry to take; and if he would expect providers of local services and members of the local community to be able to give evidence. [48936]

Ms Keeble: DOE circular 18/84 makes it clear that the method of written representations will be suitable for most cases. But where there is evidence of interest by other parties the dispute may be resolved by either a meeting of the representatives of the local planning authority and the developing Department or through a non-statutory public local inquiry. Planning inquiries for cases decided by the Secretary of State follow the Town and Country Planning (Inquiries Procedure) (England) Rules 2000. But an inquiry held under the arrangements set out in DOE circular 18/84 is non-statutory and so it is not bound by these rules. However, it is expected that any such inquiry would follow the spirit of these rules so far as practicable and that interested parties would be given an opportunity to express their views.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what rules govern meetings between Ministers and hon. Members on planning issues awaiting decision. [48784]

Ms Keeble: Such meetings are covered by Guidance On Propriety Issues In The Handling Of Planning Casework In DTLR . A copy of the guidance is available on the Department's website [www.planning.dtlr.gov.uk/gpihpc].

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the reasons underlying proposals to reform the planning system. [49489]

Ms Keeble: The reasons underlying the proposals for reform of the planning system are set out in chapter two of the Planning Green Paper: 'Planning: Delivering a fundamental change'. A separate consultation document concerning the planning system in Wales has been issued by the National Assembly.

Affordable Houses (Lancashire)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much turnover new town land in Lancashire has been allowed for affordable houses in the last five years; and if he will list the sites. [47427]

Ms Keeble: Over the last five years approximately six hectares of New Town Land in Lancashire has been released for development of affordable houses. The sites are:

(i) Cottam Hall, Preston

(ii) Eastway, Fulwood

(iii) Railway Road, Skelmersdale.

Boundary Commission for Wales

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when the Boundary Commission for Wales will report its results. [45903]

Dr. Whitehead: The Commission anticipate that they will commence their next general review and a review of Assembly electoral regions in December 2002. They are obliged by statute to submit their report by 15 December 2006, but hope to do so before the end of 2004.

Trial Lane Rental

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the predicated annual income generated by the trial lane rental schemes is. [49874]

Ms Keeble: The Government is not yet in a position to calculate accurately the amount likely to be raised by the lane rental pilot schemes in Camden and Middlesbrough. However, we have appointed consultants—Halcrow—to monitor the pilots and they will be reporting to us in due course on the effect of the schemes in reducing disruption which utility street works cause to road users as well as the charges paid by utility companies.

Local Authorities (Joint Working)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress since the issue of draft guidance in December 2000 on powers to enable joint working and pooling of budgets between local authorities and other public agencies. [47266]

Dr. Whitehead [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Following consultation with local authorities on draft guidance on the well being power provided under Part 1, Section 2 of the Local Government Act 2000, the Government published final guidance in March 2001. Copies are available from the DTLR website.

The Department also published on 29 March 2001 a Consultation Paper, "Working with Others to Achieve Best Value: A Consultation Paper on Changes to the Legal Framework to Facilitate Partnership Working". The proposed Section 16 powers complement the provisions in the 2000 Act, extend the approaches available to other local authority functions, and go further in some areas of activity. We expect to lay the Orders before Parliament later in the year.

Council Tax

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list those local authorities imposing an increase in council tax for a Band D property in excess of 10 per cent. in financial years (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2001–02. [48735]

Dr. Whitehead: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 9848W, on the New Deal for Young People, what information he collates on the subsequent destinations of people who were employed by his Department under the scheme. [50338]

Dr. Whitehead: Records are not kept of whether New Deal staff take up employment on leaving this Department.

Maladministration

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what payments have been made to individuals following findings of maladministration by ombudsmen with responsibility for agencies under the remit of his Department in the last 12 months; and what plans he has to review the powers to increase the level of awards that can be made. [47954]

Dr. Whitehead [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Department has made four such payments totalling £535,215.54 to individuals in the past 12 months.

There are no statutory limits to the level of payments that can be made. Payments are based on the merits of individual cases.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many times Ministers in his Department have travelled abroad at taxpayers' expense since March 2001; what countries they visited; and what the total cost of each visit was. [47105]

Dr. Whitehead [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister, on 11 April 2002, ref. (47100).

Special Advisers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many times special advisers have accompanied Ministers on overseas visits in each of the last five years; which countries were visited; and what the total cost of each individual visit was. [47135]

Dr. Whitehead [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Westmoreland and Lonsdale (Tim Collins) on 7 March 2002, Official Report, column 572W. Details of special adviser travel for the period 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 will be published as soon as possible.

User Consultation

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what new steps his Department took in 2001–02 to consult the users of its services about their wishes and expectations; and if he will publish the findings. [47304]

Dr. Whitehead [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The executive agencies of DTLR regularly consult their customers and representative bodies on customer service issues. In many cases the overall results are published in their annual reports. The outcomes are used to inform service developments. The methods and timing of consultation are designed to fit the nature of individual services and are kept under review.

External Consultants

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much his Department has spent on external consultants in each of the past five years. [46035]

Dr. Whitehead [holding answer 26 March 2002]: The Department's consultancy spend is as follows:

2000–01	98,700,000
2001–02	119,022,000

These figures include spend by the former Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions. Figures for the previous three years can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Multi-Modal Studies

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when and where the recent DTLR Multi-Modal Study infrastructure charging seminar took place; and who attended it. [49462]

Mr. Byers: The seminar was held on 1 February in the conference hall at Mary Sumner House, 24 Tufton Street, London SW1. It was attended by officials from DTLR, the Government Offices for the Regions and the Highways Agency and by consultants working on each of the multi-modal studies.

Airport Security

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to increase security at UK airports. [45902]

Mr. Jamieson: Following the attacks on 11 September, heightened aviation security measures were immediately introduced at all UK airports and for all airlines operating from the UK. Security requirements remain at an enhanced level.

An additional package of action was announced by the Secretary of State on 28 March, following the review of airside security carried out as a result of the recent robberies at Heathrow. Measures include enhancements to current access control systems, extensions to the use of counter terrorist checks and criminal record checks for airport staff, and improvement of CCTV systems at airports.

Open Skies

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress towards an Open Skies agreement with the US. [49873]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government would like to liberalise the UK-US aviation market in a way that would allow UK airlines to be able to compete with US airlines on fair terms. We are reviewing the policy options for achieving that objective.

Airports (Slot Allocation)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what his policy is on European airport slot allocation. [49818]

Mr. Jamieson: Slot allocation is governed by European Regulation 95/93. The Commission issued a proposal to amend this regulation in June 2001. This proposal is being carefully considered following consultation with the UK aviation industry. The UK's objective is to ensure the most efficient use of scarce airport infrastructure.

Seamen

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what estimates he has made of the effect of the tonnage tax on employment of UK seamen. [48847]

Mr. Jamieson: It is too early for meaningful estimates to be made. However, to date 50 groups of companies have been approved by the Inland Revenue for entry into tonnage tax. These 50 groups, and eight more, have received approval from the DTLR of their training commitments. This equates to about 509 officer training places.

We believe that recent changes we have made to the Support for Maritime Training (SMarT) scheme, together with the tonnage tax training commitments, will lead to a significant increase in seafarer recruitment.

Overstay Charges (Utility Services)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions which Department receives the overstay charges from utility services for any work not completed within the agreed period under Section 74A of the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991. [49875]

Ms Keeble: Where a highway authority chooses to impose overstay charges on utility companies, under section 74 of the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991, the authority can keep the moneys received to meet the cost of operating the charging scheme and can spend any surplus on developing policies for the promotion and encouragement of safe, integrated, efficient and economic transport facilities and services to, from and within their area. The proceeds are not retained by central Government.

Section 74A of the 1991 Act covers a separate system, under which undertakers carrying out works have to pay a daily charge from the outset of works, or "lane rental". Pilots schemes testing these powers are currently under way in Middlesbrough and the London borough of Camden. Again, the highway authority is permitted to retain the proceeds of the charging scheme.

Abandoned Vehicles

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many responses to the consultation on abandoned cars were received; how many were (a) supportive of and (b) against reducing the notice period for removal; when he expects to bring forward proposals for reform; and if he will make a statement. [48746]

Mr. Jamieson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 10 April a package of measures that the Government had taken to deal with the problem of abandoned vehicles. New regulations came into effect on 9 April to reduce the notice periods after which abandoned vehicles could be removed and disposed of. It is now possible where vehicles of no value have been abandoned on the highway for a local authority to remove and dispose of them on the termination of a 24 hour notice. In addition, measures were announced to promote joint working between local authorities and the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency.

My right hon. Friend also announced his intention to reform the vehicle registration system to ensure that, in future, all vehicles can be traced to the correct keeper.

The Government's consultation on abandoned cars issued in October 2001 attracted 361 responses from organisations and individuals. Over half of the respondents were local authorities. A full report has been placed in the Libraries of the House, giving a breakdown of responses and a full list of respondents.

In general respondents supported the Government's proposals. 115 respondents expressed support for the proposals as a whole, 155 expressed a general support for immediate measures including the reduction of notice periods, with 46 expressly supporting the reduction of notice periods. There was very little opposition to the proposals.

Private Hire Vehicles

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress of the implementation of the Private Hire Vehicle Registration (London) Act 1998. [49263]

Mr. Jamieson: Responsibility for the regulation of private hire vehicles in London has been passed to the Mayor. The Public Carriage Office undertakes the licensing function as part of Transport for London.

Road Use

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the estimated number of vehicle kilometres travelled is in each of the last five years by (a) lorries, (b) cars and (c) all vehicles. [49701]

Mr. Byers: The information is published in Transport Statistics Bulletin 02(5)—Traffic in Great Britain: Q4 2001 (Table 2), a copy of which is in the Libraries of the House.

Interactive Speed Signs

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when his Department will approve interactive speed signs for general use by highways authorities. [48792]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department commissioned trials over several years to establish the effectiveness and suitability of vehicle activated signs and the results are being collated into a report to be published during the summer.

Motoring Charges

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much the Ten Year Transport Plan estimates will be raised in (a) congestion/road charging schemes and (b) work place parking charge schemes over the period of the plan. [49464]

Mr. Byers: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, to the hon. Member for Epsom and Ewell (Chris Grayling) on 25 February 2002, Official Report, column 791W.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what steps he is taking to ensure that the provisions of the Channel Tunnel Act 1987 concerning regional passenger services are put into effect. [49959]

Mr. Jamieson: The Transport Act 2000 repealed the part of the Channel Tunnel Act 1987 concerning regional passenger services and, as of 2001, the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) has a duty under S206(4) of the Transport Act 2000 to formulate a strategy for British passenger services through the Channel Tunnel.

In the year 2000 the British Railways Board reviewed its plan for international regional services as it was obliged to do under Section 40 of the Channel Tunnel Act 1987. This review is available on its website at www.brb.gov.uk and concludes that Regional Eurostar services would be heavily loss making and that there are no economic, environmental or social grounds for providing a subsidy.

The SRA have said that later this year they will publish a strategy relating to services in various parts of Great Britain for facilitating the carriage of passengers or goods by rail by way of the Channel Tunnel.

CLG

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what costs have been incurred to date by the CLG team; [46963]

(2) what budget has been provided to the CLG team for the period up to 30 July. [46964]

Mr. Jamieson: The SRA has approved a budget for the CLG bid to the end of July 2002 of £11,163,327. Costs incurred to the end of February 2002 were £1,203,697.

Station Platforms

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the proposals to extend platforms at Stonehouse, Gloucestershire station. [39437]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 1 March 2002]: I am not aware of any current proposals to extend these platforms. Any future proposals would be for Railtrack and the Strategic Rail Authority to consider.

Railtrack

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will place a copy of the railway administrators' six month progress report in the Library. [49458]

Mr. Byers: Although this is not a Government document, the administrator has agreed to a copy of his six month statement of proposals and progress report being placed in the Libraries of the House.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much the Government have spent on Railtrack administration; and if he will break down the costs by the main heads of expenditure. [47518]

Mr. Jamieson: £1.932 billion was drawn down from the Government loan facility and repaid by Railtrack plc in Administration on 25 March. £1.615 billion was used from the Trust Facility to pay pre-Administration trade and finance creditors and £0.317 billion was used from the Working Capital Facility.

Network Rail

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what information has been provided by the Strategic Rail Authority on the increase in borrowings from their pre-administration level to the £9 billion envisaged by Network Rail. [48185]

Mr. Jamieson: It is for bidders for Railtrack plc to set out their proposed debt finance requirements, based where appropriate on information available from the Administrator and from published sources.

Railways

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many franchise agreements with train operating companies include provisions for the Government to underwrite any part of the franchise in the event of the regulatory system changing. [46968]

Mr. Byers: All franchise agreements remove the regulatory risk or opportunity arising from a change to track and station access charges, following a regulatory review, so that the franchise operator makes no windfall profit or loss as a result of the change.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has for increasing the percentage of the rail network that is electrified. [49709]

Mr. Byers: Rail electrification schemes will be considered where clear practical advantages and/or environmental benefits exist, and value for money can be demonstrated.

Mr. Lyons: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will estimate the cost of repairs necessary on (a) the East Coast and (b) the West Coast main lines to Scotland. [48835]

Mr. Jamieson: This is an operational matter for Railtrack.

Train Punctuality

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what discussions he has had with (a) First Western Trains and (b) Wales and West Trains to produce a strategy to improve punctuality. [48602]

Mr. Jamieson: The Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) has regular meetings with all train operators regarding train performance, at which punctuality and reliability of services are discussed. In the Directions and Guidance published by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 11 April, the SRA has been given a primary objective to work with the rail industry to achieve substantial lasting improvements in performance. The Directions and Guidance has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Rail Fares

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much additional funding would be generated if regulated rail fares rise by the retail prices index in the 10-year plan. [47385]

Mr. Jamieson: The Strategic Rail Authority estimates that a 10 per cent. increase in regulated fares might generate an increase of between 4 and 6 per cent. in fare revenue.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Departmental Spending

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total expenditure was on (a) advertising, (b) polling, (c) focus groups, (d) design consultants, (e) caterers, (f) production of departmental publications and (g) photographs/photographers by her Department for each year since 1995 in (i) cash and (ii) real terms; what was (A) the annual percentage increase in spending on each category and (B) spending on each category as a percentage of the total departmental running costs; and if she will make a statement. [6902]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA was created on 8 June 2001. Historic information prior to this date, relating to the merged operations which constitute DEFRA, could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Publicity expenditure is not recorded in the format requested. Our records show a publicity spend for the six months following DEFRA's creation of £1,373,737 and includes the categories in the question.

This expenditure is not exhaustive and excludes foot and mouth disease expenditure and the merged ex-DETR directorates, also non-departmental public bodies and agencies. The recovery of this expenditure would incur a disproportionate cost.

The Government are committed to using only whatever channel is judged to be the most cost-effective way to deliver the publicity necessary to support the implementation of policy. Paid advertising is resorted to only after careful consideration.

Sustainable Development

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department has taken in response to the (a) ECE Regional Assessment report on progress made in the implementation of Local Agenda 21, (b) conclusions on sustainable development of the OECD Ministerial Council Meeting of May 2001 and (c) EU Sustainable Development Strategy of June 2001. [46568]

Mr. Meacher: (a) The ECE Regional Assessment report covered the implementation of Agenda 21, not Local Agenda 21. The UK has promoted the conclusions of the report in subsequent discussions in the EU and the UN in preparations for the World Summit on Sustainable Development.

(b) The OECD Policy Report on Sustainable Development was endorsed by environment and finance Ministers at the OECD Ministerial Committee Meeting on 17 May 2001. The report outlines a policy framework for better integrating economic, environmental and social objectives, and decoupling economic growth from a range of environmental pressures. In response to the report, my Department has been closely involved in an initiative to develop indicators of sustainable development for use in OECD peer reviews. We have used the report to inform our approach to the external dimension of the EU Sustainable Development Strategy and to the OECD's institutional report to the World Summit on Sustainable Development.

(c) The Department has supported the implementation of the EU Sustainable Development Strategy through conclusions adopted by the Environment Council on 12 December 2000 and 4 March 2001, and at regular meetings with the European Commission and member states; reviewing the strategy is the responsibility of the European Council at its annual spring meetings.

Rural Public Houses

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the Countryside Agency's 'The Pub's the Hub' campaign; and if she will make a statement. [46453]

Alun Michael: The concept of the pub being "the hub" of the rural community is being promoted by Business in the Community as part of its Rural Action programme launched in July 2001. Rural pubs have great potential to assume a business and community role in the future as one-stop shops for essential rural services while at the same time helping them to increase their own long term viability.

In December 2001 the Countryside Agency, working with Business in the Community and the British Beer and Pubs Association published "The Pub is the Hub: a Good Practice Guide". This guide provides local case studies of village pub diversification, and a check list for expanding business opportunities.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Publicity Expenditure

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the publicity and advertising campaigns run by her Department in each of the last four years, specifying the (a) purpose, (b) cost to public funds, (c) number of staff involved and (d) method of evaluation in each case. [39091]

Ms Hewitt: The table lists the costs of DTI advertising campaigns through the COI for the last four years for which final figures are available. Information regarding the purpose, number of staff involved, and method of evaluation for each campaign is not held centrally, and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list her overseas visits since 7 June 2001. [46222]

Ms Hewitt: As Secretary of State, I have undertaken the following overseas visits since 7 June 2001.

United States of America
Italy
Spain
Qatar
Belgium
South Korea
Japan.

Quarries

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessments she has made of (a) the number of operational quarries in the UK (i) now and (ii) 10 years ago and (b) the percentage change in full-time quarrying jobs over the last 10 years. [45739]

Mr. Wilson: No special assessments of the quarrying industry have been made in order to determine the number of operational sites and the number of full-time employees. Each year, we conduct a survey of quarrying known as the Annual Minerals Raised Inquiry, which is sent to all quarries having extant planning permission, for the purpose of determining the amount of material being quarried. Over the period 1990 to 2000, the number of such quarries dealing with either stone or sand and gravel declined slightly from around 1,780 to around 1,710. However, over the same period, the number of people present within quarries and covered by the provisions of the Mines and Quarries Acts 1954 and 1969 declined in these quarries by some 40 per cent. from around 31,500 to around 18,000.

British Investment Projects

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what figures she has collated on how many British investment projects there have been into Japan in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98, (c) 1998–99, (d) 1999–2000 and (e) 2000–01; what their size was; and how many of those projects were (i) engineering and (ii) manufacturing based. [46445]

Nigel Griffiths: There is no requirement on companies to record British direct investment overseas on a project basis and there is no organisation in Japan that records inward investment in the way that Invest.UK does for the UK.

The Office for National Statistics publish figures for the value of UK net investment flows into Japan. Figures detailing flows for 1996 to 2000 are given in the table. The dramatic increase in investment in 1999 and 2000 is probably accounted for by investments by Vodafone and Cable and Wireless.

Sellafield

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the result of the investigations undertaken by the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate into an accident on Friday 8 February in one of the magnox reactors at Calder Hall in Sellafield. [47037]

Mr. Wilson: The event on 8 February at Calder Hall did not warrant an NII investigation. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for North Down on 6 March 2002, Official Report, columns 356–57W for a statement on the event, which noted that defuelling at Calder Hall has been suspended until BNFL reports the outcome of its internal investigation and completes any requirements for remedial action. NII is now monitoring the implementation of the recommendations of BNFL's investigation.

British Nuclear Fuels

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate has given the necessary regulatory approval required by British Nuclear Fuels before it can return the faulty MOX fuel it has supplied to Japan; and if she will place a copy of the approval document in the Library. [46911]

Mr. Wilson: HSE's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate has informed BNFL that it has no regulatory objections on health and safety grounds to BNFL receiving and storing this fuel at its Sellafield site. I am arranging for copies to be placed in the Libraries of the House of its unconditional acknowledgement of BNFL's safety documentation, the formal means by which this was done.

Small Businesses

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her latest estimate is of the number of businesses in the United Kingdom which employ fewer than 200 people; and what proportion of all businesses in the United Kingdom they represent. [49485]

Nigel Griffiths: In 2000 there were approximately 3.7 million businesses in the UK that employed fewer than 200 employees. This was equivalent to 99.8 per cent. of all UK businesses in 2000.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her latest estimate is of the percentage of the private sector work force which is employed by companies with (a) fewer than 200 employees and (b) fewer than 100 employees. [49488]

Nigel Griffiths: In 2000 there were approximately 22 million people employed in the private sector or public corporations. Of these 48.5 per cent. were in businesses with fewer than 100 employees. 53.5 per cent. were employed by businesses with fewer than 200 employees.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her latest estimate is of the share of national output produced by companies with (a) fewer than 200 employees and (b) fewer than 100 employees. [49487]

Nigel Griffiths: National output, or GDP, data is not collected by size of business. Two proxies for this measure are employment share and turnover share, which are collected by size of business. The table shows the figures for businesses with fewer than 200 and 100 employees:

	UK per cent.
Employees	Employment share	Turnover share
0–99	48.5	38.7
0–199	53.5	44.5

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her latest estimate is of the number of sole trader businesses in the United Kingdom; and what proportion of all businesses in the United Kingdom they represent. [49479]

Nigel Griffiths: In 2000 there were approximately 2.6 million businesses in the UK that were classified as having no employees. This figure includes sole proprietorships, partnerships comprising only the self-employed owner-manager(s) and companies comprising only an employee director. These 2.6 million equate to 69.6 per cent. of all UK businesses.

Electricity Industry

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will bring forward legislation to establish British electricity trading and transmission arrangements, as recommended by Ofgem. [50641]

Ms Hewitt: I have been working closely with colleagues in the Scotland Office and the Scottish Executive. We have concluded that the time is now right to join the separate markets in Scotland and England and Wales together to create a GB electricity market. The Government will bring forward legislation to achieve this when parliamentary time allows.

Minimum Wage

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the national minimum wage. [49988]

Ms Hewitt: The Government said last year, following recommendations from the Low Pay Commission, that it would consider the economic circumstances at the time before deciding whether to increase the main and development rates of the minimum wage by 10 pence/hour in October 2002, to £4.20 and £3.60 respectively.

The Government have considered the latest evidence across the overall economy and in the key sectors most affected by the minimum wage. We have concluded that conditions in the autumn of 2002 can be expected to support increases of 10 pence/hour and will therefore make regulations implementing these increases later this year. We have placed a short paper on this subject in the Libraries of the House.

Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps have been taken to ensure that practical measures directed at the arms industry are in place for the enforcement of Part 12 of the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001. [46296]

Beverley Hughes: I have been asked to reply.

Part 12 of the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 applies to the arms industry in the same way as it applies in other fields. Under these provisions, United Kingdom nationals and United Kingdom-registered corporate bodies are liable to prosecution in the United Kingdom for offences of bribery and corruption committed overseas. The provisions will be enforced by the police, the Crown Prosecution Service and (in appropriate cases) by the Serious Fraud Office.

UK Online

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what criteria were used in selecting Loudcloud to host the UK online website; and if she will make a statement; [43210]

(2) how many (a) companies and (b) UK companies were invited to tender for the contract to host the UK online website; [43211]

(3) what discussions took place with the Prime Minister's Office regarding the choice of companies invited to tender for the contract to run the UK online website. [43212]

Mr. Leslie: I have been asked to reply.

No discussions took place with the Prime Minister's Office regarding the choice of company selected to run the UK online website.

Negotiations between the Office of the e-Envoy and BT Syntegra on renewal of the UK online contract broke down in autumn 2001. OeE received legal advice that—given the need to maintain continuity of service—the only option was to contract directly for hosting services with BT's proposed sub-contractor, Loudcloud UK, a UK company. Doing so was fully compliant with EC procurement rules.

Prescription Medicines (Internet Trading)

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on her Department's monitoring of dot.com chemists and their supply of prescription medicines. [42724]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

The Medicines Control Agency do not routinely monitor 'dot com' pharmacies. However, their Enforcement Group investigate any illegal activity of which they are made aware, including the supply of prescription medicines via the internet.

WALES

Legal Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what legal costs have been incurred by his Department in each of the last four years. [34293]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The external costs of the former Welsh Office were £568,000 in 1998–99 and £55,000 in the first quarter of 1999–2000.

Since it came into existence in July 1999, the Wales Office has not separately distinguished legal costs.

Accountancy Contracts

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the (a) number and (b) value of contracts awarded by his Department to (i) Arthur Andersen, (ii) Deloitte Touche, (ii) Ernst and Young, (iv) KPMG and (v) PricewaterhouseCoopers accountants in each year since 1997. [34984]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Since its creation in July 1999, my Department has had no contracts with any of these accountancy firms.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the contracts agreed by his Department with the five largest accountancy firms since May 1997; and what was the total value of contracts with each. [42108]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department was created in July 1999 and has entered no contracts with these accountancy firms.

Publicity Expenditure

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the total real terms expenditure of his Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on publicity in each of the years (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000, (d) 2000–01 and (e) 2001–02 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole of the present year; and if he will break these figures down to indicate expenditure on (A) advertising and (B) press and public relations. [36165]

Mr. Paul Murphy: This information is not readily available. However, my Department does not have the sort of executive responsibilities which would generally require advertising or public relations expenditure. It has no agencies or non-departmental public bodies.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many staff left the service of his Department and its agencies in the year ended 31 March 2001; how many left before attaining the formal retirement age of 60 years; and in respect of how many his Department and its agencies assumed responsibilities for making payments until retirement age. [37543]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The permanent civil servants in my Department are all secondees from elsewhere and so when they leave the Wales Office it is to return to their home Departments.

The Wales Office does not have any agencies.

Correspondence

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the average response time was for responding to departmental correspondence; what percentage of letters took longer than one month for a response; and what percentage took longer than three months for a response in each of the last five years. [37437]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department came into existence in July 1999.

During 2001, 26 per cent. of letters took more than one month for a response; 1 per cent. of letters took longer than three months for a response.

Figures for 2000 and for July—December 1999 were held on a different basis and cannot be analysed in the way requested.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the target time will be in 2002–03 for (a) Ministers to reply to letters from hon. Members and (b) officials in his Department to reply to letters received directly from members of the public. [44946]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Fifteen working days in each case.

Refurbishment

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 6 February 2002, Official Report, column 960W, what the cost of refurbishing each ministerial private office was in each year since May 1997. [37901]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Following its creation in July 1999, the Wales Office has redecorated and refurbished its London offices. It is not possible to accurately separate the cost of the work carried out on Ministers' offices from that carried out on other parts of the building.

Ministerial offices in Cardiff are part of the National Assembly for Wales building in Cardiff Bay and the Wales Office meets a proportionate share of the whole cost of maintaining that building.

Advertising

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the publicity and advertising campaigns run by his Department in each of the last four years, specifying the (a) purpose, (b) cost to public funds, (c) number of staff involved and (d) method of evaluation in each case. [39099]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department was created in July 1999. It does not have any service-delivery responsibilities of the type which ordinarily require advertising or publicity campaigns.

Equipment Leasing

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the equipment leasing arrangements entered into by his Department in each of the last four years; and what the cost is to public funds in each case. [39086]

Mr. Paul Murphy: There is no record of my Department entering into equipment leases since its creation in July 1999.

Communications Costs

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the annual budget for communications activities, including press, public relations, marketing and internal communications, was for his Department for each financial year from 1997–98 to 2001–02. [39909]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Since its creation in July 1999 the Wales Office has not budgeted separately for these functions. That approach reflects the small size of the Department and the fact that expenditure on all these items will be modest or, in some cases, zero.

Rail Journeys (Staff)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy that rail journeys undertaken by staff in his Department should ordinarily be on standard class tickets. [40442]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office is committed to ensuring that staff use the most efficient and economic means of travel commensurate with meeting their operational needs. Hence, official rail journeys undertaken by Wales Office staff are in line with the guidance and principles set out in Section 8 of the Civil Service Management Code and the departmental staff handbook.

Ministerial Private Offices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the running costs were of (a) his Ministers' private offices, separately identifying expenditure on staff, and (b) his Department in each year from May 1997 to the nearest date for which the information is available. [40981]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department was created in July 1999 and information on running costs have been given in annual Department reports (Cm 4620 and Cm 5121 available in the Library). Private office costs are not separately identified.

Accommodation Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the cost was of hotel accommodation for departmental staff working away from home in each of the last four years. [41059]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Hotel costs are not identified separately from other expenditure on travel and subsistence.

Press Office

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many staff in his Department's press office have received (a) termination and (b) redundancy payments in each of the last four years. [41073]

Mr. Paul Murphy: None.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what his Department's policy is towards age discrimination. [42572]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department does not discriminate on grounds of age within the working-age band.

Parental Leave Directive

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the (a) financial costs and (b) benefits to his Department of the Parental Leave Directive. [42482]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The cost of the Department of the Parental Leave Directive is none to date.

The Wales Office is committed to helping its staff achieve a better balance between their home and work lives, including statutory entitlement to parental leave.

Staff Numbers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many staff have been employed by his Department in each of the last 10 years. [42472]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department has only been in existence since July 1999. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 19 March 2002, Official Report, column 296W.

Election Expenses

Ian Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the returns of election expenses for the 1999 elections to the National Assembly for Wales. [45293]

Mr. Paul Murphy: No. Responsibility for making available for inspection returns of election expenses in respect of these elections rested partly with individual returning officers and partly with the Assembly itself.

Equal Opportunities

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he has established a baseline for policy appraisal against which to measure progress on equal treatment; and what progress has been achieved; [46496]

(2) what new data series separated by gender, race, disability and age have been commissioned by his Department since August 1997; [46497]

(3) if he will list the subject of each gender impact assessment drawn up by his Department since June 1997, indicating in each case whether the outcome has been (a) put out to consultation and (b) published. [46498]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 26 March 2002]: The Government are fully committed to promoting equality of opportunity. In 1998, we included an obligation in the Government of Wales Act requiring the National Assembly for Wales to have due regard to the principle of equality of opportunity for all the people of Wales.

Most of the executive responsibilities of the former Welsh Office transferred to the Assembly in July 1999. Since then, I have not identified a need to conduct gender impact assessments nor to establish baselines for policy appraisal in respect of any of my remaining responsibilities.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the women's organisations which have been consulted over proposed legislation by his Department during (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02 sessions; and if their responses have been published. [46499]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 26 March 2002]: My Department has direct responsibility only for legislative provisions which relate specifically to Wales.

Detailed information about consultees is not collated centrally. However, available records indicate that the Wales Assembly for Women and Welsh Women's Aid have been consulted on a number of proposals.

In the 2001–02 session, the Wales Assembly for Women responded to consultation on proposals for the Education Bill. Unless the respondent asked for confidentiality, all responses were placed in the National Assembly for Wales library, where they can be made available on request.

Overtime Payments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what his policy is on overtime payments for staff in his Department. [49134]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Overtime is paid only when there is no viable alternative and when the individual staff member is content to work additional hours. Levels of pay for overtime are in accordance with National Assembly for Wales guidelines.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many staff were involved in each of the last three years in preparing draft answers to written parliamentary questions. [49146]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Advice on answering written parliamentary questions is prepared by the most appropriate official in each case. Approximately 25 staff spend some part of their time doing work of this kind.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many private finance initiative projects have been subject to refinancing after the contracts have been signed; and what has been the financial effect in each case. [50558]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Since its creation in July 1999 my Department has not entered any private finance initiative contracts.

Public Bodies

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what have been the total salary costs of each of the non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible in each of the last five years. [50557]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department was created in July 1999 and has no non-departmental public bodies.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Lord Chancellor's Private Office

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Buckingham of 13 March 2002, Official Report, column 1176W, if she will provide a full breakdown of the main items comprising the increase in the running cost of the Lord Chancellor's private offices between April 1998 and April 2001. [45121]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The increase in expenditure since 1998 is the result of the increasing workload of the Department and the appointment of two additional Ministers. The main increase was for the additional staffing costs of the offices.

Creche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what creche facilities are provided by his Department; and at what cost. [44858]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department spends approximately £125,000 per annum on child care support. About £115,000 is used to provide subsidised nursery places for 40 staff mainly in London and the surrounding regions, Newcastle, Manchester, Birmingham, Bristol and Grimsby, plus a further £10,000 on subsidised playschemes during school holidays. Approximately 120 children of members of staff used the playschemes during 2001–02.

Asylum Seekers (Legal Advice)

Simon Hughes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment she has made of the impact of the provision of quality legal advice to asylum seekers prior to an initial decision on their application, the efficiency and quality of those decisions and the number of subsequent appeals; what assessment she has made of the potential costs and savings of ensuring quality legal advice is available prior to initial decisions; and if she will make a statement. [46015]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Government's White Paper "Secure Borders, Safe Haven" (CM 5387) published in February 2002 states at paragraph 4.36:

> "While access to legal advice is not a pre-requisite to initial decision-making, and should not hold up the decision-making process, the Government is committed to ensuring access to quality legal advice at that, and all later stages, for all asylum seekers whether or not they are in the Accommodation Centre".

The Home Office is currently undertaking a 12-month study entitled "An Evaluation of Access to Early Legal Advice and Representation in the Asylum Determination Process". The aim of the project is to assess the implications of providing early legal advice and representation for the asylum determination process. It will provide systematic and objective information on the implications of providing such advice for the speed, quality and sustainability of asylum decision making. It is hoped a final report will be available internally in November 2002 with a view to publishing as soon as possible thereafter.

It is therefore too early to calculate, with any degree of accuracy, the potential costs and savings that access to early legal advice can bring.

Part-time Employees

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many and what proportion of the staff of her Department are part-time employees. [47167]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer my right hon. friend to the central answer given by the Cabinet Office dated 10 April 2002.

Underspends

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the (a) capital and (b) revenue underspend in her Department is expected to be in the financial year 2001–02. [47806]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Estimated outturn figures for 2001–02 will be published in the Budget report on 17 April.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the measurable criteria are for the PSA target to respect the rights of defendants and to treat them fairly; and if he expects the target [illegible] specified on page 16 of the 2001 departmental report to be met by March. [47231]

Mr. Wills: Our target outturn is to achieve 100 per cent. improvement across a range of measures. An interdepartmental/agency working group has agreed that these targets are:

> 98 per cent. of prisons by March 2002 to have a Legal Services Officer so as to ensure that all prisoners receive information about legal services on reception and know who can assist them with applications for public funding;
> 50 per cent. of magistrates courts to have full access to a comprehensive courts-based bail information scheme by March 2002, rising to 80 per cent. by March 2003;
>
> 80 per cent. of prisons holding remand prisoners to have a bail information scheme by March 2002, rising to 90 per cent. by March 2003;
> 90 per cent. of people in police stations requesting the service of a duty solicitor to receive the service within 45 minutes by March 2002.

Information about progress on these targets will be published in the Department's 2002 departmental report.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Burns: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many times Ministers in her Department have travelled abroad at taxpayers' expense since March 2001; what countries they visited; and what the total cost of each visit was. [47115]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Since 1999 this Government has published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government has also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. The 1999 list contained information on all such visits undertaken from 2 May 1997 to 31 March 1999. Details for travel undertaken in the period 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 will be published as soon as possible.

Possession Proceedings

Ms Oona King: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of possession proceedings for rent arrears in local authority and RSL accommodation related to tenants who have had their housing benefit reduced as a result of non-dependent deductions in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [48552]

Mr. Wills: Figures concerning possession applications brought by landlords are not collected in the manner of breakdown requested above, nor by reason for application. The figures could only be provided at a disproportionate cost to the Department.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Union Duties

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff in his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies receive paid leave to undertake union duties; how many days they are allocated; and what has been the cost to public funds in each of the last four years. [36196]

Angela Eagle: The Employment Protection Act 1975 gave trade union officials a statutory right to reasonable paid time off from employment to carry out trade union duties. In the Civil Service, since April 1996, Departments and agencies have been given the freedom to set their own levels of facility time and make other facilities available to their trade union accredited representatives.

In accordance with the Departmental Facilities Agreement between the Home Office and recognised trade unions 57 union representatives in the Home Office and its agencies receive up to 100 per cent. paid leave to undertake union duties. A further 66 accredited representatives are allocated 25 days a year to spend on union duties. Related costs in 2001–02 are expected to amount to approximately £3,237,000. Information about costs in previous years is not available.

The Department values the constructive working relationships with the trade unions which provide an efficient means of involving staff at all levels in shaping and delivering our aims.

Operation Helios

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many of the complaints by members of the public in relation to the conduct of officers involved in Operation Helios have been referred voluntarily to the Police Complaints Authority; [39361]

(2) if the Police Complaints Authority has asked for a referral so that it can supervise complaints made against police officers in Operation Helios. [39362]

Mr. Denham: No complaints made against officers involved in Operation Helios have been referred by the Metropolitan police service to the Police Complaints Authority for supervision. The Authority has not formally asked for a referral. However, the Authority has suggested to the Metropolitan police that it might be appropriate for any complaint accepted by the police in relation to this investigation to be referred voluntarily.

European Union Directives

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the European Union directives and regulations relating to his Department that have been implemented in each of the last four years, specifying (a) the title and purpose of each, (b) the cost to public funds of each and (c) the cost to businesses of each. [39130]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The Home Office has implemented two European Community directives during the period specified.

European Community directive 95–46 on the protection of individuals with regard to the processing of personal data and on the free movement of such data was implemented by the Data Protection Act 1998.

European Community directive 2000–8 on the manufacture and placing on the market of certain substances used in the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances was implemented by SI 2001 No. 3683.

The Home Office also has responsibility for the following European Community measures which have been formally adopted but which have not required any specific implementation.

Council decision establishing a European Refugee Fund for the financing of projects relating to conditions for reception of displaced persons; integration for recognised refugees and others with stable and lasting forms of international protection; and voluntary repatriation for persons who have applied for asylum or some other form of international protection and been refused. Formally adopted on 28 September 2000.

Council regulation concerning the establishment of "EURODAC" for the comparison of fingerprints for the effective application of the Dublin Convention. Formally adopted on 11 December 2000.

Council decision on the conclusion of an agreement between the European Community and Republic of Iceland and Kingdom of Norway concerning the criteria and mechanisms for establishing the state responsible for examining a request for asylum lodged in a member state or Iceland or Norway. Formally adopted on 15 March 2001.

Council directive on minimum standards for giving temporary protection in the event of a mass influx of displaced persons and on measures promoting a balance between member states in receiving such persons and bearing the consequences thereof. Formally adopted on 20 July 2001.

Additionally, a number of measures have been adopted by the Council relating to Title IV matters on which the United Kingdom has not exercised its right to opt in to the adoption of the measure. The United Kingdom is therefore not bound by them.

The Home Office does not hold information concerning the cost to public funds of each instrument. This information could be assembled only at disproportionate cost. The costs of the European Refugee Fund come from the Community budget.

Where a proposal is likely to impose significant costs on business, charities or voluntary organisations, a Regulatory Impact Assessment is produced. Copies of these are placed in the Library.

Energy Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on energy costs incurred by his Department in each of the last 10 years. [42444]

Angela Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Rural Affairs on 19 March 2002, Official Report, column 269W.

Knife Crime

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are being taken to tackle knife crime. [43420]

Mr. Denham: We are committed to ensuring that violent offenders are punished effectively. Severe penalties are available to the courts to deal with offenders who carry knives. For instance, any person who has an article with a blade or point in a public place or on school premises can be sent to prison for up to two years. It is also an offence for any person to have an offensive weapon in a public place or on school premises, or for any person to sell knives to people under 16.

The police give high priority to action against knife crime. For example, the Metropolitan police are using an intelligence-led approach in exercising their powers to stop and search people who they believe may be carrying knives, and are working with door staff to tackle the problem at licensed premises. Largely as a result of these initiatives, the Metropolitan police have arrested and charged 17.8 per cent. more people for carrying knives and offensive weapons over the year to February 2002 than in the previous year.

Criminal Damage

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many recorded offences of criminal damage there were in (a) each police force area in each year since 1997 and (b) each crime disorder reduction partnership area in each year since their establishment. [43977]

Mr. Denham: Recorded crimes of criminal damage are not collected at Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership level.

The requested figures for the criminal damage recorded crime offence group are given in the table. There was a change in counting rules for recorded crime on 1 April 1998, which was estimated to have increased the total number of criminal damage offences recorded over England and Wales as a whole by 5 per cent. Numbers of recorded crimes after this date are therefore not directly comparable with previous years.

Public Transport (Assaults)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce plans for mandatory bans from using public transport to those convicted of violence while using public transport systems. [43956]

Mr. Denham: Powers are already available to individual transport operators and the criminal justice system to ban those convicted of violence while using public transport systems from using public transport. Transport operators can take action in respect of preventing violent individuals from using the transport system by taking out civil injunctions. Football Banning Orders against individuals can also be applied for through the Crown Prosecution Service. Under proposals in the Police Reform Bill, the British Transport police will be able to apply directly to the courts for Anti Social Behaviour Orders (ASBOs) in order for them to deal more effectively with particular problems of anti-social behaviour. It is also proposed to give criminal courts powers to place restrictions through ASBOs on the actions of offenders imprisoned for anti-social behaviour related offences once they are back in the community.

Police Retention

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on ill health retirement from the police service; what the consistent approach to it will involve; and what measures he will introduce to increase officer retention. [44027]

Mr. Denham: The recently published White Paper "Policing a New Century: A Blueprint for Reform", reaffirmed the Government's view that one of the priorities for the police service is to manage ill-health retirement effectively. The Police Negotiating Board are considering ways to deliver a fair and more consistent approach towards early retirement due to ill health. This should enable forces to reduce the level of ill-health retirement and match the performance of the best quartile of forces by 2005. The measures under consideration include the Police Negotiating Board issuing joint guidance to police authorities and senior management to ensure that wherever possible officers continue in employment where they are capable of performing sufficient duties to make their retention operationally justifiable.

In the White Paper the Government also announced that they will establish a national occupational health strategy for the police service, which should assist forces to manage cases of ill health more effectively at the outset.

Confiscated Asset Fund

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the performance the Confiscated Asset Fund in Wales. [44048]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: While contributions to the Confiscated Assets Fund (CAF) from Welsh courts were relatively low, a number of bids to the fund from organisations in Wales were successful (see table). The new Recovered Assets Fund, which has replaced CAF, and other measures, including the Proceeds of Crime Bill now under consideration by Parliament, will enable more criminal assets to be seized and recycled back into the community.

Drivers (Mobile Phones)

Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with the Association of Chief Police Officers about the use of hand held mobile phones when driving. [44610]

Mr. Denham: The Association of Chief Police Officers confirmed last year that they remain satisfied with existing legislation, which allows for the successful prosecution of those whose use of a mobile phone may contribute to a driving offence. This is a matter that we keep under review.

Conviction Rates

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the conviction rate was per police force area in each year since 1997. [44461]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The available information for 1997 to 2000 is contained in the table and relates to the proportion of defendants proceeded against at magistrates courts for all offences who were found guilty at all courts, by police force area.

Information on court proceedings for 2001 will be available in the autumn.

Cyclists

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cyclists have been prosecuted for failure to observe traffic signals in the last 12 months for which data are available. [44369]

Mr. Denham: The available information, from the Home Office Court Proceedings Database, relating to England and Wales for 2000 is shown in the table. It relates to offences by pedal cyclists for failing to obey school crossing patrols and neglecting traffic directions and signs, including traffic lights.

Information on court proceedings for 2001 will be available in the autumn.

Number of pedal cyclists proceeded against[1] for offences connected with failing to obey traffic signals, England and Wales 2000[2]

[2] Staffordshire police force were only able to submit sample data for persons proceeded against and convicted in the magistrates courts for the year 2000. Although sufficient to estimate higher orders of data, these data are not robust enough at a detailed level and have been excluded from the table.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what London allowance is paid to police officers employed in the Metropolitan police force. [44630]

Mr. Denham: In addition to any housing allowance entitlement, an officer who joined the Metropolitan police force prior to 1 September 1994 is entitled to a London allowance of £1,011 plus London weighting of £1,773.

An officer who joined the Metropolitan police force after 1 September 1994 and who is not in receipt of housing allowance, receives an enhanced London allowance of £4,338 plus London weighting of £1,773.

Golden Jubilee

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many extra Metropolitan police officers will be on duty each day during the period 1 to 4 June; and if he will make a statement; [44569]

(2) what safety precautions are being taken by the Metropolitan police force during the Queen's Golden Jubilee weekend; what the anticipated cost is; and if he will make a statement. [44568]

Mr. Denham: For security reasons it would be inappropriate to disclose in advance of the event the planned number of officers who will be on duty or the projected cost of safety and security operations.

The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis informs me that the number of police officers on duty for each day between 1 and 4 June will depend on circumstances and be commensurate with the need to provide appropriate security, crowd management and public reassurance, with sufficient capacity to deal with unexpected incidents.

The operation will be run in partnership with other London police forces (City of London police, British Transport police and Royal Parks constabulary).

People Trafficking

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of trafficking in people were identified in each year since 1997; and what enforcement action was taken (a) against the victims of trafficking and (b) against the organisers and beneficiaries of trafficking. [44709]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Forming an accurate estimate of the levels of trafficking in people is problematic due to the hidden nature of the act. There is currently no accurate, reliable data in existence with the United Kingdom or the European Union. A Home Office research study "Stopping Traffic" published in 2000, indicated that the number of women and children trafficked into the United Kingdom for the purposes of sexual exploitation was likely to be in the range of 140 to 1,400 per annum.

As there is at present no specific offence of trafficking, the police and other law enforcement agencies are not able to say how many organisers and beneficiaries of trafficking have been investigated, arrested or prosecuted. However, we are introducing a new stopgap offence of trafficking for prostitution in the forthcoming Nationality Immigration and Asylum Bill, which will carry a maximum penalty of 14 years imprisonment. We will follow the stopgap offence with further legislation to cover those being trafficked for both labour and sexual exploitation. These offences will go wider than is possible in the immigration legislation and will cover people who are trafficked within the United Kingdom, as well as those who are brought here from abroad. The Government's aim is to tackle the organised criminal groups who are behind the trafficking, not the victims of this heinous trade.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy towards trafficking in people is; and what assistance he offers to those tricked into (a) prostitution and (b) domestic slavery. [44707]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The Home Department has set out its strategy on trafficking in the recently published White Paper "Secure Borders, Safe Haven", comprising our plans on legislation, enforcement, international co-operation and prevention and support for victims. Trafficking of people involves arranging their movement for the purposes of exploitation. The exploitation may take the form of bonded labour or servitude, or commercial sexual exploitation. It is often accompanied by violence, or threats of violence, against the victim, or their family. Trafficking is often associated with illegal immigration but does not necessarily involve crossing a frontier. Our strategy takes account of those who are trafficked into and throughout the United Kingdom, as well as those trafficked within the country.

We recognise the need to offer the victims of trafficking particular support to help them escape their circumstances, and facilitate them to assist law enforcement to tackle organised criminal gangs behind the trafficking. We will make special arrangements for their protection and support. Where victims are not entitled to remain in the United Kingdom, we will consider whether it is appropriate to allow them to stay here. If they wish to return home, we will work with the voluntary sector to help them do so, provide initial counselling and ensure they have suitable accommodation to return to and to help them reintegrate in to their own community. The White Paper also sets out our intention to develop a best practice "toolkit" on victims of trafficking, which will act as a guide for immigration officers, police and others potentially dealing with victims of this heinous crime.

"Mein Kampf"

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to prohibit the sale of Arabic editions of Mein Kampf; and if he will make a statement. [44795]

Angela Eagle: No. The text of "Mein Kampf" in English translation has been freely available in the United Kingdom for many years. It has served as a means of understanding the background to a particular period in European history and the terrible crimes that were committed by the Nazis. However, if anyone believes that there is anything in this particular translation that falls foul of the law, they should of course report the matter to the police.

Independent Police Complaints Commission

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the Independent Police Complaints Commission will be funded; how many staff it will employ; and if he will make a statement. [44963]

Mr. Denham: As an executive non-departmental public body, the Independent Police Complaints Commission will be funded through grant in aid from the Home Office.

Current estimates are that the Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC) will employ around 160 people.

Cannabis

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what cases in the last 30 years of police officers being disciplined owing to a previous partner having smoked cannabis his Department has records of. [45078]

Mr. Denham: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

European Crime Convention

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 9 November 2001, Official Report, column 492W, on the European Crime Convention, if he will make a statement on the outcome of consideration as to the practical implications for banks. [44793]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The practical implications for banks of the 2001 Protocol to the 2000 European Union Mutual Legal Assistance Convention (which the hon. and learned Member for Dudley, North (Ross Cranston) has referred to as the European Crime Convention) are very similar to the existing provisions on customer information in the Terrorism Act 2000 and the provisions on customer information orders and account monitoring orders contained in the draft Proceeds of Crime Bill. The Government's current view is that the mechanism to be used to obtain information in response to requests for these orders made under the Protocol will resemble that used to obtain similar types of information under the Terrorism Act and the relevant provisions of the draft Proceeds of Crime Bill. Accordingly, the costs per order are expected to be comparable to those identified by the Regulatory Impact Assessment conducted for that Bill. A separate Regulatory Impact Assessment for this Protocol will be carried out.

The key difference between the measures in the Terrorism Act and the Proceeds of Crime Bill and the Protocol is scope. The Protocol covers a wider range of serious crimes. Banks will therefore be expected to provide information in relation to slightly different types of criminal investigation.

Asylum Accommodation Centres

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he made of the implications of the existence of (a) a landfill site adjacent to and (b) a foot and mouth disease burial site on Throckmorton airfield when listing the airfield as a potential site for an asylum accommodation centre. [45559]

Angela Eagle: In making final decisions on preferred sites, we will take all the relevant factors into account including those to which the hon. Member refers. These assessments have not yet been made.

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what means the processes of the Criminal Cases Review Commission are subject to continuous improvement. [45573]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Much of the commission's routine managerial effort is directed to continuous improvement of its processes. The Commission has an internal advisory Process Improvement Group (PIG) that is convened by the chairman whenever particular facets of the commission's processes require special review.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the seven topics for special review that the Criminal Cases Review Commission's Process Improvement Group was convened to discuss during 2000–01. [45565]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The seven topics that were listed for special review were:

Review cases;
Plan operations;
Manage finances;
Provide expert staff;
Provide Information Technology;
Provide physical facilities; and Manage communications.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the Criminal Cases Review Commission plans to encourage prospective applicants to seek legal advice; and how it will measure its progress. [45580]

Mr. Keith Bradley: When corresponding with applicants, the Commission encourages applicants to seek legal advice. It has a list of legal representatives that it will provide without recommendation. It carries out a six monthly survey of the level of active legal representation, and gathers data on legal representation as submitted by applicants.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (a) what improvements are planned at the Criminal Cases Review Commission to increase the rate at which case accumulation will be reduced and (b) how this will be measured. [45566]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The case accumulation at Stage 1 is already negligible. The accumulation at Stage 2 screen will be minimised by 31 March 2002, or soon afterwards. The accumulation at Stages 2–3 will be progressively minimised during the period to 31 March 2005. The measures will include the numbers of cases in each tray and under review at each stage.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the Criminal Cases Review Commission encourages its staff to improve their formal qualifications; and how this is measured. [45584]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Commission encourages all staff to improve their formal qualifications. Training needs and opportunities for staff are discussed at regular personal development reviews. The Commission's personnel systems maintain information on the achievement of formal qualifications.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the Criminal Cases Review Commission determines which cases justify the formal appointment of an external investigating officer. [45579]

Mr. Keith Bradley: It is a statutory provision of the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 that a committee of at least three or more Commission members determines whether or not a formal appointment of an external investigating officer should be made.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what aspects of (a) a legal background, (b) the criminal justice system, and (c) the skills for effective casework, the Criminal Cases Review Commission has identified as appropriate for acquisition by its staff during training. [45582]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Commission continuously develops an integrated training programme, beginning from induction, and progressing through acquisition of the appropriate knowledge base and practical skills. For Commission members, case review managers and other case working staff, the emphasis is on legal background and other aspects of the criminal justice system, and the development of the skills necessary to carry out effective casework.

The training schedule that the Commission develops includes:

Unsafe convictions;
New evidence;
Fair trials;
Sentencing;
Legal incompetence;
Disclosure;
Misconduct by investigators and witnesses;
Guilty pleas and
Identification procedures.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the Criminal Cases Review Commission determines what constitutes a real possibility that a conviction, finding, verdict or sentence will not be upheld in court. [45567]

Mr. Keith Bradley: It is a statutory provision of the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 that any decision that a real possibility exists that a conviction, finding, verdict or sentence would not be upheld at appeal must be made by a committee of at least three Commission members. The Commission will generally be looking for arguments not raised, or evidence not adduced, in the proceedings that led to the conviction, verdict or finding.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the measures for casework best practice incorporated in the Criminal Cases Review Commission's training programme. [45583]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Commission develops continuously an integrated training programme, beginning from induction, and progressing through acquisition of the appropriate knowledge base and practical skills. For example, for Commission members, case review managers and other caseworking staff, the emphasis is on legal background and other aspects of the criminal justice system, and development of the skills necessary to carry out effective casework. The training schedule includes: unsafe convictions; new evidence; fair trials; sentencing; legal incompetence; disclosure; misconduct by investigators and witnesses; guilty pleas and identification procedures.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the Criminal Cases Review Commission determines if its policies are being optimised along its three dimensions of effectiveness, efficiency, and economy. [45575]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Commission distinguishes between effectiveness (achieving high output standards), efficiency (maximising output from its human and physical resources) and economy (minimising the cost of those resources), and recognises that its processes must be optimised along all three dimensions. The Commission's annual business plan sets process goals along these dimensions, which should approach optimality.

Asylum Seekers

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers and their dependants are supported by (a) NASS, (b) local authorities and (c) the mainstream welfare benefits system. [45773]

Angela Eagle: As at the end of December 2001, 65,630 asylum seekers (including dependants) were supported by the National Asylum Support Service (NASS).

From the grant claims sent to the Home Office by local authorities, as at September 2001, 25,370 single adult asylum seekers and 14,310 families were supported by local authorities. Figures including dependants are not available.

As at November 2001, Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) were supporting 12,000 asylum seekers. Figures including dependants are not available.

This is the latest available information on supported asylum seekers.

Figures for NASS supported asylum seekers and local authority supported asylum seekers are rounded to the nearest 10. Figures for DWP supported asylum seekers are rounded to the nearest 1,000.

Yarl's Wood Detention Centre

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many detainees were held in Yarl's Wood Detention Centre in each of the last 12 months; what the average time of detention was; and how many were subsequently removed from Britain. [48623]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Yarl's Wood Removal Centre opened in November 2001. Internal management information, which has not been quality-assured, records that there were 112 detainees at Yarl's Wood at the end of November 2001; 252 detainees at the end of December 2001 and 308 detainees at the end of January 2002. There were 385 detainees at Yarl's Wood on 14 February 2002.

Information about the average time of detention and subsequent removals is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost by an examination of individual case files.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many overseas visits have been undertaken by parliamentary private secretaries in his Department at departmental expense in each of the last four years; and at what cost to public funds. [36816]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 25 March 2002]: There have been no visits undertaken by parliamentary private secretaries at departmental expense in the last four years.

Campsfield House

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what timetable had been decided for the closure of Campsfield House at 7 February; and whether the timetable for closure of Campsfield House has since been changed. [46663]

Angela Eagle: The intention is to close Campsfield House when places can be transferred to the new removal centres that are expected to be in operation by spring 2003. This timetable was announced by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary (Mr. Blunkett) on 7 February 2002, Official Report, column 1040, and remains unchanged.

DNA Samples

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the impact of the ruling which allows the police to retain DNA samples from suspects later released without charge. [48256]

Mr. Denham: The requirement for the police to destroy fingerprint and DNA samples taken from suspects later released was amended by Article 82 of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 which allows the police discretion to retain these samples. DNA provides an important tool in the fight against serious crime and in particular offences of violence against the person. The Government are pleased that the Court has upheld its view that the law strikes a fair balance between the interests of the individual, the victims of crime and society as a whole. The court's decision will allow the police to continue to make best use of this important scientific technology in the fight against crime.

Correspondence

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Immigration and Nationality Directorate expects to reply to the letters of 6 January, 28 January and 3 March from the hon. Member for Glasgow, Shettleston regarding the case of Mr. Rynier Jacobus Greyling. [47883]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 10 April 2002]: A reply was sent to my hon. Friend by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate on 15 March 2002.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Rail Journeys (Staff)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 6 March 2002, Official Report, column 421W, on rail travel, if staff below Band B2 are permitted to travel first class; and if line management approval is required beforehand to do so. [50546]

Mr. Leslie: Rail travel on official business for staff below B2 is at standard class. First class travel is permitted only if there is a requirement to accompany either a civil servant who is entitled to travel first class, or someone who is not a civil servant who is travelling first class. All first class travel by staff below B2 level must be approved in advance.

TREASURY

Equipment Leasing

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the equipment leasing arrangements entered into by his Department in each of the last four years; and what the cost is to public funds in each case. [39088]

Ruth Kelly: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Human Rights Act

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cases have been brought against his Department under the Human Rights Act 1998; and what has been the cost in (a) legal fees to defend cases and (b) compensation payments. [45074]

Ruth Kelly: Human rights are now integrated in the general law and are rarely the sole basis for a challenge. Central records are not maintained of all cases in which the Human Rights Act 1998 has been relied on or of the cost to public funds of cases which include a human rights aspect. However, we have recorded two cases which have been brought against the Treasury.

Access to Information

Tony Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the administrative manuals and internal guidance which his Department has made public as required by Part 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information; and which of these were first made available after May 1997. [45395]

Ruth Kelly: We publish a wide range of material designed to inform members of the public about our activities. Information including advice on the Treasury's Values and Code of Conduct, how to obtain information under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information and how to complain about the department are published on our public website.

Private Sponsorship

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 700W, on private sponsorship, if he will list the conferences and seminars that HM Treasury and its associated departments have organised since May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [46610]

Ruth Kelly: Records are not maintained centrally. The information required may be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Wanless Report

Mr. Howard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent studies he has conducted into alternative health care systems other than those contained in the interim Wanless report; and if he will publish them. [R] [47963]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 9 April 2002]: I refer to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer to the House on 11 April 2002, Official Report, column 135:

> "[Mr. Wanless] will also publish a study commissioned by his review on international health care systems, considering health systems in individual countries around the world."

Banks (Excessive Charging)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to extend the new regulations relating to excessive charging by banks in England and Wales to Northern Ireland. [48853]

Ruth Kelly: The Government accepted in full the conclusions of the Competition Commission report into the supply of banking services to SMEs in the UK and have asked the Director General of Fair Trading to seek undertakings from the eight main clearing banks to implement the remedies suggested. The majority of those remedies will apply through the UK and are designed to improve competition in this market. In addition the Competition Commission found evidence of excess profits for the four largest clearing banks in England and Wales, but not in Scotland or Northern Ireland. Consequently, their recommendation that banks should be required to offer interest or free banking to SMEs will apply only in England and Wales.

Retirement Income

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he will take to reform the law on annuities and income in retirement. [48898]

Ruth Kelly: For some time the Government have actively encouraged innovation in the annuity market to improve benefits for customers. A consultation document, "Modernising Annuities", was issued on 5 February. It was intended to stimulate discussion on how the annuity market could be encouraged to become more flexible and competitive. The consultation period ran until 5 April. The Government are now considering the responses carefully before deciding how to proceed.

Finance Capital

Harry Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last set out policies for substantial reform of finance capital; and if he will make a statement. [48877]

Ruth Kelly: The pre-Budget report (Cm 5318), published in November 2001, sets out a range of measures designed to improve both the supply of, and access to, finance capital. The forthcoming Budget will provide an up-date on these measures.

Overtime Payments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his policy is on overtime payments for staff in his Department. [49135]

Ruth Kelly: Overtime payments are made to staff where appropriate. Sufficient staff have been recruited to fill all complemented posts in the Treasury, and the Department has a number of alternative working policies in place such as flexible working hours, part-time working and compressed hours, as well as working at home. These are available to all staff by agreement with their line managers.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mark Tami: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many families he estimates are eligible for

(a) working families tax credit and (b) children's tax credit in (i) Alyn and Deeside and (ii) Delyn that are not claiming it; [48918]

(2) how many families in (a) Alyn and Deeside and (b) Delyn are claiming (i) working families tax credit and (ii) children's tax credit. [48920]

Dawn Primarolo: For the numbers claiming the working families' tax credit (WFTC), I refer my hon. Friend to my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Jarrow (Mr. Hepburn) on 16 January 2002, Official Report, column 293W. Information about the children's tax credit (CTC), or about the numbers eligible for WFTC, is not available by constituency. However, the number of families who are eligible for the CTC in Wales is estimated to be 225,000.

Births, Marriages and Deaths

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans his Department has to put on-line the registration of births, marriages and deaths. [50531]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Ms Joan Walley, dated 15 April 2002:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question concerning what plans there are to put on-line the registration of births, marriages and deaths. (50531)

The Government's proposals for modernising civil registration in England and Wales are contained in the White Paper "Civil Registration: Vital Change" published on 22 January 2002, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many employers have been detected paying less than national minimum wage in the last three months; and what action has been taken. [45041]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue have detected 471 non-compliant employers in the last three months, with the total amount of wages arrears identified being £2,734,000.

In the same period, 25 enforcement notices and eight penalty notices have been served on employers. There have been four cases taken by the Inland Revenue to employment tribunal on behalf of workers, with a successful outcome in each instance.

Afghanistan

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions have been held with the multi-lateral creditors regarding multi-lateral debt relief for Afghanistan. [48769]

Mr. Boateng: No discussions have been held so far.

Child Care Tax Credit

Andrew Selous: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to review the eligibility for the child care tax credit. [45034]

Dawn Primarolo: The eligibility criteria for the child care tax credit are kept under constant review.

Pensions

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the average impact on the Exchequer over the course of the last 10 years of each tranche of one thousand persons contracting into SERPS/state second pension from a personal or occupational pension. [44682]

Maria Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The information is in the table:

£ million

Year	Amount
1991–92	0.6
1992–93	0.6
1993–94	0.6
1994–95	0.5
1995–96	0.6
1996–67	0.6
1997–98	0.6
1998–99	0.6
1999–2000	0.6
2000–01	0.5

Note:
The figures show the increase in national insurance contributions that would result from 1,000 people rejoining SERPS in each of the last 10 years. They have been calculated on the assumption that their arrangements are broadly representative of all people contracted out, in terms of age, earnings and type of contracted-out arrangement.

Departmental Report

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the 2002 departmental report will be published. [49591]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The 2002 departmental reports will be published in spring 2002. The dates will be announced shortly.

Small Businesses (Taxation)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much money was paid in direct and indirect taxation by companies with (a) fewer than 200 employees and (b) fewer than 100 employees in each of the last 10 years. [49486]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is not available.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Public-Private Partnership with Siemens Business Services for the Department of National Savings by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative. [49503]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Public Private Partnership with Siemens Business Services (SBS) delivers full operational service to National Savings and Investments (NS&I) and its customers.

The cost of delivery of the operational service from SBS is at least £157 million less than the public sector comparator, assuming the contract runs for its 15 year life.

The finances were clearly set out in the contract. NS&I expenditure on this contract remains as originally negotiated and reported to the PAC.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Private Finance Initiative projects have been subject to refinancing after the contracts have been signed; and what has been the financial effect in each case. [50278]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Comprehensive records of refinanced PFI contracts are not held centrally. No Treasury PFI projects have been refinanced.

PRIME MINISTER

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister what new initiatives his office has taken in 2001–02 to assist in achieving its public service agreement targets. [47188]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 12 April 2002.

Appointments

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if hon. Members have been appointed to task forces and other ad hoc advisory bodies created by the Government since 1997. [49729]

The Prime Minister: Individuals are invited to join task forces and reviews solely on the basis of the knowledge, experience and expertise they are able to bring.

Governments have always taken advice from a number of sources—internal and external. There is nothing to prevent hon. Members being appointed to task forces and other ad hoc advisory groups.

Summary date are recorded and published for each task force and ad hoc group in the Cabinet Office's publication "Taskforces, Ad Hoc Advisory Groups and Reviews". This was last published in October 2001 and copies are available in the House Library. The publication sets out the composition, gives numbers of people by category of appointment, and gives the name of the chairperson. A category in this report shows ministerial membership but no specific data on hon. Members' membership of these groups is held.

Steel Tariffs

Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what matters in respect of the United States policy on steel imports were discussed in his meetings with President Bush on 6 to 7 April in Texas. [49264]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Helen Jackson) in the House on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 17.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he had with President Bush during his recent visit about the possible exemption of British steel products from US tariffs; and if he will make a statement. [48930]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Helen Jackson) in the House on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 17.

Israel

Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister whether he discussed Israel's nuclear weapon capability in his meetings with President Bush on 6 - 7 April. [49481]

The Prime Minister: I outlined the issues I discussed with President Bush in my statement to the House on Wednesday 10 April.

Kyoto Protocol

Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister whether he has raised the United States opposition to the Kyoto Protocol on climate change during meetings and other communications he has had with (a) the United States President and (b) the United States Vice President since 11 September 2001. [49495]

The Prime Minister: I and my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister have raised the US position on climate change and the Kyoto Protocol with President Bush and Vice President Cheney respectively on a number of occasions since 11 September 2001.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister when he established a Cabinet Committee on Sustainable Development; who its members are; and if he will make a statement. [48894]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Watford (Ms Ward) on 7 March, Official Report, column 486W.

Texas Visit

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list those persons who accompanied him on his recent trip to Texas other than Ministers, civil servants, journalists and special advisers; and in each case, specify whose costs were met in whole or part from public funds. [48955]

The Prime Minister: I was joined in Texas by members of my family who had been invited by the President and Mrs. Bush. Their participation on the visit was at no additional cost to the taxpayer.

Lord Levy

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister on what date he was informed of the commercial arrangements between Lord Levy and Westfield. [48985]

The Prime Minister: This is a personal matter for Lord Levy. I am satisfied that there is no conflict of interest.

Overseas Charitable Donations

Mr. Collins: To ask the Prime Minister which foreign Heads of State and Government have informed Her Majesty's Government of personal donations to UK charities following visits to the United Kingdom and discussions with the Prime Minister since 1997. [48768]

The Prime Minister: I am not aware of any donations. There is no central record maintained of such donations.

Gifts in Kind

Mr. Collins: To ask the Prime Minister if he will include in the Ministerial Code of Conduct a requirement for Ministers to publish the value of gifts in kind provided by overseas Governments. [48771]

The Prime Minister: All gifts are handled in accordance with the requirements of paragraphs 136 to 139 of the Ministerial Code.

Hospitality

Mr. Collins: To ask the Prime Minister which foreign Heads of State have accepted free travel and accommodation within the United Kingdom from the UK Government since May 1997. [48776]

The Prime Minister: It has been the policy of successive Governments to provide hospitality for official visits by Foreign Heads of State who come as guests of Her Majesty's Government.

Travel and Accommodation Allowances

Mr. Collins: To ask the Prime Minister if he will refer the subject of travel and accommodation allowances for the Prime Minister to the (a) Senior Salaries Review Board and (b) Committee on Standards in Public Life. [48775]

The Prime Minister: No. All travel by Ministers is undertaken in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers.

New Zealand

Mr. Jack: To ask the Prime Minister what assurances he has given to the Prime Minister of New Zealand about the length of time that young citizens of that country can work in the UK before returning home. [49298]

The Prime Minister: Under the current terms of the working holidaymaker scheme young Commonwealth nationals may spend up to two years in the united Kingdom and are able to engage in work incidental to the holiday for up to approximately half their stay. The scheme is currently being reviewed.

I have assured the Prime Minister of New Zealand that any reform of the scheme will not erode its benefits to those coming from New Zealand.

The Government fully appreciates the important contribution that working holidaymakers make in the United Kingdom, and is committed to maintaining the benefits of the scheme for New Zealand citizens, as well as citizens of other Commonwealth countries.

Special Advisers

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will take steps to ensure members of the House of Lords who (a) hold ministerial office and (b) are employed as special advisers agree to give evidence to select committees of the House. [49886]

The Prime Minister: All civil servants, including special advisers, are accountable to Ministers for their decisions and actions. Ministers are accountable to Parliament. It is therefore for individual Ministers to decide who provides evidence on their behalf to select committees. These decisions are taken on a case-by-case basis.

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will make a statement about the rules which apply to the pursuit of outside interests by special advisers and the accountability thereof; [49885]

(2) if he will review the rules relating to the allowable financial interests of specialist advisers. [49274]

The Prime Minister: The Model Contract for Special Advisers, which incorporates the Code of Conduct for Special Advisers, sets out the terms and conditions of employment for special advisers. Special advisers are also covered by the requirements of their employing Department's Staff Handbook, which includes the handling of financial interests and outside employment.

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if his policy permits the employment of special advisers who have non-domicile tax status. [49276]

The Prime Minister: The employment restrictions on the recruitment of civil servants, including special advisers, are set out in the Civil Service Management Code.

Egypt

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what was the value of hospitality provided to him by the Egyptian Government on his recent visit to Egypt; what charities in Egypt were the recipients of his charitable donations; and what was the value of those donations. [49275]

Mr. Collins: To ask the Prime Minister what the value was of the facilities provided to him and his family by the Egyptian Government in December 2001, broken down by (a) cost of hotel accommodation, (b) cost of travel and (c) cost of exclusive access to tourist sites. [48770]

The Prime Minister: The position is as I made clear in the Register of Members' Interests.

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what factors led him to conclude that it was appropriate to accept free tickets for the internal aeroplane flight he made from Cairo to Sharm-el-Sheikh. [49277]

The Prime Minister: For security reasons, the Egyptian Government identified the appropriate accommodation and internal aeroplane travel during my family holiday in Egypt. This is in line with the requirements of 'Travel by Ministers' which makes it clear that for some Ministers, security factors may make special arrangements necessary.

I made charitable donations to a charity chosen by the Egyptian Government equating to the cost.

Mr. Collins: To ask the Prime Minister if the provision of free travel and accommodation by the Egyptian President to the UK Prime Minister is a reciprocal arrangement. [48782]

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Collins: To ask the Prime Minister if he sought advice from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office before accepting the offer of travel and accommodation from the Egyptian Government. [48774]

The Prime Minister: Yes.

Mr. Collins: To ask the Prime Minister whether his Chief of Staff arranged the travel and accommodation details of his visit to Egypt in December 2001. [48781]

The Prime Minister: No.

HEALTH

Cancer Treatment

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the radiotherapy waiting times are for patients categorised as (a) Group 1, (b) Group 2, (c) Group 3, (d) Group 4 and (e) Group 5 for each UK health authority; and what the comparative figures were for 1997. [37907]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not available centrally. The NHS Cancer Plan set out maximum waiting time targets for first cancer treatment which will come into effect over the next few years. Arrangements to monitor these targets are currently being put in place and will cover radiotherapy where this is the first treatment.

From December 2001, there is one month maximum wait from diagnosis to first treatment for breast cancer and a one month wait from urgent general practitioner referral to first treatment for children's, testicular and acute leukaemia. By 2005, there will be a maximum one month wait from diagnosis to first treatment for all cancers.

NHS Decentralisation

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his policy towards the advancement of mutual solutions to allow further decentralisation of decision-making and operations within the NHS. [39387]

Mr. Hutton: A structural and cultural reform of the national health service is currently taking place with the aim of shifting the balance of power towards frontline organisations, and within organisations to patients and staff. From 1 April 2002, primary care trusts, local organisations run by clinicians and local people, are responsible for improving health, securing services and integrating health and social care locally. By 2004, these organisations will receive 75 per cent. of the NHS budget to enable them to do so effectively, which constitutes considerable devolution in the running of the NHS. As responsibility is devolved to the frontline, the Department will develop new ways of working and step back from operational issues.

A package of earned autonomy freedoms and the potential to achieve foundation status will also become available for the best performing primary care and NHS trusts. This will be another way in which the Government devolves decision-making and operational management in the NHS.

Medical Records

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what systems are in place to ensure medical records are not falsified. [39371]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 1 March 2002]: The Department is fully committed to the principles of patient privacy and confidentiality, and to ensuring that medical records are handled in a secure manner and are not falsified.

Caldicott Guardians appointed within NHS organisations have the responsibility for overseeing the handling of confidential patient information within their own organisations. This work includes responsibility for ensuring that procedures and systems are in place to control access to patient information, and that medical records are capable of being robustly audited.

In the case of GP's, their Terms of Service state that they shall be responsible for keeping adequate records of the illnesses and treatment of their patients and forward such records to the health authority on request. Health authorities are able to audit GP practices by Post Payment Verification and the General Medical Council is able to bring to account any GP that does not keep clear, accurate and contemporaneous records.

NHS Professionals

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what savings for the NHS (a) have been achieved and (b) are projected to be achieved from the establishment of NHS Professionals; and how (i) has the money been re-directed and (ii) will the money be re-directed; [39674]

(2) pursuant to the oral answer to the hon. Member for Carshalton and Wallington (Tom Brake) of 11 December 2001, Official Report, column 699, if he will make a statement on the value of money improvements achieved by NHS Professionals in London, indicating how much money (a) has been saved and (b) is projected to be saved. [39781]

Mr. Hutton: Estimates of detailed cost savings have not been completed.

NHS Professionals charges a management fee to recoup operating costs currently set at a maximum of 7.5 per cent. This compares favourably with that of commercial agencies as highlighted in the Audit Commission report 'Brief Encounters—Getting the Best from Temporary Nursing Staff'. This report indicated wide variations in the commission rates charged by agencies with an averaging charge of 20.5 per cent.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether NHS trusts will be permitted to contract with commercial nurses' agencies to administer temporary staffing services to the specification laid out for NHS Professionals. [41725]

Mr. Hutton: Health Service Circular 2001–02 highlights the aim that NHS Professionals will be used by all NHS organisations as the primary supplier of all temporary staffing requirements for the NHS with, as and when necessary, contracts agreed with commercial agencies to meet any surplus demand. The circular also encourages NHS organisations to review their arrangements for accessing supplementary staff and skills, and to work with their Regional Offices to agree an implementation plan for NHS Professionals across their local health economy.

St. George's Hospital, Tooting

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were treated in accident and emergency departments of St. George's hospital, Tooting in the last 12 months. [40520]

Mr. Hutton: In the latest financial year 2000–01, St. George's Healthcare NHS Trust had a total 79,013 accident and emergency attendances, 75,813 being first attendances.

From 2001–02, the information is available on a quarterly basis and is available on the Department's website www.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity.

Paediatrics

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many transfers of ventilated children between intensive care units took place in each quarter of the last five years for which figures are available. [41479]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Transfers of critically ill children in ventilated and stable condition are arranged between local hospitals and paediatric intensive care centres, and more rarely between centres, to access specialist interventions which cannot be provided in every location, and in order to obtain the best achievable outcome for the child.

Variant-CJD

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to contact patients who may have been exposed to v-CJD through (a) surgical instruments or (b) blood transfusions. [41805]

Yvette Cooper: We are awaiting the results of the CJD Incidents Panel consultation before finalising any decisions regarding contacting patients about their possible exposure to v-CJD via surgical instruments.

Folic Acid

Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to implement the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy report of January 2000 on flour fortification with folic acid. [43866]

Yvette Cooper: A consultation document on whether or not to fortify wheat flour with folic acid was issued in July 2000 jointly by the Health Departments and the Food Standards Agency (FSA). This was based on the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy (2000) conclusion that fortification of wheat flour with folic acid would help reduce the number of births affected by neural tube defects.

The consultation responses have been analysed and the summary of responses posted on the Department's website. The majority of respondents were in favour of fortification although this was not overwhelming (59 per cent.). The most common concerns were over the potential risks of fortification and the possible restriction of consumer choice.

The complexity of the analysis and the need for additional work led to a longer timescale than anticipated. The Health Departments and the FSA held a joint stakeholders meeting on 18 March 2002 to discuss the issue and help inform policy. The policy options will be considered by the FSA Board as well as Health Ministers.

Genetics

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the licensing and vetting procedures are for new genetic tests to be sold directly to the public; [44758]

(2) what mechanisms have been put into place to ensure that claims made by manufacturers of currently licensed genetic tests have scientific and medical validity; [44762]

(3) what the procedures are for approving and regulating genetic testing services. [44763]

Yvette Cooper: The "in vitro" diagnostic medical device (IVD) regulations (SI2000 No. 1315) ensure that IVDs that have a specific medical purpose meet relevant essential safety, quality and performance requirements before being placed on the market with a CE mark. The regulations came into force on 7 June 2000 with a transition period until December 2003. During this time, manufacturers may choose on which basis to place their device on the market. The regulations require that manufacturers of IVDs bearing the CE mark must be able to demonstrate that the device will achieve the manufacturer's claimed performance.

The Department has published two voluntary codes of practice and guidance for genetic tests being sold directly to the public. These set out broad requirements in areas such as: peer-reviewed evidence of value, accreditation and quality assurance in testing laboratories, consent, confidentiality, sample and information storage, and customer information. Under the "Code of Practice and Guidance on Human Genetic Testing Services Supplied Direct to the Public" (September 1997) suppliers notify the Human Genetics Commission (HGC) of their proposed service and HGC publishes a statement of conformance with the Code. In addition, those supplying genetic paternity testing services are expected to comply with the Code of Practice and Guidance on Genetic Paternity Testing Services" (March 2001). All Government and public bodies commissioning paternity testing services are expected, so far as is practical, to ensure that those supplying services comply with this code.

Ministers have asked HGC to conduct a review of the provision of genetic tests offered directly to the public, and to report by the end of the year.

Accreditation for UK laboratories providing diagnostic testing for patients is voluntary. It is mostly overseen by Clinical Pathology Accreditation (UK) Ltd. (CPA). CPA standards are compatible with international standards (ISO). Laboratories registered with CPA are subject to on-site peer inspection to ensure compliance with these standards.

Laboratory accreditation is now part of the quality standards compiled by the Genetics Commissioning Advisory Group (GenCAG) and endorsed by the Joint Medical Genetics Committee of the Royal Colleges of Physicians and Pathologists and the British Society for Human Genetics. Commissioners and NHS trusts purchasing genetic testing services are recommended to purchase from accredited laboratories.

NHS Commissioners may evaluate new service developments before agreeing to fund them. As part of the national NHS genetic testing network, consideration is being given to mechanisms to evaluate genetic tests before being considered for NHS funding. There is further scope for evaluation through the Health Technology Assessment programme which produces research information on the clinical and cost-effectiveness and broader impact of health technologies including diagnostic techniques.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is on (a) access to counselling and advice services, (b) procedures for gaining informed consent and (c) protection of personal genetic information where genetic testing is being undertaken. [44759]

Yvette Cooper: Patients may seek advice from their General Practitioner, other health care workers or NHS Direct. Specialist NHS services for genetics are concentrated in Regional Genetic Centres (RGCs), to which patients may be referred as appropriate. Those receiving genetic tests as part of NHS clinical genetic services normally receive counselling and advice before and, where appropriate, after testing.

The Government response to the 3rd Report of the House of Commons Select Committee on Science and Technology 1994–5, stated that: 'The Government agrees with the Committee.. that people who seek diagnosis of a genetic condition of late onset, i.e in adult life, should be given adequate information about the medical and social implications of the findings and offered sufficient counselling, in advance of any testing, and subsequently if the result of a test is positive'.

The Secretary of State announced in January 2002 how part of the £30 million investment in genetics would be used to pump-prime additional capacity within existing genetics services. This will enable more people concerned about familial disease to receive advice, testing and counselling.

Patients have a fundamental legal and ethical right to determine what happens to their own bodies. Valid consent to treatment is therefore central to all forms of healthcare, from providing personal care to undertaking major surgery. Patients may indicate consent non-verbally (for example by presenting their arm for their pulse to be taken), orally, or in writing. For the consent to be valid, the patient must: be competent to take the particular decision; have received sufficient information to take it; and not be acting under duress.

The Department has issued guidance on consent, and this should be consulted for advice on the current law and good practice requirements in seeking consent. This includes what to do when a patient lacks the capacity to give consent to an intervention. The relevant documents are available at "www.doh.gov.uk/consent". Health professionals should also be aware of any guidance on consent issued by their own regulatory bodies.

Genetic information, like most other patient information, is held in confidence by health professionals and is also subject to the requirements of Data Protection legislation. This means that, unless exceptional circumstances apply, individuals should be informed about how the information will be used and that the information should only be disclosed to a third party with the consent of the person to whom it refers.

The Department published a national confidentiality strategy for the NHS "("Building the Information Core: Protecting & Using Patient Information: A Strategy for the NHS")" in December 2001. The development of systems and processes to record and respect patient preferences including objections to disclosures is a key element of the strategy. In addition, the Human Genetics Commission (HGC) has been considering issues associated with the storage, protection and use of personal genetic information and will be reporting to Ministers later this spring.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to publish the planned Green Paper on genetics. [44760]

Yvette Cooper: We plan to publish our Green Paper on genetics later this year.

Children's Diet

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what measures his Department has taken to combat obesity in children; [45002]

(2) what initiatives his Department has taken to encourage children to eat healthy food. [45001]

Yvette Cooper: We are committed to tackling the rising trend in childhood obesity and action to encourage children to eat a balanced diet. We have put in place major cross-Government programmes of work to improve healthy eating and increase physical activity. This includes:

The National School Fruit Scheme where over 80,000 children in 27 areas and over 500 schools now receive a free piece of fruit each school day. Additional funding of £42 million from the new opportunities fund will enable the scheme to expand to cover over 1 million children from 2002 to 2004. From 2004 all 4 to 6-year-olds will be entitled to a free piece of fruit each school day.

We already have a National Healthy School Programme, a joint initiative between the Department and the Department for Education and Skills, which has as one of its themes healthy eating. Schools are encouraged to provide, promote and monitor healthier food at lunch and break times and in any breakfast clubs. This will be complemented by the food in schools programme.

which aims to bring together under one umbrella all food-related initiatives in schools and after school clubs to improve health and learning.

Work to ensure that children have opportunities to participate in a wide range of physical and sporting activities. The Government's White Paper "Schools—achieving success" gave a commitment that all children will be entitled to two hours of high quality physical education (PE) and school sport a week, within and outside the curriculum. Significant funding is also being provided to enhance PE and sports facilities in schools including £541 million from the new opportunities fund for a PE and Sports Programme.

Anaesthetic Services

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many consultant anaesthetists are in post; and what was the figure in 1997. [45111]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Hospital medical consultants within the anaesthetics specialty (headcount)—England

At 30 September	Consultants
1997	2,760
2001	3,550

Source:
Department of Health medical and dental workforce census

The number of consultant anaesthetists has increased by 29 per cent. since 1997.

Human Rights Act

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases have been brought against his Department under the Human Rights Act 1998; and what has been the cost in (a) legal fees to defend cases and (b) compensation payments. [45069]

Ms Blears: We do not collect central records of all cases in which the Human Rights Act 1998 is relied upon. Human rights are now integrated in the general law and are rarely the sole basis for a challenge. We do monitor centrally those cases which we consider may be of particular significance to this Department. We have recorded 22 cases to date.

We do not collect information centrally about the costs to public funds, legal fees or compensation payments in cases which include a human rights issue. In most cases it will be difficult to single out associated costs relating to the human rights element.

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the target time will be in 2002–03 for (a) Ministers to reply to letters from hon. Members and (b) officials in his Department to reply to letters received directly from members of the public. [44951]

Ms Blears: The Department's target times for replying to correspondence from hon. Members and members of the public is 20 days, this is the Service First Target set by the Cabinet Office.

UVB Machines

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many UVB machines there are in NHS hospitals in England and Wales; and how many are immobilised because of lack of trained staff. [45703]

Ms Blears: The information requested is not available centrally.

It is for health authorities in partnership with primary care groups/trusts and other local stakeholders to decide what services to provide for their populations including those who require treatment with UVB machines.

The Action On Dermatology (AOD) programme aims to identify, develop and share best practice in the organisation and delivery of services, with particular emphasis on improving access and reducing waiting times. Local services are helped to identify their constraints and to find effective solutions by developing new methods of organisation and clinical practice. A key element is the involvement of the clinical professions in identifying good practice and in encouraging its widespread adoption. Change in clinical practice is most effective when it is owned by clinicians themselves.

Brain Disorders

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are being taken (a) to improve the treatment of brain disorders and (b) increase the number of neurologists in the UK. [45278]

Jacqui Smith: The National Service Framework for Long-term Conditions (NSF) will have a particular focus on the needs of people with neurological disease, brain and spinal injury, as well as some of the common issues faced by people with a long-term condition.

We are investing in extra training places in neurology. We have announced an increase of up to 15 specialist registrars in neurology for 2002–04. This will mean that by 2009 there will be an additional 140 trained specialists available to take up consultant posts in neurology.

Radiographers

Tony Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recruitment targets exist for therapy radiographers; how he intends they should be achieved; and by when. [45950]

Mr. Hutton: The Department does not have a target specifically for therapy radiographers. They are included within the NHS Plan target for 6,500 more therapists and other health professionals by 2004, which will be met by improving recruitment and retention, encouraging return to practice, increasing number of students completing training and international recruitment.

Between 1997 and 2001 the number of therapeutic radiographers employed in the NHS has increased by 130 (9 per cent.) and the number of training places available for students has increased by 29 (21 per cent.).

Respiratory Specialists

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the recommended number of hospital respiratory specialist physicians is (a) per head of population and (b) per NHS trust; [45742]

(2) how many hospital respiratory specialist physicians posts are unfilled, broken down by NHS trust; [45744]

(3) how many hospital respiratory specialist physicians are in post, broken down by (a) coverage per head of the population and (b) NHS trust. [45743]

Mr. Hutton: The Department does not set quotas for the numbers of hospital respiratory specialist physicians per head of population or by individual NHS Trust. We continually review future requirements for trained specialists as part of the NHS's new multi-disciplinary workforce planning processes. These look at the national requirements for doctors alongside other staff focusing on the potential for new ways of working and developing new roles.

As at September 2001 (latest figures available), there were 1.9 respiratory specialist physicians, consultants and doctors in training, per 100,000 of the population (England). Numbers of respiratory specialist physicians by NHS Trust are shown in the table, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Respiratory Medicine is not one of the specific specialties included in the NHS Vacancy Survey 2001 and information about the number of unfilled respiratory specialist physicians posts is not available centrally.

NHS Efficiency Gains

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what efficiency and other value for money gains were achieved in the NHS as a percentage of health authority unified allocations, in each year since April 1999, and for the latest year for which figures are available. [45720]

Mr. Hutton: Allocations to Health Authorities are based on an overall assessment of the resources required to cover inflationary pressures and deliver national targets. Allocations to Health authorities in 1999–2000 and 2000–01 were made net of 3 per cent. efficiency savings, and in 2001–02 allocations were made net of 2 per cent. efficiency savings. This means that health authorities needed to achieve the efficiency target to fully fund delivery of national targets and inflation.

Emergency Re-admissions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library the emergency re-admission figures for Q2 2001–02 broken down by (a) region and (b) health authority. [45772]

Mr. Hutton: The figures for Quarter 2 2001–02 emergency re-admissions of patients aged 75 and over have been placed in the Library.

Muscular Dystrophy

Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on research into a cure for Duschenne Muscular Dystrophy in the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [45787]

Jacqui Smith: The main Government agency for research into the causes of and treatments for disease is the Medical Research Council (MRC) which receives its funding via the Department of Trade and Industry. The MRC supports a major project on the molecular analysis of Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy at the MRC Functional Genetics Unit in Oxford and the expenditure on this is about £440,000 a year.

The MRC expenditure figure on all types of Muscular Dystrophy for the last five years is an estimated £3.7 million. It is not possible to extract Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy spending specifically from this total as so much of the work is basic in nature and could apply to all forms of the disease.

The Department provides support funding for research commissioned by charities and the research councils that take place in the NHS. Management of much of the research supported by NHS research and development funding is devolved and expenditure at project level is not held centrally by the Department.

Depleted Uranium

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to instruct the National Radiological Protection Board to carry out research into illnesses caused by exposure to depleted uranium. [43654]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 26 March 2002]: The Department has no plans to ask the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) to carry out research specifically into illnesses possibly caused by exposure to depleted uranium. However, NRPB does undertake research that is relevant to the assessment of the risks to health from such exposures. In particular NRPB has carried out extensive research into the distribution of uranium in body organs, its retention and excretion, following inhalation of a wide range of uranium compounds. It has also developed computer models that enable the concentration of uranium in the various organs and resulting radiation doses to be calculated. Depleted uranium is mildly radioactive, and NRPB's research programme on the effects of ionising radiation in general is therefore relevant to assessment of the radiological risks from exposure to depleted uranium.

Food Supplements

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment the Government have made of the cost to British business of the Directive on food supplements. [45515]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 26 March 2002]: The Food Standards Agency, which has been responsible for negotiating this Directive on the Government's behalf, has consulted widely on its likely impact. There would be labelling costs falling on manufacturers of all food supplements, but these would be substantially offset by a two-year transitional period. Any additional impact of future developments on lists of permitted nutrients and maximum limits cannot yet be assessed.

Blood Tests

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many blood tests in each of the last five years for which figures are available (a) were sent to laboratories for tests and (b) were misplaced before the patient received the results. [46576]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Community Pharmacists

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of community pharmacists (a) in post and (b) vacancies, broken down by (i) health authority and (ii) region in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [45641]

Ms Blears [holding answer 20 March 2002]: Information on the number of community pharmacists in post and vacancies is not held centrally.

University Hospital Coventry and Warwickshire NHS Trust

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the reasons for which the Chief Executive of the University Hospital Coventry and Warwickshire NHS Trust remained in post after the publication of the CHI report and the zero rating of Walsgrave hospital. [46822]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: All Trusts were assessed on their performance during 2000–01 against a set of key targets that are the most significant factors in determining their overall performance rating for the year. Those Trusts that indicated the poorest levels of performance against the key targets were awarded a rating of zero stars.

In September 2001, twelve NHS Trusts, including the University Hospitals Coventry and Warwickshire NHS Trust, were classed as 'zero stars' under the new performance ratings system. In line with national guidance on monitoring ongoing performance, as the Chief Executive had been in post for longer than 18 months, the Trust were given 3 months notice to improve the performance of the Trust to a satisfactory level.

Deep Vein Thrombosis

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the link between women taking the contraceptive pill or on hormone replacement therapy and their likelihood of suffering a deep vein thrombosis; and what measures are being taken to advise and make aware these vulnerable groups of the dangers of DVT and how to lower the risk of suffering from it. [46830]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: A very small increase in the risk of developing deep vein thrombosis (DVT) for women who take oral contraceptives (OCs) or hormone replacement therapy (HRT) has been recognised for many years. Accordingly, OCs and HRT are contraindicated in women who have a personal or family history of DVT and who are therefore most at risk.

In 1995 several new studies suggested that a slightly increased risk of DVT was associated with newer OCs (the so-called third generation pills that contain desogestrel or gestodene as progestogen) compared to older ones (so-called second generation pills that contain levonorgestrel as progestogen). This issue was considered by the Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM) in 1995, 1996 and 2001 and by the Medicines Commission in 1998 as more data became available. They have advised that for every 100,000 women who use OCs for a year, 10–20 more cases of DVT may be expected to occur relative to healthy non-users. This increase in risk is less than the risk of DVT associated with pregnancy (an extra 55 cases of DVT for every 100,000 pregnancies).

Warnings about the risk of DVT in women who take OCs have been in the Summary of Product Characteristics (SPCs) for health professionals and the patient information leaflet (PIL) for women for many years. These warnings were updated with respect to the increased risk of DVT in women who use third, as opposed to second, generation pills in early 1999 and were included in the BNF (British National Formulary). In 2001, product information for all combined oral contraceptives was further updated to inform women and their health professionals that their risk of DVT is greatest in the first year they ever use an OC. Comprehensive information about the risk of DVT with use of oral contraceptives was provided to health professionals and women in a Dear Doctor letter in 1995, in an article in the Medicine Control Agency's (MCA) safety bulletin "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance" in 1999 and on the MCA's website in 2001.

With respect to HRT, evidence suggesting an increased risk for DVT was considered by CSM in 1996. They advised that an additional 10–20 women may experience a DVT out of every 100,000 women who use HRT compared with healthy non-HRT users of a similar age. The SPCs and PILs for HRT products and the BNF were updated in line with this advice in 1998. Health professionals were informed of the risk of DVT in association with use of HRT in an article in "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance" which contained a pull-out sheet with information specifically for women.

In addition to targeted information, every pack of oral contraceptives and HRT contains a PIL for women. These clearly inform women that they should not use OCs or HRT if they have a personal or family history of DVT. They also inform women of their additional risk of DVT compared with non-users. PILs for the second and third generation OCs describe what DVT is and how it is caused, its potential severity and possible outcome. They also list the symptoms of DVT and advise women to stop taking their pills immediately and seek medical help in the event of their occurrence. In addition, they advise women to stop taking their pills prior to periods of prolonged immobilisation, especially surgery and to re-start only when fully re-mobilised. Any woman wishing to take OCs is encouraged to discuss the risks of DVT with her doctor and, provided she understands and accepts those risks, to jointly choose the treatment that is best suited to her in light of her individual medical history.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in England have been diagnosed with deep vein thrombosis in (a) each of the last six years and (b) 2002 to the latest available date. [46743]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The information shown in the table is the number of admissions to national health service hospitals in England where the patient's main diagnosis was Deep Vein Thrombosis.

Year	Finished consultant episode
1995–96	19,598
1996–97	20,736
1997–98	22,551
1998–99	24,871
1999/2000	25155
2000/01	24,903

Notes:

Admissions are defined as the first period of patient care under one consultant within one health care provider. Admissions do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.

Figures are only given for NHS hospital in-patient admissions; there are no figures available for patients diagnosed or treated elsewhere. The figures are the latest available.

The figures for 1995–96 to 1999–2000 are grossed for both coverage and invalid/unknown clinical data, but the figure for 2000–01 have not yet been adjusted for shortfalls in data (i.e. it is ungrossed).

BCG Inoculation

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the level of BCG inoculation take-up is in each regional health authority. [47538]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Information about the numbers of children receiving BCG vaccinations by regional office area is contained in table 8 of the statistical bulletin "NHS Immunisation Statistics, England: 2000–01". A copy of the bulletin is available in the Library and can also be found on the Department of Health Website www.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0121.htm.

MRSA Superbug

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to combat cases of the MRSA superbug. [47540]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: We require all acute Trusts to collect data on MRSA blood stream infections and the early results of this new surveillance system have recently been published. These data provide a baseline against which future performance and action can be measured.

Initiatives that will contribute to controlling MRSA include:

The Commission for Health Improvement's monitoring of compliance of the national infection control standard for acute Trusts during their routine clinical governance reviews.

The development of workshops to help implement the guidelines on the prevention and control of hospital acquired infection published in January 2001.

Work is also under way on a manual for the control of healthcare associated infections and a tool kit to assist Trusts in assessing their infection control staffing needs.

Guidelines for community infection control are being developed as part of the National Institute for Clinical Excellence programme.

A comprehensive study to describe the pattern of provision of infection control in the community is under way, plus a review of the role of CIC nurses. This review will clarify their skills, education and training requirements and identify best practice.

Action plans for healthcare acquired infections and antimicrobial resistance that build on the above initiatives will be produced later this year.

Food Standards Agency

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many sick bags were sent to food establishments by the Food Standards Agency as part of their promotional campaign. [47475]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Christchurch (Mr. Chope) on 25 February 2002, Official Report, column 1026W.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to which sort of food establishments the Food Standards Agency sent sick bags as part of their promotional campaign. [47476]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Food hygiene material including sick bags were sent to restaurant and catering establishments registered on local authority premises databases. These included: restaurants, take-aways/cafés, stalls at public events, roadside eateries, recreational clubs, pubs, hotels, bed and breakfasts, catering outlets for special events and catering outlets supplying delicatessen and patisserie counters at retailers.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of whether the latest PSA target to promote independence by reducing nationally the per capita rate of growth in emergency admissions of people aged over 75 to an annual average of 2 per cent. up to 2002–03 will be met. [47287]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The public service agreement target is for a reduction in the growth of the emergency admissions rate for people aged 75, comparing performance in 2003–04 with performance in 2000–01. However, we set a specific target, as part of the planning and priorities guidance, for 2001–02 of growth not exceeding 2 per cent.

Quarter 3 estimates suggest the 2001–02 target will be met: predictions are suggesting a reduction in the per capita rate of 0.5 per cent.

Psychiatry Beds

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many old-age in-patient psychiatry beds there have been in each of the past five years. [47832]

Jacqui Smith: Information on beds designated as "Mental illness—elderly" is given in the table.

Average daily number of available beds in mental illness—elderly wards, England, 2000–01—1996–97

	Number
2000–01	13,151
1999–2000	13,385
1998–99	14,279
1997–98	14,791
1996–97	15,599

Source:
KH03—Bed availability and occupancy.

The reduction in hospital beds for people with mental illness reflects the policy of re-providing long stay hospital accommodation with community based provision.

Liquid Cytology Units

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new liquid cytology units there have been since the publication of the NHS National Plan. [47012]

Yvette Cooper: Three new liquid based cytology (LBC) units have been installed in national health service trusts in England since the publication of the NHS Plan. The units are at Newcastle Royal Victoria Infirmary NHS Trust, Norfolk and Norwich Hospitals NHS Trust and North Bristol Hospitals NHS Trust.

The installation of LBC units is part of a pilot set up in April 2001 to evaluate the effects, costs and practical implications of introducing LBC into the NHS cervical screening programme alongside human papilloma virus testing. The evaluation report is due in autumn 2002, and will inform an appraisal of LBC by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence. Subject to the outcome of the evaluation and appraisal, full roll-out will follow.

Food Poisoning

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost has been of the Food Standards Agency promotional campaign against food poisoning. [47477]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: A budget of around £4 million was spent on all aspects of the agency's food hygiene campaign for the financial year 2001–02, including radio and television advertising. This included the extensive preparatory work needed to ensure that it was properly constructed and targeted, as well as the materials themselves.

Magnetic Resonance Imaging Scans

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the waiting times were, broken down by regional health authority, for an MRI scan in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [48011]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: We do not collect waiting times for an MRI scan. The Government acknowledges the importance of diagnostic procedures, such as Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) and is encouraging hospitals to streamline their services so that tests are carried out, and a diagnosis made, as quickly as possible. The length of time that a patient may have to wait for any scan is dependent on their clinical condition. Emergency cases need to be seen immediately. Other cases will be carried out as quickly as possible, however this is dependent on the clinical priority of all the remaining patients waiting to be scanned. To increase the capacity of diagnostic services, funding has been made available for the provision of new and replacement scanners. By 2004, approximately 100 MRI scanners and 200 CT scanners will be provided through central purchasing programmes. In addition to this, workforce initiatives are underway that aim to improve recruitment and retention of staff.

Relocation

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to relocate executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies under the remit of his Department to Scotland. [47981]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: None.

Television Licences

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the (a) number and (b) total cost of television licences paid for by his Department. [48350]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Department has purchased eight TV licenses in the last year, at a total cost of £872, in respect of premises occupied by the Department itself.

Flu Jabs

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people and what percentage of patients aged over 65 had the flu jab this winter. [47549]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Final monitoring figures at the end of the influenza campaign showed that 5.1 million people aged 65 and over received the influenza vaccine this winter, which represents 68 per cent. of those in this age group.

Nursing Homes

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nursing homes were located (a) within five, (b) five to 10, (c) 10 to 15 and (d) more than 15 kilometres from settlements with under 3,000 people in (i) 1999, (ii) 2000 and (iii) 2001. [46506]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not held centrally.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Local Government Finance

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to relieve people of paying council tax when in hospital; and if he will make a statement. [50492]

Dr. Whitehead: A person is required to pay council tax on their sole or main residence. When a person enters hospital for treatment on a short term basis, their sole or main residence remains the property where they resided prior to entering hospital. Where a person enters hospital on a long-term basis and there is no intention of their returning to their original residence, the hospital becomes in effect their main residence and their home is exempt from the council tax. We have no plans to change this.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what has been the change this year in the level of business rates in each London borough. [48869]

Dr. Whitehead: The table shows the amount of business rates that each London borough (and the City) estimates that it will collect in 2002–03 compared with estimates made at the corresponding time last year for 2001–02.

	Net business rate yield for 2002–02[1] (£ million)	Net business rate yield for 2002–03[1] (£ million)	Change in net business rate yield between 2001–02 and 2002–03[2] (£ million)	Change in net business rate yield between 2001–02 and 2002–03 (Percentage)

[1] Net of transitional, mandatory and discretionary rate reliefs.

[2] The business rate multiplier increased from 43.0p in 2001–02 to 43.7p in 2002–03. This increase was in line with changes in Retail Price Index, as required by legislation.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list for each of the last five years the SSA settlements for all local authorities and the percentage change from the previous year, showing those authorities with the highest percentage increase year on year and those with the lowest increases. [49739]

Dr. Whitehead: Tables showing the SSA settlements for all local authorities, together with the percentage changes against the SSA figures for the previous year, adjusted for changes in the functions and funding of authorities, where appropriate, for 1998–99, 1999–2000, 2000–01, 2001–02 and 2002–03 have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Postal Ballots

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what contingency plans have been made for the conduct of all-postal ballots in the 2002 local elections in the event of industrial action disrupting the postal service. [48749]

Dr. Whitehead: Councils have been in close contact with their local postal service representatives about the postal voting arrangements for the local elections. It is understood that no official industrial action is planned for the period of the elections. In the event of disruption to the postal service, Consignia is prepared to give priority to the delivery of voting material. Councils also have a range of contingency measures in place. These can include the use of commercial postal delivery firms and hand delivery arrangements. They can also set up ballot paper collection points and allow collection and delivery at council offices.

Planning

John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he expects to publish the final version of the Planning Policy Guidance Note 17. [49942]

Ms Keeble: I hope to be able to publish this shortly. As I indicated to last year's Transport, Local Government and the Regions Select Committee, this will not be before the publication of report of the Urban Green Spaces Task Force.

Housing

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what priority he intends to give to reducing the number of empty homes in his guidance to local authorities under the Homelessness Act 2002. [48729]

Ms Keeble: As I said on 12 July 2001 at the first sitting of the Homelessness Bill in the Commons, the statutory guidance on the homelessness provisions in the Homelessness Act 2002 will urge local housing authorities to include a review of empty properties within their district as part of the homelessness review that will inform their homelessness strategy.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what assessment was made of congestion levels in each region when determining house-building targets; and what influence this had on the final targets; [50518]

(2) what the estimated environmental cost is to each local authority arising from meeting the house-building targets. [50519]

Mr. Byers: This Government do not set house building targets.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what new money has been made available to help combat homelessness following the publication of the report 'More than a roof'. [50527]

Mr. Byers: The DTLR has allocated £125 million to the Homelessness Directorate for 2002–03 to tackle homelessness. This is made up of the Rough Sleepers Unit existing baseline of £30 million, the remainder being found from DTLR's End Year Flexibility and savings on other existing budgets.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 25 March 2002, Official Report, column 667W, what assessment he has made of the factors underlying the change in the numbers of successful cash incentive scheme grant applications by local authority tenants between 1997–98 and 2000–01. [48714]

Ms Keeble: We have not conducted a detailed assessment of the change in the number of successful applications. However, there was a significant reduction when separate ring-fenced funding was phased out in 1999–2000 (even though total housing capital funding was increased substantially). At that stage a number of authorities cut back or discontinued the scheme.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent guidance his Department has issued to local authorities on (a) establishing a cash incentive scheme and (b) the types and size of local authority property that should be prioritised for release under the cash incentive scheme. [48710]

Ms Keeble: Guidance on the operation of cash incentive schemes is issued by the Department from time to time, most recently in February 2000. Decisions about targeting the scheme on particular types and sizes of properties are for authorities to take, in the light of local circumstances.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what the maximum grants available are for housing association tenants of (a) bedsits, (b) one-bedroom properties, (c) two-bedroom properties, (d) three-bedroom properties, (e) four-bedroom properties and (f) properties with five or more bedrooms under the Tenants Incentive scheme; [48718]

(2) what factors determine the relationship between the rate of maximum discount available to housing association tenants under the Right to Acquire scheme and the rate of maximum grant available under the Tenants Incentive scheme; [48719]

(3) what the maximum discounts available are for housing association tenants of (a) bedsits, (b) one-bedroom properties, (c) two-bedroom properties, (d) three-bedroom properties, (e) four-bedroom properties and (f) properties with five or more bedrooms under the Right to Acquire scheme. [48717]

Ms Keeble: The Right to Acquire scheme gives eligible tenants of registered social landlords the right to purchase their rented home with the help of a discount. The discount generally varies from £9,000 up to a maximum of £16,000, irrespective of the size of the property, and depends on the local authority area in which the dwelling is situated.

The Tenants Incentive Scheme was discontinued on 31 March 1998. It provided a cash payment, equivalent to the right to acquire discount, funded by the Housing Corporation to help existing tenants vacate their housing association property and purchase their own home.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 26 March, Official Report, column 978W, on housing, if he will place in the Library copies of the research programmes that have been carried out into the cash incentive scheme. [48712]

Ms Keeble: Copies of the three research reports, are available from the Libraries of the House. (Cash Incentive Report 1989–1990, 1991–1994, 1994–1997).

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 25 March 2002, Official Report, column 668W, on right to buy, if he will make an assessment of the impact of increasing the maximum cash incentive scheme grant available in London to a level (a) equal to the maximum right to buy discount available in London and (b) 25 per cent. higher than the maximum right to buy discount in London. [48713]

Ms Keeble: We have no plans to carry out any further research/analysis on the impact of the cash incentive scheme in the immediate future.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 22 March 2002, Official Report, column 357W, if he will publish his assessment of Birmingham city council's application for a place on the housing transfer programme. [49823]

Ms Keeble: The assessment of Birmingham city council's application for a place on the housing transfer programme is internal advice to the Secretary of State and as such it would be inappropriate to make it publicly available.

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the average weekly rent level is for (a) housing association and (b) local housing company tenants in those local authority areas where housing has been transferred from the council under large-scale voluntary transfer. [48874]

Ms Keeble: In answer to part (a), the average weekly rent levels for housing association tenants in local authorities where all housing had been transferred from the council as at 31 March 2001 were as shown in the following table:

In addition, average weekly rents paid by housing association tenants in local authorities where only some housing had been transferred from the council as at 31 March 2001 were as follows:

Local authority	Average weekly rent
Cherwell	55.96
Enfield	64.06
Manchester	47.89
Mid Bedfordshire	52.27
Thanet	57.50
Tower Hamlets	60.54
Walsall	49.19

It should further be noted that since 31 March 2001, full transfer of council stock to housing associations has taken place in Erewash, Reigate and Banstead, East Hertfordshire, Chelmsford, Derbyshire Dales, Shrewsbury and Atcham and the rest of Mid-Bedfordshire.

In response to part (b), the term "local housing company tenants" has been interpreted as meaning the new "arms-length management companies". These have only recently been established and information on rent levels is not yet available.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what information his Department has collated on those local authorities in London who add an additional premium to the cash incentive scheme grant to those tenants who purchase a property on the open market within the same borough. [48711]

Ms Keeble: Information on this matter is not collated centrally.

Television Services

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what the terms of reference are for the review of planning regulations relating to satellite dish installations referred to in the Government's Broadband Strategy; when the review began; and when it will report; [49963]

(2) what assessment has been made of the impact of the inconsistency between planning regulations for satellite dishes and planning regulations for terrestrial television aerials on the availability of digital satellite television and broadband satellite services in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) areas where digital terrestrial television services are unavailable; [49965]

(3) what input the review of planning regulations relating to satellite dish installations will seek from (a) devolved institutions in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland and (b) regional development agencies. [49964]

Ms Keeble: The Government gave a commitment in the UK Online Annual report 2001 to review the planning regulations for satellite terminals to determine how current rules restricting a residential property to a single antenna could be relaxed, while continuing to minimise the environmental/visual impact of residential satellite terminals. The Digital Television Action Plan endorsed by Government and by the digital television stakeholders also promises a review of the impact of planning regulations on the deployment of aerials and dishes, with an initial report due by June 2002. My officials are currently discussing the issues with those of other Government Departments prior to discussions with relevant external stakeholders and then a wider public consultation on possible changes to the planning regulations that apply to England. Planning arrangements in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are a matter for the devolved administrations but we shall keep them in touch with discussions in England.

Equipment Leasing

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 4 March 2002, Official Report, column 84W, regarding equipment leasing arrangements, what the total cost has been of equipment leasing arrangements entered into by his Department in the last four years. [50328]

Dr. Whitehead: This answer can only be given at a disproportionate cost, as it is not held centrally by the Department.

Overtime Payments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what his policy is on overtime payments for staff in his Department. [49129]

Dr. Whitehead: Overtime payments are allowable only when there is exceptional pressure of work and alternative members of staff cannot be utilised for the tasks or where business needs dictate.

Air Traffic Control

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on plans to integrate the Air Traffic Control systems of EU countries. [49688]

Mr. Spellar: Negotiations on the European Commission's Single Sky proposals are under way. This project is designed to enhance Europe's airspace capacity, improve safety and achieve a greater degree of interoperability between the various suppliers of air traffic services in EU states. It does not require the integration of service providers, but focuses on more collective management of the European air traffic management system.

In the long-term, closer integration between Europe's air traffic service providers seems likely, particularly given the need to enhance efficiency so that future air traffic levels can be accommodated safely.

Ports

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what estimate he has made of the financial impact of state funding and subsidies for European ports on the competitive position of UK ports and port operators. [49836]

Mr. Jamieson: We have not made specific estimates, but the European Commission included a report on public financing and charging in European ports in its Communication on Ports, published in February 2001. In discussions on its proposed Directive on Market Access to Port Services, we have urged the Commission to take a further look at these issues.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the proposals for European port services. [49819]

Mr. Jamieson: The UK supports the broad principles of liberalisation and competition in port services underpinning the proposed Directive on Market Access to Port Services but we are very keen that it should be realistic and proportionate. It must recognise the diversity of the industry and the competition that already exists. A Transport Council working group is considering the Commission's proposed Directive. We are engaging fully in these negotiations in a constructive manner.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 26 March, Official Report, column 946W, on European Union ports, what response he has had from the Commission to these representations. [49835]

Mr. Jamieson: We are awaiting a response from the Commission.

Humber Pilotage Service

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the new Humber pilotage service. [50670]

Mr. Jamieson: A new pilotage service was introduced on the Humber on 12 December 2001 when the former pilots went on strike. My Department has closely monitored the new arrangements and I am placing in the Library a copy of a detailed report of that work. A copy will also be placed as soon as practicable on the Department's website.

Maritime and Coastguard Agency

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the cost of publicity and educational material published by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02. [49068]

Mr. Jamieson: The cost of publicity and educational material published by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02 is:

Year	£
2000–01	621,293.03
2001–02	1,000,006.15

These figures include the cost of exhibition stands and publicity trailers as well as publications and promotional items.

Traffic Calming

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will carry out an evaluation of the respective effectiveness and net cost of (a) road humps and (b) speed cameras as a means of reducing traffic speed levels. [49261]

Mr. Jamieson: A review of traffic calming schemes in 20 mph zones undertaken by the Transport Research Laboratory in 1996 (TRL Report 215, "Review of Traffic Calming Schemes in 20 mph zones") showed an average vehicle speed reduction of 9.3 mph in the zones. A cost benefit analysis of speed and traffic light cameras, also published in 1996, showed that speeds were reduced by an average of 4.2 mph at camera sites.

Monitoring of the first year of a trial of the netting off funding system for safety cameras has shown average speeds at camera sites reducing by 5.6 mph. In the case of road humps they are usually incorporated with other measures in traffic calming schemes, so their net costs have not been separately evaluated. However, the value of the benefits exceed the costs by a factor of five to one in the case of speed safety cameras.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of levels of pollution and difference in noise levels as a result of road humps and traffic-calming measures which involve narrowing of the highway and the construction of an uneven road surface. [49260]

Mr. Jamieson: A number of assessments have carried out examining changes in noise resulting from traffic calming measures, particularly resulting from different types of road hump. Results from these were published in Traffic Advisory Leaflets 6/96 "Traffic Calming: Traffic and Vehicle Noise" and 10/00 "Road humps: discomfort, noise and ground-borne vibration". Changes in vehicle emissions and air quality relating to traffic calming measures have also been the subject of departmental research (see Traffic Advisory Leaflet 4/96 "Traffic Management and Emissions"), some of which is still on-going.

Lorries

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the estimated number of lorries on the roads was in each of the last five years. [49700]

Mr. Byers: The latest available figures for 1996 to 2000, based on DVLA records of the number of heavy goods vehicles registered, are:

	Number
1996	430,000
1997	426,000
1998	427,000
1999	424,000
2000	422,000

Environmental Assessments

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what assessment of the Government's energy policies has been made with regards to assessing the environmental impact of (a) the 10-year plan and (b) the SRA plan; [49719]

(2) what assessment has been made as to the environmental costs resulting from (a) noise emissions, (b) vibration impacts and (c) aesthetic impacts caused by (i) road projects as outlined in the 10-year transport plan and (ii) rail projects as given in (1) the SRA plan and (2) the 10-year transport plan; [49450]

(3) what assessment has been made as to the environmental impact of (a) the 10-year plan and (b) the SRA plan. [49718]

Mr. Byers: An overall environmental assessment of the 10-year plan is set out in "Transport 2010: The Background Analysis", Chapter 4 and Annexes D and E. This is in the Libraries of the House. Individual projects, including those in the SRA Strategic Plan, are subject to environmental assessment, where appropriate, on an on-going basis as part of project development.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the environmental benefits of switching road haulage to rail on the West Coast Main Line. [49702]

Mr. Byers: The Strategic Rail Authority assesses the environmental benefit of the transfer of freight from road to rail using a calculation based on the net number of road lorry miles reduced. This has been applied in informing the current review of the allocation of capacity for passenger and freight trains on the West Coast Main Line.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment has been made as to the environmental costs of the increased processing required to produce ultra low sulphur petrol. [49699]

Mr. Byers: Statutory instrument 1999 No. 3107 incorporated the EU Directive 98/70/EC on the quality of petrol and diesel fuels into UK law. The regulatory impact assessment that assessed the impacts of the actions required to incorporate the directive included an environmental assessment. Copies of the directive, the statutory instrument and the regulatory impact assessment can be found in the Libraries of the House.

Alternative Fuels

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) if he will place in the Library details of the calculation on which the fuel duty rebate levels on (a) Cngas, (b) Lpgas, (c) biodiesels, (d) LNG, (e) E10 bioethanol blends and (f) E85 bioethanol blends is based; [49453]

(2) what level of fuel duty rebate has been granted to the road fuels (a) Cngas, (b) Lpgas, (c) biodiesels, (d) LNG, (e) E10 bioethanol blends and (f) E85 bioethanol blends. [49451]

Mr. Byers: My Department provides grant to the operators of local bus services in the form of fuel duty rebate. Decisions on the rate of grant paid for use of specific types of fuel are taken in the light of the duty levied on the fuel and wider policy considerations. An information pack explaining the fuel duty rebate scheme has been placed in the Library.

Operators of eligible services whose vehicles are gas powered (CNG, LPG, or LNG) receive rebate of all the excise duty, which is currently levied at 9 pence per kilogram.

No operator has so far claimed rebate for use of biodiesel and a rebate rate has not been set in advance of a claim.

E10 and E85 bioethanol blends are used as an additive to, or substitute for, petrol and are classed by the Customs and Excise as fuel substitutes with duty levied at the rate appropriate to the fuel with which they are mixed or substitute for. Any bus operator using petrol which included these blends would therefore receive rebate at the appropriate petrol rate, currently 34.30 per litre.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what Government incentives, in addition to public money, have been introduced to promote the use of (a) Cngas, (b) Lpgas, (c) biodiesels, (d) LNG, (e) E10 bioethanol blends and (f) E85 bioethanol blends; [49698]

(2) what the level of public funding is for the Powershift programme; [49695]

(3) what public money has been made available to encourage the use of (a) Cngas, (b) Lpgas, (c) biodiesels, (d) LNG, (e) E10 bioethanol blends and (f) E85 bioethanol blends in road transport. [49455]

(4) what advertising campaigns have been carried out as part of the Powershift programme; and what level of funding has been associated with them. [49696]

(5) what share of the funding for the Powershift programme is spent on promoting (a) Cngas, (b) Lpgas, (c) biodiesels, (d) LNG, (e) E10 bioethanol blends and (f) E85 bioethanol blends for transport. [49697]

Mr. Byers: The Government has introduced a range of fiscal and other measures to promote the use of cleaner fuels, such as road fuel gases and biofuels, which offer environmental benefits.

The Powershift programme promotes and provides grants towards the cost of purchasing cleaner fuel vehicles running on LPG, natural gas and electricity. No E10 or E85 blends are currently on sale in the UK. The Powershift budget for 2002–03 is £10 million, provided by my Department. This has recently been strengthened by an additional allocation of £1 million from the DTI, aimed at further raising awareness of LPG and increase the availability of good quality LPG vehicle conversions, particularly in rural areas.

The Government's CleanUp programme, complements Powershift, promotes and provides grants towards the conversion of existing vehicles to run on cleaner fuels including LPG and natural gas, and the fitting of emission abatement equipment. Its budget for 2002–03 is £10 million, of which around £8.5 million is likely to relate to clean fuel conversions. Additionally, the CleanUp programme will manage a further £7.5 million in 2002–03, as part of the Road Haulage Modernisation Fund announced by the Chancellor in the 2001 Budget and of which around £5.8 million will be for grants.

As announced in Budget 2001, the rate of fuel duty for road fuel gasses (natural gas and LPG) is at the low rate of 9 pence per kilogramme, and the Government indicated that there were would be no real terms duty increases until 2004 at the earliest. It was also announced that a new duty rate would be applied to biodiesel from Budget 2002, subject to European Union approval, 20 pence per litre below the rate for ultra low sulphur diesel.

The Government's Green Fuels Challenge is designed to stimulate the development of further alternative fuels. Proposals covering hydrogen, methanol and bio-gas will enjoy a period of zero fuel duty, subject to EU state aids clearance.. A second round of pilot project will be announced shortly after Budget 2002 inviting bids for a wider range of fuels.

The Powershift programme has a comprehensive marketing strategy to raise awareness of LPG and other alternative fuels. This includes advertising campaigns, regional workshops and articles run in environmental magazines. Over the last financial year the programme has run two advertising campaigns, the first targeted corporate fleet operators of vehicles under 3.5 tonnes and the second targeted at public sector fleets. The expenditure for these campaigns was £55,000.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) how many grants have been awarded under the Powershift Programme in each year since it was introduced; [49042]

(2) how much has been paid out in grants under the Powershift Programme in each year since it was introduced; [49303]

(3) how many LPG refuelling points there are in the UK; and how many sites there were in (a) April 2001 and (b) April 2000. [49302]

Mr. Jamieson: The table shows the total amount paid and the number of grants made together with the number of vehicles supported under the Powershift programme since it started.

Years	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	Total
Number of grants	69	127	392	1172	1177	2937
Number of vehicles supported	378	748	2,262	4,545	4,940	14,110
Amount of grant paid	£1.043m	£1.461m	£3.352m	£6.040m	£5.595m	£17.491m

The latest figures from the LP Gas Association confirm that there are currently 1,106 LPG refuelling points in the UK, at the end of March 2001 there were 700 and at the end of March 2000 there were 365.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what proportion of road transport fuel is gas based. [49454]

Mr. Byers: 65,778 tonnes of road fuels gases were sold in 2001. For comparison approximately 37 million tonnes of petrol and diesel were sold in the UK in 2000.

Railtrack

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what his policy is on supporting a bid for Railtrack plc in administration which has not been subject to due diligence. [47993]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 10 April 2001]: The extent of due diligence undertaken by any bidder for Railtrack plc is a matter for them. It is for the Administrator to determine the appropriate arrangements for access to the company. Network Rail, and any other potential bidders would need to address the issues set out in the guidelines issued by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 31 October 2001.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when the bid from Network Rail for Railtrack Plc was received by the administrator. [47988]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 10 April 2002]: This is a matter for the Administrator.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answers of 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 956W, refs. 45677 and 45678, on Railtrack, if the 10-year plan budget assumes a 2 per cent. annual reduction in real terms of Railtrack's overall income, including track access charges and network grants, for Control Period 2. [49838]

Mr. Jamieson: No. The £33.5 billion of public sector funding for rail in the 10-year plan takes account of Railtrack's regulated income in Control Period 2 as outlined in the Regulator's October 2000 periodic review and the April 2001 agreement between Government and Railtrack.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the dates on which he or officials from his Department have met representatives of Railtrack shareholders since 8 October 2001. [49790]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 15 April 2002]: It is not the normal practice of the Government to release details of meetings or discussions with private individuals or companies.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent discussions he has had with his French counterparts regarding the security of the channel tunnel rail link. [49686]

Mr. Spellar: Both Ministers and the Department are in regular contact with the French Government about security issues at the channel tunnel.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what action he has taken since November 2001 with regard to (a) his French ministerial counterpart and (b) the European Commissioner for Transport on (i) the disruption to rail freight facilities through the channel tunnel and (ii) the suspension of rail freight services through the channel tunnel. [R] [49034]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State on Tuesday 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 957W.

Freight

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what was the average journey length made by road hauliers to collect freight from the rail system to transfer it to its destination in the last 12 months. [49715]

Mr. Byers: The average journey length made by road hauliers to collect freight from the rail system during 2000 was 53 kilometres. This is the latest figure available.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what was the average journey length made by road hauliers to take freight to transfer onto the railway system in the last 12 months. [49714]

Mr. Byers: The average journey length made by road hauliers to transfer freight onto the railway system in 2000 was 74 kilometres. This is the latest figure available.

Public Transport

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on European discussions about liberalisation of public transport, as discussed at the Barcelona Summit. [49816]

Mr. Spellar: The Barcelona European Council conclusions called for the adoption by December 2002 of the Regulation on public service contracts. This proposal is intended to stimulate more efficient and attractive public transport through the use of regulated competition and other measures and to promote legal certainty for authorities and operators. Several Council working groups have already taken place, and further meetings are scheduled. The Commission gave a progress report on the proposal to the Transport Council on 26 March 2002. Ministers have also discussed the draft Regulation during a number of bilaterals with their European counterparts. The European Parliament has yet to schedule a date for further debate on the proposal.

The European Council in Barcelona also called on the Council to pursue work on the second railways package. The Commission's second railways package, published on 23 January, includes a proposal to complete liberalisation of the rail freight market by extending it to all domestic traffic including cabotage. The package also envisages further liberalisation of the passenger market, on which the Commission expects to bring forward specific proposals as part of its programme for the next five years. There was an initial Ministerial discussion of the package at the March Transport Council, but so far no further discussions have been scheduled.

Trans European Networks

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on his policy on the Trans European Networks. [49820]

Mr. Spellar: The Government supports the development of the European transport network. On 3 October 2001, the European Commission adopted proposals to amend the guidelines which govern the development of the network. An Explanatory Memorandum (12597) on the proposals was submitted to Parliament on 2 November 2001. Following a formal public consultation exercise, the Government remains very concerned about the Commission's proposal to add six new priority transport projects to the list at Annex III to the guidelines.

On 3 January 2002 the Commission adopted a proposal to amend the Regulation which lays down general rules for Community financing of the trans-European networks. An Explanatory Memorandum (15111) on that proposal was submitted to Parliament on 31 January. The Memorandum makes clear that the Government does not support the Commission's proposal to increase the maximum level of EU support for certain transport projects from 10 per cent. to 20 per cent. of total investment costs.

10-year Plan

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 26 March, Official Report, column 961W, ref 45348, on which of these projects (a) the high-level feasibility stage has been completed and (b) the detailed development work has begun. [49822]

Mr. Jamieson: Significant elements of all of the schemes listed as commitments on page 49 of the SRA's Strategic Plan are currently being implemented or are at a detailed stage of development. Of the schemes listed as priorities by 2010 the table sets out their status.

Project	Status
Committed outputs from the Chiltern, South Central and South West replacements	Chiltern—being implemented South Central—High level feasibility stage South West—Detailed development stage
Thameslink 2000	Detailed development stage
East Coast Main Line upgrade, including improvements at Kings Cross	High level feasibility stage
Freight Strategy	Various projects at different stages of development. Details are in the SRA strategic plan
Midland Mainline franchise extension	Implemented
TransPennine refranchising	Subject of a commercial competition
New trains and platform extensions to reduce overcrowding in South-east England	Several projects at different stages of development.
East London Line extension	Detailed development stage. Implementation of northern extension has started
London—West Anglia modernisation	High level feasibility stage
RPP schemes	Comprises several projects at different stages of development

The schemes listed for further development are all at the pre-feasibility or initial study stage.

Railways

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what information on the division of investment in rail projects between train operators, rolling stock leasing companies and infrastructure investment under the 10-year transport plan will be given to private investors. [R] [49028]

Mr. Jamieson: Information on estimated private sector investment in rail, in total and by type, has been set out in the 10-year Plan and the SRA Strategic Plan.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many former regional railways franchises have received funding from the SRA in addition to their original franchise deals; and if he will make a statement on the nature and extent of this funding. [49725]

Mr. Byers: Details are, or will be, provided in the relevant annual reports of the Strategic Rail Authority and the franchising director. Copies of reports already published have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what rights Network Rail has to draw upon the proposed £9 billion bridging loan from the SRA. [49870]

Mr. Jamieson: The Network Rail proposal, if successful, would involve a subordinated standby credit facility from the SRA to enable Network Rail to raise up to £9 billion bridging finance from private sector lenders to release Railtrack from administration as soon as possible. This would be refinanced through the capital markets on a longer term, securitised basis later in the year. The SRA credit facility would only be called upon (as a loan) to enable Network Rail to repay the bridging loans in the extremely unlikely event of Network Rail being unable to access the capital markets for these longer term loans.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the underwriting of the debt of Network Rail by means of potential emergency loans from the Strategic Rail Authority and his estimate of the maximum potential liability to the taxpayer. [47957]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Network Rail proposal, if successful, would involve a subordinated standby credit facility from the SRA to enable Network Rail to raise bridging finance—to release Railtrack from administration as soon as possible—and to provide a longer term backstop loan facility, which would only be used by the company in specified circumstances as a last resort.

The size of the credit facility is subject to negotiation, but would be expected to reduce over time as knowledge of the asset condition and cost causation improves. Once negotiations are completed, details of any credit facility that created a contingent liability would be notified formally to Parliament in accordance with established procedures.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what guarantees the Government provide for debt raised by Network Rail. [47514]

Mr. Spellar: The Network Rail proposal, if successful, would involve a subordinated standby credit facility from the SRA to enable Network Rail to raise bridging finance—to release Railtrack from administration as soon as possible—and to provide a longer term back stop loan facility, which would only be used by the company in specified circumstances as a last resort.

The size of the credit facility is subject to negotiation, but would be expected to reduce over time as knowledge of the asset condition and cost causation improves. Once negotiations are completed, details of any credit facility that created a contingent liability would be notified formally to Parliament in accordance with established procedures.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what percentage of the rail network is electrified. [49707]

Mr. Byers: I understand that just over one third of the rail network is currently equipped with electrification.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans there are to increase integration of rail networks on a European level; and if he will make a statement. [49687]

Mr. Spellar: The Commission published its second railway package on 23 January. This includes formal proposals to complete liberalisation of the European rail freight market, on safety, interoperability, the creation of a European Rail Agency and Community accession to the COTIF convention (the convention concerning international carriage by rail).

The Government share the Com[illegible]'s objective of enhancing the role of railways in our tr[illegible]system through greater efficiency and higher quality service[illegible] therefore welcomes publication of the package. We will be consulting widely on the package before reaching a formal position on the proposals and in particular will be concerned to ensure they do not impose unreasonable costs.

DEFENCE

Reservists

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether reservists will continue to be called out for operations in the Balkans and the region of Iraq. [50671]

Dr. Moonie: Two call-out orders have been made to enable reservists to continue to be called out into service to support operations in those regions. The first, made under section 54 of the Reserve Forces Act 1996, authorised the call out of members of the reserve forces to support operations in the region of Iraq. Its purpose is to continue the practice started in 1992 of calling out reservists, primarily specialists, to support the no-fly zone operations over north and south Iraq. At present 10 reservists are serving in the region. The second order was made under section 56 of the Act to allow reservists to be called into service to support operations in former Yugoslavia. Since 1995, when NATO operations commenced in former Yugoslavia, the reserve forces have provided some 10 per cent. of the total UK manpower in theatre. NATO's on-going study to find efficiencies for troop contributing nations will not be agreed or implemented in time to mitigate the present need. Both orders are effective until 31 March 2003.

Performance Targets

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what performance targets have been set for the Pay and Personnel Agency for the financial year 2002–03. [50672]

Dr. Moonie: The chief executive of the Pay and Personnel Agency is responsible for providing civilian pay, pensions and personnel information services for the Ministry of Defence as defined in the agency framework document. The agency will be set the following key performance targets for 2002–03:

Key Target 1

By March 2003 increase from 70 per cent. to 100 per cent. the proportion of PPA services available through the Customer Service Centre; increase from 8 to 15 the number of most important customer forms available on-line; and enable an effective single portal for civilian staff matters.

Key Target 2

Implement the new pensions project by October 2002.

Key Target 3

Improve customer satisfaction from 76 per cent. to 85 per cent. in 2002–03 and 90 per cent. in 2004–05.

Key Target 4

Increase from 55 per cent. to 85 per cent. by March 2003 and 100 per cent. by March 2004 the proportion of the agency covered by a single ISO certificate.

Key Target 5

Reduce the cost of Service Level Agreement tasks compared to 1997–98 by 25 per cent.

Meteorological Office

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Quinquennial Review of the Meteorological Office will take place. [50673]

Dr. Moonie: The Quinquennial Review of the Met Office will begin this month. The aim of the review is to examine how the Met Office has performed since its launch as a Trading Fund within the Ministry of Defence and to recommend whether, and if so what, measures should be taken in order to reinforce the office's delivery of cost-effective services to its customers and to ensure that full use is made of its scientific and human assets.

The review will proceed in two phases, in the first of which a number of "framework" issues will be examined, including whether the Met Office is best placed as a Trading Fund within the MOD to exploit its full potential and whether existing governance arrangements require adjustment. The report of this first phase of the review is expected in July.

In the second phase, the review will address, in the light of the answers to the "framework" issues examined in the first phase, a number of questions concerned with the operating efficiency of the Met Office, including the development of a more appropriate relationship between the office and its public sector customers, the scope for developing more commercial business opportunities, the potential for greater national and international co-operation in both meteorology and environmental services generally, and the scope for further streamlining of business processes both within the Met Office and between the office and its customers. The report of this second phase of the review is expected in October.

The review will be carried out by a small team, which will consult closely with the Met Office management and other stakeholders, including the office's customers. The MOD is interested also to hear the views of other organisations or individuals who would like to make a contribution to the review. Those wishing to do so should send their contributions to:

The Met Office QQR Team
The Met Office
London Road
Bracknell
Berkshire
RG12 2SZ.

Frigates

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 4 March 2002, Official Report, column 34W, to the hon. Member for North Wiltshire

(Mr. Gray), on which dates the Type 23s and Type 22s will be refitted with the 114mm Mark VIII Mod 1 gun. [49750]

Mr. Ingram: The 4.5 inch (114mm) Mark VIII Mod 1 gun has already been fitted to the Type 22 Batch 3 Frigate, HMS Cumberland and to the Type 23 Frigates, HMS Norfolk and HMS Iron Duke. HMS Marlborough and HMS Monmouth, both Type 23 Frigates, will be fitted with the updated gun during their current upkeep periods. It is currently planned that the remaining Type 22 Batch 3 and Type 23 Frigates will be fitted with the gun at a rate of two to three per year, during programmed maintenance and repair periods.

Unexploded Ordnance

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people have received compensation from the Ministry of Defence for injuries inflicted by unexploded ordnance; and how much that compensation has totalled in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and (f) 2002; and if he will make a statement. [49993]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence does not record separately those cases brought against the Department for injuries inflicted by unexploded ordnance. The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of (a) how many people are expected to receive compensation from the Ministry of Defence for injuries inflicted by unexploded ordnance in Kenya and (b) how much that compensation will total; and if he will make a statement. [49992]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has received 173 claims for compensation from tribespeople allegedly injured as a result of unexploded ordnance in Kenya. The solicitor acting for the tribespeople has intimated that about 100 further claims would be submitted. These claims will be considered on the basis of whether or not the Ministry of Defence has a legal liability to pay compensation. It would be prejudicial at this stage of the legal proceedings to announce the Ministry of Defence's estimate of the number of claimants expected to receive compensation and the total level of such awards.

Porton Down

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many claims have been received by the War Pensions Agency from service personnel who took part in experiments at the Chemical Defence Establishment, Porton Down for compensation arising out of these experiments since 19 February 2001. [43442]

Dr. Moonie: Between 19 February 2001 and 31 March 2002, 41 claims for war pensions have been received from Porton Down service volunteers.

SA80

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what problems have been experienced with the modified version of the SA80. [46864]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The modified SA80 is attracting excellent reports from units. Minor issues, common to any modification programme, have been identified and dealt with.

Defence Aviation Repair Agency

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he plans to take if the Defence Aviation Repair Agency fails to meet its targets in the financial year 2001–02. [47882]

Mr. Ingram: In preparation for the Defence Aviation Repair Agency (DARA) achieving trading fund status on 1 April 2001, the agency's business plans and financial targets were subject to rigorous scrutiny by Ministry of Defence and Treasury officials.

The targets set for DARA in 2001–02 have been based on the business requirements of the agency's MOD customers and also on its abilities in winning new business from external commercial markets. I continuously assess and review DARA's performance against a number of key performance indicators (KPIs). These key targets were established following consultation with both the Treasury and National Audit Office.

The targets cover:

Key performance indicator	Description
1. Quality	To equal baseline performance against a financial year 2000–01 benchmark (based on fault reports)
2. Return on capital employed	To achieve a 6 per cent. return on capital employed (ROCE)
3. Reduction in unit production price	To achieve a 2 per cent. reduction in unit production price
4. Increase in order intake	To achieve a 100 per cent. increase in order intake from financial year 2000–01 baseline
5. Increase in commercial revenue	To achieve a 15 per cent. increase in commercial revenue from financial year 2000–01 baseline

At the last ministerial advisory board, the assessment presented to me indicated that most of the targets for 2001–02 were likely to be met or exceeded. It is too soon, however, to be able to provide accurate details or figures until later this year, once the end of year results are collated.The targets set for 2002–03 are now in the process of being agreed with DARA.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (1) estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the Defence Fixed Telecommunications Service for the Ministry of Defence, by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49566]

(2) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the Hazardous Stores Information Project for the Ministry of Defence by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49666]

(3) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for RAF Lossiemouth (FQ), by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49574]

(4) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency Fire Training, by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49558]

(5) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for Tidworth Water and Sewerage for the Ministry of Defence, by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49570]

(6) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the German White Fleet for the Ministry of Defence, by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49562]

(7) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency, by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49568]

(8) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for Central Scotland FQ for the Ministry of Defence, by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49560]

(9) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for Yeovilton (Family Quarters) for the Ministry of Defence, by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49572]

(10) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for Attack Helicopter Training, by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49556]

(11) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the Hawk Simulator, by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49564]

(12) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for Medium Support Helicopter Air Crew Training Facility, by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49567]

(13) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the Training Administration and Financial Management Information System for the Ministry of Defence by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49667]

(14) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for Joint Services Command and Staff College, by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49575]

(15) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for Flying Training for University Air Squadrons and Air Experience Flights, by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49559]

(16) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for RAF Fylingdales (Power), by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49571]

(17) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for RAF Cosford/Shawbury, by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49555]

(18) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the Helicopter Flying School, by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49563]

(19) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for RAF Lyneham Sewerage for the Ministry of Defence, by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49569]

(20) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the RAF White Fleet for the Ministry of Defence, by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49561]

(21) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for RAF Mail, by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49573]

(22) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the Tornado SR4 Simulator, by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49557]

(23) what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for Army Mail (IT), by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative. [49565]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Soldiers (Trade Unions)

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact of European Union law on the right of soldiers to join a trades union; and if he will make a statement. [49730]

Mr. Ingram: Article 11 of the European Convention on Human Rights provides for a right to peaceful assembly and association, including the right to form a trade union. The Article does allow for the imposition of lawful restrictions on the exercise of those rights by members of the armed forces. No restrictions are placed upon Service personnel attending meetings of civilian trade unions, professional associations, or courses of instruction run by the same that are intended to enhance trade skills and professional knowledge. However, as the armed forces must be seen to maintain a position of political neutrality, personnel may not participate in any form of political activity organised by a civilian trade union or organisation to which they belong.

Refits

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 18 March 2002, Official Report, column 73W, for what reasons the refits of (a) HMS Manchester and (b) HMS Liverpool are taking longer than the average periods given; and what enhancements are being provided to each of the five ships presently in refit. [49748]

Mr. Ingram: The average refit period given in my reply to the hon. Member was indicative for the frigate and destroyer Class. The refit periods for ships within a Class will vary depending on individual requirements. HMS Manchester exceeded the average period principally due to work required on her gearbox. In HMS Liverpool's case, an extensive electronics package required an extended trials period.

The five frigates and destroyers currently in refit will receive a number of enhancements at various levels, details of the major ones are given as follows:

HMS Manchester (Type 42 Destroyer)

Water displaced fuel tanks; an electronic package; environmental garbage disposal machines; removal of red lead paint.

HMS Liverpool (Type 42 Destroyer)

Water displaced fuel tanks; an extensive electronic package; environmental garbage disposal machines; removal of red lead paint.

HMS Gloucester (Type 42 Destroyer)

Water displaced fuel tanks; environmental garbage disposal machines; biological sewage treatment plants; Total command support system.

HMS Iron Duke (Type 23 Frigate)

Aviation facilities to allow operation of Merlin helicopter, command support and communications systems upgrade; installation of equipment to purify water discharged from ship to meet marine pollution regulations.

HMS Monmouth (Type 23 Frigate)

Enhancements as per HMS Iron Duke.

Destroyed Argentine Aircraft

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Argentine aircraft were destroyed by British forces in 1982 by (a) Sea Dart, (b) Sea Wolf, (c) Sea Cat, (d) Sea Slug, (e) Bofors, (f) Oerlikon, (h) small arms fire, (i) Blowpipe, (j) Rapier, (k) Harrier, (l) bombing and ground operations, (m) naval gunfire and (n) Stinger. [49757]

Mr. Ingram: The causes of loss in the categories requested are shown in the following table.

Falklands 1982—Argentine aircraft losses

Category	Number
Sea Dart	7
Sea Wolf	3
Sea Cat	0
Sea Slug	0
Bofors	1
Oerlikon	0

War Graves (France)

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has made to the French authorities about the effect of a third Paris airport on Commonwealth war graves; and if he will make a statement. [49742]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Tewkesbury (Mr. Robertson) on 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 166W.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of how many British and Commonwealth war graves would have to be relocated if the French authorities proceeded with a new airport at Chaulnes; and which military cemeteries are affected. [49741]

Dr. Moonie: The French Government have a good record for handling civil engineering projects on the battlefields of the Western Front with sensitivity. We have no reason to believe that they will handle this current proposal any differently. In the case of the proposed airport at Chaulnes, no firm plans have been agreed and the perimeter of the site is still to be discussed. However, based on the latest proposals which have been published in the French press, the cemeteries that could be affected are as follows, together with the number of British and Commonwealth graves that may be disturbed as a result.

Cemeteries	Australian	Canadian	New Zealand	South African	United Kingdom	Total
Bouchoir New British	6	214	—	1	542	763

Sovereign Base Areas Cyprus

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the recent visit to the Sovereign Base Areas Cyprus by Lieutenant General Reith. [R] [48739]

Mr. Ingram: Lieutenant General Reith, Chief of Joint Operations, made a routine visit to Cyprus during the period 25–28 February. The trip was part of a series of visits to the three Overseas Commands (British Forces Gibraltar, Falkland Islands and Cyprus), of which he has operational command.

Territorial Army

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the Territorial Army are serving on operations; and in which locations their numbers exceed 50. [49770]

Dr. Moonie: As at 12 April there were 415 members of the Territorial Army serving on operations. The locations where the numbers exceeded 50 were Bosnia, where 174 were serving, and Kosovo, where 155 were serving.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the strength is of the Territorial Army. [49769]

Dr. Moonie: As at 1 March 2002, the strength of the Territorial Army stood at 39,617 personnel of whom 392 are currently mobilised in support of operations.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to disband Territorial Army field hospital units. [49745]

Dr. Moonie: There are currently no plans to disband Territorial Army field hospital units.

Golden Jubilee

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received concerning the exclusion of retired officers from eligibility for the Queen's Golden Jubilee Medal; and if he will make a statement. [50019]

Dr. Moonie: A number of hon. Members have written on behalf of constituents who are former members of the armed forces but who have been re-employed as civil servants in a Retired Officer grade. In addition, the Ministry of Defence has received letters from individual Retired Officers and the Retired Officers Association has made representations on behalf of their members. I also refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 14 February 2002, Official Report, column 568W, to the hon. Member for Colchester (Bob Russell).

War Widows' Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons Mrs. M. K. Tushingham, a constituent whose details have been supplied, has been told that she may no longer receive her RAF widows pension via an order book at a post office. [48989]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 15 April 2002]: Pensions under the Armed Forces Pension Scheme are normally paid monthly in arrears. Some 6,700 pensioners (2 per cent. of the total number of Armed Forces pensioners) in receipt of pensions prior to 1981 have retained rights to payment of pensions weekly in advance, historically via a "Payable Order Book" (POB) cashable at post offices. Revised arrangements were introduced from April 2002 to provide the pensioner with a more secure means of payment than the POB system; it is also more cost-effective to the Ministry of Defence and easier to administer.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the circumstances in which RAF widows can receive their war pensions other than into a bank account; [48987]

(2) what arrangements are available for war widows who (a) are unable to obtain a bank account and (b) do not wish to open a bank account to receive their pensions. [48988]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 15 April 2002]: War Widows pensions, administered by the Veterans Agency, can be paid into either a bank account or building society, or by cash at the post office.

Staff College, Shrivenham

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what training and education the Joint Services Staff College at Shrivenham provides in peacekeeping and conflict resolution. [44746]

Mr. Ingram: The Joint Services Staff College at Shrivenham provides a number of courses that cover peacekeeping and conflict resolution. The courses are:

The Higher Command and Staff course, which trains 30 students per year.

The Advanced Command and Staff course, which trains 420 students per year.

The Royal Navy Junior Division, which trains 200 students per year.

The Army Junior Division, which trains 420 students per year.

The Royal Air Force Junior Division, which trains 440 students per year.

Reserve courses.

Students on all staff courses are issued a range of service and other publications on the subject, and specifically: JWP 3–50 "Peace Support Operations".

Accommodation

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) who conducts the (a) customer attitude survey, (b) continuous attitude survey and (c) Independent Housing Survey; what questions on housing there were in each of the surveys; if he will place a copy of the most recent of each in the Library; and if he will make a statement; [48665]

(2) what percentage of respondents were content with the standard of accommodation allocated to them in the (a) customer attitude survey, (b) continuous attitude survey and (c) Independent Housing Survey; and if he will make a statement. [48666]

Dr. Moonie: The Customer Attitude Survey conducted by QinetiQ for the Defence Housing Executive (DHE) is a comprehensive survey of attitudes relating to Service Family Accommodation. It is wide-ranging and covers many aspects of housing; copies have been placed in the Library of the House. It records 67 per cent. of service families as "content" with the standard of family accommodation. There is no separate "independent housing survey" questionnaire.

Each of the Services undertakes continuous attitude surveys. These are not specifically related to family housing but are intended to measure morale and to understand the concerns and motivations of their personnel across a spectrum of issues, including conditions of service, training and development and accommodation of all kinds. There are no plans to release them into the public domain.

For the RN, the continuous attitude survey responses of August 2001 indicated that some 58 per cent. were either very satisfied or satisfied, and 22 per cent neutral, with the standard of family accommodation provided. For the RAF, the survey for May and August 2001 indicated that 53 per cent. regarded their accommodation as satisfactory or very satisfactory and 31 per cent. as adequate. The corresponding question in the Army's August 2001 survey did not distinguish between family and single accommodation but showed 42 per cent. satisfied or very satisfied.

SAS and SBS

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement as to the policy for Return to Mainstream service for personnel in the Special Air Service's and Special Boat Service; and whether he plans to recruit for SAS and SBS other than from serving members of the regular armed forces. [49467]

Mr. Ingram: Non-commissioned personnel who successfully complete United Kingdom Special Forces (UKSF) selection, and continue to maintain appropriate standards, will normally serve the balance of their careers with UKSF. The careers of regular serving officers will be managed in a way which balances service within and outside the UKSF group, to the mutual benefit of the individual, UKSF and the parent service.

Members of UKSF may be returned to their parent corps at any time should they be found unsuitable for further service or should they wish to do so at their own request.

Volunteers for the SBS and SAS, who must have completed two years adult military service, may apply from any part of the regular armed forces, as may reservists serving with one of the UKSF reserve units. Applicants from overseas are also eligible in certain circumstances. There are no plans to expand the recruiting base.

Sea Harriers

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what savings will be made from the withdrawal of the Sea Harrier force from service. [49760]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 28 February 2002, Official Report, columns 1451–52W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Broxtowe (Dr. Palmer). The withdrawal of the Sea Harrier force from service is one part of the new investment strategy for Joint Force harrier. The upgrade of the Harrier GR force will see the enhancement of our expeditionary offensive air capability, in particular from the Royal Navy's aircraft carriers. This is a capability driven initiative and provides for a smooth transition to the Future Joint Combat Aircraft. Savings will occur in not having to provide for modifications to address obsolescence, in streamlined training and basing and personnel efficiencies. Full advantage of this has been taken in construction of the forward programme.

Afghanistan

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which nations have contributed forces to (a) Operation Enduring Freedom and (b) ISAF; how many troops each of these nations has contributed; and if he will make a statement. [50000]

Mr. Hoon: Operation Enduring Freedom is being co-ordinated by the US Central Command in Tampa, Florida. The latest figures available are from 27 February, when, in addition to the US, there were 68 nations supporting the global war on terrorism, 17 of which had deployed more than 17,000 troops to the US Central Command's area of responsibility.

The list of nations contributing to International Security Assistance Force, with their individual contributions as at 15 April, is in the table.

The long list of nations involved in these offensive and security assistance activities illustrates the breadth of support for the international coalition against terrorism. It is vital that all these nations continue their support to deal with the significant threat which remains from Al Qaeda and the Taliban, and to help the Afghans as they begin the rebuilding of their country.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what heavy lift aircraft (a) have been used in the deployment of British troops for ISAF and (b) are being used to deploy 45 Commando to Afghanistan; and if he will make a statement. [49999]

Mr. Hoon: C-17, Tristar and C-130 aircraft have been used to deploy United Kingdom personnel and equipment to Afghanistan. Chartered An-124s have also been used for deploying equipment.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British troops involved in ISAF will be reallocated to Operation Enduring Freedom; and if he will make a statement. [50001]

Mr. Hoon: None. We have drawn a distinction between those troops involved in security assistance activities in Kabul and those troops who are currently deploying for offensive operations to play their part in the task of rooting out al-Qaeda and Taliban remnants.

Deployments

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the armed forces are deployed abroad on operations; and where. [46305]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 March 2002]: The numbers and locations of armed forces personnel deployed on military tasks overseas, including operations, are shown in the table. The figures do not include personnel preparing for, or recovering from, operations.

Location	Royal Navy	Army	RAF

Notes:

1. The Royal Navy figures are as at 26 March 2002.
2. The Army figures are as at 21 March 2002.
3. The RAF figures are as at 1 March 2002.

In addition, some 1,145 Royal Marines personnel were deployed on military tasks at various overseas locations, including Afghanistan and the Gulf.

HMS Intrepid

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the disposal of HMS Intrepid. [49766]

Mr. Ingram: HMS Intrepid will be disposed of by sale either to the commercial market or to another acceptable Government if one can be found.

Pilots

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) establishment and (b) strength of pilots is for (i) Tornado F3, (ii) Tornado GR1/4, (iii) Harrier GR7 and (iv) Jaguar. [49771]

Mr. Ingram: The position at 1 April 2002 is set out in the table.

Force	Established flying posts[1]	Strength
Tornado F3	116	108
Tornado GR1/4	134	122
Harrier GR7	67	63
Jaguar	60	55

[1] Comprises wing commander, squadron leader and junior officer posts on front line squadrons, operational conversion units, operational evaluation units and wing appointments. In addition to the established flying posts on the specified aircraft type, fast jet pilots are required for instructional duties within the RAF's flying training system, overseas exchange posts, the RAF Aerobatic Team and a number of ground duties shared by all General Duties Branches.

Defence Evaluation and Research Agency

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for North Essex, of 25 March 2002, Official Report, column 562W, if he will list the 19 industry respondees to the DERA PPP consultation process; how many of them were supportive of the PPP and how many opposed; and how many of them were proposing an alternative structure to the PPP. [49997]

Dr. Moonie: The consultation document published in spring 2000 resulted from wide ranging discussions with stakeholders and an initial public consultation exercise. As identified in the previous answer referred to by the hon. Member, 19 industry responses were received from the following companies, trade associations and professional bodies:

GKN

WS Atkins

BAE Systems

Thesauras

Rolls Royce

HVR Consulting Services

Alvis

Raytheon

Society of British Aerospace Companies

UK Industrial Space Committee

Federation of the Electronics Industry

Defence Issues Working Group

Defence Manufacturers Association

Association of Independent Research and Technology Organisations

British Naval Equipment Association

CSSA Defence Group

Foresight Defence

Aerospace and Systems Panel

CBI (two responses).

It is not appropriate to publish details of the individual responses, as they were not provided on the basis that they would be placed in the public domain. The main points have been summarised and are generally supportive, although most requested further information on the process. Consequently the Ministry of Defence has had continuous discussions with industry throughout implementation, including regular meetings with the National Defence Industries Council.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Gibraltar

14. Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on discussions held with EU member states over Gibraltar at the Barcelona summit. [45529]

Peter Hain: Barcelona welcomed the relaunch of the Brussels Process, underlined the support for the efforts of the British and Spanish Governments to conclude a comprehensive agreement before the summer; and invited the European Commission to explore ways in which the EU could underpin any agreement reached.

Iraq

15. Mr. Joyce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the US Administration about Iraq. [45530]

Mr. Bradshaw: The most recent discussions on Iraq took place between my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and President Bush in Crawford, Texas. We are putting all our diplomatic energy into securing Iraqi compliance with UN resolutions—but are considering all options to ensure Iraq cannot threaten its people or neighbours. We will proceed patiently and prudently, in consultation with our allies.

27. Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on recent discussions he has had with his partners in the international coalition against terrorism about Iraq. [45542]

Mr. Bradshaw: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary regularly discusses our concerns about Iraq's support for international terrorism with his partners in the international coalition against terrorism.

39. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Iraq. [45554]

Mr. Bradshaw: We continue to have serious concerns about Iraq's development of weapons of mass destruction. The international community's most pressing demand is that Iraq allow weapons inspectors to return and finish their work. We intend to consider the way forward in a calm, measured, sensible, but firm way.

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of Iraq's military intentions; and if he will make a statement. [49826]

Mr. Bradshaw: As UN weapons inspectors have not been allowed access to Iraq for three years, we do not have detailed knowledge of the Iraqi Government's military intentions. But we do know that Saddam is continuing his chemical and biological weapons programme and is developing the long-range missiles to deliver them. It is important that we remain vigilant about the threat he poses to the region and the wider world.

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of Iraq's involvement in international terrorism; and if he will make a statement. [49825]

Mr. Bradshaw: Iraq has a long-standing record of support for terrorism; this includes support for Palestinian terrorist groups and the activities against Iran of the Iranian terrorist group, the Mujaheddin-e-Khalq (MeK), as well as the assassination of political opponents.

Zimbabwe

16. Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the elections in Zimbabwe and the implications for the new partnership for African development. [45531]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary told the House on 14 March that Zimbabweans had plainly been denied their fundamental right to choose by whom they are governed. NEPAD can only work on the basis of co-operation between democratic Governments with full international legitimacy.

21. Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further discussions he has had with Commonwealth members about the restoration of democracy in Zimbabwe. [45536]

Mr. MacShane: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier in the House today to the hon. Member for Ruislip-Northwood (Mr. Wilkinson).

29. John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his policy towards Zimbabwe remaining within the Commonwealth. [45544]

Mr. MacShane: On 19 March Zimbabwe was suspended from the Councils of the Commonwealth for one year. We welcome this.

We shall be discussing Zimbabwe's future status with Commonwealth partners during the coming 12 months.

33. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Zimbabwe. [45548]

Mr. MacShane: What has happened in Zimbabwe is a tragedy, imposed on that once prosperous land by Robert Mugabe. Respect for the rule of law and a return to democratic principles and sensible economic policies are the only way back for Zimbabwe.

20. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact on bilateral relations with Zimbabwe of the recent elections in that country; and if he will make a statement. [45535]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary told the House on 14 March that Zimbabweans had plainly been denied their fundamental right to choose by whom they are governed.

This leaves UK relations with Zimbabwe's Government at their lowest ebb since that country's independence. But we remain committed to stand by the people of Zimbabwe and will continue our programme of humanitarian assistance.

International Terrorism

17. Ian Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he will take to instruct the UK mission to the United Nations to work for full compliance by member states with their obligation to file a report on terrorist financing and providing safe havens for terrorists. [45532]

Mr. MacShane: Under the terms of UN Security Council Resolution 1373 States are obliged to submit such reports to the UN's Counter-Terrorism Committee. As of 9 April, 139 of the 189 UN Member States had fulfilled this obligation. As Chair of the Committee, the British Permanent Representative has written twice urging States that have not yet submitted a report to do so.

19. Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the US on measures to prevent international terrorism. [45534]

Mr. Bradshaw: We have frequent and regular discussions with the US on many aspects of the international campaign against terrorism. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister discussed the campaign with President Bush in Crawford on 7 April.

Delhi Declaration

18. Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of the Delhi declaration. [45533]

Mr. Bradshaw: The New Delhi Declaration, signed by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, and the Indian Prime Minister on 6 January 2002, represents a new high-water mark in the strong and vibrant relationship between the UK and India. It identifies many areas of common interest and sets out a road-map for future co-operation, both bilaterally and on the world stage.

The Declaration is already having an impact. Elements of it were discussed by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and myself in our meetings with our Indian counterparts in the last two months.

Afghanistan

22. Mr. Hendrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the contribution of the UK to ensuring political stability in Afghanistan. [45537]

Mr. Bradshaw: Political stability is crucial to long term stability in Afghanistan. The Government fully support the UN-led political process, as set out in the Bonn Agreement. Its aim is to establish a broadly based, representative and democratic government in Afghanistan. The convening of the Emergency Loya Jirga in June is the next step towards this. The UK has given £500,000 to support the Loya Jirga Commission, who are responsible for arranging the Emergency Loya Jirga.

We pledged £200 million of reconstruction assistance in January at the Tokyo Donors Conference on Reconstruction. The UK is currently Lead Nation of the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF), which is playing an important role supporting the Interim Administration to maintain security in and around Kabul.

25. Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the war in Afghanistan. [45540]

Mr. Bradshaw: The campaign in Afghanistan is focused on ridding the country of the remnants of al-Qaeda and the Taliban, which still pose a significant threat. At the request of the United States we have deployed 45 Commando to assist with this operation. We are committed to ensuring that Afghanistan can no longer offer a haven to terrorists and will remain engaged until we have finished the task.

31. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made in the international fight against the drug trade in Afghanistan. [45546]

Mr. MacShane: The UK has taken the lead in coordinating international efforts to implement sustainable drug control in Afghanistan through the creation of alternative legal livelihoods, the reconstruction of infrastructure and the establishment of effective law enforcement and good governance. We have also been working with the Afghan Interim Administration to implement the decree banning opium production issued by Chairman Karzai on 3 April. We have been encouraging other members of the international community to provide similar support.

Sudan

23. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Sudan. [45538]

Mr. MacShane: We remain deeply concerned about the situation in Sudan but believe that 2002 offers a real window of opportunity for peace and that the UK has a major role to play in ensuring that this opportunity is seized. There has been some recent progress, for example in the Nuba mountains where a ceasefire appears to be holding.

Middle East

24. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will report progress on peace initiatives in the middle east. [45539]

28. Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent steps he has taken to bring Israelis and Palestinians together to promote a peaceful settlement. [45543]

32. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the United States Administration about influencing the progress towards peace in the middle east. [45547]

34. Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations between Israel and the Palestinian Authority. [45549]

35. Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the middle east peace process. [45550]

Mr. Bradshaw: We are gravely concerned by the consequences of the escalation in the middle east in recent weeks. The situation could get even worse unless both sides step back, and start talking. This requires real engagement and intervention by the international community.

The priority is implementation of UNSCRs 1402 and 1403, a ceasefire, the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Palestinian cities and full co-operation by the parties with General Zinni to implement the Tenet security work-plan and the Mitchell Committee recommendations with the aim of resuming negotiations on a political settlement. US Secretary of State Powell is in the region now on a mission to achieve this. It is crucial that both sides work constructively with Colin Powell. As the Prime Minister said in his statement to the House on 10 April, "Both sides must realise that violence is not, and never will be the answer. The solution to this crisis will never be reached if it is seen purely as a security or military question. There must be a political process."

The UK has played a full part in international efforts to bring the violence to an end and resume negotiations. The Prime Minister discussed the situation in the middle east with President Bush in Crawford, Texas. He has also had talks with European Heads of Government and President Mubarak. The Foreign Secretary has been in constant contact with his European counterparts and the US Secretary of State. He also spoke to Israeli Foreign Minister Peres on 11 April. Despite the difficulties we have also maintained close contact with the Palestinian Authority primarily through our Consulate-General in Jerusalem. I spoke to the Palestinian Minister for International Planning and Co-operation, Nabil Sha'ath, on 3 April.

We shall be seeking a UN Security Council Resolution, based on Crown Prince Abdullah's plan, to promote a political process, following US Secretary of State Powell's visit to the region. We stand ready to help with monitoring, of a cease-fire and confidence building measures.

We have grave concerns about the denial of medical and humanitarian assistance to those in need in the Occupied Territories and about the lack of food, electricity and water. I raised our concerns with the Israeli ambassador on 4 April. We have also been disturbed by the reports of the deaths of innocents in the Jenin refugee camp and the conduct of the IDF. The Foreign Secretary raised these issues with the Israeli Foreign Minister on 11 April. We have urged the Government of Israel to ensure respect for international law by its armed forces and investigate thoroughly all allegations of IDF misconduct.

The Government will continue to do all it can to help the parties end the violence and resume talks based on UN Security Council Resolutions 242, 338 and 1397, and the principle of land for peace. Peace between Israel and the Palestinians will only come through a political process which delivers security for Israel within recognised borders, brings an end to occupation, and allows the emergence of a secure and viable, democratic and peaceful Palestinian state committed to co-existence with Israel, and recognised and respected by Israel.

British Detainees (Cuba)

26. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation of the British Taliban and al-Qaeda suspects held at Guantanamo Bay. [45541]

Mr. Bradshaw: We remain in close touch with the US Government about the British detainees in Guantanamo Bay, their status, the legal procedure to which they might be subject and their welfare.

In response to our approaches, the US Government have given us the assurance that they would treat all UK detainees humanely and consistently with the principles of the Geneva Convention.

EU Enlargement

30. David Cairns: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance is being provided by the UK to the candidate counties for EU membership. [45545]

Peter Hain: Over the last decade we have contributed £350 million through the "Know How Fund" to provide technical assistance to the central European candidate countries. We now have "Action Plans" with all 13 candidates with a total budget of £1.8 million in the last financial year. The plans bring together the UK's practical assistance to the candidates across a range of activities involving other Whitehall Departments.

Since 1998, the UK has won involvement in over 100 Twinning projects, whereby experts are seconded as long-term Pre-Accession Advisers to candidate countries' ministries. This is the third highest number of any member state. The UK was the first member state to win involvement in projects in all 12 negotiating countries.

36. Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the enlargement of the European Union. [45551]

Peter Hain: Enlargement negotiations are progressing steadily and are on course to meet the timetable agreed at Gothenburg and confirmed at Laeken—to end negotiations in 2002 with the best-prepared countries, so that they can take part in the European Parliament elections in 2004.

Currently 10 of the 12 countries in negotiations have opened 29 chapters. Slovenia has closed 26 chapters, Cyprus, Hungary, Estonia, Czech Republic and Lithuania have all closed 24, Slovakia and Latvia have both closed 23, Poland has closed 22 and Malta has closed 21. Bulgaria has opened 27 chapters and closed 14 while Romania has opened 22 and closed nine.

Nice Treaty

37. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on recent discussions he has had with his EU colleagues on the ratification of the Nice treaty. [45552]

Peter Hain: The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs meets his European counterparts regularly. These meetings discuss a range of subjects including the ratification of the treaty of Nice.

The Bill to enable the UK to ratify the treaty of Nice received Royal Assent on 26 February, and the Government will lodge the instrument of ratification in Rome in the coming months.

China (Human Rights)

38. Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Government of China in relation to their record on human rights. [45553]

Mr. MacShane: We regularly raise concerns about the human rights situation in China, including through the six-monthly UK-China Human Rights Dialogue. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary raised human rights concerns with the Chinese Foreign Minister during his visit to the UK on 16–19 January.

Myanmar

40. Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the situation in Myanmar. [45555]

Mr. Bradshaw: In recent weeks there has been an EU Troika delegation visit to Burma and EU action over forced labour in Burma at the International Labour Organisation. The EU is preparing a resolution on Burma for adoption at the United Nations Commission on Human Rights and the UN Secretary-General's Special Envoy to Burma will visit Burma 22–24 April.

I remain gravely concerned about the overall situation in Burma. Although there has been some very modest political progress there in the past 16 months, we need to see early evidence of substantive change if confidence in the political process in Burma is to be maintained.

Iran

6. Mr. Lyons: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the United States Administration about Iran. [45521]

Mr. Bradshaw: Iran was among the wide range of issues discussed during my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's visit to Washington on 31 January and 1 February. He also discussed Iran in a telephone conversation with the US Secretary of State in March.

Departmental Underspend

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the (a) capital and (b) revenue underspend in his Department is expected to be in the financial year 2001–02. [47799]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office estimated out-turn figures for 2001–02 will be published in the Budget Report on 17 April 2002.

Overtime

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his policy is on overtime payments for staff in his Department. [49127]

Mr. Bradshaw: All staff below the Senior Management Structure (equivalent to Senior Civil Service Staff) qualify for overtime or time off in lieu if they are required to work more than their conditioned hours at times of exceptional pressure. We do not encourage staff to work long hours but aim to reward them fairly when they do. All overtime must be approved in advance. Diplomatic Service staff serving overseas are not paid overtime but may be given time off in lieu when they work excessive hours, at management discretion.

Departmental Report

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the 2002 Departmental report will be published. [49583]

Mr. MacShane: The FCO's 2002 Departmental Report is due to be published in spring 2002. The date will be announced shortly.

Laos

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what actions he is taking to improve the conditions of religious minorities in Laos; and if he will make a statement. [48849]

Mr. Bradshaw: Contacts between British Ministers and officials and their Lao counterparts are limited. But we raise concerns about human rights in Laos, including the conditions of religious minorities, when such meetings take place. When the Lao Deputy Foreign Minister visited the UK in June 2001 the FCO's Asia-Pacific Director told him that the treatment of Lao Christians was a matter of particular concern in the UK. There is no DFID country programme for Laos. But DIFD and the FCO provide some funding aimed at improving the overall quality of life of the Lao people, including religious minorities.

Japan

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of Japan's capability for building nuclear weapons. [49265]

Mr. Bradshaw: Japan is a designated member of the IAEA Board of Governors and is thus recognised as being one of the nations most advanced in civil nuclear technology and applications. Japan is a member of the treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, as a non-nuclear weapon state, and it is thus treaty-bound not to pursue nuclear weapons programmes. Japan's constitution prohibits the development and use of nuclear weapons. It is active in the fields of nuclear non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament.

COREPER

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what mechanisms he uses for providing advanced notice to hon. Members of agenda items for COREPER meetings. [49491]

Peter Hain: Provisional agendas for COREPER meetings are posted on the Council of the European Union website http://register.consilium.eu.int.

Smart Card Technology

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the use of smart card technology in his Department and in the areas for which it is responsible; and what discussions he has had with private companies about the use of smart card technology within his Department. [50479]

Mr. Mac[illegible]ane: Smart card technology is not in use within the FCO at home or overseas. This is a technology being tracked for potential business benefit within the FCO, and informal discussions have been held with a number of technology companies.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Sunset Clauses

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which Bills introduced by her Department in the last five years have contained sunset clauses; and what plans she has for the future use of such clauses. [49624]

Dr. Howells: The Department has introduced five bills in the last five years (National Heritage Act 1997, National Lottery Act 1998, Royal Parks (Trading) Act 2000, Television Licences (Disclosure of Information) Act 2000 and the Culture and Recreation Bill introduced in 2001). None of these contained any sunset clauses. Decisions on the future use of such clauses will be made on a case-by-case basis and will be communicated to the House in the usual way.

Departmental Report

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the 2002 departmental report will be published. [49579]

Dr. Howells: The departmental report for 2002 will be published by the end of May.

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people employed by the non-departmental public bodies for which she is responsible under the new deal for young people in each of the last four years have subsequently (a) found unsubsidised employment for more than 13 weeks and (b) returned to jobseekers allowance or other benefits. [49605]

Dr. Howells: This information is not held by the Department and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Overtime Payments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her policy is on overtime payments for staff in her Department. [49115]

Dr. Howells: Overtime in the Department for Culture, Media and Sport can be authorised for staff working in excess of their conditioned hours. This is in line with the Civil Service Management Code. Conditions and rates are published internally and depend on grade and the hours worked.

Yeoman Warders

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make it her policy to include the Yeoman Warders, extraordinary bodyguard of the Sovereign, in the group eligible for award of the Queen's Golden Jubilee medal; and if she will make a statement. [48759]

Tessa Jowell: The services receiving the commemorative medal are the armed forces and Royal Fleet Auxiliary, and the "999" emergency services. Yeoman Warders of the Tower of London do not fall within these categories and are therefore ineligible for the medal.

Museum of Science and Industry

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent representations she has received concerning the funding at the Museum of Science and Industry in Manchester. [48736]

Dr. Howells: My Department has recently received representations about funding for an exhibition at the Museum of Science and Industry in Manchester to showcase the objects used in the opening ceremony of the Commonwealth games in July. I am pleased that my Department has been able to provide financial support to enable this exhibition to take place.

Tourism

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to assist the domestic tourism market to become more competitive. [49693]

Dr. Howells: The Government are committed to improving the competitiveness of the domestic tourism market through an agenda of modernisation and long-term strategic reform. The Government are working closely with key industry partners to achieve more consistent high standards and better value for money across the tourism industry.

Modernisation and reform will focus on raising the quality of the domestic product; improving skills and training; increasing the quality and quantity of tourism data and research; promoting the development of e-tourism; and providing stronger co-ordination of the promotion and marketing of England's tourist assets.

Baseline funding for English tourism will rise from £10 million in 2001–02 to £12 million this year and campaigns such as "Your Countryside, You're Welcome" will also support our tourism industry during 2002.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to assist the tourism industry in Essex. [49691]

Dr. Howells: The Government are committed to the modernisation and reform of the tourism industry and this will have a beneficial effect on tourism across the country, including Essex.

The East of England Tourist Board (EETB) received funding of £550,400 in 2001–02 to support tourism in the region. The figure for 2002–03 has yet to be agreed. During 2001–02 the EETB also received additional funding of £425,000 from the East of England Development Agency and £180,000 from the English Tourism Council in response to the foot and mouth outbreak.

Furthermore, Essex county council will be spending £100,000 this year promoting Essex as a tourism destination and has recently collaborated with both the Countryside Agency, and Tastes of Anglia, to provide support for a spring campaign this year. The tourism industry in Essex also benefits from national tourism strategies, such as the "Your Countryside, You're Welcome" campaign, aimed at attracting visitors back to the English countryside.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proportion of United Kingdom jobs are dependent on the tourism industry. [49692]

Dr. Howells: The latest figure available for tourism-related industries is 2.1 million (September 2001). This equates to 7 per cent. of all employment in Great Britain. We do not have estimates for UK employment because Northern Ireland do their employment surveys separately.

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what have been the total salary costs of each of the non-departmental public bodies for which she is responsible in each of the last five years. [50307]

Dr. Howells: This information can be found in each non-departmental public body's annual accounts. Copies of which are available from the Library of the House.

European City of Culture 2008

Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will announce Britain's choice for European City of Culture 2008 and if she will make a statement. [50298]

Dr. Howells: It is hoped that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will, in consultation with colleagues and the devolved administrations, make her recommendation to the Prime Minister towards the end of Spring 2003 having considered a report by an independent advisory panel. The Prime Minister will then make a nomination to the European Union. The European Union will ratify the United Kingdom's nomination during 2004.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Police Service of Northern Ireland

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reason members of the PSNI are deployed in Kosovo; and when it is planned to return them to police duties in Northern Ireland. [34859]

Jane Kennedy: The Foreign Commonwealth Office (FCO), through the NIO, sought, as part of a UK wide contribution, a commitment by the RUC to the UN Mission in Kosovo. PSNI officers are deployed in Kosovo to assist in the restoration of normality, and law and order, by maintaining civil laws and orders, advising and assisting the Kosovo force in maintenance of public security and order and protecting and promoting human rights.

The current deployment of PSNI officers are due to complete their attachment in either May or November 2002.

There are no plans at present to discontinue PSNI deployments to UN peacekeeping missions.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many and what proportion of employees of the PSNI were off sick on average on each day in the last month for which figures are available; and how many and what proportion of those were (a) absent on self-certification or without authorisation, (b) on sick leave of less than a week, (c) on sick leave of more than one week and less than one month, (d) on sick leave of more than one month and (e) on leave as a result of injuries sustained while on duty. [41237]

Jane Kennedy: The following table details the average sickness figures for the month of February 2002 for police officers and civilian support staff of the Police Service of Northern Ireland.

February 2002	Police officers	Support staff
Average total staff	9,445	3,439
Average of total number on sick absence	1,032	258
Average total percentage on sick absence	10.93	7.51
Average number 1–6 days	[1]145	[2]42
Average percentage sick 1–6 days	14.05	16.28
Average number 7–27 days	184	63

Carryduff Police Station

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many calls were received at Carryduff police station from members of the public in the last three years; and how many responses there were to them over the same period. [37107]

Jane Kennedy: The Chief Constable has advised me that it is not possible to answer the aspect of how many calls were received as there is a central telephone switchboard in the Greater Belfast area to which members of the public would seek assistance in the first instance, i.e. 02890 650222.

Similarly, emergency telephone calls to the 999 system again go to a central control room. While Carryduff police station does have a number of its own, statistics are not collated as to how many calls are made to it.

The number of incidents receiving a response from Carryduff police station are as follows.

	Number
1999	4,298
2000	4,506
2001	4,494

Child Abuse (Cross-Border Policing)

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on cross-border policing, with particular reference to child abusers. [43691]

Jane Kennedy: The operational CARE units within the PSNI liaise closely with their counterparts in the Sexual Offences Unit in Dublin and with the various Garda Commanders along the border. The risks posed by sex offenders, when being assessed by the Multi-Agency Sex Offender Risk Management Groups in Northern Ireland, take cognisance of those who have moved from the Republic of Ireland into the NI jurisdiction and indeed invite representation both from the Probation in NI and the Garda. The Intelligence Bureau, PSNI, is working on protocols for information sharing on a variety of subjects including child sex offenders and child abusers.

Last year the PSNI organised a conference in Belfast on the subject of cross-border information and intelligence sharing about sex offenders and child abusers. The conference was attended by representatives of the Department of Justice in the ROI, the Scottish Prison Service, the NI Prison Service, PSNI, and the NIO. The conference provided an opportunity for networking that has continued post conference.

999 Emergency Calls

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in what circumstances 999 emergency calls may be diverted to police stations in England, Wales and Scotland; what assessment he has made of the PSNI's response to emergency calls originating in North Belfast on 24 December 2001; and what steps have been taken to ensure year-round response readiness. [41235]

Jane Kennedy: All 999 calls to the police made by the public are initially answered at BT or Cable and Wireless emergency call centres in Great Britain. Those 999 calls for PSNI are passed to Belfast Regional Control or rural control rooms. The PSNI do not pass calls to police stations on the mainland.

With regard to 24 December 2001, which was a normal working day for PSNI, normal policing levels were maintained within North Belfast District Command Unit throughout the whole day. The list of 999 calls received at Belfast Regional Control has been examined and the police response on each occasion was found to be timely and accurate.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Staff Numbers

Sandra Gidley: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, how many staff there were in the House of Commons broken down by (a) salary grade, (b) ethnic background and (c) sex in each of the last five years. [47986]

Mr. Kirkwood [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Commission currently employs 1,717 individual members of staff (including part timers). Of these, 1,446—over 84 per cent.—have completed monitoring forms. The tables show the figures for each category of staff, broken down by pay band, ethnic background and sex. The figures are for individual staff in post as at 31 March in each year.

Staff Development

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, (1) what steps he is taking to ensure that the House of Commons becomes a model employer in providing skills training and retraining for staff; [47636]

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure that all members of staff's skills and skill needs are professionally assessed on an annual basis. [47637]

Mr. Kirkwood: Until recently, the House had a departmental approach to training, with limited House-wide provision. Following the Braithwaite Report on Management and Services (HC745 of Session 1998–99), and in the context of the plans for House-wide accreditation as an Investor in People, there is now a more structured and planned approach to House-wide staff development. This links training and development priorities to the aims of the House administration and supports managers in their responsibilities for the continuous development and training of their staff.

Departmental training officers meet regularly to discuss priorities and to help develop and maintain the right mix of House-wide training and development. Individual, team and broader training needs for all staff are assessed as part of the annual performance appraisal process, and through House-wide awareness-raising initiatives (for example on equal opportunities). Personal development plans are reviewed and updated regularly.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Government Vehicles

Norman Lamb: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many vehicles are owned by the Government; [49300]

(2) what proportion of Government-owned vehicles use (a) liquid petroleum gas, (b) electricity, (c) compressed natural gas, (d) diesel, (e) unleaded petrol and (f) leaded petrol. [49301]

Mr. Leslie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Cotswold (Mr. Clifton-Brown) on 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 824W.

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he plans to review the operation of regulatory impact assessments. [49066]

Mr. Leslie: The Public Accounts Committee published a report on 12 April 2002 'Better Regulation: Making Good Use of Regulatory Impact Assessments' on the basis of a report by the Comptroller and Auditor General reviewing the regulatory impact assessment process. The Government welcome the Committee of Public Accounts report. It makes some helpful recommendations that echo many of the National Audit Office's findings and the Government will give full consideration to them.

Panel for Regulatory Accountability

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the remit of the Panel for Regulatory Accountability is; who serves on it; and at what intervals it meets. [49065]

Mr. Leslie: The remit of the Ministerial Panel on Regulatory Accountability is to take a strategic overview of the regulatory system; to tackle instances where progress on regulatory reform is blocked; and to call

Ministers to account for new regulation and their performance in addressing the burden of existing regulation.

Ministers serving on the committee are the Minister for the Cabinet Office and Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (chair), the Chief Secretary to the Treasury, the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, and the Parliamentary Secretary to the Cabinet Office. Mr. David Arculus, the chairman of the Better Regulation Task Force, and Mr. William Sargent, chairman of the Small Business Council are also invited to attend. The membership and terms of reference are available in the Library of the House. Details are also published on the Cabinet Office website.

Information relating to the proceedings of Cabinet Committee business is not disclosed under Exemption 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Government Services

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what action the Government's e-envoy is taking to ensure that all Government on-line services are accessible through simple touch-screen terminals in strategic locations. [49796]

Mr. Leslie: The concept of delivering public services on multiple platforms is a key part of the Government's strategy. The Office of the e-Envoy is working to spread best practice on the delivery of electronic services through a wide range of channels including the web, digital television, mobile communications, kiosks and touch screen terminals. Best practice guidance on these is being worked up by the Channels Policy Working Group into a channels framework, which will be promulgated throughout the public sector.

The Office of the e-Envoy and the DTI are also working closely with the Post Office in the definition of a potential service whereby UK online content can be provided through kiosks located in post offices, making appropriate services available electronically to those members of the public who prefer to use a convenient terminal.

Television Licences

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the (a) number and (b) total cost of television licences paid for by his Department. [48364]

Mr. Leslie: The Cabinet Office holds a multiple form licence covering its core central London buildings and a concessionary licence covering a large number of televisions located, at the Centre for Management and Policy Studies' Residential Training Centre in Sunningdale (Berkshire) . The cost of these two television licences amounted to £6,867 in 2001–02.

In addition 16 individual television licences are held by other parts of the Cabinet Office at a cost in 2001–02 of £1,717.

WALES

Job Advertisements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the job advertisements placed by his Department in the last 12 months specifying where the advertisements were placed and the cost in each case. [39063]

Mr. Paul Murphy: None.

Smart Card Technology

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the use of smart card technology in his Department and in the areas for which it is responsible; and what discussions he has had with private companies about the use of smart card technology within his Department. [50485]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department delivers no services direct to the public and has a staff of less than 50 people. There is thus only limited potential for benefiting from smart card technology.

Legal Costs

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what legal costs have been incurred by his Department in each of the last four years. [48605]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The external costs of the former Welsh Office were £568,000 in 1998–99 and £55,000 in the first quarter of 1999–2000.

Since it came into existence in July 1999, the Wales Office has not separately distinguished legal costs.

Sunset Clauses

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which Bills introduced by his Department in the last five years have contained sunset clauses; and what plans he has for the future use of such clauses. [49620]

Mr. Paul Murphy: None.

Departmental Name Change

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the total cost was of rebranding his Department following its name change after devolution. [31959]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office spent £2,728 on the design for a logo and associated artwork after its creation as a new Department after devolution.

Jobs

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide a breakdown by industry of (a) jobs created and (b) job losses in Wales in each of the past five years. [32232]

Mr. Paul Murphy: There is no authoritative record of job losses and gains. Labour Force Survey information about changes in overall employment in Wales, by industry over the past five years, is given in the table as follows.

	All industries	Agriculture, hunting, forestry and fishing	Mining and quarrying, electricity, gas and water supply	Manufacturing	Construction	Service industries	Other industries
Change on previous year
2000	14,000	−3,000	−1,000	−25,000	5,000	20,000	18,000
1999	18,000	−3,000	−1,000	−5,000	6,000	9,000	9,000
1998	2,000	−1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	−23,000	24,000
1997	6,000	4,000	1,000	−11,000	5,000	5,000	1,000
1996	21,000	−5,000	−5,000	−2,000	2,000	31,000	1,000

Departmental Report

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the 2002 Departmental report will be published. [49589]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 15 April 2002, by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury (Mr. Andrew Smith).

Sidex

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he received from other Ministers requests for advice in connection with the attempted acquisition of Sidex by the LNM Group. [37936]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Consistent with the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information exemption on internal discussion and advice, which aims to preserve the unbiased nature of civil service advice and, where appropriate, to ensure commercial confidentiality, it would not be appropriate to disclose the information requested.

Meetings

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many meetings he has had with hon. Members in each of the last 12 months. [49325]

Mr. Paul Murphy: As a member of the House of Commons and as a member of the Government, on a typical working day I meet many hon. Members in both formal and informal settings. Due to the large numbers of these meetings and their routine nature, no separate record of them is kept.

Press and Public Relations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people were employed in a press or public relations function in his Department on 1 January in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and (f) 2002. [39932]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Since the establishment of the Wales Office in July 1999. There has been one press secretary, one senior press officer and one assistant information officer employed within my Department.

Consultants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the total cost to his Department was of the use of external consultants in each of the last four years. [35019]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Since its creation in July 1999 my Department has spent some £47,000 on external consultants. It has also made use of property management consultants under a contract held by the National Assembly for Wales.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what estimate she has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for shipping services for the Natural Environment Research Council (NERC) by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49554]

(2) what estimate she has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the RA Strategic Partnership for the Radiocommunications Agency by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49548]

(3) what estimate she has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the National Physical Laboratory for the Department of Trade and Industry by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49552]

(4) what estimate she has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the Electronic Government through Administrative Re-engineering (ELSAR) for the Department of Trade and Industry by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49551]

(5) what estimate she has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the mining reports and surface drainage system for the Coal Authority by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49549]

(6) what estimate she has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the Computer Services for Academic Research (CSAR) for Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council (EPSRC) by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative. [49553]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 20 July 2001, Official Report, columns 607–08W.

Rail Journeys (Staff)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to her answer of 26 February 2002, Official Report, column 117W, regarding the cost of rail travel by Department staff, how many staff undertook the first class rail journeys in 2001. [50326]

Ms Hewitt: The DTI has devolved to local management the authorisation of travel claims for its staff, subject to checking procedures. It does not record detail of the number of staff undertaking first class rail journeys separately from other data recorded when paying travel expenses paid for staff engaged on departmental business. To provide the information requested would entail disproportionate cost.

Smart Card Technology

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the use of smart card technology in her Department and in the areas for which it is responsible; and what discussions she has had with private companies about the use of smart card technology within her Department. [50474]

Ms Hewitt: My Department uses smart cards to protect the facilities providing remote access to our corporate computer systems. Some 800 staff currently use smart cards in this way.

My officials discuss options for the use of smart card technology within the Department periodically with relevant companies, especially those providing us with ICT support.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she will answer the Questions tabled on 11 March by the hon. Member for Maldon and East Chelmsford, refs 43210, 43211 and 43212. [50053]

Ms Hewitt: I understand that these questions were answered by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office yesterday.

Galileo Programme

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to what extent the UK is supporting the European Union's Galileo satellite programme broken down by Departments' budgets and purpose of funding; what representations about the programme were made from the US and how they were responded to; and if she will make a statement. [48886]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

The UK is supporting the Galileo satellite navigation programme through contributions to the European Space Agency (ESA), which is jointly funding and carrying out the programme with the European Union. For the definition phase (1999–2000) and some early development work (2001) the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) has contributed £7.91 million while my Department has contributed £2.45 million. For the development and validation phase (2002–05) which was approved in March by the EU Transport Council, negotiations within ESA over member states' contributions are still progressing. Funds for the programme are also being provided from the budget of the European Communities to which the UK contributes.

The US has expressed concerns about the security implications of Galileo and, in particular, the problems of signal interference and incompatibility, which could arise with its own Global Positioning System (GPS). As we shared these concerns, in our negotiations within the EU we ensured that these were taken into account. The Transport Council decision emphasises the need for Galileo to be interoperable with GPS and that a co-operation agreement between the EU and the US should be negotiated as soon as possible.

Special Advisers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many special advisers there were in her Department; and what their salaries were in each of the last five years. [46951]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 10 April 2002]: There are three special advisers in my Department. For information about salaries I would refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 11W.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many times special advisers have accompanied Ministers on overseas visits in each of the last five years; which countries were visited; and what the total cost of each individual visit was. [47147]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Between 1 April 2000 and 31 March 2001 no special advisers in my Department accompanied Ministers on overseas trips. Information for the period 2 May 1997 to 31 March 2000 is already in the public domain. Details of Government Special Adviser travel for the period 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 will be published as soon as possible.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many times Ministers in her Department have travelled abroad at taxpayers' expense since March 2001; what countries they visited; and what the total cost of each visit was. [47109]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Since 1999 this Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Minister costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. The 1999 list contained information on all such visits undertaken from 2 May 1997 to 31 April 1999. Details for travel undertaken in the period 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 will be published as soon as possible after the end of the current financial year.

All travel is undertaken fully in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Regional Development Agencies

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what funds have been allocated to regional development agencies; and how those funds will be used. [49857]

Alan Johnson: The regional development agencies' budgets for 2002–03 are as follows:

Regional development agencies' budgets

£000

	Total[1]
One North East	184,738
North-west DA	273,927
Yorkshire Forward	185,920
East Midlands DA	100,947
Advantage West Midlands	191,519
East of England DA	76,057
South-east of England DA	100,130
South-west of England DA	93,540
London DA	285,396
Total	1,492,174

[1] Net of receipts

This funding will be used to support activities in relation to the implementation of the RDAs' regional economic strategies and their statutory purposes which are within their regions to: further economic development and the regeneration of the region; promote business efficiency, investment and competitiveness; promote employment; enhance the development and application of skills; and to contribute to the achievement of sustainable development in the United Kingdom. From 1 April 2002 the RDA's have a single budget giving them maximum flexibility to meet their regional priorities, within the fiscal framework for public money, removing unnecessary ring fences and unrealistic programme silos which inhibit true integration and innovative cross cutting approaches.

Beagle 2

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what funding the Government have provided for the Beagle 2 spacecraft; and if she will make a statement on the mission. [48931]

Ms Hewitt: Beagle 2 is the British-led lander that it is planned to deploy from the European Space Agency's Mars Express orbiting spacecraft onto the surface of Mars at new year 2004.

The overall cost of Beagle 2, not including the ground segment and instruments, is approximately £40 million, with non UK-Government contributions coming from ESA, private sponsorship and investment by a consortium of UK firms and universities. The contribution of the Government are as follows:

Mars Express: £18 million over the period 1998 to 2005 (Department of Trade and Industry and Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council, PPARC).

Beagle 2: The Department of Trade and Industry (including the Office of Science and Technology) has committed up to £18.3 million over the period 2000 to 2003 but this sum may be defrayed by contributions from other partners and investments from the private sector. PPARC has additionally contributed £2.7 million over the period 1998 to 2003 to British universities for the provision of instruments and is currently considering a further contribution of £2.6 million for the ground segment.

TREASURY

Office for National Statistics

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the questionnaire forms sent out to UK businesses by the Office for National Statistics in 2001; [48927]

(2) what estimate he has made of the amount of time taken by business to compile and return information requested by the Office for National Statistics in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [48925]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. John Whittingdale, dated 16 April 2002:

As national Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent questions concerning statistical questionnaires sent to businesses by the Office for National Statistics (ONS). (48925, 48927)

The time taken by business in 2001 to compile and return the information requested by ONS is estimated to be around 617 thousand hours. There were 1.57 million business inquiry forms despatched during this period. I attach below a table showing the periodicity and annual number of forms for each business inquiry conducted by ONS.

Your third question (48926) asks for the split between (a) UK companies, (b) manufacturing companies and (c) distribution and services companies. To provide this will take a special analysis and a reply will follow.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the yield from capital gains tax in each of the years (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98, (c) 1998–99, (d) 1999–2000, (e) 2000–01, (f) 2001–02, (g) 2002–03 (estimated) and (h) 2003–04 (estimated); and if he will make a statement. [48804]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given on 6 December 2001, Official Report, column 520W. An estimate for 2003–04 has not been published.

Smart Card Technology

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the use of smart card technology in his Department and in the areas for which it is responsible; and what discussions he has had with private companies about the use of smart card technology within his Department. [50477]

Ruth Kelly: Smart card technology will be used in the new Treasury building as part of the access control mechanisms, and for "cashless" purchase of catering and vending services. The technology is being provided by Exchequer Partnership as part of the PFI contract for the new building. There have been no direct discussions between the Treasury and the technology supplier.

More widely, in March 2002, the Treasury implemented two European directives on electronic money, which bring it within the scope of Financial Services Authority regulation. The directives aim to encourage the development of electronic money, in part through increasing business and consumer confidence in it as a new and developing means of payment.

The Treasury is also represented on a working group looking at Government policy towards smart card technology, chaired by the Office of the e-Envoy.

Public Sector Pay

Mr. Wray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by how much public sector pay has increased since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [49679]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Public sector pay has increased by 17.7 per cent. between 1997 and 2001.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for Stockport IR Office for the Inland Revenue by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative. [49498]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimate of the total savings to public funds of the Stockport IR Office Private Finance Initiative is £0.2 million Net Present Costs by comparison with the Public Sector Comparator.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the National Insurance Recording Systems for the Inland Revenue by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative. [49502]

Dawn Primarolo: The potential savings identified, at the business case stage, of a PFI approach over a traditional procurement for NIRS2, were estimated at £101.7 million. The calculations were based on the traditional procurement approach in place in the Department of Social Security at the time the contract was awarded in April 1995.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for Edinburgh IR Office for the Inland Revenue by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative. [49501]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimate of the total savings to public funds of the Edinburgh IR Office Private Finance Initiative is £0.5 million Net Present Costs by comparison with the Public Sector Comparator.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for Bootle St. John's House (IR) for the Inland Revenue by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative. [49497]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimate of the total savings to public funds of the Bootle IR Office Private Finance Initiative is £1.7 million Net Present Costs by comparison with the Public Sector Comparator.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate she has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the CCTA Metropolitan Telecoms Service by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative. [49665]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The MTS PFI contract was awarded in November 1996 for a 10-year period. At the time of contract award, a detailed comparison of the PFI bid was carried out against a public sector delivery option. That comparison suggested little difference in the overall cost of the two approaches, but the PFI option was chosen as providing greater flexibility and better risk management. This has been borne out in practice as the range of services and number of users has increased over the life of the contract to date.

Since 1996 the unit costs of service provision through the contract, as with all telecommunications costs, have fallen in comparison with those modelled in the Public Sector Comparator. However the costs in the PSC have not themselves been updated so that a meaningful comparison is not possible.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for Glasgow IR Office for the Inland Revenue by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative. [49500]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimate of the total savings to public funds of the Glasgow IR Office Private Finance Initiative is £1.3 million Net Present Costs by comparison with the Public Sector Comparator.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the Newcastle Estate Development Scheme for the Inland Revenue by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative. [49496]

Dawn Primarolo: No public sector comparator was undertaken for this project. Assurance that the Department was achieving value for money was obtained through a competitive tender process. The decision not to undertake a full Public Sector Comparator was consistent with Treasury guidance at that time.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for Manchester IR Office for the Inland Revenue by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative. [49499]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimate of the total savings to public funds of the Manchester IR Office Private Finance Initiative is £0.7 million Net Present Costs by comparison with the Public Sector Comparator.

Money Laundering

Harry Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) legislation and (b) other measures he is considering in respect of those countries which fail to meet the OECD's deadline for reform in order to comply with anti-money laundering requirements; and if he will make a statement. [48887]

Ruth Kelly: The Financial Action Task Force has issued a list of countries that have been found not to be compliant with international anti-money laundering standards. In common with other FATF members, the UK has issued an advisory to all UK financial institutions warning them to pay particular attention to all transactions involving natural or legal persons resident or domiciled in listed jurisdictions. The Joint Money Laundering Steering Group, an industry body issuing good practice advice on money laundering, has issued advice that has been agreed with HM Treasury as appendix D to its guidance notes to the financial sector. This advice is available on the internet at www.jmlsg.org.uk. Where FATF has agreed that further countermeasures should be applied because insufficient progress has been made, the Government have issued further advice to the financial sector and more generally. To date, only Nauru has been subject to such additional countermeasures. The measures agreed by FATF are:

(a) stringent requirements for identifying clients are enhancement of advisories, including jurisdiction-specific financial advisories, to financial institutions for identification of the beneficial owners before business relationships are established with individuals or companies from these countries;

(b) enhanced relevant reporting mechanisms or systematic reporting of financial transactions on the basis that financial transactions with such countries are more likely to be suspicious;

(c) in considering requests for approving the establishment in FATF member countries of subsidiaries or branches or representative offices of banks, taking into account the fact that the relevant bank is from an NCCT;

(d) warning non-financial sector businesses that transactions with entities within the NCCTs might run the risk of money laundering.

A copy of the further advice on Nauru is also available from the JMLSG and Treasury websites.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff were involved in each of the last three years in preparing draft answers to written parliamentary questions. [49147]

Mr. Boateng: A large number of staff in the Departments and agencies responsible to the Chancellor of the Exchequer will have contributed to the drafting of answers to the 10,625 parliamentary questions answered by Treasury Ministers between April 1999 and March 2002. It is not possible to estimate the number of people involved.

Baltic Exchange

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the financial contribution made to the United Kingdom economy by members of the Baltic Exchange. [49473]

Ruth Kelly: The Government value the contribution made to the UK economy by the Baltic Exchange and the supporting maritime services that are located in the UK. International Financial Services London (IFSL) have estimated that the Baltic Exchange and its associated ship brokers contributed £327 million to the UK's overseas earnings in 2000.

Aggregates Levy

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from (a) the quarry industry and (b) brick-makers concerning the introduction of the aggregates levy; and if he will make a statement. [50020]

Mr. Boateng: A number of discussions have recently been held at both ministerial and official level with representatives of the aggregates and associated industries throughout the UK about the implementation of the aggregates levy.

Wanless Report

Mr. Howard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he received the final Wanless report. [50642]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Derek Wanless formally submitted his final report to the Chancellor on 15 April.

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to publish Derek Wanless's final report on long-term health trends. [51014]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The report will be published at 9.30 am on 17 April. Copies will be available in the Vote Office.

Special Advisers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the number and expected cost to his Department of special advisers in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [43273]

Ruth Kelly: Figures for 2001–02 and 2002–03 are not yet available. There are currently five special advisers appointed under special adviser terms and conditions and in line with the ministerial code.

These figures do not include the Council of Economic Advisers.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General how many people have been employed by her Department in each of the last three years under (a) the new deal for young people, (b) the new deal for the over-50s and (c) the new deal for lone parents; and at what cost, listed by category, to public funds. [44912]

The Solicitor-General (holding answer 25 March 2002): My own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, has not employed any persons under the new deal schemes during the last three years.

In the Departments for which the Attorney-General is responsible, details are as follows:

Crown Prosecution Service

In each of the last three years, the CPS has employed two people under the new deal scheme. The recruitment exercises were for the new deal scheme in general and were not specific to any of the categories identified. Both officers were offered a one-year fixed term contract (unsubsidised) as a Level A2 (Administrative Officer), and placed on the band minimum for that level. The posts were advertised through local job centres and, therefore, there were no costs to the Department.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

The Treasury Solicitor's Department has not employed any persons under the given new deal categories during the last three years.

Serious Fraud Office

The Serious Fraud Office has not employed any persons under the given new deal categories during the last three years.

Human Rights Act

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General how many cases have been brought against her Department under the Human Rights Act 1998; and what has been the cost in (a) legal fees to defend cases and (b) compensation payments. [45062]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 25 March 2002]: In relation to my own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, no cases have been brought against the Department under the Human Rights Act 1998.

In the Departments for which the Attorney-General is responsible, details are as follows:

Crown Prosecution Service

The Crown Prosecution Service does not monitor centrally those cases that include a claim under the Human Rights Act, or collect information centrally in relation to the cost of these cases in terms of legal fees to defend the cases or compensation payments.

In general, claimants bring actions against the Crown Prosecution Service in two ways: by claiming malicious prosecution and/or negligence.

Some of these claims refer to the Human Rights Act 1998.

No records of cases against the Crown Prosecution Service are kept and the Department does not collect separate information centrally about the cost of legal fees and compensation payments in these cases.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

The Treasury Solicitor's Department conducts litigation on behalf of many Government Departments but does not hold central records identifying all cases in which the Human Rights Act is relied upon. In relation to those cases where the Treasury Solicitor's Department is a party to litigation, the position is the same. Human rights are now integrated into the general law and are rarely the sole basis for a legal challenge. In relation to those cases brought against the Department, two have been identified which included human rights points.

The Treasury Solicitor's Department does not collect separate information centrally about the cost of legal fees or compensation payments in cases which include human rights issues. In most cases it will be difficult to single out associated costs relating to the human rights element of a case.

Serious Fraud Office

The Serious Fraud Office knows of no cases where the actions of its members or the use of its statutory powers have been challenged under the Human Rights Act. However, the Act permits Convention points to be raised, either by themselves or together with domestic law, in support of legal argument in criminal proceedings, or in judicial review applications. Obviously, since the implementation of the Act, Convention points have been raised frequently in litigation in SFO cases, principally in support of complaints of unreasonable delay. It is impossible to separate the cost of defending Human Rights Act arguments from prosecution costs generally but neither do we consider that there would be any justifiable case for doing so.

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General what the target time will be in 2002–03 for (a) Ministers to reply to letters from hon. Members and (b) officials in her Department to reply to letters received directly from members of the public. [44957]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 25 March 2002]: In my own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, the target for replies to letters from hon. Members is 15 working days from the date of receipt and 20 working days from the date of receipt to reply to letters from members of the public.

In the Departments for which the Attorney-General is responsible, details are as follows:

Crown Prosecution Service

In 2002–03 the target for ministerial replies to letters from hon. Members will be 15 working days from the date of [illegible].

The Crown Prosecution Service has a target for responses to complaints from members of the public. The target for 2002–03 is to increase to 94 per cent. the proportion of replies to complaints which are made within 10 days.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

The Treasury Solicitor, as Chief Executive of the Treasury Solicitor's Department Agency, replies to letters from hon. Members concerning the business of the Agency. She will in 2002–03 continue to aim to do so substantively within 15 working days of receipt of such letters.

Only the Bona Vacantia Division of the agency receives appreciable quantities of letters direct from members of the public. It has targets for 2002–03 of acknowledging letters within five working days of the date of receipt and dispatching, in 80 per cent. of cases, substantive replies within 20 working days of that date.

Serious Fraud Office

Under the Citizen's Charter, the SFO has accepted targets for dealing with correspondence and agreed to monitor achievement. These targets are that all correspondence from members of the public should be disposed of within four weeks of receipt and that correspondence from hon. Members should be disposed of within three weeks of receipt. The SFO exceeds these targets in virtually all instances. Most correspondents receive a reply within a single working week.

Saville Inquiry

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Solicitor-General what costs have been incurred by her Department since 23 January in connection with the Saville Inquiry. [46145]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 26 March 2002]: The Treasury Solicitor's Department carries out legal work for other Departments, such as the Ministry of Defence, on a full cost recovery basis. While substantial work has been done by the Treasury Solicitor's Department in relation to the Bloody Sunday Inquiry, in so far as that work is directly connected with the Inquiry, the cost will be recovered, or has been recovered, from the client Department or Departments represented.

The Treasury Solicitor's Department has provided representation before the Inquiry for two ex-members of staff. No costs have been incurred in respect of this representation since 23 January 2002.

The Attorney General and staff at the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers have been involved in one matter relating to the Bloody sunday Inquiry since 23 January 2002 which concerned the scope of the undertaking given to witnesses appearing before the Inquiry. Such advice forms part of the usual work of the Department and the cost cannot be separately assessed.

PSAs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General what recent assessment she has made of whether the PSA target for the Treasury Solicitor's Department to achieve a reduction in average unit costs per chargeable hour in Litigation Division in real terms will be met by March. [47888]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 9 April 2002]: Information about progress on PSA targets will be published in the Department's 2002 departmental report.

Press Officers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Solicitor-General how many press officers there were in her Department on (a) 1 May 1997 and (b) the latest available date. [46887]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 10 April 2002]: My own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, and the Treasury Solicitor's Department, share a single press officer who also acts as Private Secretary to the Attorney General. In relation to those two Departments the answer is (a) one; and (b) one.

On 1 May 1997 there were 5.5 press officers in the Crown Prosecution Service press office. A Head of Communications post was created later that year. In April 2002 there were four press officers and a Head of Communications.

On 1 May 1997 the Serious Fraud Office had two press officers. It now has three.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Complaints

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many complaints she has received from (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public about the service from her Department for each of the last 36 months; and if she will make a statement. [30850]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The records kept centrally by the Lord Chancellor's Department of correspondence received from hon. Members in each of the last 36 months do not distinguish those which are complaints. This information which is available is set out in Table A. More detailed information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The statistics available for complaints by members of the public for each of the last three calendar years, and from 1 April 2001 to 31 December 2001, are set out in Table B. Statistics for the courts as a whole are not held centrally and again could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

PRIME MINISTER

Television Licences

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the (a) number and (b) total cost of television licences paid for by his Department. [48366]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office today.

Iraq

Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if he will set out the reasons why he did not publish the dossier on the status of Iraq's weapons programmes. [49843]

The Prime Minister: We have already placed some evidence concerning Iraq's programmes in the Library of the House. When the time is right, we shall release further material, including the threat posed by the development of weapons of mass destruction.

The Government believe it important that we should divulge as much information to the public as we can without prejudicing sensitive sources, including intelligence reporting. It has been the practice of successive Governments not to comment on intelligence matters.

Egypt

Mr. Collins: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he discussed (a) human rights in Egypt, (b) progress towards democracy in Egypt and (c) the state of social inequality in Egypt with President Mubarak in December 2001; [48779]

(2) when his meeting with the President of Egypt in December 2001 was arranged; [48772]

(3) if he discussed (a) UK and (b) EU overseas aid programmes to Egypt during his meeting with President Mubarak in December 2001. [48780]

The Prime Minister: I discussed a range of issues with President Mubarak at an informal occasion arranged during the course of my family holiday to Egypt.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the Criminal Cases Review Commission reaches its projections for improved performance. [45572]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The commission's projections are based on performance over a rolling 12-month period, projected forward over the coming 12 months. The table shows the annual case completions since 31 March 1997, when the commission started case working. The commission began by working almost exclusively on the Home Office and Northern Ireland Office transfers. Stage 1 eligibility review was developed during 1997–98, and the Stage 2 Screen process was introduced in May 1999, following development as a pilot process between August 1998 and April 1999. The Stage 2 Screen has allowed the commission to complete about 1,000 cases in 1999–2000, 1,100, in 2000–01 and 1,200 in 2001–02. The number of cases waiting in trays has been reduced from a maximum of 1,208 cases in May 1999 to about 330 by 31 March 2002.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Criminal Cases Review Commission has taken to enhance public confidence in the criminal justice system; and how it measures its progress. [45570]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The commission publishes an annual report that provides an account of its activities. Since 31 March 2002 will mark completion of the commission's first five years of casework, the 2001–02 report will summarise the progress made over this period, and highlight some of the most significant case referrals.

In July 1997, the commission organised a meeting at which a number of stakeholders expressed their views on miscarriages and how to conduct effective case reviews. Another such meeting is being planned for 2003. In addition the chairman and chief executive will be appearing before the Home Affairs Committee on 30 April 2003.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Criminal Cases Review Commission has taken to promote the public's understanding of its role; and how it measures its progress. [45569]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The commission has taken a number of measures to promote the public's understanding of its role. These include: the revision of its Information Pack in the light of its growing experience; the expansion and monitoring of its website; and the publication of its annual report, which summarises progress and highlights the most significant referrals. It also held a meeting at which a number of stakeholders expressed their views on miscarriages of justice and how to conduct effective case reviews. Another such meeting is planned for next year. The commission has no reliable index of progress to improve public understanding of its role.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the Criminal Cases Review Commission defines a substantial issue for review. [45576]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Substantial issues are those that require more than five Case Review Manager days of effort.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who the stakeholders are of the Criminal Cases Review Commission. [45568]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Stakeholders include:

potential applicants and their representatives;

courts of appeal (as recipients of referrals);

The Court of Appeal (as a referring body);

my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary (Mr. Blunkett) (in relation to Her Majesty's Prerogative of Mercy);

the Criminal Justice System and its agencies; and the Government represented by my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Home Department (Mr. Blunkett) and Northern Ireland (Dr. Reid).

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the precise process modifications made by the Criminal Cases Review Commission to achieve its goals. [45571]

Mr. Keith Bradley: About 30 per cent. of the applications to the Commission are found to be ineligible at Stage 1. During 2001–02, the Process Improvement Project (PIP) 1 recommended several actions to reduce this proportion, particularly improved communications, and further encouragement to prospective applicants to seek legal advice.

The time to review cases at Stage 1, Stage 2 Screen and Stages 2–3 depends on such factors as the availability of files and other materials, timeliness of responses from applicants and their advisers, and delays in obtaining expert reports. PIP 2 has been concerned with minimising these delays. In that regard, the Government announced on 5 March 2001 that a £350,000 joint proposal from the commission and the Court of Appeal (to the Invest to Save scheme) for the electronic transfer of files had been successful. Work is still in progress on this project.

A goal for 2001–02 was to minimise the case accumulation at Stage 2 Screen. This will be achieved by 31 March 2002, or soon afterwards, and will be followed by reorganisation of Stage 2 Screen for steady-state operation. In future, some Stage 2 Screen cases will be distributed to case review managers outside the Stage 2 Screen group, to optimise their case portfolios.

During 2000–01, the commission implemented a computerised case management information (Vectus) and completed the necessary data migration. Since 1 April 2001, the benefits (of improved case management, with greatly reduced labour in tracking the progress of individual cases and in presenting casework statistics) have begun to flow.

Vectus

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the statistical and performance indicators for casework produced by the Vectus information system in 2001–02. [45581]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Currently the Commission uses Vectus to provide monthly statistics on:

Case Intake

Case Completions at all Stages

Cases under review.

Correspondence

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the hon. Member for Walthamstow will receive a response to his letters regarding Mr. V. Poci (DEV/7050/929), sent on 25 October 2000 and 14 November 2001. [43773]

Angela Eagle: I wrote to my hon. Friend on 15 April 2002. I am sorry for the delay in replying.

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letter to him dated 30 January from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Ms Jamila Malik. [47767]

Mr. Blunkett: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 12 April 2002.

Young Offenders

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals aged between (a) 10 and 11 and (b) 12 and 17 years were (i) cautioned and (ii) sentenced for indictable offences in each year since 1997 in each police force area in England and Wales. [45588]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information requested, from the Home Office Court Proceedings and Cautions Database, is shown in the table.

Information on cautions and court proceedings for 2001 will be available in the autumn.

Fingerprinting

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date the requirement to take Polaroid photographs during fingerprint retrieval at the scene of a crime was introduced. [30706]

Mr. Denham: There is no actual requirement to take Polaroid photographs during fingerprint retrieval at the scene of a crime, although it is considered good practice to take a Polaroid or some other photograph as a means of recording the location of any fingerprints found at the scene. Their location can be recorded in the form of a sketch or some other manuscript description. Unfortunately, the information I gave in my answer of 29 November 2001, Official Report, column 1123W, supplied by the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) in good faith, was inaccurate and I apologise for this error.

Prisons (Wales)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the maximum capacity is for each prison in Wales; and how many prisoners are held in each prison. [45795]

Beverley Hughes: On 22 March 2002, the operational capacity and number of prisoners held for each prison in Wales were as shown in the table.

Prisoners (Literacy and Numeracy)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his latest assessment is of progress on the PSA target to improve literacy and numeracy skills of prisoners discharged from their sentence. [47216]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Our most recent data suggest that there will be a shortfall on meeting our Service Delivery Agreement target to achieve 18,000 basic skills qualifications in 2001–02 by around 10 per cent. Nevertheless, this is still a major increase over the 12,500 basic skills qualifications achieved by prisoners in the previous year, and all of the qualifications achieved in 2001–02 will be at Level 2.

Female Imprisonment

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department further to his answer of 27 February 2002, Official Report, column 1393W, on female imprisonment, when statistics for 2001 on the number of women appearing before the courts and their subsequent sentences will be made available. [46607]

Beverley Hughes: Statistics on court proceedings and sentencing in 2001 will be published by December 2002 in "Criminal statistics, England and Wales 2001".

Victims' Charter

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the members of the team preparing the report on the Victims' Charter Consultation; what its terms of reference are; when its work is expected to commence; and when the report will be published. [46479]

Mr. Keith Bradley: A summary of responses to the consultation process on the Review of the Victims' Charter was placed in the Library and published on the Home Office website in July 2001.

The Victims' Charter Review Implementation Group first met on 2 October 2001. Its terms of reference are:

To complete the third stage of the Review of the Victims' Charter by October 2002; including making recommendations on the introduction of rights for victims, a Victims' Ombudsman/Commissioner, the feasibility of a victims' fund and other related policy matters.

The Victims' Charter Review Implementation Group is made up of representatives of the following Government Departments, organisations and victims' groups:

Home Office Justice and Victims Unit
Home Office National Probation Directorate
Home Office Research and Statistics Unit
Association of Chief Police Officers
Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Probation
Prison Service
The Court Service
Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority
Criminal Cases Review Commission
Crown Prosecution Service
Lord Chancellor's Department
Justices' Clerk's Society
Magistrates' Association
Victim Support
Judiciary.

The Group's work, and that of its subsidiary Groups working on the Victims' Ombudsman/Commissioner and the inclusion of victims of road traffic incidents within the scope of the Victims' Charter, is well under way. It will be reporting its conclusions later this year, and I expect to make an announcement in the autumn.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the members of the Victims' Charter Implementation Group, and the departments, organisations and victim groups which they represent. [46491]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Victims' Charter Review Implementation Group meets quarterly and its membership is comprised of representatives from the following departments, organisations and victims groups:

Home Office Justice and Victims Unit
Home Office National Probation Directorate
Home Office Research and Statistics Unit
Association of Chief Police Officers
Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Probation
Prison Service
The Court Service
Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority
Criminal Cases Review Commission
Crown Prosecution Service
Lord Chancellor's Department
Justices' Clerk's Society
Magistrates' Association
Victim Support
Judiciary.

Money Laundering

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evidence the SFO provided in answer to Nigerian and Swiss requests for assistance in the case of alleged money laundering using UK financial institutions by the late General Abacha; and if he will make a statement. [39004]

Mr. Blunkett: Ordinarily it is practice not to comment on international requests for mutual legal assistance in criminal matters as they concern on-going criminal proceedings. However, the fact of these requests have been acknowledged publicly by the Federal Government of Nigeria and in proceedings before the High Court.

Four requests for assistance were received from the Swiss authorities relating to criminal investigation of, inter alia, fraud and money laundering allegedly committed in violation of Swiss law. In execution of three of the requests, evidential material was transmitted by the Home Office to the Swiss authorities on 18 October 2001. The remaining request is being processed.

The request from the Federal Government of Nigeria, which concerns criminal investigations and proceedings relating to allegations of corruption and theft of public funds in Nigeria, is being processed. Prior to a decision of the Divisional Court, handed down on 18 October 2001, a High Court injunction prohibited my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State (Mr. Blunkett) dealing with the request. The Federal Government of Nigeria has indicated through its solicitors that it is pleased with the way in which its request is being dealt with by the Government.

Criminal Justice

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of whether the target percentage improvements in the satisfaction of (a) victims and (b) witnesses with their treatment in the criminal justice system will be met by March. [47409]

Mr. Keith Bradley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The 2002 British Crime Survey and the 2002 Witness Satisfaction Survey will determine whether the targets for improvements of victim and witness satisfaction levels have been met. These surveys will be carried out shortly and the results will be available later in the year.

As an interim indicator, the 2001 British Crime Survey showed that the satisfaction level of victims had remained similar, at 58 per cent., to the result from the 2000 Survey.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the PSA target to increase public confidence in the fairness of the criminal justice system will be measured; and if he expects the target to be met by March. [47229]

Mr. Keith Bradley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Public Service Agreement (PSA) target is to promote confidence in the criminal justice system. It will be measured through questions to the public in the British Crime Survey. The target is due to be specified in terms of a percentage increase later this year. The target date is 2004.

Criminal Appeals

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in which criminal cases it is possible for the prosecution to appeal against (a) conviction and (b) sentence; and what proposals he has to extend the list of such cases. [47122]

Mr. Keith Bradley: There are no powers for the prosecution to appeal against conviction.

At present, under the provisions of Sections 35 and 36 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 the Attorney-General has power to refer to the Court of Appeal cases where the sentence imposed appears to be unduly lenient. The power applies to sentences passed in the Crown court in relation to all indictable offences and to certain triable either way offences specified in orders made by the Secretary of State for the Home Department, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State (Mr. Blunkett) under section 35(4) of the 1988 Act. The latter applies to offences of indecent assault, threats to kill, cruelty to children and serious fraud sentenced in the Crown court, including those committed for sentence after conviction in magistrates courts.

An order extending the Attorney General's powers in relation to unduly lenient sentences came into effect on 21 August 2000, and applies to sentences passed after that date. This enables the Attorney-General to refer to the Crown court, sentences imposed for offences of illegal trafficking in drugs and pornographic material involving children and offences specifically against children (unlawful sexual intercourse with a girl under 16, inciting a girl under 16 to have incestuous intercourse and indecent conduct towards a young child). The Government will keep under review whether further extensions should be made in future.

The Government are also committed to reforming the double jeopardy rule for murder cases, which would enable the prosecution to reopen proceedings following an acquittal, in certain circumstances. We are considering the nature and extent of this reform in light of the Law Commission's report, and Sir Robin Auld's review of the criminal courts.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the measurable criteria are for the PSA target to ensure just processes and just and effective outcomes; and if he expects the target to be met by March. [47230]

Mr. Keith Bradley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Ensuring just processes and just and effective outcomes is one of the key objectives in the 2001–02 Criminal Justice Business Plan. It will be measured using the Public Service Agreement target to reduce the rate of re-conviction of all offenders punished by imprisonment or by community supervision by 5 per cent. by 2004 compared to the predicted rate.

Reducing the rate of re-conviction is one of this Government's key delivery priorities with a delivery plan in place. The delivery strands which will contribute towards the target have been selected on the principles of 'What Works' based on research evidence of effectiveness. The delivery strands are being monitored regularly to assess progress towards achieving this target, which is not due to be met until March 2004.

Drug Traffickers (Assets)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of whether the PSA target to increase by one third the amount of assets identified from drug traffickers and secured will be met by March. [47226]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Public Service Agreement (PSA) target was to increase the amount of assets identified from drug traffickers and secured by one third over a three-year period. The target is measured in terms of receipts from the enforcement of confiscation orders in drug trafficking cases. The baseline was receipts of £9.5 million during the 1997–98 financial year. The milestone objectives that were set were receipts of £10.4 million in year one (1998–99), £11.5 million in year two (1999–2000) and £12.6 million in year three (2000–01).

The outcomes for years one and two were £10.5 million in 1998–99 and £9.3 million for 1999–2000. The outcome for 2000–01 was £11.75 million, a little short of the PSA target but still representing the largest annual return to date.

The Government have since set a new target of doubling the amounts recovered from both drug traffickers and other serious criminals, from the £29.4 million recovered in 1999–2000 in confiscation receipts and cash forfeited under the Drug Trafficking Act 1994 to £60 million by 2004–05. This is to be achieved through changes in law and practice which the Government are seeking to bring about through the Proceeds of Crime Bill and the related initiatives published in the Asset Recovery Strategy.

"Living Without Fear"

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if delivery of the action points in Living Without Fear will be completed by the target date. [47449]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The great majority of the action points have been completed by the target date, including the funding of 58 projects combating violence against women under the Crime Reduction Programme, the publication in March 2000 of the Multi-Agency Guidance for Addressing Domestic Violence, and the increase of the annual grant to Victim Support to £25 million from April 2001. Police performance indicators have been introduced as part of the development of a consistent approach to the use of data on violence against women.

A new ministerial group on domestic violence ensures that the agenda for development of work in this area is kept relevant and focused. Five key headline areas of work have emerged as priorities for the group:

early intervention by health professionals;

improving the way in which criminal and civil jurisdiction work together in domestic violence cases; promotion of safe accommodation choices for women and children fleeing domestic violence; education and awareness raising; and ensuring an appropriate and consistent police and Crown Prosecution Service response to domestic violence.

Restorative Justice

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress since 1997 on his policy of restorative justice. [47420]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Government recognise the potential of restorative justice to offer a constructive response to crime which benefits victims, offenders and the wider community.

Restorative principles have been at the heart of the recent reforms of the youth justice system. The Crime and Disorder Act 1998 introduced a range of new options for juveniles which provide the opportunity for offenders to face up to the consequences of their crime and make reparation for it. The aim is to involve the community and victims in this process if appropriate. The Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 developed this approach by introducing referral orders whereby youth offender panels operate as community conferences, involving community volunteers and victims, where possible. They agree contracts with the young offender which encourage reparation to the victim or the community and aim to address the causes of the offending behaviour. Referral orders were rolled out nationally on 1 April 2002.

In his review of the Criminal Courts of England and Wales, the Lord Justice Auld recommended

> "the development and implementation of a national strategy to ensure consistent, appropriate and effective use of restorative justice techniques across England and Wales."

The Government are now considering its response to this recommendation.

Animal Tests

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements are in place for monitoring the impact of the inter-departmental concordat on data sharing on the duplication by Government Departments on tests on animals; and if he will make a statement on the impact of the concordat. [48693]

Angela Eagle: In August 2000, we announced the inter-departmental concordat on data sharing to enable Government Departments to reduce the duplication of tests on animals. The concordat commits United Kingdom regulatory authorities to help resolve legal and other obstacles and encourage data sharing between clients and thereby reduce animal tests.

My officials are in contact with the parties to the concordat to review progress. They have been asked how they have put the concordat to use in encouraging companies to share data in the field of regulatory toxicology. We have requested information on ways in which the concordat has achieved its aims within each organisation and are equally keen to hear of any problems there may have been in implementing these aims, or which have slowed progress down, together with suggestions of how these could be overcome.

The full impact of the concordat will be determined once the review is complete.

Bail Conditions

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are being taken to prevent young offenders on bail offending further. [50572]

Beverley Hughes: I am today making an order which will bring into force section 130 of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 across England and Wales. It will do so on 22 April 2002 in the 10 street-crime initiative areas—London, Manchester, West Midlands, Merseyside, Thames Valley, Lancashire, Avon and Somerset, Nottinghamshire, South Yorkshire and West Yorkshire—and on 16 September 2002 in the rest of the country.

This section will give new powers to the courts to remand a 12 to 16-year-old into secure detention where they are of the view that the child or young person has a recent history of repeatedly committing imprisonable offences while on bail or in local authority accommodation. In such a case the court must be satisfied that only a secure remand would protect the public from serious harm from him or her, or that only a secure remand would be adequate to prevent the commission of further imprisonable offences by him or her.

I have also made an order which brings into force sections 131 and 132 of the same Act which allows courts to tag 12 to 16-year-olds while on bail or on remand to local authority accommodation. This will increase the number of options available to the courts for dealing with children and young people who repeatedly offend while on bail as an alternative to custody. It will come into force on 22 April 2002 in the 10 street-crime areas listed above plus Northumbria, and in the rest of the country on 1 June 2002.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many men have received a winter fuel payment for each year since the scheme began, broken down by (a) those who also receive another social security benefit and (b) those who do not receive another social security benefit. [44093]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: I have been asked to reply.

A gender breakdown is not available for the first two winters of the scheme, 1997–98 and 1998–99. Information is not yet available for winter 2001–02.

The information which is available is in the table.

Winter fuel payments

Thousand

	1999–2000	2000–01
Great Britain	10,112.5	11,123.5
All men	[1]3,862.6	4,811.4
Men in receipt of a social security benefit	[1]3,862.6	4,194.3
Men not in receipt of a social security benefit	[1,2]Nil	617.0

[1] For the first three winters of the scheme 1997–98, 1998–99 and 1999–2000, only people aged 60 or over in receipt of income support or income-based jobseeker's allowance, or those over pension age in receipt of other qualifying benefits, were entitled to the payment.

[2] The figures for 1999–2000 exclude men aged 60 to 64 (and a small number of others) who became eligible for Winter Fuel Payments from 2000–01 onwards, and who were also able to claim retrospectively for previous years. It is not possible to relate the retrospective payments to specific years.

Note:

Figures have been rounded to the nearest hundred.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Rural Public Houses

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 8 January 2002, Official Report, column 764W, what information she collates on rural pubs; and if she will make it available. [46505]

Alun Michael: The Countryside Agency collates data on rural pubs through its Rural Services Survey. The last survey undertaken in 2000 collected information on pubs, differentiating between those serving meals and those not serving meals, and between those independently owned and those which are part of a national chain. The headline results by parish and settlement size have been published in the Countryside Agency report entitled Rural Services in 2000.

The full report is also available on the agency's website along with parish and settlement files (which can be downloaded) currently containing the following information:

For the 12,289 settlements recorded in the survey, data are available on pubs serving meals and pubs not serving meals.

For the 6,103 parishes recorded in the survey, data are available on the total number of pubs in the parish.

The data on public houses can be found on-line at http://www.countryside.gov.uk/ruralservices/pubs.htm.

Correspondence

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Henley of 4 September 2001 (Defra ref. 159940), 28 September 2001 (Defra ref. 160862), 18 July 2001 (Defra ref. 158115), 16 July 2001 (Defra ref. 157925) and 10 July 2001 (Defra ref. 157840); and what the reasons are for the delay in replying. [26766]

Mr. Morley: The hon. Member's letter of 4 September 2001 was replied to on 26 January; of 18 July 2001 on 5 February; and of 10 July 2001 on 13 March.

The letter of 16 July has been transferred to the Department of Health.

We are unable to trace a copy of the letter of 28 September 2001.

Hon. Members are aware of the difficulties DEFRA faced last year in processing correspondence, following the foot and mouth disease outbreak, and the creation of the new Department. Steady progress is being made towards eliminating the backlog of cases, and performance on incoming letters has considerably improved. I can assure you that all efforts will continue to be devoted to this area until the problems have been fully resolved.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the letter of 14 December 2001 from the hon. Member for Christchurch to the Minister of State on the Biocidal Regulations 2001. [33639]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 5 February 2002]: I am sorry for the long delay in replying to the hon. Member's letter. The Department transferred the hon. Member's correspondence to the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions on 10 April, as they have responsibility for the Biocidal Regulations.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what factors caused the delay between 23 October 2001 and 24 February 2002 in responding to the letter from the hon. Member for Christchurch about refrigerants. [40797]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 6 March 2002]: The hon. Member's letter of 23 October was faxed to the Department on 15 January following an inquiry about the length of time the response was taking. There was no trace of the original letter in the Department.

Departmental Establishment

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what is the total establishment of her Department; and how many of these posts relate to functions of the former MAFF. [47967]

Mr. Morley: The number of staff in DEFRA and its executive agencies on 1 March 2002 was 13,658 full-time equivalents. The number of staff in MAFF and its executive agencies at the time of the transfer was 11,038 full-time equivalents. Due to reorganisations within the Department, current posts in DEFRA relating to the former MAFF cannot easily be identified and the number of such posts could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many posts with environmental protection responsibilities were transferred to her Department from the former DETR; and how many of those posts have become vacant since the transfer. [47966]

Mr. Morley: Approximately 500 posts with environmental protection responsibilities were transferred from the former DETR to DEFRA. Due to reorganisations within the Department, the number of those posts that have become vacant since the transfer could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many times Ministers in her Department have travelled abroad at taxpayers' expense since March 2001; what countries they visited; and what the total cost of each visit was. [47110]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Since 1999 this Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. The 1999 list contained information on all such visits undertaken from 2 May 1997 to 31 April 1999. Details for travel undertaken in the period 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 will be published as soon as possible after the end of the current financial year.

All travel is undertaken fully in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Smart Card Technology

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the use of smart card technology in her Department and in the areas for which it is responsible; and what discussions she has had with private companies about the use of smart card technology within her Department. [50471]

Alun Michael: DEFRA's e-business strategy does not currently propose the use of smart cards but as smart card technology matures and becomes more pervasive, DEFRA will consider its use as an authentication mechanism for e-business systems. While the Department has not had discussions with private companies about the use of smart cards, DEFRA receives information from the Office of the e-Envoy on this topic and has participated in the OeE's Smart Card Working Party which produced the Smart Card Framework document.

Fair Trade

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 8 January 2002, Official Report, column 736W, on fair trade goods, if she will review and increase the amount of fairly traded goods purchased by her Department during Fair Trade Fortnight. [35915]

Mr. Morley [pursuant to the reply, 8 January 2002, c. 736W]: Support for fair trade initiatives both in developing countries and the UK has been given by the Department for International Development. This support forms part of a wider dialogue with the private sector to encourage them to adopt more socially responsible and ethical business practises.

Within DEFRA, the management of catering is outsourced and the use or promotion of particular goods is not yet a specific requirement under these arrangements though we will look seriously into making this a choice available for staff.

Arthur Andersen

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what contracts her Department has had since 1997 with (a) Arthur Andersen and (b) Accenture for (i) accountancy, (ii) audit and (iii) consultancy work; and what staff have been seconded (A) to her Department from and (B) from her Department to these firms. [32427]

Mr. Morley: Since DEFRA came into being on 8 June, 2001, the Department has let no contracts with Arthur Andersen or Accenture for accounting, audit and consultancy work. From records held centrally no staff have been seconded to the Department from these firms or from the Department to these firms.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of whether the sickness absence reduction target for 2001–02 will be met. [47666]

Mr. Morley: Following publication, in 1998, of the Cabinet Office report 'Working Well Together—Managing Attendance in the Public Sector' and the subsequent setting of targets for the reduction of sickness absence in the civil service this Department compiled comprehensive guidance on managing sickness absence which it successfully piloted in selected areas. Those arrangements were ready to be rolled out across the Department, when the outbreak of foot and mouth disease concentrated resources elsewhere.

Following the creation of the new Department and the ending of the foot and mouth outbreak, work on the new sickness absence management arrangements has been re-started, but as yet no assessment has been made as to whether the sickness absence target for 2001–02 will be met.

Responsibility for attendance matters within the Central Science Laboratory Agency (CSL), the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA) and the Centre for Environmental Fisheries and Aquaculture Science Agency (CEFAS)—all former MAFF agencies—has been delegated to the agency Chief Executives.

CEFAS has been developing a robust attendance management system incorporating return to work interviews and closer monitoring of short term absences. They are confident they are on track to meet the 2001 target and with the imminent introduction of the new arrangements they should be well placed to monitor absence levels which in turn will provide them with the best opportunity of meeting their 2003 target.

Responses from CSL and VLA have been included by letter. The Pesticides Safety Directorate, the Veterinary Medicines Directorate Agencies and the Rural Payments Agency are covered by the departmental response.

Letter from Professor Michael Roberts to Mr. John Bercow, dated April 2002:

I have been asked to reply, in respect of the Central Science Laboratory, to your question regarding an assessment of whether the sickness absence reduction target for 2001–2002 will be met.

Following publication, in 1998, of the Cabinet Office report 'Working Well Together—Managing Attendance in the Public Sector' and the subsequent setting of targets for the reduction of sickness absence in the Civil Service, Central Science Laboratory has been carrying out continuous improvements to the process of managing sickness absence. This includes the employment of an on-site Occupational Health Adviser.

Work on the new sickness absence management arrangements have now been re-started, following the outbreak of Foot and Mouth Disease which concentrated resources elsewhere, but as yet no assessment has been made as to whether the sickness absence target for 2001–2001 will be met.

Letter from Professor Steve Edwards to Mr. John Bercow, dated April 2002:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question on what recent assessment has been made of whether the sickness absence reduction target for 2001–2002 will be met.

VLA's approach to managing sickness has been based on a proactive stance in relation to all areas of health surveillance and sickness absence and by providing comprehensive advice and guidance to staff and managers. This is supported by appropriate monitoring systems. We are constantly reviewing procedures in the light of the Cabinet Office report 'Working Well Together—Managing Attendance in the Public Sector'.

VLA's sickness absence reduction target will be incorporated into that established for DEFRA. No separate assessment has yet been made as to whether the sickness absence target for 2001–2002 will be met.

Environmental Protection

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what role her Department has played in discussions relating to the Pan-European Biological and Landscape Diversity Strategy; and if she will make a statement. [46569]

Mr. Meacher: As a member of the Strategy Council, we have participated fully in discussions relating to the Pan-European Biological and Landscape Diversity Strategy since its endorsement at the 'Environment for Europe' Ministerial Conference in 1995, and will continue to do so.

In February officials from my Department attended the 6th meeting of the Strategy Council in Budapest, and the 'Biodiversity in Europe' Intergovernmental Conference which was held under the overall umbrella of the strategy, and which focused on facilitating European regional preparations for the 6th Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity (CBD/COP6), and strengthening co-operation on biodiversity in Europe.

The conference reviewed relevant on-going Pan-European processes, identified priorities and made a number of recommendations for action at the regional level. The conference discussed the main items on the CBD/COP6 agenda which were of special European concern, with a view to developing a regional input for the forthcoming negotiations at The Hague. Among the priority topics considered were:

Forest biological diversity

Invasive alien species

Financial resources and mechanisms for biodiversity

Indicators, monitoring and the clearing house mechanism; and

Strategic Plan for the CBD and the implementation of the Convention.

The main messages from Budapest to the global biodiversity community are that European countries are committed to work jointly for attaining common goals of the conservation and sustainable use of biodiversity; and that Europe is keen to learn from a wide range of experiences of other regions with a view to enriching the Pan-European biodiversity process, and is ready to share its achievements and innovations with other regions of the world.

Hazardous Chemicals and Pesticides

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on progress with regard to the Rotterdam Convention on the Prior Informed Consent Procedure for Certain Hazardous Chemicals and Pesticides in International Trade. [46560]

Mr. Meacher: The Rotterdam convention was adopted on 10 September 1998. The convention will not come into force until ratified by 50 parties, 20 parties have ratified so far.

The European Commission adopted a proposal to implement the Rotterdam convention in the EU on 24 January 2002, which is now being discussed by the Environment Council Working Group and the European Parliament. European Community Regulation 2455/92 already implements (compulsorily) a voluntary scheme on trade in certain dangerous chemicals, which the European Commission's recent proposal seeks to amend to implement the convention in the EU. Germany and The Netherlands have implemented national legislation in advance of European Community action. The UK, and the rest of the Community, are also participating in a voluntary interim procedure prior to the convention coming into force.

Energy Policy

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when her Department intends to publish details of new energy efficiency indicators, targets and monitoring mechanisms for each sector of the economy; and if she will make a statement. [48686]

Mr. Meacher: The Government will be responding to this and other recommendations of the recent performance and innovation unit energy review in a White Paper later in the year, following public consultation. The Government recognise that energy efficiency is an important, and highly cost-effective, way of achieving our climate change goals. It has significant unrealised potential, and the Department will be considering how to enhance its future role. We will produce a domestic energy efficiency strategy, and are working to establish benchmarking, indicators and (where appropriate) targets, for those sectors of the economy which have the most significant impacts on energy efficiency. A review of local authorities' role in energy efficiency is also under way. Some sectors of course already have energy efficiency targets, for example, the Government estate, health and education sectors. The energy efficiency best practice programme (EEBPp) provides authoritative information and guidance on benchmarking and best practice for every sector.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to form a negotiated agreement with the finance sector to reduce the cost of financing energy efficiency measures by funding them as part of mortgage offers; and if she will make a statement. [48692]

Mr. Meacher: We will examine the performance and innovation unit's energy review recommendation in the course of preparing our domestic energy efficiency strategy, and for the introduction of the home seller's pack. The objective of this initiative is to make available to potential buyers relevant information about the property. We propose that the seller's pack should include an assessment of the property's energy efficiency performance (a SAP energy rating) and suggestions for improving that performance. It is anticipated that the information will encourage prospective home buyers to take energy efficiency into account in their buying decisions and, following purchase, to act on the suggestions and invest in energy efficiency measures. The ability to fund the measures as part of the mortgage loan would help to maximise the benefits from this initiative.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if her Department plans to announce an extension of the energy efficiency commitment from 2005 to 2010; and if she will make a statement. [48688]

Mr. Meacher: We are considering the future of the energy efficiency commitment after 2005: we need to be sure that it remains the best way of delivering substantial savings in the domestic sector. Feedback on the early part of the programme for 2002 to 2005 will also enable us to take account of that experience in making our plans for the future.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when her Department plans to undertake a review of low carbon delivery organisations; and if she will make a statement. [48690]

Mr. Meacher: The performance and innovation unit (PIU) energy review highlights the number and range of organisations involved in delivering policies and programmes for lowering carbon emissions and promoting energy efficiency. The Government will certainly consider this particular PIU recommendation carefully when responding to the energy review in a White Paper later in the year, following public consultation.

EU Directive 1999/74/EC

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the extent to which EU Directive 1999/74/EC was implemented by 1 January; and what formal action has been taken by the European Commission in respect of this matter by 1 January. [49279]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 April 2002]: EC Directive 99/74/EC came into force in all member states on 1 January 2002.

Ministerial Conference on the North Sea

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on matters discussed and decisions taken at the ministerial conference on the North sea, held in Bergen, in March; and if she will place in the Library copies of all United Kingdom submissions to the conference and submissions by other Governments and accredited bodies that are relevant to the United Kingdom. [47663]

Mr. Meacher: The fifth North Sea Conference was held in Bergen, Norway, on 20 and 21 March. I represented the UK and was supported by Allan Wilson, Deputy Minister for Environment and Rural Development at the Scottish Executive.

The Conference received a report on progress made in taking forward the commitments made at the fourth North Sea Conference held in Esbjerg, Denmark, in 1995. The outcome of the fifth North Sea Conference was a declaration for further action to protect the marine environment of the North Sea. It covered establishing an ecosystem approach, the conservation of habitats and species, fisheries, shipping, hazardous substances, eutrophication, offshore installations, radioactive substances, renewable energy, marine litter and waste management, spatial planning and future co-operation.

The Conference was very successful in producing an agreed declaration which provides a worthwhile step for the further protection of the marine environment. Key initiatives include a commitment to develop and pilot ecological quality objectives to assess progress made towards an ecosystem-based approach, a commitment to designate relevant areas of the North Sea as a network of well-managed marine protected areas by 2010 and the creation of a network of investigators and prosecutors to tackle pollution from shipping. It was also agreed that Sweden would host a Ministerial meeting on the environmental impacts of shipping and fishing by 2006.

The declaration also contains proposals to work through the OSPAR Convention for the Protection of the Marine Environment of the North East Atlantic to develop guidance on offshore wind energy schemes and consider how best to share information on spatial planning for the North Sea. It also endorses further work through OSPAR to tackle pollution from hazardous substances, offshore installations, radioactive substances and the prevention of eutrophication.

I have placed copies of both the progress report and the declaration in the Library of the House. They are also available at http://www.northseaconference.no.

Refrigerators

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement updating the Government's strategy for stripping CFC foam from fridges and freezers in the UK; and how long it will take to deal with the backlog of appliances. [48593]

Mr. Meacher: There has been considerable progress. Facilities for treating CFC foams are now coming on-stream in the UK. A mobile plant is already operating and two static plants are due to be operational by the end of June. Additionally, refrigerators from various parts of the UK are being exported to Germany for treatment. Sufficient plant should be in place by the end of the year to ensure that the backlog of fridges does not increase further. Current estimates suggest the backlog of appliances will be dealt with during 2003.

Waterways Access

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of inland waterways are accessible to canoeists (a) freely and (b) on payment of a fee. [48207]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Department's most recent findings on access to water by canoeists are contained in our research report, "Water-Based Sport and Recreation: the facts" which was published in December 2001. The researchers did not distinguish between paid and unpaid access where agreements were in place. Canoeists (and other users) have a free right of access to those inland rivers and canals which have public navigation rights.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action she is taking to improve access to inland waterways for canoeists; and if she will make a statement. [48203]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Our research report, "Water-based Sport and Recreation: the facts" was published in December 2001. The report has aroused a great deal of interest amongst the canoeing community abd I have set out our approach in responses to letters from many hon. and right hon. Members.

My officials recently met British Waterways, the Countryside Agency, the Countryside Council for Wales, the Environment Agency and Sport England as the other sponsors of the research along with other interested Government Departments to discuss the report's findings which are quite complex. Just before Easter my right hon. Friend, the Minister of State for Rural Affairs (Alun Michael) met the hon. Member for Harrow West (Gareth Thomas) and representatives of the British Canoe Union to hear their views. We are considering what action to take in light of the report's findings.

Laying Hens

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she made to the European Union prior to its passing of the Welfare of Laying Hens Directive. [48956]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 April 2002]: Ministers were directly involved when the proposal was discussed at the Council of Agriculture Ministers and UK officials were fully involved in the negotiations on the Directive.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effect on the cost of egg production in cage-based systems of implementation of Directive 1999/74/EC on the Welfare of Laying Hens; and if she will estimate the change in cost expected in the cage-based system following implementation of Directive 1999/74/EC. [46392]

Mr. Morley: A regulatory impact assessment has been produced, following public consultation. It will be published to accompany the Statutory Instrument to implement the Welfare of Laying Hens Directive.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to encourage producers to move laying hens out of small cages before the final phase-out date of 2012; and if she will make a statement on her policy in respect of the keeping of birds in modified cages in the long-term. [49280]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 April 2002]: It is intended that Council Directive 99/74/EC will be implemented in England without being added to in any way. If further changes are proposed, there will be full public consultation.

Beef

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she next intends to meet representatives of the National Beef Association. [46401]

Mr. Morley: There are, at present, no specific arrangements for the Secretary of State to meet with the National Beef Association.

However, I recently met with the Association, on 4 April, to discuss matters regarding TB in cattle.

My noble Friend (The Lord Whitty) last met directly with the Association on 7 November, in order to discuss the Animal Movement Regime and has accepted an invitation to attend the Association's forthcoming event 'Beef 2002', organised for 24 May.

Lord Whitty also maintains regular contact with representatives of the Association through attendance at stakeholder meetings and looks forward to continuing dialogue on issues facing the Beef Industry.

Slaughterhouses

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many animals of each species were slaughtered (a) for human consumption and (b) otherwise than for human consumption (i) at registered low throughput slaughterhouses, (ii) at other registered slaughterhouses and (iii) elsewhere in (A) 2000 and (B) 2001. [48192]

Mr. Morley: The information requested is given in the table for Great Britain.

On-farm Burials

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on EU proposals to ban the on-farm burial of livestock from this end of this year. [48381]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: A new EU Animal By-Products Regulation will tighten the controls on the disposal of animal by-products and ban the routine burial of livestock except in remote areas (the Highlands and Islands of Scotland). Further negotiations between the Council of Ministers, European Parliament and European Commission are still required, but we expect the regulation to come into force in member states between the end of 2002 and mid 2003. We are discussing future arrangements for the disposal of fallen stock with stakeholders.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the number of farms which carry out on-farm burial of livestock. [48382]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: No such assessment has been made. However, the State Veterinary Service carried out small scale surveys in 1998, 1999 and 2000. The results (which may not be representative) suggested that 17 to 21 per cent. of fallen cattle and 60 to 76 per cent. of fallen sheep and goats were buried on farm.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) in how many contiguous premises slaughter was completed within 48 hours of a clinical diagnosis of the disease during the foot and mouth epidemic; [47603]

(2) on average how long after clinical diagnosis slaughter was completed on the infected premises during the foot and mouth epidemic. [47604]

Mr. Morley: Information regarding the time taken to slaughter on contiguous premises is presented in the two charts, which have been placed in the Library.

Animal Experiments

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government have taken to ban the testing of finished household products on animals. [45765]

Angela Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have not ruled out a ban on the testing of household products. The need for testing household products on animals is something that the Animal Procedures Committee is considering and will advise on later this year as part of its review of the cost/benefit assessment. In the meantime, the Government will continue to work to ensure that animals are only used where there are no alternatives.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Community Care

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of applications for community care grants have been given a priority of medium or high; and how many applications regarded as of high or medium priority have been (a) fully awarded, (b) partially awarded and (c) not awarded in each year since 1997. [48645]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 15 April 2002]: The available information is in the table.

Community care grant awards by priority

Year	High priority awards	Medium priority awards
1997–98	229,000	6,000
1998–99	218,000	7,000
1999–00	215,000	4,000
2000–01	223,000	2,000

Source:
Social Fund Policy, Budget and Management Information System

Notes:
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. Figures are for initial awards only.
3. Data on the numbers of applications by priority are not held. It is not practical to collect such data as one application could include requests for high, low and medium priority items.
4. Details of full and partial awards and refusals are not held by priority.

Carers Service

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the work of the new Disability and Carers Service and the arrangements for handling of individual cases in which other services within the Department may also be involved. [45809]

Maria Eagle [holding answer 26 March 2002]: The Disability and Carers Service aims to provide a responsive, consistent and reliable service in administering Disability Living Allowance, Attendance Allowance and Invalid Care Allowance. It is working with other parts of the Department for Work and Pensions to ensure that a quality service is available to all customers from April 2002.

All DWP businesses operate within a single Department and the customer of one should be treated as the customer of all. Any customer who contacts a DWP business outlet that is not focused upon their particular needs, will be helped to find the assistance they need as quickly as possible and with the minimum of inconvenience. This may mean redirecting them and telephoning in advance, or arranging an appointment on their behalf. Comprehensive guidance has been issued to staff setting out the standards of service we expect when the needs of customers span more than one business.

Disability Living Allowance

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many families there are with two or more disabled children who are in receipt of disability living allowance in (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland. [47984]

Maria Eagle: Disability Living Allowance is awarded to severely disabled people on the basis of their individual care and mobility needs, and information on family circumstances is not collected. At 31 August 2001, about 196,100 children aged under16 were receiving Disability Living Allowance in England, 21,000 in Scotland, and 14,000 in Wales. These figures are based on 5 per cent. data and rounded to the nearest hundred. The Northern Ireland Assembly is responsible for social security matters within Northern Ireland.

Rents

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library a copy of the Rent Service report indicating that the number of localities would have increased from 400 to 4000 as a result of the Court of Appeal judgment on local reference rents in Stockport delivered on 26 October 2001, referred to in the First Standing Committee on Delegated Legislation, Official Report, 14 January, column 12. [45853]

Malcolm Wicks: We have not received a formal report from the Rent Service. The likely increase in the number of localities was a Rent Service estimate for England.

Housing Benefit

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to the answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 729W, how many housing benefit claimants are subject to non-dependent deductions; and what percentage of that number are (a) registered disabled, (b) aged 60 and over, (c) in receipt of income support or JSA and (d) lone parents. [45854]

Malcolm Wicks: The available information is in the table.

Housing Benefit cases in Great Britain to which non-dependant deductions have been applied—May 2000

Cases
Cases with non-dependant deductions (number)	159,000
Of which:-
Receiving a disability premium (percentage)	20
Aged 60 or over (percentage)	49
In receipt of Income Support or income-based Jobseeker's Allowance (percentage)	64
Lone parents (percentage)	16

Notes:

1. The figures are based on a 1 per cent. sample and are subject to a degree of sampling variation.

2. The data refer to Housing Benefit recipients who may be a single person, a couple or a family. More than one benefit recipient can live in one property, for example two or more adults in a flat or house share.

3. Percentages have been rounded to the nearest whole number and do not sum because Housing Benefit recipients can fall into more than one client group.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to speed up the processing of housing benefit applications; and if he will make a statement. [40470]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 5 March 2002]: Under Best Value, we have set a range of performance indicators for HB which are designed to ensure that authorities provide their communities with a faster, more accurate service which is more secure against fraud, and which provides value for money and takes account of the views and needs of clients. Authorities are required to set challenging local targets against the indicators and, from April 2002, will be set aspirational national targets for speed of processing.

On 21 March we published performance standards for the full range of HB administration. These address all aspects of administration including effective strategic management of the service; speed and accuracy of processing; modern accessible customer service; preventing and tackling fraud; working with landlords; and overpayments. Local authorities will be able to self-assess their performance against standards.

The HB Help Team is working in partnership with local authorities to support them in improving the administration of HB. We are already seeing real improvements in administration as a result of the Team's work and the ongoing programme of inspections by the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate. We also want to help more authorities deliver a high standard of HB service by sharing good practice. We are developing a dedicated web-site to do so and we plan to make available shortly on CD a "toolkit" which the Help Team has developed.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the average time taken for local authorities to process housing benefit applications has been over the last three years; and if he will make a statement; [40471]

(2) what the target time is for local authorities to process housing benefit applications; how many achieved that target in the last 12 months for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [40472]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 5 March 2002]: The first full year in which data was collected on the performance of local authorities against performance indicators was 2000–01. The average times for local authorities to process Housing Benefit applications in England and Scotland are in the tables.

England
Average time for processing new claims	52 days
Average time for processing notifications for changes of circumstances	17 days
Percentage of renewal claims processed on time (ie by the end of the existing benefit period)	63 per cent.

Note:

Not all local authorities provided the data requested and some expressed doubt about the way their data had been collected. Therefore, the figures given are an average of the performance of the local authorities who responded.

Source:

Best Value and Audit Commission Performance Indicators for 2000–01.

Scotland
Average time for processing new claims	48 days
Average time for processing notifications for changes of circumstances	22 days
Percentage of renewal claims processed on time (ie by the end of the existing benefit period)	75 per cent.

Note:

Three of the 32 local authorities in Scotland failed to provide the data requested and, in some cases, the appointed auditors expressed doubt as to the reliability of the data collected. Therefore, the figures given are an average of the performance of the local authorities who responded.

Accounts Commission "Performance Indicators 2000–01—Benefits, Finance and Corporate issues".

Best Value performance information for local authorities in Wales will be published very shortly by the Audit Commission.

At present there are no national target times for local authorities to process Housing Benefit applications. However, on 21 March we published national performance standards for Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit administration. Local authorities will be able to assess their own performance, identify areas that need attention and work towards achieving the standards.

The performance standards for processing benefit claims are shown in the table.

Performance standards
Average processing time for new housing benefit and council tax benefit claims	36 days
Average processing time for housing benefit and council tax benefit changes of circumstances	9 days
Percentage of renewal housing benefit and council tax benefit claims processed on time (ie by the end of the existing benefit period)	83 per cent.

Social Fund

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many applications for alignment payments from the Social Fund have been received each month since January 2001; and what proportion were (a) refused, (b) fully awarded and (c) partially awarded. [48643]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 15 April 2002]: The available information is in the table.

Social Fund crisis loan awards—alignment payments

Month	Number of awards
January 2001	44,831
February 2001	38,164
March 2001	40,940
April 2001	37,331
May 2001	39,785
June 2001	38,588
July 2001	40,876
August 2001	41,618
September 2001	37,566
October 2001	43,585
November 2001	41,318
December 2001	32,677
January 2002	46,522
February 2002	42,732

Note:
1. The Social Fund computer system does not capture separately the number of applications for alignment payments nor the number of such applications that are refused or result in a partial award.

Pension Service

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will make a statement on his plans to create Pension Service and Job Centre Plus; and what access pensioners will have in person to these offices; [50487]

(2) what access pensioners will have in person to Benefits Agency offices under the new Pension Service arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [50488]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given to the hon. Member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell) and the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb) on 25 March 2002, Official Report, columns 651–52W.

Personal Pension Funds

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have personal pension funds. [46918]

Mr. McCartney: The information is in the table.

People who have a personal pension

	Million
Numbers contributing to a personal pension	4.08
Numbers receiving income from a personal pension	0.02
Total number of people with a personal pension.	4.10

Notes:
1. Information is drawn from the Family Resources Survey (FRS) for the year 2000–01 and covers Great Britain only.
2. Due to the size of the FRS sample and the fact that the Survey relies on self-reporting of pension income the information may be subject to a margin of error.

War Pensions

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for what reason MOD War Pensions will be subject to compulsory automated credit transfer in advance of state pensions and benefits. [47424]

Dr. Moonie: I have been asked to reply.

War pensions will be treated no differently from other state pensions and benefits. At this time there is no compulsion for customers to change from their current method of payment. From October 2002 the Veterans Agency will be inviting existing customers paid by order book or payable order to change to payment through a bank or building society with effect from April 2003. The Department for Work and Pensions will be issuing similar invitations to recipients of child benefit.

Basic Pensions

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners receiving one or more means-tested benefit have a weekly income of (a) up to £100, (b) £101 to £120, (c) £121 to £140, (d) £140 to £160, (e) £160 to £180, (f) £180 to £200, (g) £200 to £220, (h) £220 to £240 per week, (i) £240 to £260, (j) £260 to £280, (k) £280 to £300 and (l) over £300 per week. [35845]

Mr. McCartney [pursuant to the reply, 12 February 2002, c. 257W]: The information requested is as follows.

Number of pensioners in receipt of means tested benefits by weekly income band—Great Britain 1999–2000

Weekly income before housing costs	Number of pensioner units
Up to and including £100	440,000
£101 to £120	510,000
£121 to £140	460,000
£141 to £160	310,000
£161 to £180	250,000
£181 to £200	190,000
£201 to £220 weekly income	160,000
£221 to £260	160,000
£261 and over	100,000
Total	2,590,000

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what recent assessment he has made of whether the PSA target that 25 per cent. of all business transactions should be capable of being carried out electronically by 2002 will be met on time; [46097]

(2) what recent assessment he has made of whether the child support scheme targets for accuracy of payment arrangements and the level of compliance will be achieved by April 2003; [46101]

(3) what recent assessment he has made of whether the PSA target that a new assessment of liability to pay child support maintenance shall be completed within seven weeks will be met by the end of 2002; [46099]

(4) what recent assessment he has made of whether the PSA target to reduce benefit losses from fraud and error in income support and jobseeker's allowance by 10 per cent. by March 2002 will be met; [46098]

(5) which public service agreement targets scheduled to be met in 2002 will not be achieved by the due date. [44822]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Progress against PSA targets is set out each year in the departmental report. The 2001 report, Cm 5115, sets out our progress against the PSA targets for the period April 2000–01. The 2002 report will set out our progress for the period April 2001–02.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many members of staff of his Department are members of the Territorial forces; and if he has a strategy for his Department to encourage members of staff to become members of the Territorial forces; [44066]

(2) how many members of staff at his Department are locally elected democratic representatives; and if he has a strategy for his Department to encourage members of staff to become locally elected democratic representatives. [44540]

Mr. McCartney: The information is not held centrally and could be assimilated only at disproportionate cost. Section 50 of the Employment Rights Act 1996 (ERA) requires employers to allow their staff reasonable time off for public duties. The Civil Service Code (Para 9.2.5) requires Departments and agencies to allow time off for attending these duties. Responsibility for the decision making, in relation to attendance, for such activities has been delegated to business units within the Department. However, I am pleased to confirm that my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State's Diary Manager holds a commission with the Territorial Army.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Vocational Engineering

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if the vocational engineering GCSE is to become an option for those not undertaking any physics courses at the same level. [49854]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department will not prescribe how the new GCSEs in vocational subjects may be combined with other subjects. Those decisions will be taken at local level within the context of the requirements of the statutory curriculum.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if the vocational engineering GCSE is to be presented as an option for students considered less academically capable. [49855]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The new GCSEs in vocational subjects, which will include engineering, will be promoted by the Department as being available and suitable to young people of all abilities.

Nursery Education (London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what nursery provision has been provided by her Department to each London education authority in inner London boroughs over the last five years. [48682]

Margaret Hodge: Since September 1998 all four-year-olds in the inner London area have been able to access a free, part-time, early education place prior to statutory education.

In 2002–03, 11 of the fifteen local education authorities will be able to provide a free early education place to all three-year-olds in their area. The remaining authorities are able to offer a free place to over 65 per cent. of their three-year-olds. All three-year-olds will have access to a free early education place by September 2004.

The following table shows the amount of specific funding received by inner London education authorities to fund free early education places for four-year-olds. From April 2001, all free four-year-old places have been funded by local authorities from their own resources.

Note:
The funding figures for four-year-olds in 1997–98 are significantly higher as all free places in this year were funded centrally. From 1998–99 only new places created in the maintained sector and all free places in the private, voluntary and independent sector were funded through specific grant. Existing places in the maintained sector were funded by the authority from their own resources.

The following table shows the amount of specific funding received by inner London education authorities to fund free early education places for three-year-olds. This funding commenced September 1999.

School Absences

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the number of half days missed through authorised absence in (i) primary schools and (ii) secondary schools; and if she will make a statement. [48262]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Department's analytical section provides analysis of all absence data collected by the Department. A statistical bulletin was published in December 2001 and is available on the DfES website. Authorised absence accounts for nearly 90 per cent. of all school time missed and therefore can be as much a barrier to improving school standards as unauthorised absence.

In addition, the Department has commissioned a research project on the causes of absence from school. This project will interview children, parents and teachers about the cause of absence and will report in the autumn.

Swimming Advisory Group

Valerie Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the Swimming Advisory Group has completed its work; and when a report will be made. [48058]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Swimming Advisory Group has completed its work and its report is now under consideration within the Department for Education and Skills.

Public Bodies

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many bodies receive some or all of their funding from her Department; how much funding was received by each body in each year since 1997; and who the chief executive of each body was. [47748]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The information cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost.

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for the five largest PFI contracts let by her Department in each of the last four years; and if she will make a statement. [45601]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 25 March 2002]: My Department has only one PFI contract, which is with Capita, to deliver the Connexions Card project. The final contract price was £109.7 million over seven years. The details of the various bidding stages during contractual negotiations are commercial in confidence and in terms of Part II of the code of practice on access to Government information are exempt from disclosure.

Individual Learning Accounts

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on progress with the investigations into abuses of the Individual Learning Account scheme; and in how many cases money has been recovered from ILA providers who abused the scheme. [48254]

John Healey [holding answer 10 April 2002]: In respect of current investigations, 117 learning providers have been passed to the Department's Special Investigations Unit (SIU). Following detailed SIU work, 80 of these have been referred to nine different police forces: Cheshire, City of London, Cumbria, Dorset, Kent, Leicestershire, Metropolitan, National Crime Squad and West Midlands and the SIU are discussing a further 16 with the police. To date police have made 45 arrests that have resulted in 8 accepting cautions and charges being brought against 13 individuals, 12 of whom are awaiting court appearances and one person has been convicted.

A total of £4.47 million of payments are withheld from the 80 providers referred to the police and the 16 SIU are discussing with the police.

Ethnic Minority Funding

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding has been given by her Department for section 11 funding for schools in each Inner London borough in the last year. [48683]

Mr. Timms: The education element of the Home Office's Section 11 Grant scheme ceased on 31 March 1999. It was replaced with the Ethnic Minority Achievement Grant, which is administered by my Department. For 2002–03 £155,862,368 is available nationally to improve attainment of minority ethnic pupils. The amounts allocated to London boroughs are set out.

English Teaching

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what grant aid has been paid to each local education authority in each of the last five years to assist in the teaching of English to ethnic minority pupils. [48753]

Mr. Timms: My Department provides additional ring-fenced support to raise the achievement of ethnic minority pupils and meet the needs of those for whom English is an additional language through the Ethnic Minority Achievement (EMAG) strand of the standards fund. EMAG replaced the education element of the Home Office's Section 11 grant scheme in April 1999. Individual programme allocations for each authority for each year from 1999–2000 to 2001–02 are as follows:

Organisational Requirements

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what requirements have been (a) placed on and (b) removed from (i) head teachers, (ii) school governors, (iii) local education authorities, (iv) universities, (v) further education and sixth form colleges, (vi) the Office for Standards in Education and (vii) Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools in each year since 1997. [49799]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Modern Apprenticeships

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people, broken down by sector and region (a) have undertaken and (b) are undertaking modern apprenticeships. [49849]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The following tables contain the requested information. The first table contains the total number of starts on Advanced Modern Apprenticeships (AMA) and Foundation Modern Apprenticeships (FMA) between September 1995 and December 2001. The second table contains the number in learning on 23 December 2001. For both tables, the breakdown by sector and region is estimated from incomplete information. Where the total number of learners in a sector across all regions is estimated to be 200 or less, no estimate is provided. All other estimates are rounded to the nearest 10.

Mathematics

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how she plans to replace the British mathematics students who have dropped the subject after taking their AS-level examinations. [49853]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In response to concerns about the high failure rate in AS mathematics in summer 2001, the Secretary of State commissioned the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority to investigate the cause as part of the Review of Curriculum 2000.

This review is expected to result in revised specifications for first teaching from 2004. In the meantime, there will be an additional opportunity for students to sit mathematics units in the autumn of 2002 to 2004 inclusive, and additional funding for teaching these units.

Project Sponsorship

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which of her Department's projects have received sponsorship since 1997, including (a) details of the sponsor, (b) the nature of the project, (c) the date of the project, (d) the total cost of the project and (e) the amount of money involved in the sponsorship deal. [48391]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 16 April 2002]: In line with the Government's commitment in its response to the Sixth Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life, details of individual amounts of sponsorship valued at more than £5,000 will be disclosed in departmental annual reports.

Television Subscriptions

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the number of subscriptions to (a) digital terrestrial, (b) digital satellite and (c) digital cable television held by her Department for services in any departmental building from which Ministers work, stating for each subscription its (i) cost and (ii) purpose. [48337]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 10 April 2002]: My Department has four subscriptions to digital satellite at a cost of approximately £5,000 per year and up to 25 subscriptions to digital cable at a cost of approximately £15,000 per year. We do not have any subscriptions to digital terrestrial television. The purpose of the subscriptions is for parliamentary business and constant access to news and House of Commons transmissions.

Property Protection

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what new measures her Department took in 2001–02 to protect its property from theft or damage. [47324]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 16 April 2002]: My Department takes physical security of its headquarter buildings seriously and is constantly looking at ways to improve the systems in place. As well as introducing new measures we already have a number of security measures/systems in place, which include:

Clear written policy that is communicated to all staff;

Asset registers and inventories that record asset descriptions, serial numbers, location, who has responsibility for them and value;

"Ownership" of assets assigned to named individuals;

Periodic checks (both management and independent) to confirm the continued existence and condition of assets;

Passes needed by staff giving permission to take assets such as laptops and projectors out of Government buildings;

Random searches of bags by security staff;

Clear written procedures about what to do when assets are damaged or go missing; and Security markings on equipment.

Additional measures that have been introduced during 2001–02 include the:

Upgrading of the alarm system on the London estate so that it is capable of detecting movement on roofs and within its buildings;

Fitting of alarms to the main computer stores on the London estate;

Replacing the doors to the IT server with stronger materials to prevent forced access;

Electronic tagging of any new laptops which are supplied from our Information Technology team. This system records the exact time and date when the equipment leaves the building; and Upgrading of the photo pass equipment on all headquarter sites to digital images which are stored electronically.

Secondments

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many members of staff were employed by her Department on secondment from non-Governmental organisations in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [45229]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Since April 1999, 19 members of staff have been seconded to this Department from non-Government organisations, as follows:

	Number
1 April 1999—31 March 2000	9
1 April 2000—31 March 2001	14
1 April 2001—31 March 2002	6

Where a secondment covers two or more financial years, it has been counted in all the financial years it occurs.

Timber

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the companies from which her Department has obtained timber and wood products and the total spent with each firm over the last five years. [43404]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Press Office

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many staff in her Department's press office have received (a) termination and (b) redundancy payments in each of the last four years. [41084]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In the former Department for Education and Employment one member of staff in the press office received a termination payment in 2001. No other such payments were made in the preceding three years, and there were no redundancies.

Equipment Leasing

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the equipment leasing arrangements entered into by her Department in each of the last four years; and what the cost to public funds in each case is. [38938]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

HEALTH

Unlicensed Medicines

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list those websites that have been (a) closed and (b) forced to amend their webpages by the Medicines Control Agency due to breaching the law on the sale of unlicensed medicines via the internet since March 2000; [39022]

(2) how many prosecutions by the Medicines Control Agency against sellers of unlicensed medicines via the Internet (a) have been undertaken, (b) have been successful and (c) are in preparation since 12 July 2000. [39023]

Ms Blears: The Medicines Control Agency (MCA) has no powers contained within its statutory enforcement provisions to force closure of websites. However, MCA achieves compliance from internet service providers who are given advice on UK legislation. Websites are usually withdrawn or modified to comply with UK law.

To date the MCA has achieved six site closures through voluntary compliance from ISPs, seven compliances by operators amending their website, one successful prosecution and 12 referrals to other Government agencies or overseas enforcement authorities.

There are 10 further cases under investigation.

As a matter of policy the MCA does not publish details of voluntary compliance.

National Institute for Clinical Excellence

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) appraisals and (b) sets of guidelines were issued by NICE in (i) Q4 2000–01 and (ii) Q1, (iii) Q2 and (iv) Q3 in 2001–02. [46284]

Ms Blears: The information requested is as follows:

	Number of technology appraisals	Number of clinical guidelines
January-March 2001	5	0
April-June 2001	4	3
July-September 2001	4	1
October-December 2001	1	0
Total 2001	14	4

The National Institute for Clinical Excellence also published "Referral advice, a guide to appropriate referral from general to specialist service" in December 2001.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many appraisals of new or existing technologies by NICE were produced in 2001. [47293]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Romsey (Sandra Gidley) today.

GP Home Visits

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce compulsory home visits by GPs for elderly patients. [39455]

Jacqui Smith: We have no plans to vary the existing arrangements. General medical services general practitioners (GPs) must currently offer to make an annual home visit to all patients aged 75 years or over. GPs working within personal medical services are required to make arrangements which best meet the needs of the local population, including elderly patients, but the detail of the arrangements are a matter to be agreed locally as part of the Personal Medical Services pilot agreement.

Registered Homes Act

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the most recent date of publication has been of the statistical report on private hospitals, homes and clinics registered under section 23 of the Registered Homes Act 1984. [40873]

Jacqui Smith: The statistical bulletin—"Community Care Statistics 2000—Private Nursing Homes, Hospitals and Clinics" was published in February 2001.

Parental Leave Directive

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the (a) financial costs and (b) benefits to his Department of the Parental Leave Directive. [42477]

Ms Blears: As any annual leave taken by staff is recorded and checked locally by business areas within the Department, there is no centrally held information available on the cost of parental leave taken by staff.

The Department has for some time had a special leave policy enabling its staff to take parental leave. Since it came into force the Department has complied with the Parental Leave Directive. As a responsible employer the Department is committed to supporting its staff to work flexibly around their family responsibilities and has a flexible working pattern policy and a child care and carer support scheme. The Department benefits by retaining skilled staff and being valued as an employer.

Correspondence

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average length of time taken to answer letters to Ministers has been in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [43948]

Ms Blears: For the calendar year 2001, the average time Ministers have taken to reply to letters is 22.91 days.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the letter dated 17 October 2001 from the hon. Member for Epsom and Ewell relating to any inquiry by Mr. Reeve of 6 Wellesford Close, Banstead, Surrey. [48209]

Jacqui Smith: A reply was sent to the hon. Member on 23 October 2001.

Territorial Forces

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many members of staff of his Department are members of the Territorial forces; and if he has a strategy to encourage members of staff to become members of the Territorial forces. [44069]

Ms Blears: The Department does not record details of civil service staff who are also members of the Territorial forces.

The Civil Service Management Code (paragraph 9.2.5) requires Departments and agencies to allow members of the Reserve Forces, Territorial Army or Cadet Forces time off work. The decision over whether such time off is paid or unpaid has been delegated to Departments and agencies.

The Department has a special leave policy that allows members of the Reserve Forces, Territorial Army and Cadet Forces to take special leave with pay for periods of training. Staff are also permitted to accept payments in respect of their membership of the Reserve Forces, Territorial Army and Cadet Forces.

Advertising

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department will spend on advertising, other than for job vacancies, in the current financial year. [43883]

Ms Blears: The Department has spent £19.81 million so far on advertising in this current financial year.

Golden Jubilee

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the Department has spent on the Queen's Jubilee in each of the past three years; how the money was allocated; and if he will make a statement. [44597]

Ms Blears: No specific allocations have been made for expenditure on the Jubilee by the Department. Information is not collected centrally in a form to identify any incidental expenditure that may have taken place.

Staff (Locally Elected Representative)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many members of staff at his Department are locally elected democratic representatives; and if he has a strategy for his Department to encourage members of staff to become locally elected democratic representatives. [44544]

Ms Blears: The Department does not record details of civil service staff who are locally elected democratic representatives.

Section 50 of the Employment Rights Act 1996 (ERA) requires employers to allow their staff reasonable time off for public duties. The Civil Service Management Code (paragraph 9.2.5) also requires departments to allow time off for attendance required by section 50 of the ERA 1996.

Special leave policy rests with individual departments and agencies who are free to decide on the amounts of special leave, and the circumstances for which it is granted and whether such leave is paid or unpaid.

As part of its commitment to encouraging staff to be active in the community, the Department of Health has a special leave policy that allows staff who are elected members of local authorities an annual limit of 18 days paid leave.

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have been employed by his Department in each of the last three years under (a) the New Deal for Young People, (b) the New Deal for the Over 50s and (c) the New Deal for Lone Parents; and at what cost, listed by category, to public funds. [44925]

Ms Blears: The Department does not record New Deal recruits under these categories.

New Deal recruits take up existing vacancies so extra costs to public funds are limited to the subsidy, where appropriate, and any additional training and development which may be needed. The cost of the latter cannot be readily identified.

Since joining the scheme in 1998 the Department of Health has taken 72 New Deal recruits. The Department also regularly provides Cabinet Office with New Deal statistics for progress reports for Department for Work and Pensions Ministers on recruitment to meet the benchmark figure for civil service participation in the New Deal programme.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people employed by his Department under the New Deal for Young People in each of the last four years have subsequently (a) found unsubsidised employment for more than 13 weeks and (b) returned to jobseeker's allowance or other benefits. [44905]

Ms Blears: Information is not held centrally on the number of New Dealers who have found unsubsidised employment for more than 13 weeks or who have returned to jobseekers' allowance or other benefits.

Creche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what creche facilities are provided by his Department; and at what cost. [44867]

Ms Blears: While the Department does not provide creche facilities for its staff, it does provide staff with an allowance towards the cost of nursery care.

The allowance year runs concurrently with the academic year and the cost of providing nursery allowance (£600 per parent) for the last academic year (1 September 2000 to 31 August 2001) was £95,725.

Anaesthetic Services

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the provision of anaesthetic services (a) in the Scarborough accident and emergency Yorkshire NHS Trust area and (b) in the Yorkshire and north-east area as a whole. [45107]

Ms Blears: Clinical governance was introduced into the national health service for the first time in 1999. This is underpinned by a statutory duty of quality on NHS trusts, primary care trusts and health authorities in the Health Act 1999, which requires them to put and keep in place arrangements for monitoring and improving the quality of health care they provide.

In the case of the Scarborough and North East Yorkshire Healthcare NHS Trust, difficulties were identified in the provision of services for general anaesthetics across the trust due to a shortage of consultant anaesthetists. In order to ensure adequate cover, the trust decided to restrict operations that require general anaesthetics to three sites and as Malton Community Hospital was the site with the lowest general anaesthetic activity, general anaesthetic services at Malton will cease with effect from 1 April 2002. From that date patients will either have their operations under a local anaesthetic, where appropriate, in Malton or be treated under a general anaesthetic at one of the trust's other sites at Scarborough, Bridlington or Whitby.

National Care Standards

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 18 March 2002, ref 43898, on National Care Standards, how many and what percentage of care homes have completed their (a) application for registration, (b) statement of purpose and (c) application for registration; and what enforcement action the Commission can take if compliance with these standards is not achieved. [45659]

Jacqui Smith: As of 1 April 2002 the National Care Standards Commission had received approximately 2,500 applications from providers and managers who were required to apply for registration by that date. It is not possible to say how many of these applications are from care homes since the commission is still assessing from which service areas the applications originated and the associated documentation with them.

Providers who have submitted their application for registration will be given protection from section 11(1) of the Care Standards Act until their application can be processed by the commission. Providers who failed to submit their application for registration by 31 March are committing an offence under section 11(1), of the Act. However, before taking prosecution action as set out at section 11(5), we would expect the commission to take account of the circumstances as to why an application was not made.

Nursing Care Payments

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is towards nursing homes passing on an administration charge to residents for the payment of the free nursing care money. [46575]

Jacqui Smith: The allocations made to health authorities for NHS funded nursing care include an amount for general administration. In implementing the arrangements, the national health service has been asked to ensure that the administrative burdens on both the NHS and homes should be kept to a minimum. Care homes with concerns about the administrative burden should raise this with the responsible local NHS service body.

NHS Procurement

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 304W, on Procure 21, if he will list the pilot areas for the NHS procurement initiative Procure 21; and what the minimum financial level will be of the contract which will be awarded in relation to NHS Procure 21. [46322]

Mr. Hutton: Procure 21 comprises programmes to improve the performance of the NHS as a client of the construction industry, to improve design, and to introduce partnering frameworks. "Best Client" and design initiatives apply nationally. Partnering frameworks are being piloted in the North West and West Midlands regions of the NHS. The minimum financial value of contracts that will be awarded under NHS Procure 21 will be £1 million (this is the works cost as defined in the NHS Capital Investment Manual). This information was detailed in the Contract Notices placed in the Supplement to the European Journal in April 2001 (refs Works Contracts (Publicly Funded Schemes) 2001/S 71–048469, Services Contracts (PFI/PPP Schemes) 2001/S 71–048708).

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when a decision was made after the pilot scheme on the best use of a Government procurement card in his Department. [45721]

Ms Blears [holding answer 25 March 2002]: On 7 April 2000, it was decided that use of the Government procurement card should be made available to any units across the Department who can justify its issue in terms of the transactions they undertake.

Autism

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding was made available to the Medical Research Council for research into autism each year from 1992 to 2001; and how the £2.5 million funding available to the Medical Research Council for continued research into autism will be used. [46423]

Jacqui Smith: The Medical Research Council (MRC) funds a large amount of work on the causes and treatment of autism, and to increase the knowledge base of issues surrounding autism. In recent years the MRC has spent the following amounts on autism research:

1996–97	826,000
1997–98	905,000
1998–99	1,041,000
1999–2000	1,114,000
2000–01	1,182,000

Information for earlier years is not readily available.

I announced on 14 February an extra £2.5 million to the MRC to help them to take forward recommendations on further research contained in their report of their review of the epidemiology and causes of autism. The additional funds provide the opportunity for the MRC to accelerate research on autism, building on existing strengths and addressing gaps which were identified in the report. It will complement and add to the MRC's current support for research in this field. It is likely that the range of research supported will be broader than that of the MRC review and may include research to develop and evaluate interventions. Previous research has not been supported from ring-fenced funding. We will continue to pursue our constructive dialogue with the MRC on autism research.

Schizophrenia

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason he has not yet issued guidance on atypical and traditional anti-psychotic medication for schizophrenia; when he expects to issue guidance to NICE to investigate the use of atypical and traditional anti-psychotic medication for older people in care settings; and if he will make a statement. [46554]

Jacqui Smith: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) is appraising atypical anti-psychotic drugs for schizophrenia. NICE has produced its final appraisal determination which is subject to appeal. We are not in a position, until the result of the appeals is known, to state when guidance will be issued.

There are no plans at present for NICE to consider separately the use of anti-psychotic drugs for older people in care settings. Through measures such as the National Service Framework for Older People and the Care Standards Act, we have set out clear requirements for the proper management of medicines for older people.

Pharmacies

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the limited opening hours of local pharmacies on Sundays. [44040]

Ms Blears: Under the National Health Service (Pharmaceutical Services) Regulations 1992 arrangements for pharmacies to open on Sundays are determined locally.

"Pharmacy in the Future—Implementing the NHS Plan" commits the NHS, in partnership with NHS Direct, local pharmacies and patient representatives, to review arrangements so that patients who need medicines out of hours will get them easily. We plan to issue advice for the NHS later this year.

Residential Care

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions have taken place with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs concerning the use of rural leisure accommodation for residential care for the elderly. [47028]

Jacqui Smith: No discussions have taken place on this subject with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. There are no proposals that rural leisure accommodation should be used to provide residential care for the elderly.

Public Relations Companies

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which public relations companies have been used by the NHS; how much money has been spent in the past 12 months on each of them; and on which projects. [47850]

Ms Blears: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Intermediate Care Beds

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the composition in terms of location of the extra intermediate care beds which have been introduced, and are planned to be introduced, under the National Plan. [47843]

Jacqui Smith: A survey of NHS intermediate care in England was carried out in August 2001. Local health and social care communities were asked to provide data for intermediate care services in place in 1999–2000, and those planned at that time for 2001–02, to enable progress in achieving the NHS Plan targets for intermediate care beds and places to be measured.

The results of the survey showed that by the end of 2001–02 there would be, compared to the baseline of 1999–2000, around an additional 2,400 intermediate care beds. The full results of the survey, giving data by region and by health authority, are in the Library.

Haemodialysis Stations

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) new and (b) replacement haemodialysis stations have come into operation since the publication of the NHS National Plan. [47009]

Jacqui Smith: Since the publication of the NHS Plan in July 2000, capital modernisation allocations from the Department have wholly or partly funded the delivery of 277 new and 22 replacement haemodialysis stations in England. These are in addition to those implemented locally by the NHS in line with regional expansion and development programmes.

Mental Health

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason the London region of the NHS decided to reduce the number of mental health services bought from outside London. [47500]

Jacqui Smith: London is developing local national health service mental health services, in line with the adult mental health national service framework and NHS Plan. The development and expansion of local services will also reduce London's reliance on out of London placements in the independent sector and on other NHS facilities. This will mean less travelling for patients and their carers and is therefore supported by them. Where local services do not exist, London will continue to use mental health facilities outside of London based on clinical advice and appropriate services being available.

Mental Illness

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what proportion of people, broken down by age, were (a) admitted and (b) discharged from hospital in each of the last five years where the main diagnosis was mental illness, but the patients also suffered malnourishment. [40579]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 5 March 2002]: There was one admission and one discharge from NHS Hospitals in England in 2000–01 with a main diagnosis of mental illness and with malnutrition as a secondary diagnosis. The admission and discharge were aged over 85. There were no discharges or admissions in the previous four years (1996–97 to 1999–2000).

Note:

Malnutrition = ICD-10: E40-E46; mental illness = ICD-10: F00-F99.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what proportion of people, broken down by age, were (a) admitted and (b) discharged from hospital in each of the last five years where the main diagnosis was malnourishment, but the patients also suffered from mental illness. [40578]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 5 March 2002]: The figures represent the number of discharges (table 1) and admissions (table 2) to NHS hospitals in England, where the main diagnosis was malnutrition and mental illness was a secondary diagnosis, by age in each of the last five years.

Between 0 per cent. and 0.002 per cent. of all discharges and admissions had a main diagnosis of malnutrition with mental illness as a secondary diagnosis.

Note:

Malnutrition = ICD-10: E40-E46; mental illness = ICD-10: F00-F99.

Notes:
1. Admissions are defined as the "first" period of in-patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.
2. Discharge episodes are defined as the last period of in-patient care and ends with death, discharge or a transferred to other hospital.
3. The main diagnosis is the first of seven diagnosis fields in the HES data set, and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.
4. Figures are grossed for both coverage and missing/invalid clinical data, except for 2000–01 which is not yet adjusted for shortfalls.

NHS Treatment

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements exist for paying the travel costs of people from outside London who travel to London for specialist NHS treatment not available in their region. [41285]

Ms Blears [holding answer 11 March 2002]: The Hospital Travel Costs Scheme which is part of the NHS Low Income Scheme exists to assist patients with the cost of travel to hospital for NHS treatment under the care of a consultant, irrespective of the distance to be travelled. The scheme is intended to assist patients on low incomes to receive full or partial reimbursement of reasonable expenses for travel to hospital by the cheapest means of travel available to the patient.

Primary Care Workforce Review

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether the contributors to the Primary Care Workforce Review have received copies of the final report; [42587]

(2) when he will publish (a) the report and (b) the conclusions of the Primary Care Workforce report; and if he will place copies in the Library. [42589]

(3) when his Department received the Primary Care Workforce review; and if he will make a statement. [42590]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 12 March 2002]: The Primary Care Workforce Review was an internal exercise conducted and written by the Department, which engaged with a large group of external stakeholders. This review covered both the numbers and skills of staff needed in primary care and how the workforce should be planned in future years. Ministers received a draft report on these issues last year.

The work underpinning the review will form the basis of guidance on workforce planning in primary care to be issued shortly.

Hearing Aids

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the private care and acute NHS trusts which have applied to share in resources for monitoring hearing aid services in 2002–03 and, in respect of each, the sum of money awarded. [45980]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 25 March 2002]: We will announce the national health service trusts that will be taking part in the second wave pilot when a decision has been made. Private hospitals will not be involved in the project. A small pilot project is about to begin to look at the possible role that private sector hearing aid dispensers could have in a modernised NHS hearing aid service.

National Care Standards Commission's Business Plan

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to publish the National Care Standards Commission's business plan; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [45640]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 26 March 2002]: The National Care Standard Commission is expected to publish its business plan in late April or early May. A copy will be placed in the Library.

Inspection Consistency

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place to ensure that there is consistency between Commission for Health Improvement and National Care Standards Commission regulation inspections. [45644]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 26 March 2002]: We will be bringing section 9 of the Care Standards Act 2000 into force shortly and making regulations so that the Commission for Health Improvement (CHI) and the National Care Standards Commission (NCSC) may arrange for CHI to exercise NCSC's function on its behalf in relation to independent hospitals. We will be preparing these regulations and discussing their implementation with the chief executives of CHI and NCSC to enable appropriate arrangements to be brought into force later this year.

Care Workers (Training)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will estimate the total number of staff working in the (a) health sector and (b) social care sector with NVQ level II in each of the last five years for which figures are available; [45632]

(2) how many people in the care sector in each of the last five years (a) obtained National Vocational Qualification level II and (b) held National Vocational Qualification level II; and how many staff were working in the sector. [45622]

(3) what estimates he has made of the cost (a) to local authorities, (b) to health authorities, (c) to individuals and (d) in total of training care workers to NVQ level II. [45633]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 26 March 2002]: Although we collect data about the number of staff who work in local council's social services departments every year, information about the number of staff working in social care in the voluntary and private sectors has only been collected through ad-hoc surveys which look at specific service user areas. From this information we estimate that there are over one million people in the social care workforce.

We do not hold data on the "total" numbers of staff in either the health or social care sectors that hold their NVQ Level 2. Some data on the numbers of local council social services staff who have either already achieved their Care Level 2 NVQ, or who are working towards attainment of this qualification has been collected through the Training Support Programme (TSP) Grant since 1999. Other data on the numbers of social care staff who hold qualifications has been obtained though various ad-hoc surveys.

Data about the numbers of social care staff with NVQ Level 2 taken from the training support programme grant forms

	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02
Number Holding NVQ Level 2 at the beginning of the year	5,357	11,627	15,480
Number Achieving NVQ Level 2 during the year	3,004	4,595	[1] —

[1] Data is not yet available on the numbers of staff who completed their NVQ Level 2 during 2001–02.

The above table shows the data about completion of Care NVQ Level 2 that has been collected through the Training Support Programme grant since April 1999. Although data was collected about the completion of NVQs prior to this date it was not split between the various levels.

The staff that have attained their NVQ Level 2s will be mainly employees of the local council social services department, but some may be working for voluntary or private social care employers who are contracted by the local council to provide statutory services.

In the report "Who Cares? A Profile of the Independent Sector Home Care Workforce" (which was produced in September 2000) it states that there were an estimated 121,500 home care workers and 5,000 home care managers working in the independent home care industry. Of the 1292 home care staff who responded to the survey, 8.2 per cent. held an NVQ Level 2.

In future, we are anticipating NVQ information to be available centrally on most healthcare staff in the form of the Electronic Staff Record. This system is being developed currently and is intended to be operational for all staff employed by the NHS in hospital and community health services from early 2005.

The National Care Standards Commission will be collecting data about both the number of staff who work in the services that they regulate, and the qualifications that staff and managers hold. We are presently considering what other systems can be implemented in order to collect data for the whole of the social care workforce.

The National Training Strategy "Modernising the Social Care Workforce" considers the cost of improving the qualifications of the social care workforce and in Appendix 5 it provides calculations showing the estimated costs of numbers of staff undertaking qualifications over the five year period 2000–05. However, these calculations do not give a breakdown of the cost per employer or individual. They consider the cost of staff who work in a particular client group area achieving a specific qualification.

Funding has been provided to help implement this Training Strategy with £2 million being disseminated through the National Training Organisation for Social Care (TOPSS) for 2001–02. This amount has been used to promote and embed Induction Training. There will be £15 million in the Training Strategy Implementation Fund for 2002–03 and it is intended to use these funds to enable various staff to undertake Induction Training; to compete the new Registered Managers NVQ Level 4 and to undertake Assessor, Verifier and Mentor training.

Care Home Standards

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps the National Care Standards Commission will take if a care home is failing to comply with National Minimum Standard 18; [45631]

(2) how he plans to measure the compliance of care homes on National Minimum Standard 18 of the Care Standards Act 2000. [45643]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 26 March 2002]: It will be for the National Care Standards Commission to decide in the particular circumstances of each individual home whether the home conforms to the standards necessary to meet the assessed needs of its residents.

Where a care home fails to comply with one or more standards the Commission will have a number of options as to what action to take. The Commission's decision will depend on the degree to which the home fails to meet the standards and the risk to the welfare of the residents. The Commission could impose requirements on the care home to make improvements in a given time scale and monitor the home to ensure that this is done. Standard 18 of the national minimum standards for care homes for older people concerns abuse. In the case of abuse by an individual member of staff the Commission could insist on his or her removal as a person unfit to work with vulnerable adults. As now, if the welfare of the residents was at serious risk, the Commission will have the power to close the care home.

Health Protection Agency

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what additional expenditure has been incurred by the Health Protection Agency on (a) counter-terrorism and (b) civil protection since 11 September 2001. [46615]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 26 March 2002]: The Public Health Laboratory Service (PHLS) and the Centre for Applied Microbiology and Research (CAMR), which will be incorporated into the Health Protection Agency from April 2003, have incurred £1,176,000 of additional expenditure since 11 September 2001 on counter-terrorism and civil protection work. These sums are in addition to programmes of related work which were in place prior to 11 September. It has not been possible to divide these figures up between counter-terrorism and civil protection as the two areas involve overlapping work. No additional expenditure has been incurred by the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) and the National Focus for Chemical Incidents (NFCI).

The Chief Medical Officer's strategy, "Getting Ahead of the Curve", proposes the creation of a Health Protection Agency which will take over functions currently performed by the PHLS, CAMR, NRPB and the NFCI. We aim to establish the new agency by 1 April 2003.

Smallpox

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 22 November 2001, to the hon. Member for Wantage (Mr. Jackson), Official Report, column 410W, how many smallpox vaccine doses would be required to contain a smallpox outbreak with a two-week time to disease recognition, in an area with a population density of (a) 100 persons per sq km, (b) 1,000 persons per sq km and (c) 10,000 persons per sq km. [44006]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 26 March 2002]: Because of the large number of variables involved in calculating possible smallpox transmission rates it is not possible to provide specific answers to the questions posed. These variables include, among others the nature of the release of the organism and the number of individuals initially infected as well as the effectiveness of public health interventions such as patient isolation and contact tracing.

Part-time Employees

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what proportion of the staff of his Department are part-time employees. [47191]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Department currently has 496 staff (9.5 per cent.) working part-time.

The Department has for some time had a flexible working patterns policy and actively encourages and supports its staff and managers to work flexibly. A range of flexible working patterns including part-time working, job sharing and home working is available to staff by arrangement with their management.

Service Reviews

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many departmental services have been reviewed since agreement in September 1999 on the programme to do so. [47365]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Since September 1999, the Department has reviewed 30 of its services, equating to approximately 25 per cent. of its activities. The review process was in accordance with Government policy in the handbook "Better Quality Services".

Since March 2001 specific BQS activity has been incorporated into a fundamental review of all the Department's services and activities. This fundamental review was carried out in the spirit of BQS in line with Government policy. It has generated a programme of change that focuses on the Department's delivery contract and which aims to improve efficiency and effectiveness.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who undertakes the review of departmental services. [47364]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Reviews of departmental services are undertaken by using either in-house expertise or external consultants, where it is felt that they can add value.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of whether the PSA target for £15 million savings from action on contractor fraud will be met on time. [47288]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The target was to prevent £9 million worth of pharmaceutical contractor fraud and to recover £6 million worth of the same fraud by the end of 2001–02. The table shows prevention figures to March 2002 and recovery figures to February 2002. Both elements of the target have been met, and in the case of recovery ahead of the end date set.

Pharmaceutical contractor fraud outputs—Prevention[1]

December 1998 to March 1999[2]	52,882
April 1999 to March 2000	2,103,119
April 2000 to March 2001	3,189,111
April 2001 to March 2002	3,972,342
Total	9,317,454

Pharmaceutical contractor fraud outputs—Recoveries

December 1998 to March 2000	[3]2,251,815
April 2000 to March 2001	3,097,676
April 2001 to February 2002[4]	2,130,260
Total	7,479,751

[1] Figures relate to prevention of continuing fraud.
[2] Progress tracked since December 1998 when PSA targets on pharmaceutical contractor fraud for the period to the end of 2001–02 were published.
[3] Figure relates to all recoveries December 1998 to March 2000.
[4] Recovery figures for March 2002 not yet available.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of whether the PSA target for a 50 per cent. reduction in prescription charge evasion by the end of 2002–03 will be met on time. [47289]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: On its formation in late 1998 the NHS Counter Fraud Service (NHS CFS) inherited the public service agreement target to reduce patient prescription charge fraud by 50 per cent. by 2002–03.

The progress the NHS CFS has made against the target has already shown a reduction in losses to fraud in this area of 41 per cent. (£48 million) by the end of 2000–01. This is a good indication that the target of a 50 per cent. reduction by the end of 2002–03 will be met.

Mastectomy

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the criteria used for deciding when to carry out a mastectomy. [46753]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: "Improving Outcomes in Breast Cancer: The Manual (Guidance for Purchasers 1996)" states that a range of operations should be available for the treatment of breast cancer. If the cancer is not too large or diffuse, surgical options include mastectomy or breast conserving surgery. In such cases, the choice should be made jointly by the surgeon and the patient, who should be fully informed of all the options and their potential risks, benefits and implications for further treatment. Breast reconstruction should be discussed with patients who are to undergo mastectomy.

A copy of the guidance is available in the Library.

Intensive Care Baby Incubators

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time is for an intensive care baby incubator in London NHS hospitals at the latest date for which figures are available. [46688]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Department does not collect information on the average waiting times for intensive care baby incubators.

Intensive care baby incubators are always available for sick babies.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the availability of intensive care baby incubators in London NHS hospitals; and what measures are being taken to increase availability. [46686]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 10 April 2002]: In 1999 the London Health Authority chief executives convened a steering group to oversee a review of neonatal intensive care services in London. A discussion document was published in September 2001 which set out proposals for modernising the provision of neonatal intensive care for London. This also included the revised standards recently published by the British Association of Perinatal Medicine (BAPM). Copies of the discussion document have been placed in the Library.

A number of initial consultation meetings have been undertaken to agree on next steps which include establishing managed clinical networks and determining the levels of care to be provided within the networks. This work is currently in progress.

Emergency Services

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many ambulances serve Greater London; and how many paramedics there are (a) in cars and (b) on motorbikes. [46759]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The number of resources on duty at any one time varies according to the time and day. The London Ambulance Service has a fleet of 395 front line ambulances, 204 patient transport vehicles, 30 fast response cars, 10 motorbikes and eight special care baby units.

Breast Screening

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of breast screening. [46763]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The International Agency for Research on Cancer (IARC) of the World Health Organisation (WHO) recently evaluated the evidence on breast screening. The results of the evaluation were announced on Tuesday 19 March this year and confirmed earlier advice as to the effectiveness of breast screening.

IARC concluded that trials have provided sufficient evidence for the efficacy of mammography screening of women between 50 and 69 years and that the reduction in mortality from breast cancer among women who chose to participate in screening programmes was estimated to be about 35 per cent.

The working group which consisted of 24 experts from 11 countries also considered the earlier criticisms of the trials and concluded that many of these were unsubstantiated, and the remaining deficiencies were judged not to invalidate the trials' findings.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the extent of mastectomies carried out as a precaution on women who have had a tumour detected by breast screening but were of a kind that may never develop into cancer; [46764]

(2) what proportion of women who undergo breast screening have had mastectomies carried out as a result of the screening in the last three years. [46762]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: One in five breast cancers detected through screening will be found when still within the milk duct. This is called Ductal Carcinoma In Situ (DCIS). DCIS is difficult to treat as it is not known which women might progress rapidly to invasive cancer and need extensive treatment, and which women could be managed more conservatively. Detecting DCIS does not necessarily lead to mastectomy. Treatment options are always discussed with women and most women will be offered a choice between mastectomy and less drastic treatment.

Of the 9,525 cancers detected by the breast screening programme in the UK in 1999–2000, 2,009 were DCIS. 29 per cent. of non-invasive screen-detected breast cancers resulted in mastectomy[1].

NHS Cancer Screening Programmes are funding a study to improve quality of care for women with screen detected DCIS. The results of the study will lead to an evidence-based review on the approach taken to the management of women with DCIS. The study is due to report in 2004.

Property Protection

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what new measures his Department took in 2001–02 to protect its property from theft or damage. [47248]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Department takes very seriously the theft of and damage to its property. We keep under continuous review the steps we take to protect our property and introduce new security measures where these are cost effective.

In 2001–02 we introduced the following new measures:

The setting-up of a cross-departmental management security forum to strengthen policy and compliance;

Issue of cable locking devices to secure laptop computers;

Issued guidance to all staff on the identification and record keeping of unique serial numbers for mobile telephones to help deter theft.

Other security measures already in place include:

Periodic checks to confirm the continued existence and condition of assets;

Individual authorisations to staff to take mobile IT assets from official premises;

Random searches at building exits by security staff;

Clear written procedures to staff on procedures to protect assets;

Checks to detect unsecured portable property;

Security markings on IT equipment.

Project Sponsorship

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which of his Department's projects have received sponsorship since 1997, including (a) details of the sponsor, (b) the nature of the project, (c) the date of the project, (d) the total cost of the project and (e) the amount of money involved in the sponsorship deal. [48398]

Ms Blears [holding answer 11 April 2002]: In line with the Government's commitment in its response to the Sixth Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life, details of individual amounts of sponsorship valued at more than £5,000 will be disclosed in departmental annual reports.

Community Hospitals

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many community hospitals there were in settlements with under 3,000 people in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [46456]

Ms Blears [holding answer 15 April 2002]: This information is not collected for individual hospitals.

The concept of care closer to home as identified by the National Beds Inquiry (NBI) underpins our plans for modernising the health service. To this end maximum use needs to be made of community hospitals in delivering and coordinating the local population's care. Community hospitals are working hard to develop their roles, for example in carrying out day surgery, minor procedures and caring for patients in the recuperative phases of recovery from illness or accident. They will be key players in meeting our target of introducing an additional 5,000 intermediate care beds—the bridge between hospital and home—by 2004.

Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS patients were admitted to wards from accident and emergency departments within (a) one, (b) two, (c) three, (d) four and (e) more than four hours, after being seen by a doctor or consultant in (i) March 1997 and (ii) the latest month for which figures are available. [46707]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Figures for March 1997 were not collected.

The latest published figures are for the third quarter of 2001–02. These are in the table.

Admission from Accident and Emergency Departments, England, 2001–02, quarter 3

	Number	Percentage
Patients admitted through Accident and Emergency	573,266	—
Patients placed in bed in a ward within two hours of a decision to admit	396,016	69.1
Patients placed in bed in a ward within two to four hours of a decision to admit	111,493	19.4
Patients not placed in bed in a ward within four hours of a decision to admit	65,757	11.5

International Recruitment

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 13 February 2002, Official Report, column 486W, on international nurse recruitment; (1) how he plans to inform (a) NHS trusts, (b) overseas Governments, (c) overseas nurses and (d) nursing organisations of those nursing recruitment agencies which have failed to adhere to the code of practice; [39224]

(2) how many people have been assigned to assess international nurse recruitment agencies' compliance of the code of practice; how long each assessment takes; and what additional funding has been allocated to the code of practice to ensure that standards are enforced; [39302]

(3) how many international nurse recruitment agencies (a) are to be assessed by the code of practice, (b) had been assessed by 1 March 2002, (c) had signed up to comply to the code of practice and (d) had failed to adhere to the code of practice; and by when he expects code of practice reviews to be completed. [39303]

Mr. Hutton [holding answers 28 February and 4 March 2002]: We are working with international recruitment agencies and their representative bodies and other stakeholders to establish arrangements whereby agencies can register their agreement to comply with the Code of Practice on international recruitment.

Those commercial agencies who agree to adhere to the Code of Practice will be listed on the Department's website. In addition, overseas Governments will receive information via the Embassies and High Commissions and through the Commonwealth Secretariat.

This work will be undertaken by departmental officials in conjunction with international recruitment leads working with NHS trusts. No date for completing this work has been set.

Written Answers to Questions

PRIVY COUNCIL

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Council (1) how many staff were involved in each of the last three years in preparing draft answers to written parliamentary questions; [49142]

(2) what the cost was to his Department of answering written parliamentary questions in 2001; and how that cost was calculated. [49100]

Mr. Robin Cook: In the parliamentary Session 2001–02 beginning on 9 June and up until 29 January 2002, 41,366 parliamentary questions were asked to this Government, at a cost of answering of over £5 million.

For the average cost of a parliamentary question, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Financial Secretary, on Thursday 11 April 2002, Official Report, column 582W.

Each Department has a parliamentary section responsible for co-ordinating the preparation of draft answers to written parliamentary questions, drawing on the input of departmental officials.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Contracts

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish the (a) number and (b) value of contracts awarded by her Department to (i) Arthur Andersen, (ii) Deloitte Touche, (ii) Ernst and Young, (iv) KPMG and (v) PricewaterhouseCoopers accountants in each year since 1997. [34986]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA came into being on 8 June 2001. The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations which previously held contracts with her Department (a) won new contracts at the culmination of the existing contracts and (b) won new contracts after a period of inactivity with her Department in each of the past five years; [38751]

(2) if she will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by her Department from (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999, (c) May 1999 to April 2000, (d) May 2000 to April 2001 and (e) May 2001 to the latest date, indicating in each case the values of the contracts and the companies with which the contracts were placed; [38752]

(3) which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations have won new contracts with (a) her Department and (b) executive agencies in each of the past five years. [38750]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 28 February 2002]: DEFRA came into being on 8 June 2001. The information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by her Department from (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999, (c) May 1999 to April 2000, (d) May 2000 to April 2001 and (e) May 2001 to the latest date for which figures are available, stating in each case the values of the contracts and the companies with which the contracts were placed. [43676]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA came into being on 8 June 2001. The information requested can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Sellafield

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what is the level of radioactive technetium found in boreholes within the vicinity of Sellafield. [36001]

Margaret Beckett: I understand that sampling and analysis of groundwater from nine boreholes on the Sellafield site and from one perimeter borehole has indicated the presence of technetium-99. The highest level found at an on-site borehole was 290 becquerels per litre. The level in the perimeter borehole was 0.2 becquerels per litre. An assessment has been made of the potential radiological impact of the presence of technetium-99 in groundwater and the Environment Agency is satisfied that this would be insignificant. The Agency and the Health and Safety Executive are working with BNFL to establish the source of the contamination. The regulators will then need to consider what further measures need to be taken.

Correspondence

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when a substantive reply will be given to Mr. H. P. Atkinson's letter of 16 July 2001, concerning the 20 day movement restrictions. [36858]

Mr. Morley: I am sorry for the delay in replying to the hon. Member's letter. A reply was sent on 16 April.

Equipment Leasing

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the equipment leasing arrangements entered into by her Department in each of the last four years; and what the cost to public funds in each case is. [38937]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA came into being on 8 June, 2001. The information requested can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what the total external spending by her Department was on public-private partnership consultants in each of the last four years; how many full-time equivalent consultants were employed over this period; how many billed consultancy days there were per year; what the implied average cost of each PPP consultant was; how many consultancy firms were used by her Department over this period; and if she will make a statement; [43199]

(2) if she will list the functions of her Department that have been (a) market tested and (b) outsourced in each of the last five years, specifying the (i) money saving and (ii) percentage saving in each case; [42996]

(3) what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for PPP contracts let by her Department in each of the last four years; and if she will make a statement; [45615]

(4) what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for the five largest PFI contracts let by her Department in each of the last four years; and if she will make a statement. [45600]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 25 March 2002]: DEFRA came into being on 8 June, 2001. The information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) on how many infected premises slaughter was completed within 24 hours of a clinical diagnosis of the disease during the foot and mouth epidemic; [47605]

(2) on average how long after a clinical diagnosis of the disease slaughter was completed on the contiguous farms during the foot and mouth epidemic. [47602]

Mr. Morley: Information regarding the time taken to slaughter on infected premises is presented in two charts, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

When looking at the charts the following should be taken into consideration:

The charts show the percentage of infected premises culled out, on a weekly basis, within the 24-hour target and the number of infected premises culled out, on a weekly basis, within the 24-hour target.

The 24-hour target policy was based upon the time from which suspicion of disease was first communicated to DEFRA offices, not the time and date of clinical diagnosis. The time to slaughter has been calculated as the difference between this time and date and the time and date by which all animals on each premises had been slaughtered.

Premises which presently have missing dates, negative times to slaughter and times to slaughter greater than 500 hours have been excluded. The charts have been created from the data within DEFRA's Disease Control System Database and they may be subject to change as the data cleansing exercise is carried out.

The charts are based on a majority of data held on DCS and give a representative picture of the times taken to slaughter.

Although a total of 2,026 infected premises (IPs) were reported in the UK, the "time to slaughter" charts do not include IPs that were previously Dangerous contacts or slaughter on suspicion cases. These premises have not been included since, at the time, it would not have been identified that a 24-hour target was to be worked towards. The charts are based on around 1,500 premises, the final difference being down to missing dates and negative times to slaughter.

The percentage target hit, on its own, does not reflect the number of premises that were having to be dealt with—a 50 per cent. hit may be representing a figure of two cases or 200.

The charts do not give context to the underlying data. They obviously do not give any information regarding the reasons why culls may have taken longer than 24–48 hours, and cannot describe the practical difficulties faced by regional offices attempting to slaughter premises quickly in often extremely difficult circumstances. The count of premises slaughtered does not take into account the number of animals involved (size or herd) or the species.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make representations to the European Parliament inquiry into foot and mouth to include Somerset in their programme of visits. [49038]

Mr. Morley: It is a matter for the European Parliament Temporary Committee to decide their programme of visits.

Part-time Employees

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many and what proportion of the staff of her Department are part-time employees. [47171]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office (Mr. Leslie) on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 50W.

Chemical Weapons

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement about the number of chemical weapons dumped at sea and the potential risk they pose. [48889]

Dr. Moonie: I have been asked to reply.

Detailed inventories of chemical weapons and other munitions disposed of to dumpsites at sea are no longer available, as many records were destroyed after the disposals as a matter of routine custom and practice. Where records of the disposals do remain in existence, they have been released to the Public Record Office. Information on the locations of sea disposals of chemical weapons has also been placed in the Library of the House. As to the potential risk posed by chemical weapons, the long-held consensus of international scientific opinion is that munitions on the seabed present no significant risk to safety, human health or the marine environment, provided they remain undisturbed.

Laying Hens (Welfare)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she intends to lay the order for the laying hens welfare code; and if she will make a statement. [48836]

Mr. Morley: The laying hens welfare code will be laid before Parliament at the same time as the English regulations to implement the Welfare of Laying hens Directive 99/74/EC.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether her Department intends to make proposals for the introduction of the Laying Hens Welfare Code which go beyond those stated in the 1999 EU Directive on Welfare of Laying Hens 1999/74/EC; and if she will make a statement. [48837]

Mr. Morley: A new Welfare Code for Laying Hens will be published to accompany English regulations to implement the Welfare of Laying Hens Directive 99/74/EC. It is intended that the Directive will be implemented in England without being added to in any way. The Code focuses on the welfare outcome for the birds.

Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she intends to carry out a full public consultation on changes to the Welfare of Laying Hens Directive. [50344]

Mr. Morley: A full public consultation on domestic Regulations to implement Council Directive 99/74/EC has already taken place. Any further proposed changes to the Regulations or Directive will be subject to another public consultation exercise.

Development (Special Urgency Provisions)

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how often in the last three years, and for what purpose, her Department has applied the special urgency provisions in paragraph 22 of circular 18/84 (Development by Government Departments). [48946]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 April 2002]: The Department for Environment, Food & Rural Affairs (and before 8 June 2001, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food) has not applied the special urgency provisions in paragraph 22 of Circular 18/84 (Development by Government Departments) over the last three years.

Floods

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what sources of EU funding are available for flood relief and prevention measures from the European Agricultural Guidance and Guarantee Fund; what the total is of such funds for which the UK is eligible in 2001–02; and what the total is of such funds which her Department has (a) applied for and (b) been allocated in 2001–02. [48984]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 April 2002]: No significant financial assistance is made available by the European Union to assist member states in the provision of flood and coastal defences.

Pet Passports

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on when she intends to allow the use of pet passports for the USA and Canada; and how the scheme will operate. [48803]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 16 April 2002]: In January 2001, the Pet Travel Scheme was extended to rabies-free islands, including Hawaii. Mainland USA and Canada have not been included in the scheme as it was concluded that doing so would increase the risk of importing rabies.

However, the Government undertook to review the position of these countries. We have received a further assessment on the risk of importing rabies and a report on other zoonotic diseases which could be introduced to the UK if the scheme was extended to the USA and Canada. Both reports are being reviewed and evaluated. I hope to make an announcement on the conclusions of these reports shortly.

The import of dogs and cats from the USA and Canada, along with other third countries, would become subject to EU rules if agreement is reached on a proposal from the Commission for a regulation on the animal-health requirements applicable to non-commercial movement of pet animals. This proposal will be discussed at the meeting of Agriculture Ministers on 22 and 23 April.

The Government will need to take account of this proposal before reaching final decisions.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Insolvency Service

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to her Department's answer of 24 January 2002, Official Report, column 632W, on the Insolvency Service, what progress the Insolvency Service has made in centralising its administrative functions in areas of (a) lower growth and (b) high unemployment. [42224]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Insolvency Service will continue to seek to make best use of its existing estate and, wherever possible, to reduce its costs. The movement of work from areas and offices where there are pressures on accommodation or difficulties with recruitment or retention of staff to other offices is carried out where appropriate and the service has piloted a successful scheme to enable flexible, remote working by staff in its London office. The redevelopment of the service's IT systems over the next few years will increase the capability and capacity for such remote working and enable further savings in accommodation costs to be made.

Overtime Payments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her policy is on overtime payments for staff in her Department. [49122]

Ms Hewitt: The Department is clear that overtime should be an exception. If regular overtime is required, management should consider how the work can be accomplished in ways other than by continued overtime.

Where overtime is necessary, all staff below the senior civil service are entitled to receive payment, or time off in lieu, or both, for work carried out in addition to weekly conditioned hours (41 in London and 42 hours outside London).

Staff in the senior civil service are not entitled to receive payment for overtime.

For all staff working part-time, payments are made for additional hours worked up to the weekly conditioned hours. Payments for hours worked beyond net conditioned hours are available as above.

Small Businesses

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many smaller enterprises have benefited from the regional venture capital funds on an annual basis in each of the regions since the inception of the scheme, [49860]

Nigel Griffiths: The first regional venture capital funds only became operational in January 2002 so the information requested is not yet available.

Claims Direct

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many Claims Direct franchisees paid for their franchises with loans supported by her Department; how many such Claims Direct franchisees with such loans have become bankrupt; and if she will make a statement. [48745]

Nigel Griffiths: The Small Firms Loan Guarantee Scheme has assisted eight Claims Direct franchisees to set up their business. To date no claims have been made under the guarantee.

Ministerial Training

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been spent by her Department on training by the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art for Ministers and officials in each of the last five years. [48879]

Ms Hewitt: The majority of the Department's training budget is allocated to individual directorates. Each directorate has responsibility for managing, monitoring and evaluating attendance at training events in line with the departmental business and training plans. Disproportionate costs would be incurred to collate the data centrally for the purposes of answering this question.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been spent by her Department on training in leadership skills for Ministers and officials in each of the last five years [48880]

Ms Hewitt: The Department centrally funds some leadership training. These figures, available for the last three years, are detailed in the table.

1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002	[1]592,064
1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001	380,449
1 April 1999 to 31 March 2000	276,444

[1] Provisional

However, the majority of the Department's training budget is allocated to individual directorates. Each directorate has responsibility for managing, monitoring and evaluating attendance at training events in line with the departmental business and training plans. Disproportionate costs would be incurred to collate the data centrally for the purposes of answering this question.

The Department also encourages the use of in-house mentors, coaches and job shadowing as a means of developing staff. Although recognised in terms of staff costs, this does not have a direct cash cost

Costs

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been spent by her Department on voice coaching for Ministers and officials in each of the last five years. [48878]

Ms Hewitt: The majority of the Department's training budget is allocated to individual directorates. Each directorate has responsibility for managing, monitoring and evaluating attendance at training events in line with the departmental business and training plans. Disproportionate costs would be incurred to collate the data centrally for the purposes of answering this question.

Construction Industry

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the names of those organisations which have made representations to her about the operation of the Construction Skills Certification Scheme. [48757]

Mr. Wilson: Approximately 30 landscape firms, plus the British Association of Landscape Industries, have made representation about the operation of the Construction Skills Certification Scheme (CSCS).

Representations have also been received about the Major Contractors Group and their policy on the CSCS.

Healthcall

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answers of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 671W and 10 April 2002, ref 48035, what penalties have been levied on Healthcall for (a) failure to provide reports fit for purpose and (b) reports delivered beyond 28 days targets. [49328]

Mr. Wilson: The Department is unable to comment on the financial details with Healthcall as they are commercially confidential. However, the Department has worked very closely with Healthcall from the start of the scheme to ensure that services are being delivered efficiently and effectively. The proportion of MAP reports returned as "not fit for purpose" is being closely monitored and is falling. The figures in the answer of 11 March referred not just to "not fit for purpose" returns but included also substantive queries on the medical content of the reports.

Rail Safety

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with highway authorities to ensure that contractors accessing pylons under construction are not endangering road bridges over railways. [50031]

Mr. Wilson: I would expect the National Grid Company and its contractors to comply with the requirements of the highway authorities, for whom I am not responsible.

Small and Medium-Sized Enterprises

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many SMEs are operating in Barnsley, East and Mexborough. [49986]

Nigel Griffiths: Within the Barnsley, East and Mexborough constituency there were 1,140 businesses registered for VAT with 1–249 employees in 2000, the latest year for which VAT statistics are available. Local labour force statistics provide an estimate of a further 3,000 self-employed individuals operating with no employees.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many private finance initiative projects have been subject to refinancing after the contracts have been signed; and what has been the financial effect in each case. [50284]

Ms Hewitt: None of my Department's PFI projects has been refinanced.

Construction Quality Mark

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what her Department is doing to make the public aware of the construction Quality Mark; [50013]

(2) what her Department is doing to encourage UK builders to apply for a construction Quality Mark. [50012]

Mr. Wilson: I announced on the 12 March 2002, Official Report, column 891W, that the scheme will be rolled out across the country over a 3–4 year period. A Quality Mark Shadow Ownership Group has been set up and, at its first meeting on 19 April, will begin developing a comprehensive implementation strategy and detailed business plan. An announcement about the next stages of the roll out is expected after the first meeting.

The DTI is working with a number of reputable trade bodies to fast-track their members into the Quality Mark scheme. Following recommendations in the pilot review, the scheme will be developing recruitment mechanisms, including subsidised registration costs, until a critical mass has been achieved.

The DTI is also working with local authorities, financial services groups, consumer groups and others to promote the scheme to tradesmen and encourage the participation of the latter wherever possible.

The national launch of the Quality Mark at the Ideal Home Show produced extensive television and radio coverage and articles in regional newspapers. The scheme is already being marketed successfully to consumers in Birmingham and Somerset through a variety of media, including Yellow Pages and Thomsons directories, household leaflet distribution with advertising and editorial coverage in a number of local papers and radio stations. Further targeted marketing will follow in new areas once sufficient numbers of builders and tradesmen are registered.

There has been considerable interest from firms operating outside of the existing Quality Mark regions in England, Wales and Scotland. In these cases we have advised (and we will continue to advise) firms that there is nothing to stop them applying for the scheme.

Pay Gap

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make it her practice to collect and publish data relating to the pay gap between men and women by constituency. [45862]

Alan Johnson: The Office for National Statistics publishes data on the pay gap between men and women in the New Earnings Survey. However, in the case of some constituencies, the data is not sufficiently reliable for publication.

Current trends in women's individual incomes have been explored in two studies published last year by the Women and Equality Unit (WEU). Copies of these reports are available on the WEU website.

("http://www.womenandequalityunit.gov.uk/research/publications/research_and_publications.htm")

WEU Gender Briefing, which provides statistical briefing on the position of women compared with men in the labour market, is also available on the website.

("http://www.womenandequalityunit.gov.uk/research/gender_briefing/home.htm")

There are no plans to commission further research into the gender pay gap by constituency.

Scroby Sands Offshore Generating Station

Mr. Anthony D. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she will announce her decision on Powergen Renewable Offshore Wind Ltd.'s application to build a 76 MW offshore generating station at Scroby Sands, off Great Yarmouth. [51287]

Mr. Wilson: I have today granted consent under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 to Powergen Renewables Offshore Wind Ltd. for the construction and operation of a 76 megawatt offshore windfarm at Scroby Sands, off Great Yarmouth.

This development marks a significant step forward for the wind industry. It is the first offshore windfarm development to be approved from the 18 potential sites identified by developers who successfully pre-qualified last year for Crown Estate seabed leases. Offshore wind in the UK can make a major contribution to climate change objectives, to secure electricity supplies, and to our economic well being through job creation and exports. I am very pleased that this potential is beginning to be realised.

Copies of the Press Notice and the decision letter and consent are being placed in the Libraries of the House.

DEFENCE

Project Sponsorship

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which of his Department's projects have received sponsorship since 1997, including (a) details of the sponsor, (b) the nature of the project, (c) the date of the project, (d) the total cost of the project and (e) the amount of money involved in the sponsorship deal. [48395]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 11 April 2002]: In line with the Government's commitment in their response to the sixth report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life, it is the Department's intention to publish details of individual amounts of sponsorship valued at more than £5,000 concurrently with the departmental performance report.

Press Office

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost of running the Department's press office was in (a) 1996–97 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available. [46803]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Figures for 1996–97 are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. For financial year 2001–02, the cost of running the Ministry of Defence's central press office was £981,000.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many press officers there were in his Department on (a) 1 May 1997 and (b) the latest available date. [46890]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Information for 1 May 1997 is no longer available.

As at 15 April 2002, the Ministry of Defence's Corporate Communications division employed 20 press officers in its headquarters press office and in its regional network. In addition, Defence agencies, the permanent joint headquarters and the single service commands and units also employ personnel with a press officer function, some as a secondary task to their main role.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received in the past 12 months regarding arms exports to Sri Lanka from representatives of the Tamil people. [49338]

Dr. Moonie: None.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent meetings he has had with representatives of the Tamil people to discuss human rights issues in Sri Lanka. [49341]

Dr. Moonie: The Secretary of State for Defence has had no meetings with representatives of the Tamil people.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received in the last 12 months regarding (a) arms exports to Sri Lanka from Britain and (b) their subsequent effect on the Tamil people; and if he will make a statement. [49333]

Dr. Moonie: There have been a number of approaches by UK companies in the past 12 months seeking marketing advice for potential sales to this region. We have given advice on these on a case by case basis making it clear that the advice given does not prejudge the outcome of an export licence application. All such applications are considered against the consolidated EU and national arms export licensing criteria. We will not issue an export licence where there is a clear risk that the goods might be used for internal repression or international aggression or to undermine regional stability.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many times he has met representatives of the Government of Sri Lanka to discuss arms exports in each of the past five years; [49336]

(2) when he will next meet representatives of the Sri Lankan Government to discuss arms exports; and if he will make a statement. [49342]

Dr. Moonie: There have been no such meetings in the past and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has no current plans to meet with representatives of the Government of Sri Lanka. The Government welcome the progress being made to achieve peace in Sri Lanka. Should we be asked, we would of course give positive consideration to any initiatives that might assist this process.

Shoeburyness

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many complaints have been received in each of the past five years from households in the Tendring peninsula relating to alleged damage to their properties as a result of the activities at the Shoeburyness ranges. [45113]

Dr. Moonie: Our records are not in a form that readily enables provision of the information as requested. I will write to my hon. Friend following further analysis of the data and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Subsistence Payments

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what subsistence payments are payable to service men and women carrying out duties in the United Kingdom away from their base. [50040]

Mr. Ingram: Service personnel who incur extra expense for food or accommodation while on temporary or detached duty in the UK are reimbursed via range of UK subsistence allowances. In the first instance, every effort is made to accommodate personnel in service messes where food and accommodation costs are paid direct by the Ministry of Defence. If service accommodation is used, £1.50 per 24-hour period can be claimed for incidental expenses.

If service accommodation is unavailable, the preferred option is to arrange hotel B&B accommodation through MOD's Central Hotel Booking Service (CHBS) that make bookings within a set cost ceiling. Personnel can also book hotel accommodation direct and are then entitled to claim the cost up to a set ceiling of £50 per night. Personnel staying in a hotel may claim a total of £22.90 per 24-hour period to cover additional costs incurred for lunch, dinner and travel, and incidental expenses such as telephone calls or laundry. Alternatively, personnel may choose to stay with family or friends and claim £27.90 per 24-hour period to cover food, and other expenses.

If no overnight accommodation is required and service messing is not available, then a daily subsistence rate of £4.25 for over five hours and £9.30 for over 10 hours can be claimed for meals. This range of subsistence allowances is designed for periods of up to 30 days after which a different set of accommodation allowances are normally used.

Service Accommodation

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate has been made of the funds being spent on the repeated repairs to service accommodation over the last five financial years. [36824]

Dr. Moonie: The defence estate currently consists of around 64,000 buildings. The information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Type 22 Frigates

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to sell Type 22 frigates to Chile; what discussions his Department has had to this effect, and if he will make a statement. [49743]

Dr. Moonie: There are no current plans to sell surplus RN Type 22 frigates to Chile because of the lack of available vessels to offer in the immediate future. We have nevertheless maintained dialogue with the Chilean authorities over ship disposal issues to establish future possibilities.

Submarines

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many fleet submarines will be in service in 2009. [49749]

Mr. Ingram: On current plans there will be nine fleet submarines in service in 2009. In the early years of the next decade this will increase to the SDR approved force level of 10. However, the introduction into service of the new ASTUTE class submarines and the arrangement of the long-term refit programme will enable sufficient submarines to be available to ensure that the Royal Navy is able to meet its standing commitments and fulfil contingent tasking prior to the establishment of the planned force levels.

Tornado F3

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Tornado F3 are fully operational with AMRAAM missiles; and what the operational inventory is of Tornado F3. [49755]

Mr. Ingram: There are currently 94 Tornado F3 aircraft fully operational with AMRAAM missiles. The Tornado F3 Required Operating Fleet which is defined as the theoretical number of aircraft needed to support the operational task is 93.

Firearm Deaths

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 15 October 2001, Official Report, column 947W, how many members of HM armed services have (a) died and (b) been injured as a result of the discharge of firearms on or near military property (i) in Great Britain and (ii) overseas in each of the past eight years; what the results of (1) internal investigations and (2) coroner's inquest for each fatality were; where other soldiers were involved what disciplinary actions were taken; where papers were passed to the CPS, how many weeks were taken to reach a decision on prosecution; and what the result was. [48677]

Mr. Ingram: The number of members of HM forces who have died as a result of the discharge of firearms in the last eight years is as follows:

	Army		Navy		RAF
Year of death	UK	Overseas	UK	Overseas	UK	Overseas	Total
1994	8	15	1	1	1	1	27
1995	14	5	—	—	1	—	20
1996	9	8	—	—	—	—	17
1997	4	—	—	—	1	—	5
1998	1	—	—	—	—	—	1
1999	4	3	—	—	—	—	7
2000	1	8	1	—	—	—	10
2001	5	4	—	—	—	—	9
Total	46	43	2	1	3	1	96

Note:
Figures exclude the territorial army, reserves, foreign service personnel and the Gibraltar regiment.

It is not possible to provide details of the exact location of each of these deaths or the results of the related coroner's inquests as this information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Nor is it possible to provide details of the number of injuries, owing to the current unreliability of data held as a result of the under reporting of sickness and injuries; this situation is, however, currently being addressed. I am withholding information on the result of internal investigations or any resultant disciplinary action in accordance with Exemption 12 of the Code of Practice of Access to Government Information.

Naval Manpower

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the Royal Navy's manpower is committed to operations. [49758]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 3 April 2002, Official Report, columns 1019–20W.

Refits

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when HMS Talent's refit will commence; and how long it will last. [49747]

Mr. Ingram: HMS Talent's refit is planned to start in spring 2003 and will last until early 2006.

Cadet Forces

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many cadets there are in (a) maintained schools and (b) independent school detachments; [50523]

(2) how many combined cadet forces and single service cadet detatchments there are in (a) maintained schools and (b) independent schools. [50524]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Sea Harriers

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether Harrier GR7 has a gun capability; and if it is planned that Harrier GR9/A will have a gun capability. [49752]

Mr. Ingram: The Harrier GR7 does not have a gun capability, and we have no plans to give a gun capability to the GR9/A.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many sorties were flown by (a) Harrier GR7 and (b) Sea Harrier in operations over Sierra Leone in 2000. [49751]

Mr. Ingram: Between 11 May 2000 and 6 June 2000 inclusive, Harrier GR7 and Sea Harrier flew 147 and 134 sorties respectively, while deployed in support of operations in Sierra Leone.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the integration work on Sea Harrier for ASRAAM has been completed; and at what cost. [49763]

Mr. Ingram: The work to integrate Advanced Short Range Air-to-Air Missile (ASRAAM) on Sea Harrier has been terminated in the light of the recent decision to withdraw the aircraft from service by 2006 which is earlier than originally planned.

Expenditure on the ASRAAM integration programme did not exceed £1.2 million.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when Harrier GR7 will be operational with (a) Brimstone and (b) Storm Shadow. [49754]

Mr. Ingram: Following the upgrade of Harrier GR7 to GR9 standard, it is intended that the Brimstone anti-armour weapon will enter operational service on it in 2006.

We do not currently intend to integrate Stormshadow on to Harrier GR9. The operation of Harrier GR9 from the CVS with Stormshadow will not be practical, due to the size and weight of the missile. In addition, it is not currently considered to be cost effective to integrate Stormshadow on to Harrier GR9 solely for land-based operations; this capability will be provided by Tornado GR4.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received from the Indian Government about the purchase of Fleet Air Arm Sea Harriers. [49761]

Dr. Moonie: Officials within the Ministry of Defence have received inquiries from representatives of the Government of India regarding the future availability of surplus Fleet Air Arm Sea Harriers. As part of its marketing strategy for the sale of these aircraft, the Disposal Services Agency will follow up all expressions of interests accordingly, subject, of course, to the normal export controls.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what modifications need to be made to the Harrier GR7 for sustained operations at sea. [49753]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 13 March 2002, Official Report, column 1166–67W.

Balkans

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on future plans for British military involvement in the Balkans. [50003]

Mr. Ingram: NATO is currently undertaking a major review of its operations in the Balkans, entitled the "Joint Operational Area Review", the outcome of which will be discussed by NATO Foreign Ministers in May 2002. We welcome the review and remain committed to maintaining the military contribution to NATO peacekeeping in the Balkans. No decisions have been taken regarding the form that British military involvement will take following implementation of the review's findings.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Press Office

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the total cost of running the Department's press office was in (a) 1996–97 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available. [46805]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The total cost of running FCO's News Department in 2000–01 was £1,746,000. Comparable information for 1996–97 is not held as new costing software was introduced during the course of that year. The total cost for 1995–96 was £971,000 and for 1997–98 was £1,342,000.

Weapons of Mass Destruction

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 25 March 2002, Official Report, column 610, if he will place in the Library copies of the evidence possessed by Her Majesty's Government in respect of the status of programmes aimed at developing weapons of mass destruction respectively by (a) the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, (b) Iraq, (c) Libya and (d) Syria. [48252]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 16 April 2002, Official Report, columns 861–62W.

Sunset Clauses

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which Bills introduced by his Department in the last five years have contained sunset clauses; and what plans he has for the future use of such clauses. [49615]

Mr. Straw: None.

Uganda

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in how many cases in the last six months the high commission in Uganda has refused to see people who had interviews; how entry clearance officers at that high commission handle appointments; and if he will make a statement. [48893]

Mr. Bradshaw: In response to the events of 11 September, and in the light of the specific security situation in Uganda, access to the visa section at the British high commission premises can only be granted to people who hold satisfactory evidence of their identity. I regret the need for this requirement but it is temporary, for the safety of our staff and members of the public and is necessary and proportionate in response to the perceived threat.

Satisfactory identity documents are:

a valid national passport,

a verified refugee document issued by the Directorate of Refugees of the Office of the President of Uganda, a verified laissez-passer issued by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees.

No record has been kept of the numbers of people who had appointments and who have not been able to enter the high commission. However, many of the applicants affected are relatives seeking family reunion with refugees who have settled in the UK, and others.

Around 360 family reunion cases are outstanding in Kampala. Few of these applicants appear with satisfactory evidence establishing their identity or relationship with the sponsor in the UK and they have to be referred to the Directorate of Refugees or UNHCR.

Following necessary inquiries with the Home Office, applicants who hold satisfactory documents of identity are offered the next available date for interview. In cases involving couples with children, if after the interview the applicant has still not been able to satisfy the entry clearance officer about the claimed relationship, DNA testing may be offered to avoid unnecessary refusal. Priority will be granted to applicants in cases involving genuine compassionate circumstances. Applicants unable to attend pre-arranged appointments as a result of the restrictions currently in place will be afforded priority consideration once the restrictions have been lifted.

The security situation is kept under review, and further announcements will be made if and when it changes.

Military Plutonium

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress made in respect of each of the three disposition projects for surplus military plutonium in Russia agreed in the EU Common Foreign and Security Policy non-Proliferation Working Group. [49492]

Mr. Bradshaw: The European Union Joint Action for surplus weapons-grade plutonium in Russia involves seven projects in all.

In the first project, 'Safety Regulations', Gosatomnadzor of Russia (GAN) is to establish new safety regulations covering the use of surplus weapons-grade plutonium as mixed oxide fuel in Russia. Of the total budget of 500,000 euros, contracts have been signed for 300,000 euros, and draft contracts to the value of 200,000 are being discussed, with signatures expected in May this year.

In the second project, on a trial use of mixed oxide fuel, preliminary steps have been taken towards the loading of three lead test assemblies in a pressurised water reactor at Balakovo. Of a total budget of 1,300,000 euros, a contract has been signed for 5,000 euros, and the remaining contracts are under discussion.

The third project is a study into the transport and storage of surplus weapons-grade plutonium in Russia, with a budget of 200,000 euros. Contracts are being prepared and should be placed around September this year.

In the fourth project, a study of future high temperature reactors and ex-weapons plutonium disposition in Russia (in particular particle coated fuel burn rates), contracts are being prepared and should be signed around September this year. The budget for this project is 300,000 euros.

The fifth project is a continuation of work on 'Safety Regulations'. In total, the EU Joint Action will finance the preparation of 12 to 16 regulatory documents. The budget is 1,300,000 euros. Draft contracts are being discussed for around 500,000 euros, and signatures are due in June.

The sixth project is a continuation of the trial of mixed oxide fuel, with a budget of 1,500,000 euros. No contracts have yet been placed but all are due to be signed before June 2003.

A seventh and final project, on 'Immobilisation', awaits progress in bilateral discussions currently taking place between Russia and Germany.

Convention on the Future of Europe

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans are in place to ensure that a public discussion takes place on the Convention on the Future of Europe. [50032]

Peter Hain: Since the Nice Declaration, the Government have been seeking a wide range of views on the future of Europe through regional visits, seminars, radio phone-ins and interviews. I have personally spoken to trade unions, businessmen, academics, students and other members of the public about the future of Europe. I have also undertaken a number of regional visits, including Cardiff last October, Edinburgh last November, Northern Ireland in February and South Yorkshire in March. That listening process is continuing, in parallel with the "listening phase" in the Future of Europe Convention. The coming months will see me making further regional visits, including to Birmingham in May and Liverpool in July. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs plans to visit the Devolved Administrations. There will be other activities focusing on the future of Europe, including a Youth Convention and Europe Day. In addition, a dedicated website providing for open and public discussion on the future of Europe will be established and open for contributions by the summer.

Nepal

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Nepal. [50440]

Mr. Bradshaw: We are increasingly concerned about the Maoist insurgency in Nepal. We strongly condemn the Maoists' violence and intimidation against the Nepalese security forces and civilians. We are particularly concerned about recent attacks on food, water and electricity supplies and other economic, development and infrastructural targets. We urge the Maoists to disarm, renounce violence, and rejoin the peace process in good faith.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress towards peace in Sri Lanka. [50439]

Mr. Bradshaw: We warmly welcome the progress which the Sri Lankan Government and the LTTE have made towards a peaceful settlement of the conflict in Sri Lanka. As we have made clear to all concerned, the UK fully supports the Norwegian-facilitated peace process, and we look forward to the start of direct talks in the near future. We call on all sides to work together in the interests of all Sri Lankans. Any solution must satisfy the aspirations of all communities.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what recent meetings he has had with representatives of the Tamil people to discuss human rights issues in Sri Lanka; [49340]

(2) when he will next meet representatives from the Sri Lankan Government to discuss human rights issues and the state's policy towards the Tamil people; [49334]

(3) what representations he has received in the last 12 months regarding human rights issues in Sri Lanka concerning the Tamil people; and if he will make a statement; [49335]

(4) what representations he has received in the past 12 months regarding human rights issues in Sri Lanka from representatives of the Tamil people; [49339]

(5) how many times he has met representatives of the Sri Lankan Government to discuss human rights issues in each of the past five years. [49337]

Mr. Bradshaw: We have raised human rights on a regular basis over the last five years with the Sri Lankan authorities at both ministerial and official level and will continue to do so. In March 2001, the Prime Minister and the then Foreign Secretary, discussed the situation in Sri Lanka with President Kumaratunga and then Foreign Minister Kadirgamar. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary is planning to meet the Sri Lankan Foreign Minister in July. We are also concerned about human rights abuses committed by the LTTE, and welcome their recent announcement that they will cease recruiting under the age of 18 and that they are addressing the concerns of the Muslim community. We are in close touch with UK-based Sri Lankan groups, human rights organisations and representatives from all communities in Sri Lanka, including the Tamil community.

Gibraltar

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to meet his Spanish counterpart in the next round of the Brussels process. [48851]

Peter Hain: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Putney (Mr. Colman) on 27 February 2002, Official Report, column 1306W.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

National Endowment for Science, Technology and the Arts

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proportion of income was spent on administration by the National Endowment for Science, Technology and the Arts in the last financial year. [48881]

Mr. Caborn: Figures for the last financial year, 2001–02, are not yet available. NESTA's published accounts for the financial year to 31 March 2001 show that 9.9 per cent. of income was spent on operating costs.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans exist for the future funding of the National Endowment for Science, Technology and the Arts. [48882]

Mr. Caborn: Plans for funding NESTA will be considered alongside other options for the future use of lottery funds.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment has been made of the return or investment made by the National Endowment for Science, Technology and the Arts. [48876]

Mr. Caborn: In accordance with the National Lottery Act 1998, NESTA's endowment is managed by the National Investment and Loans Office on behalf of the National Debt Commissioners. The endowment is invested in Government Bonds and Treasury Bills whose performance reflect prevailing base rates. Since establishment, the endowment has produced an annual average return of 5.25 per cent. The interest on the endowment is invested separately by NESTA in an equities and bonds portfolio managed by Schroders Investment Management. Since establishment, this fund has produced an annualised average return of 3.4 per cent.

NESTA's performance will be considered in its Quinquennial Review in 2004–05.

Sport

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action she is taking to encourage people to participate in sport; and if she will make a statement. [48915]

Mr. Caborn: School sport is a priority for the Government and the Department for Culture, Media and Sport is working closely with the Department for Education and Skills to improve the quality of and access to PE and sport in schools and links to clubs. Sport England's Active Sports programme involves 8 to 16-year-olds across the country in sport through a national network of 45 sports partnerships, while Sport Action Zones encourage participation by all age groups in some of the most deprived areas of the country. Sport England has now awarded over £1.5 billion of Lottery funding, the majority of which has been used to provide facilities for local community sport.

Sports

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time sports coaching staff (i) her Department and (ii) its agencies have funded in each of the last seven years broken down by sport; and if she will make a statement. [48916]

Mr. Caborn: My Department does not fund coaching staff directly. The majority of public funding for sport is channelled through UK Sport and Sport England. Comprehensive information on the number of coaches funded from Sports Council grants is not held centrally. The following tables are drawn from records kept by UK Sport and Sport England.

Sport and Physical Education

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received from parents in Bristol regarding the distribution of New Opportunities Fund grant to local schools for the purpose of improving facilities for sport and physical education. [48752]

Mr. Caborn: The Department has received no such correspondence.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which (a) secondary schools in England and (b) local education authorities have received New Opportunities Fund payments to improve sport and physical education facilities; and what the total amount was in each case. [48751]

Mr. Caborn: Local education authorities (LEAs) have received notification of their allocation under the scheme and bids are being developed. The deadline for LEAs to submit their stage 1 applications is the 22 April. Funding allocations are made up of a baseline allocation (based on the size of the school population in the LEA) and levels of deprivation in the area.

The allocation figures for each LEA area are given in the following table.

Total England allocations	495,163,000

Note:
Isles of Scilly have been allocated a de minimus allocation of £25,000; this is not based on the school population size.
